NOTED AUSTRIAN SCIENTIST OFFERS TO MAKE ATTEMPT IF EXPENSES GUARANTEED

Dr. Maximilian Lansinger's Feats Have Caused Sensation in West.

CITY CANNOT PAY.

Mayor McBride Says Police Will Help If Family Wishes To Engage Criminologist.

TORONTO, July 27 (Special to The Examiner).—Dr. Maximilian Langsner, Austrian criminologist, has offered his services towards trying to solve the Ambrose Small case, providing his expenses are guaranteed by the City of Toronto or the Government.

Dr. Langsner has been creating an impression in Western Canada with his psychic and hypnotic powers. He recently played a part in solving the murder of four persons in Alberta by Vernon Booher. The doctor found the rifle which the youth had used.

Mayor McBride stated this morning that it would be quite out of the question to consider seriously the proposal that the city engage the services of Dr. Maximilian A. Langsner, M.L.L.C., the eminent criminologist from Vienna, with a view to solving the mystery of the disappearance of Ambrose J. Small, theatrical magnate, who has been missing for nearly nine years.

"I don't see that any good could come of it," the Mayor told The Examiner to-day. "It is simply a case of reopening old sores which are much better left alone. We hav sent detectives all over the world to look into that case, and the city has gone to very great expense in the matter without any result. I certainly could not ask the Board of Control at this late date to pass funds for an investigation by a criminologist, no matter how well-known he may be.

"We would all like to see the mystery cleared up, of course," he said, "but I cannot have it done at the expense of the taxpayers. They have spent enough in it already. If Mrs. Small or his sisters like to put up the money, I will guarantee to help them all I can with our police department. We will do everything possible to help them, and our detectives will co-operate in every possible way with Dr. Langsner if he comes, but I cannot go any further than that. It would not be fair to the taxpayers."

Chief Constable Draper observed that the police funds could not stand any expenditure on such a proposition.

"Unless," he added, "the doctor assured us that he can find Small. Then I would say, 'Go ahead and spend the money'."

AIRSHIP BLOWS UP BUT CREW ESCAPES.

TOKIO, July 27.—The crew of a Japanese naval dirigible escaped death yesterday when the airship exploded and caught fire, after a forced landing in the sea off Kyushu. The men had been taken off in small boats after the landing and were standing by. One officer remained aboard to inspect the plane. He was using a lighted candle to find his way about the dirigible and this caused the explosion.

FINE YACHTS VISIT HARBOR

Two Boats Make Trip Here After N. Y. Motor Boat Show.

TOURING TRENT SYSTEM

Peterborough's harbor at Little Lake had a fine display of power boats on Thursday afternoon when two boats from New York and one from Chatham tied up there. Both New York boats chose this route as a result of the publicity of the Trent Waterway given at the New York Motor Boat Show, and the owners of both crafts were personal friends of F. G. Stinson, secretary of the Peterborough Chamber of Commerce, whom they met while at the show.

The Nereid of the Port Washington Yacht Club was the most beautiful boat. A 65-foot boat with a 14-foot beam, just a fraction too big to go over the marine railways on the Severn River. It is owned by Thomas B. Taylor, building contractor in New York City. The boat is completely fitted out from stem to stern, having all conveniences on board, as well as a Delco lighting system, Frigidaire system, bottled gas, and even windshield wipers on the front of the cabin. The glass in the boat is bullet-proof to protect it from the battering of the seas in the big waters. All windows and openings are completely screened in to protect the travellers from annoying insects. There is a complete fire-fighting apparatus on board.

Complete accommodations for crew and passengers round out this well fitted out craft. Mr. Taylor said that they had been on board for two weeks, and when he offered to go to a hotel to-night the party refused as they were more comfortable on board. There is a party of six, Mr. and Mrs. Taylor and family, as well as a crew of two.

The boat is powered with twin engines, making a travelling speed of fifteen miles per hour. The route they followed was up the Hudson to the Erie Canal to Oswego, across Lake Ontario, through the Murray Canal to Trenton and then up the Trent River system. They all remarked on the politeness of the canal attendants and said that the lockmaster's children often would bring them flowers and refuse to take anything for them. He was very well pleased with the trip so far and has enjoyed it immensely, but has one complaint to make, and that is in some places the channel could be buoyed a little better, especially around Steamboat and Kent Creeks and a little below mileage 43 they struck something solid in the channel.

Mr. Taylor was impressed with the beauty and cleanliness of the city. His trip was the result of a visit to the New York Motor Boat Show and Mr. Stinson's recommendation.

The Artemis of Peekskill, New York, a 25-foot boat, owned by H. G. Dible, master of Peekskill Military Academy, was the second boat visited by The Examiner, and Mr. Dibble also made the trip as a result of the Motor Boat Show and Mr. Stinson's recommendation. On board are his wife and two sons, John and Howard, as well as Commodore Red Jacket, the Irish Setter pup. They have been very well pleased with the trip so far, and remarked especially on the courtesy of all the canal men and the efficiency of the bridge tenders. Mr. Dibble said that so far he has not had to wait for a single bridge, all have been opened and waiting for him by the time he arrived. The route they have followed to Peterborough has been up the Hudson, through Lake Champlain, down the Richlieu to the St. Lawrence to Montreal, up the Ottawa to the Rideau Canal, which they followed to Kingston, and then by the

PLANS ARTICLE ON WATERWAY

Andrew M. MacLean Will Make Trip in Motor Cruiser Next Week.

FOR CANADIAN MAGAZINE.

Following the special occasion yesterday of three American cruisers from New York State being tied up at the Government Wharf, George Street, the interesting letter has just been received by the Trent Waterway Association from Andrew M. MacLean:

"I am leaving Toronto early Saturday morning for Trenton in my motor cruiser "Fratony," to write an article for this magazine about my trip and about your interesting waterway.

"Any assistance or co-operation you can give me en route would be greatly appreciated.

"The 'Fratony' is the unofficial training cruiser of the Royal Canadian Naval Volunteer Reserve, and is perhaps one of the most interesting craft to use the Trent system in recent years.

"It is my intention to proceed through the Trent system to Georgian Bay as quickly as possible, returning in September at a more leisurely pace.

"I am carrying both still and moving picture cameras and hope to get an interesting and well illustrated article for our October issue.

"Yours very truly,
"Andrew M. MacLean,

Lockout 500,000 To Help Industry

MANCHESTER, England, July 27 (Canadian Press).—A lockout that will affect 500,000 workers was decided on to-day by the Master Spinners' Federation as a means of alleviating conditions in the industry. It will be effective August 11.

MOTHER AND SON MEET TRAGIC FATE

FELL FROM BRIDGE AS TRAIN BORE DOWN

While returning home on Saturday night, Mrs. James Jacobs and her son, Lloyd, aged seven, of Campbellford, and the latter's young cousins, Helen and Stewart Donald, had reached the C.N.R. bridge which spans the Trent River when an oncoming freight train was sighted. The woman frantically attempted to carry her son to safety, but the two fell thirty feet to a highway and were so seriously injured that both died. The other two children managed to scamper to safety beyond the bridge. In the layout ABOVE are shown: (1) the bridge from which mother and son fell. They were picked up on the right side of the road near the curbstone. (2) The home of the Jacobs family situated on a hill overlooking the Trent valley. A little grey crepe may be seen on the door. (3) Mr. and Mrs. James Jacobs, and Lloyd, as photographed several years ago. (4) Helen and Stewart Donald, who ran to safety from the bridge.

TRYING OUT TUNNEY'S PUNCHES FIGHT FAN KILLS HIS FRIEND

Two Men Adjourn To Backyard After Hearing Fight Over Radio.

AT ST. CATHARINES.

One Man Knocks Other Backwards Against Board, Which Fractures His Neck.

ST. CATHARINES, Ont., July 27 (Canadian Press). — Demonstrating how Tunney defeated Heeney last night, Patrick Sweeney, 54, of Toronto, here on vacation, knocked Charles Stevens, 52, of St. Catharines, between two piles of boxes in the latter's yard last night, and a projecting board fractured his neck. He died in a few minutes. Sweeney is being held by police for questioning.

They had been listening to a radio account of the fight in the home of Charles Childs, whom Sweeney was visiting, and later were trying out certain blows in the back yard when the accident occurred. According to those present, there was no disagreement between the two men.

Sweeney was arraigned before Magistrate Campbell this morning on a charge of common assault and remanded for a week but was allowed out on his own recognizance. An inquest will be held on Wednesday next.

BALDWIN ENDS SALARY DEBATE

Says There Is No General Desire For Revision of Minister's Salaries.

AGITATION RECENTLY.

LONDON, July 27. — (Canadian Press Cable.)—Premier Stanley Baldwin has more or less put an end, for the time being at least, to the agitation for a revision of the salaries of British Cabinet Ministers by announcements that there is no evidence of any general desire for a committee enquiry into the adequacy of the salaries.

The agitation received impetus with the recent retirement of Speaker Whitley of the house of Commons and the discussion over his pension, it being argued that there was need for an upward revision of salaries in view of the economic changes in the past fifty years.

Plenty of Huckleberries In Mountains So Tourists Need Not Fear Grizzly Bears

MONTREAL, July 27. — Although the nervous tourist may feel the grizzly bear has weakness for raw meat, in reality their favorite dish is huckleberries, and according to reports fom British Columbia the fine cop of berries in the Rockies this year will provide a feast for the bears during September and early October. The report continues that at the present time the fishing is excellent, and big rainbow and silver trout are taking the fly with avidity. The cold nights have further combined to put the mosquitoes out of business.

RULING MAKES HUSBANDS PAY TO EX-SPOUSES

British Appeal Court Overrides Previous Agreements For Payments.

MAY BE PRECEDENT.

Pending Consideration of Ontario Divorce Bill Senate Will Continue To Hear Cases.

OTTAWA, Ont., July 27 (Special to The Examiner). — In discussing the possibility of the Senate again sending the Bill to provide for the granting of divorces by the Supreme Court of Canada to the House of Commons at its next session, Alexander Smith, barrister, points out that a new feature of the issue is that divorced husbands may have to pay alimony to their former wives.

In explaining the situation, he refers to two recent rulings in the English Court of Appeals, in which the divorced husbands were declared to be liable for payment of alimony to their former wives. In both these judgments the women had entered into a separation agreement to accept certain sums of money and no more, but the Court held that these agreements did not preclude applications for greater amounts. They are in the same category as in cases where there are no separation agreements. These recent decisions are being appealed to the House of Lords, and if the judgments are sustained there are likely to be throughout Canada

FIRE IN WHEAT IS THREATENING LARGE DISTRICT

Loss in Washington State Already Estimated at 20,000 Acres.

TEN HOUSES BURNED.

High Wind Sweeps Flames Along in Spite of Efforts of Hundreds of Men.

WALLA WALLA, Washington, July 27.—(Canadian Press). — More than three hundred frenzied farmers and volunteer fire fighters were battling a grain fire early to-day in the vicinity of Eureka flats, about thirty miles from here, in an attempt to save their homes and crops. It was estimated that the fire, which started late last night, had destroyed 50,000 to 75,000 sacks of grain and burned over $10,000 to 25,000 acres of wheat.

Backed by high wind, the flames spread rapidly. It was reported that the Northern Pacific Railroad was filling tank cars with water at Pasco, Washington, and rushing them to the scene of the fire.

Telephone wires were down and roads blocked in the section and it was impossible to get an accurate estimate of the destruction. Reports here said at least ten farm homes had been burned.

Oberammergau's Passion Play owes its origin to a vow made by inhabitants of the village in 1633 in expression of gratitude at the cessation of the plague.

RAILWAYS AT LOGGERHEADS OVER MONTREAL TERMINAL

C. P. R. Does Not Want To Leave Windsor Street For Union Station.

C.N.R. PLANS CHANGE.

Scheme Would Place Rival Line At Disadvantage So Harbor Board Objects.

MONTREAL, Que., July 27 (Special to The Examiner).—With an early conference in view following recent expert opinion, Government circles which have to do with the matter are hearing many representations on the subject of the proposed huge terminal at Montreal. The two railway systems, the harbor board, and the street railway all have large stakes, apart from the interest of the industrial and commercial community and the convenience of the travelling public.

The Canadian Pacific Railway is said to take the ground that, while a central terminal is desirable, it cannot be expected to scrap its huge and permanent investment in the Windsor Street Station.

On the other hand the Bonaventure depot is long overdue for abandonment and the need of a new Canadian National depot is admitted.

The C.N.R. plans to move anyway and already has prepared a terminal scheme. There have been ugly rumors of land speculation by big interests. Inducements in the matter of promised campaign funds to the Government are said to have been offered.

Those who have looked into the plan of the C.N.R. in relation to the harbor front concede that the company would be put in a very advantageous position if its new terminal project were sanctioned. Bodies apart from the Canadian Pacific which are interested incline to the view that this proposal would place the latter railway at a disadvantage in access to the barbor and the port authorities are said to want a fair deal to all.

The official view at Ottawa is favorable to one big terminal. The Canadian Pacific, it is reported, does not want to abandon Windsor street. On the other hand, if the joint terminal should be located there and the C.N.R. tracks switched to the upper level, as is said to be possible from an engineering poitn of view, it is held that a separate terminal company would be necessary. All parties would have a proprietory interest rather than ownership being centralized and accommodation being furnished other lines on a regular basis. It is intimated that, as owners of the Canadian National, the government would not consent to it being placed in an inferior position.

GREAT NATIONS OF THE WORLD WILL JOIN IN CELEBRATIONS AT SIGNING OF KELLOGG PACT

France Will be Host to Distinguished Gathering Next Month.

SPAIN MAY SIGN

Agreement Will Put War Outside Pale of Government Policies.

PARIS, July 27 (Associated Press).—Fifteen governments are to sign the Kellogg pact outlawing war here in Paris late next month.

The number may be increased to 16 as Spain has intimated that it will be glad to join in the solemn ceremony putting war outside the pale of governmental policies.

France, as host to the distinguished gathering, will issue the invitations, but Secretary Kellogg, as author of the treaty, will say who shall be asked to join in the great peace manifestation.

Arrangements for the ceremony are thus far tentative and even the date is not definite. Final plans will depend upon what happens within the next three or four weeks. The probability is, however, that the signing will take place in the famous clock room of the French Foreign Office, scene of most of the notable discussions of the peace negotiations at the end of the World War. A tentative date is Wednesday, August 29, but the historical event may take place on either of the two preceding days.

It is understood here that Gustav Stresemann, German Foreign Minister, will come to Paris to sign on behalf of Germany. If he does it will be the first time since before the outbreak of the World War in 1914 that a German Cabinet member has made an official visit to France.

A host of statesmen, mostly Foreign Ministers of their respective countries, will be here for the event. The probable list includes Sir Austen Chamberlain, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs of Great Britain; Aristide Briand, Minister of Foreign Affairs for France; Frank B. Kellogg, Secretary of State for the United States, and Paul Hymans.

POLICE "ADONIS" LOSING MIND IN DEATH CELL.

NEW YORK, July 27.—Stories to the effect that Daniel Graham, Police Depatment "Adonis," convicted of killing a paymaster he was presumed to guard, is becoming hysterical in his death cell came from attendants. Frequently laughing, breaking his speech with giggles and titters, he appears the happiest man in gloomy Sing Sing, they said. Graham was sentenced to die last week, but received a three-week respite at the last minute.

CLASS JUDGING FOR LIVESTOCK

Poultry and Livestock to be Judged at Peterborough Exhibition.

VALUABLE PRIZES

There is nothing about the farm so absolutely essential to the well-being of agriculture as livestock. Realizing this fact and with a view to educating the young men of the district who will be the future exhibitors at the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition, that they may have a better conception of correct type in the various classes of livestock and poultry, the Exhibition Board, in co-operation with the Ontario Department of Agriculture, will this year offer a competition in judging the various classes of both livestock and poultry.

Not only will there be regular prizes in each event, but special prizes have been decided upon, to be given to the senior, junior and poultry champions. A wrist-watch, valued at $15.00, donated by E. A. Peck, will be given to the boy in the senior class who makes the greatest total in all classes of livestock and poultry; a gold medal, valued at $12.00, engraved, will be given by C. S. McClelland & Son, jewellers, to the boy in the junior class who makes the greatest total in all classes of livestock and poultry; and a cup, donated by Frank Dawson, of Peterborough, will be awarded the boy in either class who makes the highest score in poultry.

Rules governing the judging competition have been drawn up and appear in the Exhibition prise list and program.

1. Open to any boy or young man under the age of 26 who is resident in the county of Peterborough or the townships of South Monaghan, Cavan and Emily, and who has not taken regular course at an agricultural college or school.

2. Entries must be made to J. B. Nelson, agricultural representative, 287 George street, Peterborough, on or before September 8th 1928. No entry fee will be charged.

3. The competition will be held in the judging ring on Wednesday, September 12th, commencing at 9 a.m., as follows: Beef cattle, 9 to 9.30 a.m.; dairy cattle, 9.30 to 10 a.m.; heavy horses, 10 to 10.30 a.m.; swine, 10.30 to 11 a.m.; sheep, 11 to 11.30 a.m.; poultry, 11.30 to 12 a.m.

4. (a) For the benefit of the competitors, a five-minute demonstration by the judge will be given on one animal of each class of livestock, said animal not to be used in the competition.

(b) Each class shall consist of four animals.

(c) Twenty minutes will be allowed for the placing of the class, the making of notes and the marking and collecting of cards.

(d) One hour will be allowed for lunch, after which oral reasons will be taken on all classes judged.

(e) When the reasons are completed, the judge will announce the official placings, and give reasons for the benefit of the competitors and others interested.

5. Only those taking part in the competition and the officials in charge will be allowed in the ring during the competition.

6. Prizes will be awarded on the following basis: 50 per cent. for correct placings, 50 per cent. for reasons.

7. Each competitor will be allowed only one prize, which will be the highest one won.

8. For the purpose of awarding prizes, the entrants will be divided into a senior and junior competition as follows:

Senior—Boys over 18 years of age and under 26 years of age. Prizes: 1st. $4; 2nd. $3; 3rd, $2; 4th, $1, in each class of livestock and poultry

Junior—Boys of 18 years of age and under

Note—Any boy who has taken part in any provincial livestock judging competition is automatically in the senior class.

TWO COUNTRIES ARE MUCH ALIKE

Face Same Problems, U. S. Visitor Tells Local Kiwanis Club.

FULL PROGRAM.

"Your Problems and Our Problems," might well have been the title of the address to which local Kiwanians listened at their luncheon in the Empress Hotel to-day, when Kiwanian Dr. Richardson, one of a party of American visitors who come annually to this city, spoke in a manner that could not but strengthen the bonds of friendship and understanding existent among clubs of the two countries. Dr. Richardson was accompanied by W. C. Bierce, Carl J. Thomas, and Bruce W. Bierce, the four of them having come from Cuyahoga Falls, Ohio.

To-day's luncheon meeting, presided over by Ernie Smith, was also featured by two very fine vocal selections by Mrs. Doig, soloist of St. Andrew's Church, whose accompanist was G. F. Liddle. Incidentally, Mr. Liddle's leadership in the community singing was particularly effective, with the introduction of a new Kiwanis song that "went over big."

Henceforth, Mr. Sweetman, of the Brinton-Peterboro Carpet Company will be known to all club members as "Mike," he having been welcomed into Kiwanis by Dr. Jack Craig, at the meeting to-day. President Joe John made the presentation of the club button, adding his words of welcome to that so well expressed by Dr. Craig.

Charlie elliott was the booster but not the only member to address the club briefly. Art Moffatt issued his third and last call for a large attendance at the formal opening of the horseshoe pitching courts in King Edward Park at 7 o'clock on Monday evening, stating that twenty men could play at once. He hoped to see "several "shifts" on hand.

Harry Boyle made announcement of the inter-club picnic which will be held in Cobourg on Augst 15, the program to begin at 3 p.m. Harry Huffman thought that the local organization should be represented by at least one car in the Kiwanis Motorcade which leaves Toronto for North Bay on Augst 1, while Kiwanian Hicks-Lyne on behalf of Dr. C. Ray Scott of the children's welfare committee, issued an invitation to visit the camp in Jackson's Park next Tuesday. Joe Wearing passed on the Rev. Father Costello's invitation to all club members to attend the garden social being held next week.

The speaker expressed the gratitude of his party for courtesies enjoyed

DR. LANGSNER SOLVES MURDER MYSTERY

CRIMINOLOGIST AIDS POLICE IN SOLVING CAUSE OF DEATH OF FOUR ALBERTA RESIDENTS

Demonstrates Powers of Receptance and Hypnotism to Audience.

FINDS RIFLE

Declares Man Who Commits Crime Has It Constantly In His Mind.

EDMONTON, Alta., July 27 (Canadian Press).—Before an audience of scientists, police and newspapermen, Dr. Maximilian A. Langsner, M.I.C., distinguished Viennest criminologist, who assisted Alberta police in solving the mystery surrounding the killing of four persons at Mannville, Alta., Wednesday night demonstrated his powers of thought receptance and hypnotism which he applies to crime investigation.

Following Dr. Langsner's finding of the rifle which young Verno Boomer has confessed to police that he used to shoot down his mother, brother, and two hired hands, the Austrian scientist and his methods have caused a sensation here. In response to pressing invitations and in order to prove what modern science can do, he agreed to give a demonstration under any conditions which his guests wished to impose.

The most astonishing feat Dr. Langsner performed was the subduing of two thoroughly enraged fighting cocks. The birds, procured locally and not seen by the scientist until placed upon the table, immediately began fighting furiously. Holding the birds by their wings to keep them on the table, Dr. Langsner concentrated his will power on them. The cocks slowly became quiet, their heads dropped, and their respiration was the only evidence that they were alive. Then, placing the cocks side by side, the scientist released his grip and stepped back. The two bitter enemies remained lying with necks crossed. Upon being released from the hypnotic state by a snap of the fingers, the birds leaped to their feet and began to fight again.

Dealing with though receptance, by means of which he was able to find within 15 minutes the rifle for which dozens of searchers had combed the Boomer farm, Dr. Langsner explained the act of thinking sends out vibrations or waves, in much the same manner as a radio station does. In every man or woman there is a sixth sense by which thought waves can be received. Some have this sense more highly developed than others, but it is present in all and can be developed by training.

A man who has committed a crime has it constantly in his mind, either consciously or unconsciously. It is, therefore, comparatively simple for one trained in thought perception to "tune in" on the criminal's thoughts and learn the details of his crime.

W.M.S. HOLDS A PICNIC TEA

Havelock Ladies Entertained at Summer Home on Round Lake.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HAVELOCK, July 27. — The W.M.S. of the United Church held a very enjoyable and successful picnic tea on July 18, at the summer home of the President and Mr. Bonney, on the beautiful shores of Round Lake. Though the weather was threatening during the day, it cleared up in time for tea on the lawns, and as usual the ladies provided bountifully for the occasion.

Besides the Havelock supporters there were a goodly number of out-of-town guests, among whom were: Mrs. A. M. Smith of Toronto, Mrs. H. Smith and Miss Smith of Toronto, Mr. and Mrs. P. W. Fairman, Trenton; Mrs. T. Birdsall and Miss H. Birdsall, Toronto; Mrs. L. Denike, Warkworth; Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Foster and Masters J. and B. Foster, Toronto; Mr. A. B. Fennell, Toronto; Mrs. J. Gibbons and Miss F. Gibbons, Toronto; Miss R. Nudham, Toronto; Rev. J. H. and Mrs. Aikenhead, Toronto; Mrs. W. N. Jamieson, Toronto; Miss B. Burrell, Toronto; Miss L. A. Woods Napanee; Mrs. Gibson, Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. P. Maitland, Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Pace, Toronto; Mrs. Atkins, Toronto; Mrs. Jolly, Toronto; Miss B. Howly, Galt; Mrs. Donovan, Toronto; Miss M. Timms, Toronto; Miss G. Desmond, Toronto; Miss M. J. Chiles, Toronto....

VOLCANO BOILS AGAIN

DUTCH HARBOR, Alaska, July 26. —Bogoslop Island, in the Bering Sea, is a mass of molten lava and seamen expect another eruption soon. Many years ago the island disappeared, but rose again when the volcano beneath it became active. All birds and sea lions have been forced to flee to neighborhood islands as the rocky shores grow hotter.

MOUNT PLEASANT'S OLD MAN WILL SOON CELEBRATE 85TH BIRTHDAY

Joseph Henry Lowe Was Born Near Ida on August 7, 1843.

HAS LIVED IN CAVAN.

Recalls Many Interesting Events When He Was a Boy On Farm.

MOUNT PLEASANT, July 27 (Examiner Correspondence). — Joseph Henry Lowe is Mount Pleasant's oldest gentleman, who will be eighty-five on the seventh of August, 1928.

He has possession of all his faculties, can see well, hear well, and in spite of his age has not lost any of the sense of humor that made him so popular in his younger days.

He still retains a comparatively youthful appearance and smokes a pipe, which is a favorite pastime.

This summer, the same as in former years, he has a splendid garden, which he prides in attending himself and also keeps the lawn around his dwelling house always mown short.

Mr. Lowe was born on the Eleventh Line of Cavan on the farm now owned by Foster Eggleston at Ida, on the seventh of August, 1843; he received his education in a log school house situated on the north side of the road, opposite the present school on the Tenth Line of Cavan, where the gravel pit is now; his first teacher was a man by the name of McLaren; his second teacher, Richard Smith; J. T. Dimstale was his third, and the last teacher he went to was Samuel Cornell of Lindsay. He recalls going to school with Sam, Jim, Jack and Kitty Seeney, Johnathan Baptie, Helen Baptie, Wesley, Jim, Matthew, Caleb and Martha Lowes.

Bears Numerous

At that time most of the country was in bush and bears were numerous. He remembers his father having the farm, now owned by Sam Seeney, rented, and when coming from work, on horse-back, he came across a bear in the field; he chased the bear ahead of him down through (now Eugene Touchbourne's farm), when he got to Ida, he ran home for a gun and his brother Dave followed up the chase with some other fellows until they captured the bear, down on the quarter line, by the creek, near J. Morrison's. His brother Dave had the hide made into a nice robe.

He recalls taking a young colt, which was not broke, out through the back part of the farm, so his father would not see him and going to the "horse races," held at Mount Pleasant; he won the first heat, and in the second, the colt broke and ran into the fence. By the time he reached

Friends Gather for Social Time of Games and Sports.

(Examiner Correspondence)

HAVELOCK, July 27.—An event of unusual interest took place on Tuesday, July 23, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Wildman in Donegal, when a number of the intimate friends and relatives of Mrs. James D. Buck and her sons, Howard and Frank, gathered on the lawn to enjoy a social time before their departure for their home in Detroit.

The aft ernoon was spent in games and races of a very interesting character which were greatly enjoyed by young as well as old. A game of softball, married vs. single, resulted in a sorry score for the latter. Quoit throwing, peanut racing, egg racing, interspersed with the continuous clicking of the camera, followed by a sumptuous dinner on the beautiful lawn, brought all too soon the end of a perfect day.

In a very neat speech Mrs. George Rigby, of Havelock, on behalf of the visitors thanked Mr. and Mrs. Wildman for the very enjoyable time, which was seconded by Peter Haig.

THE WEATHER

Meterological Office, Toronto, July 27.—Showers have occurred in the Lake Superior district and in Northern Ontario, while elsewhere the weather has been fair with not very high temperatures in any of the provinces. Pressure is low over the Great Lakes and high over the Western Provinces and Middle Western States.

Northern Ontario — Moderate winds, shifting to northerly; mostly cloudy and cool with showers.

Ottawa Valley and Upper St. Lawrence—Moderate to fresh easterly winds; unsettled and shower; not much change in temperature.

Lower St. Lawrence—Moderate to fresh winds; unsettled with showers; much the same temperature.

Gulf and North Shore—Moderate to fresh winds; fair at first; probably followed by showers at night.

Maritimes—Moderate winds; fair with not much change in temperature. To Banks—Moderate to fresh northwest winds; fair.

Lake Superior—Moderate to fresh northerly winds; clearing and cool.

Manitoba —Moderate winds; fair with slightly higher temperature.

Saskatchewan and Alberta—Mostly fair and moderately warm; possibly a few scattered showers.

More than 37 different tire sizes are manufactured, although 80 per cent. of sales are confined to five sizes.

Chemical Fire Boys Are Angry At Hello Girls Two Volunteer Fire Departments in Disagreement

BELFORD, N.J., July 27. — Things have come to a pretty pass here, with Mayor Alfred Runyon about to appoint an official referee to stand between the town's two volunteer fire departments.

The trouble started when George Powell, captain of the Belford Chemical Company, charged that the "hello" girls of the local telephone exchange have been favoring the Independent Fire Company, which has quarters about a hundred yards from the chemical company's barn.

He declared it was humiliating, to say the least, to see the Independents dashing gaily to a conflagration of which the Chemical boys knew nothing. And there was further humiliation, he added, in having to followe the Independents to find the fire.

Once, he asserted, when the Indepdents were only out exercising, the Chemicals followed them all over the town before they found it out.

After an official investigation, Mayor Runyon announced that he finds it is within the discretion of the "hello" girls to call the Independents first, and it isn't the town's fault of the Independents are better looking.

FAMILY RE-UNION AT BRIDGENORTH

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Mann Hold Family Gathering.

(Examiner Correspondence)

BRIDGENORTH, July 27.—A reunion of the family of Mrs. Thomas R. Mann and the late Thomas R. Mann was held at the homestead on the Eighth line of Smith on Tuesday evening, July 24. This beautiful home to which the late Thomas R. Mann took his bride, who was before her marriage Eunice Milburn, fifty-five years ago, is situated on the Eighth line of Smith, between Bridgenorth and Lakefield.

On Tuesday evening Mrs. Mann was surrounded by three sons and six daughters, with their wives, husbands and families, to the number of about forty. The reunion was held in honor of Mrs. Leonard D. Palmer, of Shedden, Ontario, who with her two sons, has been visiting her mother for the past month.

At 6.30 everyone sat down to a sumptuously laden supper spread on the lawn, which was followed by a social time. Several snaps were taken of the group during the evening.

CHEVROLET SALES HOME UP-TO-DATE

Building at Hunter and Water Streets Being Entirely Remodelled.

The beautiful new home of the Chevrolet car in Peterborough at the corner of Hunter and Water streets is fast nearing completion and when the Chevrolet Sales and Service move into their new quarters they will occupy one of the most up-to-date service and maintenance stations in this district, showing a complete new line of Chevrolet and Oakland automobiles. They will carry a complete line of accessories, tires, repair parts, gas, oil, and grease.

The outside of the building has been refinished in ivory and black, the color scheme giving a very attractive appearance to the corner. The showroom, 50 by 35 feet, is finished in ivory with brown trimmings and a battleship grey concrete floor, making one of the nicest color schemes seen in the city. Full length plate glass windows line the west and north walls, giving passersby a full view of the models on display as well as giving a light appearance to the interior. In the evening twelve indirect lights will glow upon the shining cars and show them off to the best advantage.

Baskets of ferns and a floor lamp will take away any bareness the interior might show and provide the touch that makes the scheme complete. An oak settee and chairs will be placed about the salon which will lend their attractiveness as well as usefulness to the show room.

Off the show room will the sales and parts office. The parts will be handled by a full equipment which facilitates the service to the customers' advantage.

In the rear will be the repair shop with its modern equipment. Finished in white with an east glass wall, this is a very light workshop. In the south end of the shop will be the most modern battery service in Peterborough, I. T. Lillico of the Chevrolet Sales and Service told The Examiner.

Directly to the west of the repair shop and to the south of the show room will be the used car show room and repair plant for minor jobs. This will also be carried out in white with modern lighting.

The yard in the rear, opening on to Hunter street, where the old shoe shop is now located, will all be leveled and a bed of crushed gravel put on as a base on top of which will be placed a top of fine stone, making a perfect driveway. The whole yard will be surrounded by a modern steel fence.

The entire plant is modern to the last word and will making a fitting home for this fine line of General Motors products.

NORTHERN ALBERTA IS SWEPT BY EPIDEMIC OF INFLUENZA

Death Toll Among Some of Indian Tribes Has Been Severe.

75 PER CENT. SICK

White Population So Far Have Been Immune From Disease.

REGINA, Sask., July 27 (Canadian Press).—Reports that a violent epidemic of influenza is sweeping over an area extending from the delta of the McKenzie River in the Arctic to waterways in Northern Alberta, were confirmed yesterday by Sergeant C. V. Matthews, who arrived here from the Royal Canadian Mounted post at Fort Simpson.

The death toll among some of the Indian tribes has been particularly severe, according to Sergt. Matthews. In the Fort Resolution district alone; 30 deaths had been reported before his departure, while he estimated that more than 75 per cent. of the Indians at Simpson were down with the disease. From information obtained from trappers and river men and through exchange of wireless messages, he had ascertained that the epidemic had spread as far north as Aklavik, in the North-West Territories.

The white population of the region has so far been immune, only one trapper at Simpson being infected.

WINNIPEG, Man., July 27 (Canadian Press).—Paul Mekowski, a recent immigrant to Canada, ended his life in spectacular manner when he plunged 75 feet from the spillway of the Manitoba Power Company's dam at Las du Bonnett, Man., yesterday afternoon. The cause of his action is unknown.

Peterborough Couple Sleep in Automobile

KITCHENER, July 27.—Rather an amusing incident occurred in which a policeman and a married couple played the main parts. Residents of Victoria street were rather perturbed when a car drove to the end of the street and parked in a field, and two flashlights were used freely by the occupants.

The police were called, but when an officer arrived all was in darkness. He approached quietly, and was surprised to see a man sitting up in the front seat sound asleep. The officer then raised the rear curtains, and was more surprised to see a young lady in her nightgown sleeping in a box on the rear seat. The couple finally awoke and offered the explanation that they had been recently married in Peterborough, and not having enough money to stay at a hotel, were cutting down expenses by utilizing the car.

LABOR CONGRESS OFFICIALS ENDORSE STAND OF MINISTER

President and Secretary-Treasurer Issue Statement on Immigration.

SURPLUS OF MINERS

Canada Needs Organized Effort to Co-ordinate Activities of Labor.

OTTAWA, Ont., July 26 (Canadian Press).—In a statement issued yesterday afternoon, and bearing the signatures of Tom Moore, president, and P. M. Draper, secretary-treasurer, the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada endorses the views expressed recently with respect to immigration, by the Hon. Peter Heenan, Minister of Labor.

The statement follows:

In exposing the true situation respecting immigration from Great Britain to Canada, the Minister of Labor, the Hon. Peter Heenan, in a statement published Tuesday, has done a service not only to the people of this country, but to the intending emigrants themselves. Too long has the Canadian Government remained silent and allowed misleading propaganda as to opportunities for employment in Canada to be carried on without any official contradiction nd especially does this apply to the opportunities supposed to exist for miners to develop our mineral resources.

Surplus of Miners

The minister's clear declaration that Labor Department records show a surplus of coal miners already in Canada should definitely give the quietus to those who seek to exploit the misery of British miners by seeking to induce them to migrate to Canada, only to meet with similar conditions of unemployment as they leave behind.

The same can be said of practically every other industrial activity, and the Minister of Labor is to be commended for daring to speak the truth when he says: "It would be of no benefit to either Canada or the immigrants themselves if artisans come to our cities from Britain expecting to find jobs at their trades and were left stranded here."

Everyone recognizes the necessity of meeting labor requirements to harvest the grain crop of Canada. Employers can do much to help in this if they will refrain from demanding the peak number of workers for their respective activities simultaneously with this period and organize their production so that there would be a greater volume of employment after the harvest season was over.

Organized Effort

A little more organized effort to co-ordinate the activities of labor already in Canada would be of benefit to all, and relieve considerably the aftermath of unemployment which is not only a disaster for the individual but a serious financial problem for all municipalities during the subsequent several months of winter and until seasonal occupations again relieve the situation.

It is to be sincerely hoped that the Minister of Labor will receive the full support of the entire government in his efforts to prevent interested parties from exploiting a temporary situation by flooding Canada with labor for which there is no reasonable opportunity of employment, the ultimate result of which, as the minister truly says, "Can only be to impair the prestige of Canada in the eyes of the residents of the Mother Country."

SWEDES WANT FULL INQUIRY

Think Neutral Commission Should Probe Death of Dr. Malmgren.

FEELING INTENSE.

STOCKHOLM, July 26.— (Canadian Press.)—While no official information has been given out on the subject, it is generally beleieved in Stockholm that the Swedish government has been in communication with Italy regarding the question of an investigation of the death of Dr. Finn Malmgren, Swedish meteorologist on the dirigible Italia.

Feeling on the subject has been intense among the Swedish people and so far as can be determined there appears to be a growing opinion throughout the country that an important neutral commission should inquire itno the Malmgren affair.

The grandchildren present were: Gordon McGregor, Lillian McGregor, James, Donald and Phyllis Moore, Marion and Jack Edmison, Eunice Hammond, Clarence and Douglas Palmer, Clarence and Margaret Mann; and one great-grandchild, Betty McGregor.

Farmers Busy.

The farmers in this district are very busy getting in the hay. The many recent showers made it rather difficult. The fall wheat is being cut now, and many of the farmers have their root crop yet to finish. The fruit is all ripening together; the currants, raspberries and cherries are an excellent crop this year.

SAILOR GUARDS NOBILE'S SHIP

Armed Man Stands At Head of Gang Plank in Norse Harbor.

RESCUED MEN BELOW.

OSLO, Norway, July 26 (Canadian Press).—A seaman with fixed bayonet was placed on guard at the gang plank of the Citta Di Milano to-day when the vessel docked at Narvik with survivors of the Italia disaster. Onlookers at the docks regarded this move with astonishment.

When the ship arrived early this morning very few people were on hand and no assistance was forthcoming when a rope was thrown ashore, one of the Italian crew jumping to shore to fasten it.

No Norwegian authorities were present on the quay. Spectators had a glimpse of General Nobile's dog Titina through a port hole, but as soon as this was observed the port hole was covered. None of the rescued men appeared on deck. The survivors were to continue their journey to Italy by train this evening, and a special carriage will drive up by the ship's side to take them straight from the vessel to the station.

The last boat was the Aulda of Chatham, arriving here from Toronto on the way to Simcoe. W. C. McLean of the Hayes Wheel Company said that it has been a lovely trip. He is in charge of the boat for W. Kistler, the general manager of the Hayes Wheel Company, who with a party of four are making the trip. Everything has been fine, according to him, except the lockmasters at times, who have a tendency to shoot them up too fast, as they put it. At Healey Falls they rose so rapidly that they broke off a bumper; outside of that everything has been perfect.

Only about five people in a hundred hold themselves really erect. All the other stoop to a greater or lesser degree.

INCOME TAX RETURNS LARGER.

Because they confirm The Examiner's contention that slashing the income tax does not necessarily mean a loss of revenue, but rather encourage business development and expansion, there is satisfaction in reading the latest report of income tax collections.

Despite a further 10 per cent. reduction in the tax, it is announced from Ottawa that the collections for the present fiscal year already have exceeded $50,000,000, and there is a substantial increase over the figures for the same period last year, an increase of well over six million dollars.

These returns are gratifying.

They indicate that Canada is prosperous; they reflect credit upon the efficiency with which the collections are made by the Department of National Revenue, and, above all, they testify to the fact that tax reductions add to the general wealth and are a direct stimulus to business and industry, releasing capital that would otherwise be unavailable for development purposes.

THE AEROPLANE INDUSTRY.

A sign of the times is the announcement from Windsor that an American aeroplane company is contemplating the establishment of a branch factory in the Border City.

The possibilities of aviation are so great that it is probable that the manufacture of aircraft will soon be as important an industry and will play as great a part in building up large cities as the manufacture of automobiles.

The motor car has made Oshawa and added greatly to the growth of Windsor and other cities in Ontario.

The aeroplane may do as much for other communities.

At least it offers enough promise to make it well worth while for our City Council and Chamber of Commerce to keep closely in touch with developments along this line.

We failed to cash in on the automobile industry, but a promising development in the manufacture of outboard motors and perhaps the aeroplane industry may bring us expansion and growth.

At least it offers an opening that should be investigated.

AN ENTHUSIASTIC ORGANIZATION.

No lack of enthusiasm was in evidence at the annual meeting of the Trent Waterway Development Association at Bobcaygeon on Wednesday, and the organization, after a rousing meeting, starts another year's activity on behalf of this district, heartened by previous successes and confident of greater results in the future.

The association confirmed its determination to press for the completion of the canal, and during the next year this question is to receive every attention.

It is evident that previous efforts have been successful in winning support for the project in quarters that were once far from friendly, and sufficient progress has been made in that direction to justify the hope that public opinion will more and more line up behind the association in urging upon the Government the desirability of completing the waterway.

W. M. Fowlds, of Hastings, president during the past year, deserves thanks for faithful service, while in J. B. Hanley, of Midland, who was elected as president for the next twelve months, the assiciation has an executive head who will continue the fight on behalf of the Trent with vigor and determination.

KNOW ONTARIO BETTER.

A motorcade composed of representatives of a large number of Ontario Kiwanis Clubs is to tour Northern Ontario.

As The Examiner pointed out in connection with the trip of the Progressive members of the Legislature to the same section, it is good business for Ontario to bring the older portion of the Province more closely in touch with the new.

It is essential that we should know the North more intimately, and there is no better way than that taken by the Kiwanians, who are to motor through the mining region.

The construction of the Ferguson highway and the building of other good roads to the North has made it practicable for the people of Old Ontario to study the conditions in the newer portion of the Province, and such tours as those of the Progressives and the Kiwanians should prove of great educational value.

Only through such visits is it possible to realize the great wealth of Ontario, and especially the treasure trove that is located in the Northland.

To motorists seeking new scenes and sensations, a tour of New Ontario is commended.

It will pay to know Ontario better.

A GREAT ENGLISHMAN.

The days are long past since an English lord was simply a rich idler who lived on his rents from his estates or on his royalties from his coal mines. While it is true that English history is dotted with the names of men of noble birth who have led hosts to victory and written vivid pages in the national annals, it is more common in modern times to find their names as leaders of industry, research, or doing useful work for the country, and doing it well.

Among the older members of the hereditary house is a veteran peer who in one sense neither toils nor spins because he owns 175,000 acres of land and has many rich properties which bring him a gigantic income every year. Yet he has just received a remarkable tribute, mainly from the democracy. He is Lord Lonsdale.

Although a millionaire many times over, a sum of over one and a half million dollars was subscribed in sums of from twenty-five cents up, as a gift to Lord and Lady Lonsdale on their golden wedding. The King and Queen and five other members of the Royal family attended the golden wedding dinner—a remarkable compliment to a man who has not a drop of royal blood in his veins.

And yet Lord Lonsdale is the idol of democracy. His appearance among plebeians is the signal for as much cheering as if he were the Prince of Wales.

The cause of his popularity? Just the power of personality.

Lord Lonsdale is a sportsman all the time. He has been president of the National Sporting Club for decades. He calls every boxer of note by his first name. He is one of the Corinthian sort himself. On several occasions he has thrashed bullies in the street who were abusing horses or abusing women. When fifty-four years old he saw a man pick a poor woman's pocket and, after taking the purse from him, added a hiding in the bargain.

Race-course thieves have picked his own pocket, but on finding that the property belonged to him, have sent the money or articles back with a note of apology. His friends have had goods stolen from their homes. Lord Lonsdale has diplomatically expressed regret for his friend's loss to a newspaperman—and the loot was anonymously sent back.

He dances with coster women—the real Cockney 'Arriets with the pearly clothes—in the ring at the international horse show at Olympia; he helps any sportsman who is down and out. His estates and mines are run on lines of fellowship. He numbers his friends by the thousand, from the slums of Whitechapel to Buckingham Palace. He has entertained nearly every crowned head in Europe—and he will dine with a boxer or a stableboy. He could attend a sing-song in the Thieves' Kitchen—and emerge with his diamond studs and his watch intact.

Lord Lonsdale's decision with regard to the million and a half dollar gift is just what one might expect of him. He is converting it into a fund to provide pensions and homes for old-time boxers and racing men. —St. Thomas Times-Journal.

THE FUTURE AND THE BOY SCOUT MOVEMENT.

The defence of a man's country, as well as the defence of a man's home, is the ideal of human life. We don't want to go back to the Roman period, or any other national period, beyond our own, of which we here all have been witnesses of the glory and destruction. It is painful to many, and an honor to many, but the solvable problem is each one did his best, which was his duty to do. Now the conflict is over, and many readjustments which are always necessary after a conflict for national democracy, such as our Canadian boys performed, we recognize in it a change for the betterment of our country. To-day Canada is coming into her own, and it cannot be clearly pointed without reference to the part our Canadians took in the war. From that point, if we had no other, we can look back with national pride and satisfaction, that those who were favored with the honor and privilege to fight for their country and home, made Canada practically an independent nation.

Now the adjustments are nearly completed, we find the ties of Empire more strongly tied and more binding in conviction in Canada than they ever were; and to that we can conceive of no other reason than the part Canadians took and sacrificed for in the great world war.

Out of the struggle has come the Boy Scout organization, and the national and moral training they receive is a convincing proof that the bonds of Empire are being gradually tied together; it will be impossible to loosen the silken threads of nature. The service such an organization is doing to the community is not now fully observed or recognized; but as years pass by, we are prepared to wager that the Boy Scout of to-day will pass to the higher ranks of usefulness to the community than those who have failed to take advantage of such an opportunity.

We hope the Boy Scout movement will be extended, and it may not be out of place to suggest to the units of the Army and Navy Veterans that all possible encouragement should be extended to the organization of the Scouts movement. There is a probability that we will not have any more "great world war," and then we will fail because we have no recruiting ground. The Boy Scout can take our place, and in perpetuity continue the work the association is now doing. The memories of the past can be kept alive, and the social and beneficial work now performed will be given a larger scope of usefulness by the Army and Navy Veterans of Canada.—The Khaki Call.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, ue., July 27 (Canadian Press).—With the exception of a few sales of wheat and oats to the United Kingdom, the export trade in Canadian grain here yesterdaywas quiet.

The trade in cash grain in the domestic market was also slow, the only business of importance reported being sales of a few loads of No. 3 Northern wheat at 2½c per bushel over the Winnipeg July option, c.i.f. Montreal for nearby shipment. The local and country demand for car lotswas also quieter, but the tone of the market was steady and prices showed no further change.

In sympathy with the reaction in cash wheat prices in the Winnipeg market, a rather better feeling prevailed in the local spring wheat flour situation, but there was no actual change in prices announced. There was some further business accomplished with foreign buyers overnight for August shipment, but the volume was not large. The movement for local and country account on old contracts was fair. The market for winter wheat flour was without any new phase to note, prices being still maintained with a very moderate amount of business passing.

The condition of the local butter situation was practically unchanged, the undertone being firm with an increased inquiry from local interests for supplies, but the volume of business showed no improvement owing to the fact that holders' views in most cases were stronger and were not disposed to accept present prices ruling for any quantity. The receipts were 1,641 packages.

There was no improvement in the volume of business in cheese with English importers, but the inquiry for supplies between houses on spot showed on increase which tended to create a better feeling in the market and holders in some instance were inclined to be firmer in their views. The receipts were 8,270 boxes.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, July 27 (Canadian Press).—Speculators who have apparently over-reached themselves in big selling of corn for July and September delivery made flurried attempts yesterday to escape from the predicament. Largely as a result, September corn jumped up five cents a bushel and July four cents, as compared with the day's lowest figures.

Closing quotations on corn were unsettled at ⅝ to ½c gain over Wednesday's finish. Wheat closed 1⅜ to 2c net higher, oats varying from ⅞ decline to 1⅛c advance, and provisions at 20c off to 7½c up.

Affairs in the corn market were brought to a crucial stage by an order issued yesterday from the government grain futures administration requiring a report on all individual open interests of 100,000 bushels or more in July corn. After the issuance of the order, previous sellers both of July and September, especially September, made haste to change their market position and reduce their commitments. This procedure was given additional impetus by the fact that the July delivery yesterday showed from the outset a notable upward trend, notwithstanding liberal arrivals of corn in Chicago yesterday, 432 cars, and despite total deliveries of 431,000 bushels of corn yesterday on Chicago July contracts.

The fact that July corn was at an unusual premium of 13 cents over September yesterday, appeared to lend significance to the government order for special information on the existing trade status, although officials said there was no evidence of any manipulative activity going on. Meanwhile, according to some observers, a number of large traders have of late been conspicuous as favoring ownership of July and September corn because of belief that rural stocks of old corn had become unusually small as a result of cold weather and poor pastures during the spring. On the other hand, the good outlook for the 1928 new crop not yet available had brought about an extraordinary amount of selling, especially of corn to be delivered in September.

Expert buying of 1,000,000 bushels of North American wheat yesterday lifted wheat prices after an early decline that was associated with favorable weather and crop advices, lower quotations at Liverpool and with an official estimate that the forthcoming harvest in Italy would yield 24,000,000 bushel more than the latest previous estimate. On the decline, July delivery of wheat were dropped to a new low price record for the season.

Oats price fluctuations yesterday were irregular, with cash offerings larger.

Despite higher quotations on hogs, provisions averaged lower as a result of selling ascribed to foreigners.

TORONTO, July 27.— Only four cars of mixed stock, fresh arrivals for yesterday's market. All butcher cattle offerings cleaned up at firm, steady prices in Tuesday's market.

BUTTER AND EGGS

TORONTO, July 27—Now that storing operations have ceased the egg market is governed by supply and demand for prompt consumption. Reports from some of the larger consuming centres state there is some accumulation and the market is easier, particularly for firsts and seconds. The demand is largely running to extras and as this grade is becoming scarcer in the receipts, there is a wider spread between extras and firsts. From other centres reports state the market is about steady, receipts being about equal to the demand. The consumptive demand keeps up remarkably well considering the season and the competition from small fruits. When small fruits are plentiful usually fewer eggs are eaten.

Very little interprovincial trading in eggs is reported. Eastern brokers say quotations from British Columbia and the Prairie Provinces are above the ideas of eastern buyers. A sale of Ontarios is reported at extras 36½c, firsts 34½c, delivered, Toronto, cases to be returned. An Ontario country shipper reports a sale at extras 35½, firsts 33, seconds 26 f.o.b., point of shipment, cases to be returned, prepaid.

A Thought

CAPACITY FOR LEARNING

It has been often remarked that when a stranger enters St. Peter's for the first time, the immediate impression is one of disappointment; the building looks smaller than he expected to find it. So it is with the first sight of mountains, their summits never seem so near the clouds as we hoped to see them. But a closer acquaintance with these, and with other grand or beautiful objects, convinces us that our first impression arose not from the want of greatness in what we saw, but from a want of comprehensiveness in ourselves to grasp it. What we saw was all that existed; but all that our untaught glance could master. As we know it better it remains the same, but we rise more nearly to its level; our greater admiration is but proof that we are become able to appreciate it more fully.—Dr. Arnold (of Rugby).

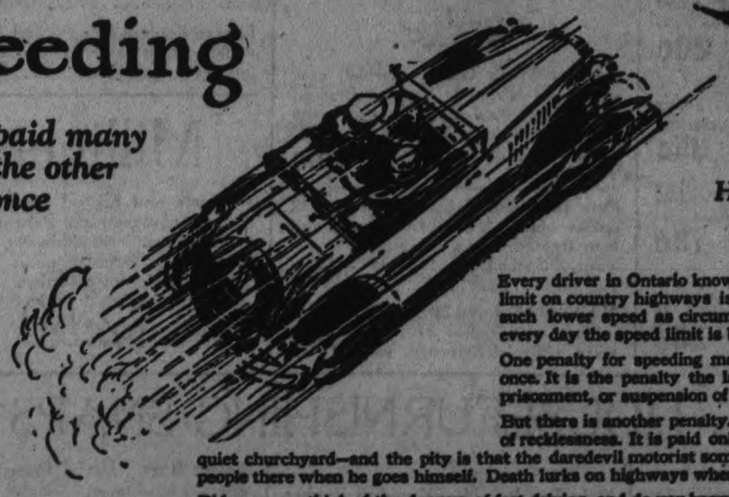
TWO PENALTIES for speeding

One can be paid many times but the other only once

Death lurks on Highways where the Speeders are



Every driver in Ontario knows that the legal speed limit on country highways is 35 miles per hour, or such lower speed as circumstances warrant. Yet every day the speed limit is broken.

One penalty for speeding may be paid more than once. It is the penalty the law enacts—a fine, imprisonment, or suspension of the right to drive.

But there is another penalty. It is the consequence of recklessness. It is paid only once as it leads to a quiet churchyard—and the pity is that the daredevil motorist sometimes sends innocent people there when he goes himself. Death lurks on highways where the speeders are.

Did you ever think of the dangers of fast driving, and do you know how they multiply as the speed increases?

At 35 miles per hour your car moves 513 feet every 10 seconds; at 40 miles per hour, 587 feet every 10 seconds; at 50 miles per hour, 733 feet every 10 seconds.

In average condition four-wheel brakes should bring your car to a full stop at 35 miles per hour in 72 feet;

at 40 miles per hour in 95 feet;
at 50 miles per hour in 150 feet:

At 50 miles per hour you need 108% more distance in which to stop your car than at 35 miles per hour, though your speed has increased less than 43%! Every mile per hour you add to the legal speed brings a rapidly increasing element of danger to you and to all others on the road near you.

To protect your own life and the lives of others—DON'T SPEED.

SPOILT MUSIC

A Splendid New Serial by Ruby M. Ayres

THE STORY THUS FAR:

JENNIFER FRY is saved from drowning by NICHOLAS GAUNT, wealthy young man-about-town. Later he takes her to tea and asks to call, but she refuses because she is ashamed of her humble surroundings. They continue their friendship and Jennifer comes to love Nicholas, but he is suddenly called abroad by his mother's illness. During his absence Jennifer's father dies. She reads of his engagement in the paper, and stands in the crowd to see him and his bride come from the church after the wedding. Her mother dies. Five years later she meets Nicholas again. He decides to divorce his wife, Lady Edith. But just then Lady Edith becomes ill. The doctors promise her only a year of life and she makes Gaunt promise not to see Jennifer for that year. Jennifer is angry and decides to be as gay as she can on a legacy of eight thousand pounds left her by an uncle. She gives up her job and goes to work to have a good time. She meets DOLORES and BUDDY, two women who live in the flat above her new dwelling place. Through them she meets CHESNEY, who quarrels about her with Buddy and proposes to Jennifer. Jennifer asks him to wait for her answer. They meet Gaunt and his wife at a night club. Jennifer, tired and unhappy, promises to marry Chesney.

CHAPTER XXVI

Drugged Memory

Jennifer went up to the flat above hers the following morning to tell Dolores of her engagement.

Dolores was wrapped in a multi-colored dressing-gown, drinking strong coffee and putting a new string to her "fiddle," as she called it.

She told Jennifer to shut the door quietly and come in.

"Buddy's fast asleep," she explained. She talked in a low tone. "Sit down. Have some coffee. Fetch yourself a cup, will you?"

Jennifer obeyed, casting an apprehensive glance at the closed door which she knew led to Buddy's room.

She had come to tell her news, and yet now that she was here she felt curiously reluctant.

She poured out some coffee and helped herself to a cigarette, and Dolores laid down the fiddle and clasped her white hands round her knee.

"I'm worried, she said abruptly.

"Worried?"

"Yes; about Buddy."

"Oh! is she ill?"

"Not more than usual; but if I don't pull her up soon, or take her away, she'll kill herself."

"What do you mean?" Jennifer looked startled.

"I mean that she's drinking too much. You know that. It's frightful for a girl of her age. I've threatened, argued, implored. It's useless. What can I do?"

"What does she say?"

"That she doesn't care. That the sooner she drinks herself to death the better."

Jennifer paled.

"I'm afraid it's partly my fault," she said painfully. Dolores nodded.

"It is in a way, though I doubt if Malcolm would ever have married her. Anyway, Buddy shouldn't be so weak. Lots of us have to stand by and grin while another woman snatches the man we want, but we don't all fly to drink and make fools of ourselves."

"Buddy is so young. She will get over it."

"I don't think so. She always liked Malcolm, of course; but she never had an overwhelming passion for him till he let her see that he preferred you."

There was a short silence; then, with an effort, Jennifer told her news.

"I've promised to marry him, Dolores."

A queer little flicker crossed the elder woman's eyes.

"I'm not surprised. Last night, I suppose?"

"Yes."

"I hope you'll be happy."

"I hope so, too. I'm going to try, anyway. I think he's very . . . fond of me."

Dolores laughed.

"Is that the best word your modesty can find? I'll give you a better. He adores you. That's the word. I'm fond of you myself. I know you're white all through; but he thinks more of you even than that. He's made an ideal of you which he worships. It would break his heart if you ever let him down."

"I've never pretended to care for him as—as I should like to care for the man I marry."

"I'm sure you haven't; but he'd take you just the same if he knew you hated him. Malcolm's a surprise to me. I always thought he was a bored, empty young man—without a heart or any ideals. Well, he isn't! You've brought out all that is best in him. He's a different man since he's known you."

"That's your imagination."

Dolores shook her head.

"No. Love always changes people like that if it's the right sort of love." She laughed. "I know by experience. Once, for seven whole months, I was quite the nicest thing in women you can imagine."

"Because you were in love?"

"Yes."

"What happened?"

Dolores stooped and picked Nicodemus up from the rug, holding him lightly in her arms as if trying to extract sympathy and comfort from his warm body.

"He chucked me," she said inelegantly.

"For someone else?"

"Yes; for a woman with money. I hadn't a name then, or anything to recommend me except my adoration, which probably bored him to death. Men can't stand adoration. It's like too much chocolate. It makes them sick after awhile."

"What did you do then?"

"Oh, I had a look at the Thames, and I went up to Paddington Station and wondered if it would hurt very much if I flung myself under a train; then I went back home and practised the fiddle like the very devil, till people began to call me a genius. I owe that, at least, to . . . him! If he hadn't thrown me over I should never have been able to play as I can now. He gave me the vital spark."

"Is he still alive?"

"No—at least . . ." She put Nicodemus down again and, rising, began restlessly pacing the room. "You know, Jennifer," she said abruptly, "I've never got the feeling that people are really dead because we put them away in a box and hide them under the ground. He's not dead! At any rate, not to me. Whenever I play"—she pointed to the violin lying on the couch—"it's as if he comes into the room, or wherever I am, and stands beside me. I can see his face in the music, if you understand me, and hear his voice." She laughed. "I suppose you think I'm crazy."

"No."

"We are all crazy on some point or other," Dolores declared. "We've all got our own ideas of the Hereafter, and I suppose everyone hopes that it's the kind of place that will suit them best; so that's why I hope it's arranged so that men don't get sick to death of a loving woman."

Jennifer had never seen Dolores so moved before, and there was deep compassion in her eyes.

"I don't mind much what it's like as long as it's not lonely," she said after a moment. "My idea of utter misery is to be alone."

"That's because you've experienced it."

"Yes."

Jennifer looked away to the window, through which the morning sunlight was streaming, and she thought of the days following her father's death before she heard of Gaunt's engagement, and of the days following that last parting in the Notting Hill backwater, when she had waited and hoped and prayed, and finally despaired that he would ever come back to her!

Lonely! Did she not know every light and shade of its tragic robe? Had she not plumbed its almost bottomless depths?

"But I never mean to be lonely again if I can help it," she said vehemently. "I'm going to be happy now—happy, happy, happy!"

Dolores shrugged her shoulders.

"I hope you are," she said. She raised a warning finger. "Hark! there's Buddy calling."

Jennifer rose.

"Well, I'll be going. I just ran up to tell you my news."

Dolores caught her hand.

"I am glad, even if I didn't seem particularly nice about it just now," she said. "You deserve to be happy. You've had your rough times, I know."

Jennifer went back to her own flat and put on her hat and coat. Chesney was calling for her at twelve to take her to lunch with his sister. When she was ready she looked at her face in the glass.

"I will be happy, I will," she told herself passionately. Then she remembered what Dolores had said.

". . . It's as if he comes into the room, or wherever I am, and stands beside me. I can see his face in the music and hear his voice. . . ."

This man, whoever he had been, had treated Dolores badly, but she was still haunted by her love for him.

Life was such a bitter jest. Would the chief jester make it his business to see that by the same rule she, too, was never allowed to forget Nicholas Gaunt?

"I will forget him! I will!" she said over and over again in her heart. And yet the memory of his arm round her last night was an exquisite happiness, and the sound of his voice had awakened a thousand little memories which she had tried so hard to drug to forgetfulness.

LYRICS OF LIFE

THE FAITHFUL

When the sun in the west is setting, then the faithful kneel down to pray,
And they dream of an ancient temple that is half of a world away.
For the hearts of the faithful hunger for the sight of a shining dome,
When the silvery bells are calling, are calling the faithful home.

My shrine is only a woodland, my tow'r is a leafy tree,
But evening thrills with music, with bells that are calling me.
Your roof is a roof of metal, my roof is a roof of pine;
Do the bells of your temple call you any more than the bells of mine?

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

SATURDAY, JULY 28, 1928

Menacing stars rule today, according to astrology, which reads the horoscope as exceedingly unfavorable.

Farmers especially may express discontent.

Clashes between old industrial methods and new also may be expected as the autumn advances. Efficiency is to be worshipped more and more, and expert service is to be demanded insistently, the seers foretell.

The evening may be an unfortunate time for orators and lecturers, especially if they discuss political issues.

Women will play subordinate parts in the national campaign, it is again prophesied, and few will obtain public office.

The present apparent insignificance of women in big public matters is merely the lull before the storm of protest that will be followed by organized activities for future domination.

The year 1928 is a brief period of adjustment for women who have ceased to be novelties in business or political activities and have not yet found their right place, the seers explain.

Saturn continues to encourage great combinations of capital and world extensions of trade, which later will arouse indignant protest from the people.

Destructive wind storms may be expected in the West Indies and even in certain southern states.

Railways and aviation are subject to the best possible planetry guidance and will be marvelously well patronized all through the summer.

Queer weather vagaries are forecast for many parts of the country and heavy storms may damage property next month.

Weddings among the wealthy and the famous will multiply early in the autumn, it is prognosticated.

Persons whose birthdate it is may expect a year of unusual joy. The home is to be a place of much prosperity.

Children born on this day may have special talents in gardening and agriculture. Poets are born under this sign.

UNCLE WIGGILY

By HOWARD R. GARIS

Today: Bedtime Story

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

UNCLE WIGGILY'S RAG BAG

"Mother, do you know how I could earn any money?" barked Jackie Bow Wow to the dog lady one morning.

"What do you want money for?" Mrs. Bow Wow asked with a smile.

"I want to buy a toy boat and a bone lollypop to eat while I watch my boat sail on the duck pond," whined Jackie. "How can I earn some money? Don't you want me to go to the store for meat so you can give me five cents?"

"Thank you, Jackie, no," answered his mother. "But I have often heard your father say that when he was a little puppy dog like you he used to earn money by picking up old rags and selling them."

"Old rags!" barked Jackie. "Say, I can do that! There ought to be lots of folks around here who have old rags! I'll gather a bag full and then I'll sell 'em and make money. Hurray!"

Jackie hurried down cellar where he found an empty bag. Slinging this over his shoulder he started off, calling:

"Rags! Rags! Any rags today!"

He passed the house where Aunt Lettie the goat lady lived.

"What's that you're calling?" asked Aunt Lettie.

"Rags! Rags! Any rags?" barked Jackie.

"No, I don't want to buy any rags!" bleated Aunt Lettie.

"I'm not selling rags, I'm begging them," said Jackie.

"Oh, ho! Ho! Ha! Ha! How funny!" laughed the lady goat. "You're almost as funny as the inkblot riddle Uncle Wiggily made up for the jam tart woodpecker last night. See if you can answer that riddle, Jackie. Which is the strongest day of the seven?"

"I know the answer, 'cause I heard Uncle Wiggily tell the woodpecker," whined the puppy boy. "The strongest day is Sunday because all the others are week days. But haven't you any rags?"

"I'm sorry, but I haven't," bleated Aunt Lettie.

So Jackie marched on, calling:

"Rags! Rags! Any rags?" Pretty soon he reached Uncle Wiggily's hollow-stump bungalow. The rabbit gentleman was just going adventuring, but when he heard what Jackie wanted, Mr. Longears kindly looked around the bungalow (his wife and Nurse Jane being out) and he found what he thought were a lot of rags. So he gave Jackie a bag full.

Then Jackie hurried off calling:

"Rags! Rags! Who'll buy my rags so I can buy a boat and a lollypop? But nobody seemed to want any rags.

As for Uncle Wiggily, it was not long after he had given the puppy dog the bag of rags before Mrs. Longears came back from the store and looked for her red silk dress.

"It was in my closet," she said. "But where is it now?"

"Was your dress kind of now, ragged looking?" asked Uncle Wiggily apprehensive like and with premonitions of trouble to come.

"It was," said his wife. "And where are my stockings and a lot of my other clothes?"

"Oh, dear!" cried Uncle Wiggily. "I must have mistaken them for rags and I gave them away to Jackie Bow Wow."

"Then you had better get them back from him as soon as ever you can!" cried Mrs. Longears. Out of the bungalow went Uncle Wiggily on the skippity hop. All this while Jackie had been trying to sell the rags, but no one wanted to buy them. So when Uncle Wiggily caught up to the puppy and heard him calling about rags to sell, the bunny shouted:

"I'll buy them! I'll buy them! Quick, give me back those rags!"

So he gave Jackie ten cents for the bag of rags, which Jackie thought was vry queer. And in this way Mr. Longears made peace with his wife.

"Whew! That was a close call!" said Mr. Longears when it was all over. "I must think of a puzzle to compose my mind." So he made a puzzle like this of a man, a boy and a girl walking down a long hall.

"The trick is to tell, without measuring, who is the biggest," said Mr. Longears.

HERE'S HOW TO REDUCE

INSTRUCTIONS TO BE FOLLOWED ON SATURDAY

Take your morning exercises and shower bath, as usual.

Breakfast: Choice of one kind of the following fruits: Apples, peaches, apricots, pears, grapes, oranges, loquats, grapefruit, plums, melons, lemons, pineapple, cherries, or berries. One glassful of water.

I am giving you a complete list of acid fruits, which may be used. Although you will not be able to get some of them at the present time, I want you to learn the kind which you can use when they are in season. You will notice I do not include bananas in this list, as they are not only unwholesome, but are also weight-producing.

Take your morning walk as usual, sometime between breakfast and lunch.

Lunch: One glassful of milk,
Dish of spinach,
Raw celery.

Milk should not be used with an ordinary meal, but it makes a good combination with such non-starchy foods as spinach and celery. Do not be afraid of gaining weight from taking this glassful of milk, as this small amount of milk will not make you gain weight. You would have to take a quart or more per day, in addition to your regular meals before you would put on any fat from using milk.

In the afternoon or evening you must take your regular walk, gradually increasing the distance until you are walking four miles daily.

Upon returning from your walk, take the exercises I have already given you, and add the following: LYING ON BACK:

8.—Hands clasped behind head—slowly raise the arms, head, and shoulders as high as possible, attempting to come to a sitting position.

After the exercises are completed, take a cold shower and lie down for a few minutes' rest before dinner.

Dinner: Choice of one of the following protein foods: beef, mutton, chicken, turkey, rabbit, or fresh fish (except salmon.)

(Method of preparation given in previous articles.)

Choice of one or more of the following cooked, non-starchy vegetables: Celery, asparagus, spinach, cucumbers, small string beans, summer squash, egg plant, beet tops, small beets, small carrots, small parsnips, small turnips, okra, pumpkin, lettuce, chayotes, oyster plant (salsify), zucchini, mallow, or kale.

(Vegetables should be prepared according to recipes given or the same as cooked carrots.)

Choice of one or more of the following raw salad vegetables: celery, spinach, asparagus, cucumbers, parsley, small beets, small carrots, small parsnips, small turnips, lettuce, oyster plant (salsify), mallow, nasturtium flowers and leaves, endive, alligator pear, and ripe olives.

(These vegetables must be served plain, without salt or dressing.)

With today's dinner, I am going to give you a complete list of vegetables which you can use from now on. Some of these vegetables are not in season at the present time, but those which are to be cooked anyway can be found in canned goods. If you cannot afford to buy fresh spinach, you can get the canned variety which is just as nutritious and not harmed in any way by the canning process. Many people prefer the taste of fresh cooked vegetables to those that are canned, but there is really very little difference in their nutritive qualities. The biggest fault lies in the fact that most canneries boil vegetables and throw away the water in which they were boiled before the vegetables are canned. But, if you eat a sufficient amount of salad vegetables each day, you will easily be able to replace this loss of vitamins and organic salts.

Many of the salad vegetables are not in the market at the present time, or at least their prices may be prohibitive for your pocket-book. However, I am naming all of them so you will learn to classify your food properly.

I want you to consider these last few articles as dietetic lessons, which you should learn the same if you were going to school and had to be examined to see if you had learned your rules correctly.

Take a pencil and paper and write down the names of every one of the vegetables I have listed, putting them in their proper class. It is a good plan to write such a list over and over again until you learn the names and can repeat them from memory.

FROWN ON FLIPS

DES MOINES, Ia., July 26.—After a college entertainment, students were amused when one of the co-eds clog danced for a minute and ended up by turning a couple of cartwheels. Hailed before the disciplinary committee of Des Moines University, she pointed out that the dance and the cartwheels were only part of the regular physical training. Officials, shocked, decreed that hereafter only folk dancing would be taught.

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY WE ARE ALL CRAZY

By Mehran K. Thomson, Ph.D.

(Author, The Springs of Human Action)

"He's crazy."

Did you ever hear that said of any one who seemed to be fairly safe from spending the remainder of his natural life within the confines of a lunatic asylum? And do you know anybody who has not been called crazy at some time? It all depends on the point of view and who is passing judgment.

We are all crazy.

Two lunatics enjoying the cool balmy breezes under the shade trees of the asylum grounds were observing some men at work on a construction job out in the blazing hot sun. "And they say that we are crazy" said one to the other as they both chuckled ironically.

The word crazy is used loosely and broadly to apply to anyone who differs radically from us.

The holdup man thinks the honest laborer who breaks his back for a few dollars a day is out of his head, while the honest man with the much-bended back returns the compliment when he reads in the paper that the holdup man has just been sentenced to a long term in prison or to a decidedly short term in the electric chair.

The man who works on a sky scraper, hundreds of feet above ground may regard the pilot of the airplane that wizzes past him as out of his head; while the man on the street seeing the riveter at work on a few suspended pieces of steel shakes his head and dubs him absolutely nutty.

All pioneers and inventors are set down as crazy because they are trying to do something different, something that seems foolish to everybody else.

We call every man crazy who is radically different. We even speak of the customs and dress of foreigners as crazy. These appear crazy to us because we are not used to them and ours appear crazy to foreigners for the same reason.

We who manage to remain outside the insane asylum are fortunate in that only now and then we run across a person who is absolutely sure that we are hopelessly crazy. When enough of your fellows decide that you are crazy, the Lord help you.

GOD'S MINUTE.

Thou wast a God that forgavest them.—Ps. 99:8.

Father, Thou forgivest us, so far as we are truly penitent. May we likewise forgive all who sin against us; all who sin against society; all who sin against Thee; even as Thou forgivest us and them. May we count no sin too heinous to pardon; no man too hardened to reclaim; no woman too fallen to uplift. When we forgive the penitent, help us to stand by him against a hard and unforgiving world. Thus may we make our forgiveness a reality in the world, and open the door of genuine social restoration to those who have gone astray.

Help us to find our chief delight in work, wherein we join our hands, our brains, our hearts, to Thy power, Thy laws, Thy love. May we choose that task which most taxes our highest powers, and best serves the world's deepest need. May we do it with such skill, such thoroughness, such joy, that it shall have about it the strength of the mountains, the gladness of the streams, the gladness of the sunshine, the fertility of the fields, the beauty of the stars and flowers. Thus may we become not mere creatures, but creators—not one of Thy works, but Thy co-workers. Amen.

MACLEAN CABINET WILL RESIGN SOON

Defeated B. C. Government Will Leave Office When Returns Are Complete.

VICTORIA, B.C., July 27.—(Canadian Press.)—Premier Maclean announced yesterday that, acting on the advice of legal experts, the government would resign as soon as the final count of the ballots cast in the recent election is complete, about August 20.

SIX-MONTH TERM FOR EXTORTION

Kingston Woman Goes To Jail For Receiving Money as Blackmail.

KINGSTON, July 27.— An aftermath of the blackmail case, heard a short time ago, was heard before Judge Lavell yesterday, when Mrs. Mary Halliday was found guilty on a charge of "intent to extort money" and sentenced to six months in jail.

Ten days ago Mrs. Halliday was sentenced to three months in jail on being found guilty of theft from a home where she was employed as a domestic, and yesterday's sentence will start on the expiration of this sentence. The charge was that Mrs. Halliday received money from William Burns, a Kingston baker, for an alleged insult against the 12-year-old daughter of Mrs. Halliday.

At a recent session of the High Court, Mrs. Halliday, along with Richard Wills and Roy Mack, was on trial for extorting money. Wills and Mack were both found guilty and a sentence of one year passed on each. The jury disagreed on the case of Mrs. Halliday and she then elected trial by a judge.

PLAYING AREA IS SET APART

Rest Room Also Fitted Up On Fourth Floor of Teco Store.

SPORTING GOODS SOLD.

Following out the practice of larger city stores, with a view not only to accommodating shoppers but Peterborough folk generally, the management of the local Teco store, on Saturday will declare formally opened, a large and completely equipped playground for children, and a richly appointed rest room for older people, both new features to be located on the fourth floor of the main store, corner of George and Simcoe streets.

Apart from the benefits which will undoubtedly come to the store's business, the playground and rest room establishment has been prompted by a sincere community service spirit—there are few restrictions, if any, on the use of either. A child may remain to play as long as parents may desire, and users of the rest room may linger to rest or write, unmolested.

The fourth floor is well suited to its new purpose. Spaced off by a green lattice fence, is the playground area, 34 feet long and 17 feet wide, in the centre part of the floor. Inside the fence are located a large sand box, a teeter-totter, slide, tricycles, and numerous other wheel toys with which the children may amuse themselves to their hearts' content. Mothers may leave the little ones, satisfied that no harm may befall them, for their play is all in charge of a lady superintendent.

The rest room, set apart from the other departments by means of nicely colored screen, will be something new to be enjoyed by lady shoppers. The furnishings will include wickerwork chesterfields, writing desks, shaded lamps, etc., with the maximum degree of privacy.

The fourth floor is very roomy, and since rest room and playground do not require the entire space, there will also be a complete toy department at the west end, while the more easterly section has been entirely devoted to sports goods. In a truly nature-like setting, a model camp has been established, with Peterborough-made boats, motors, and camping equipment very much in evidence. Everything is life-size and a boy will be in charge of the camp daily.

Golfers will find equipment for their favorite game and may try them out before purchasing, an artificial green having been prepared, with spring attachment, may be teed up for trials. In fact, the sports exhibit is well and completely equipped and should attract plenty of attention.

EXPLORER FOUND AFTER LONG SEARCH

Duluth Man Discovered in the Woods 75 Miles From Red Lake.

DULUTH, Minn., July 27.—(Canadian Press).—John Helmer, Duluth explorer, lost in the forest region near Red Lake, Ontario, since June 27, was found 75 miles from that town on Wednesday by his two brothers, who have been searching in an aeroplane for him since July 13.

News of the finding received here stated that the three brothers were at Sioux Lookout, Ontario.

IMPORTANT GAME ON MONDAY NIGHT

Riley and Hickey's and Grafton's Meet in Bantam League Battle.

An important game in the Bantam series of the City League will be played between Riley and Hickey's and Grafton's at James Stevenson Park on Monday at six o'clock. The two teams were tied for the first section of the season's schedule, and Monday's game is to settle the leadership. If Grafton's win they play Riley and Hickey's in a three game series for the championship, as the latter won the second section. If Riley and Hickey's win they are undisputed winners of the title.

IN POLICE COURT

In Police Court this morning a charge of vagrancy against a young woman was dismissed.

Jack Turner faced a charge of stealing a motor car from Fontaine's livery. Turner was represented by Emmett Sheehy. The case was remanded for one week without the accused pleading.

An old man, charged with vagrancy, claimed that he but needed medical attention. He was given a ten-day sentence, during which he will be given good care.

Members of the bar who chanced to have business in Police Court this morning, were pleased to renew acquaintances with W. R. Widdifield, former city solicitor here, but now of Galt. Mr. Widdifield is holidaying in the city, and enjoyed meeting fellow members of the bar with whom he formerly worked.

LAWN BOWLING TO-NIGHT

The weather having cleared this afternoon the usual Friday night tournament will be staged as usual. Raspberries will be awarded the winning rinks, so be there and get your share. Draw will be made as soon after 7.30 as possible.

GIRL DROWNED WHILE BATHING

Chooses Quiet Part of the Don For Swim, Which Ends Fatally.

BODY RECOVERED.

TORONTO, July 27.—About three hours after she was last seen yesterday afternoon, the body of Mary Gordon Lawrence, 12 years old, 54 Torrens Avenue, Todmorden, was recovered, unclothed, from the east branch of the Don River, about a quarter of a mile below the Leaside Bridge.

Circumstances of the drowning were such as to lead the coroner, Dr. C. E. McLean, to continue his inquiries before reaching his decision as to an inquest. The only witness of the tragery was Jean Wheeler, 81 Gamble Avenue, a girl not yet six years old, whose actions led to the search for the body, though her story is somewhat incoherent.

The coroner has decided to interview to-day the Crown Attorney with regard to the drowning.

The two girls had left the Lawrence residence shortly after twelve o'clock to go to the Don River to paddle, Mary, the older girl, disrobing.

Finds Child Alone.

The body was recovered by William Philips, 27 Hopevale Avenue, who, while berry-picking along the banks of the stream, noticed the smaller girl alone a little before two o'clock. Questioning her brought no information as to a companion, and two hours later, seeing her playing at the same spot, his suspicions were aroused. Further inquiry led to the discovery of Mary Lawrence's clothing in a heap on the bank, and the explanation that "Mary went away" from the small child. The spot by that time was crowded with boy swimmers.

Philips immediately went to his home nearby for his bathing suit, and commenced dragging operations by wading the stream to and fro, when, stepping into a hole some feet deep, he alighted upon the body, and drew it up to the bank, sending boys to notify the police.

Civic Reception To Be Arranged By Ottawa Board of Control.

OTTAWA, July 27. — (Canadian Press).—The Board of Control yesterday decided to hold a civic reception for Desmond Burke, who this year was runner up in the King's prize at Bisley for the second consecutive year.

FITZMAURICE IS PROMOTED

Member of Bremen's Crew Becomes Colonel in Free State Service.

DUBLIN, July 27 (Canadian Press) —Major James Fitzmaurice, member of the crew of the trans-Atlantic plane Bremen, has been promoted to the rank of Colonel in the Irish Free State Air Service.

Flourishes Permit; Demands His Beer

TORONTO, July 27.—A visitor from the United States stopping at the King Edward Hotel yesterday, solved a mystery which had kept him depressed for more than a week. When he arrived in town he was all agog over the prospect of renewing his acquaintance with John Barleycorn and particularly with foaming seidels of beer.

He understood that one needed a permit, and obtained one soon after his arrival. But he apparently did not understand the liquor control system completely, for the first thing he did with the permit was to produce it in the dining-room at the King Edward and demand a quart of beer. Naturally his request was refused, and without further argument he decided the King Edward was a temperance hotel.

Still, the incident puzzled him, not to say worried him. Surely this was a free country, from which the curse of prohibition had been lifted? It was all very confusing, until yesterday he got into conversation with an attendant at the City Hall, who explained to him that the only place where he could use the permit was a Government liquor store.

NEWS IN BRIEF

DROWNS ATTEMPTING RESCUE.

DETROIT, July 27.—In a vain attempt to save an eight-year-old boy who had stepped into deep water at Elizabeth Park Beach, a down river resort, Albert Cox, 41, a Toronto bank employee, living at 175 Hastings St., was drowned yesterday afternoon.

The boy, John Cummings, 785 St. Joseph Street, Trenton, was wading along the shore with companions when he stepped off a ledge into deeper water. His cries and those of his companions attracted the attention of Cox, who was picnicking with friends at the beach. Despite the fact that he could not swim he rushed to the child's rescue and also stepped from the ledge into deep water, going down at once.

LANCASTER MAN DROWNS.

DRYDEN, July 27.—Overturning of a canoe with a motor cost the life here of Haldane McLachlan, 22, a nephew of Mayor Dingwall, of Dryden, and himself resident of Lancaster, Ontario.

The accident happened only 30 feet from a dock.

HAVE NARROW ESCAPE.

WOODSTOCK, July 27.—Three people narrowly escaped serious injury with a possibility of drowning in a few feet of water when a car driven by C. Weltz of Ingersoll, early yesterday morning toppled over a culvert two or three miles west of Newark. Another car had broken down on the road, and one of its occupants, seeing the Weltz car approaching, ran along the road with a flashlight to give warning. Weltz, however, did not slacken speed until quite close to the stalled car, and then his machine skidded, toppled sideways over the culvert, and landed in three feet of water. The occupants of the other car got the three people in Weltz machine out of the water in a hurry, but Miss Jean Murray of Woodstock received severe cuts from broken glass. The driver and the other passenger, Miss Bessie Murray, were uninjured.

CRIPPLE FOUND DEAD

EDMONTON, July 27 (Canadian Press Despatch).—Mystery shrouds the death of George Hodgson, aged 45, retired farmer and cripple, of this city. With a bullet wound in the head, Hodgson was found huddled in a chair in his apartment yesterday by Frank Lavery, proprietor of a store on the ground floor of the block. The door of Hodgson's apartment was open and the lights were burning when Lavery entered.

According to Coroner Dr. Braithwaite, who viewed the body, shooting had taken place about twelve hours before the discovery of the crime.

GIRL DIVES TO DEATH

JASPER PARK, Alta., July 27.—Miss Mona Plows, waitress, was drowned in Lake Mildred here when she dove into twelve feet of water. It is thought that the shock of the cold water overcame her.

MORTON FAMILY HOLDS RE-UNION

More Than 100 Attend Annual Picnic at Oak Lake.

HISTORY RECOUNTED.

BELLEVILLE, July 27 (Special). — The Morton family held their annual picnic at Oak Lake yesterday, over 100 being in attendance. Sports and a basket lunch were enjoyed. George Sherr, of Peterborough, gave a short history of the seven Morton brothers who came from Ireland over a century ago to settle in Hungerford Township William Morton of Owen Sound came the great distance, others being present from Napanee, Stirling, Marmora, Campbellford and Belleville.

EXPLOSION WRECKS POWDER MAGAZINE

No Person Hurt When Blast Destroys Part of U. S. Naval Depot.

NORFOLK, Va., July 27.—(Canadian Press.)—The powder magazine at the St. Joulines naval ammunition depot, five miles south of Portsmouth, exploded shortly after midnight. Of the 50 marines and a number of civilians employed at the depot, reports reaching Norfolk early to-day said that none was injured.

The magazine was 200 feet by 50 and contained a large amount of powder. Spontaneous combustion was believed to be the cause. The fire which followed the explosion was checked just as it was feared it might spread to other magazines nearby.

350 PATIENTS LEAVE ASYLUM

Criminally Insane Among Those Escaping During Fire at Institution.

AT NASHVILLE.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., July 27.—(Canadian Press.)— More than 350 patients, fifty of them listed as criminally insane, escaped from the main building of the Central State Hospital for the Insane early to-day, when fire destroyed the upper floors.

Nine hundred of the 1,272 patients were back in the institution at dawn, three hours after the blaze had been under control. Nashville police and officials of the institution were organizing intensive search for the others, eleven of whom were considered extremely dangerous. The cause of the fire was not determined.

BELL PERFECTED CURRENT IN 1874

Basis of Telephone System Discovered 54 Years Ago To-day.

July 26th is a red letter day in the history of the telephone which is observed in all branches of the Bell system. According to the diary or Dr. Melville Bell, father of the inventor of the telephone, it was on July 26, 1874, at Brantford that his son perfected the idea of the undulatory electric current. It was Bell's idea that if vibrations of the air caused by the voice in speaking could be reproduced at a distance by means of electricity, speech itself could be reproduced at understood. Bell discovered that this could be done by gradually changing the intensity of continuous electric current so as to make it correspond exactly to the aerial vibrations caused by the sound of the voice. He employed the use of a crude receiver and transmitter that are entirely different from the modern ones but which worked nevertheless and formed the first telephone.

The principle of the undulatory current was later embodied in the first telephone which produced the sound of the human voice for the first time on March 10th, 1876.

Many prominent members of the Orange Order in Toronto are going to attend the session of the Grand Orange Lodge of British America when it convenes at Edmonton this week. At least 25 Toronto delegates are expected. Some of those who will attend are: (1) F. M. Johnston, ex-alderman of Ward 1; (2) Hon. Jos. Thompson, ex-speaker of the Provincial Legislature; (3) Alderman of Ward 8, W. A. Howell; (4) Loftus H. Reid, chairman of Board of Education, who will probably succeed the late William Lee as grand secretary of the Orange Lodge; (5) B. Kirk; (6) Fred Dane, who was the first imperial vice-president of the triennial Orange convention, and (7) S. A. Moffat.

Letters to be printed in the Voice of the People column must be received at The Examiner Office on the day before it is desired to have them published

To the Editor of Te Examiner:

Water 100% Pure

Sir—I have received correspondence regarding springs of water at Catchacoma since writing you about your report. One man says his spring was analysed and found by the laboratory here to be 100% pure. All the drinking water is 100% pure up there but I am speaking of mineral springs, not ordinary springs. I understand analysis is to be made of several springs to find out if any minerals are disolved in them. I also had a letter from a big healthy looking woman who had a very weak stomach. She says the water up there made a new stomach for her and that she would not miss the water at Catchacoma for anything. Thanking you.

many applications for alimony against former husbands.

"It may so happen," Mr. Smith remarks, "that a man will be obliged to support a former wife and his present spouse."

The Bill to provide for the granting of divorces by the Supreme Court of Ontario, passed by the Senate at the last session of the Parliament of Canada, was not taken up by the Commons, and fell by the wayside.

In the opinion of Mr. Smith, the Senate probably will send the Bill on again to the Commons, but in the meantime, petitions for dissolution of the marriage tie will continue to be presented to Parliament.

INDIANS CELEBRATE REGAINING RIGHTS

Six Nations Observe Recognition of Right to Cross Border Freely.

BRANTFORD, July 26. — The Six Nations Long House of the Onondagas was the scene of a gathering yesterday afternoon which was openly for the purpose of celebrating the achievement of the Six Nations in bringing into recognition their rights under the Jay Treaty between Britain and the United States, to cross the international border without let or hindrance, and without coming under quota or other restrictive legislation.

With simple ceremony the Hereditary Council of Chiefs, now deposed, opened a meeting in the Long House, the fire keeper of the Six Nations invoking the blessing of the Great Being upon their gathering, which then adjourned to the open-air, where a dray formed a platform for the rally, to which admission was charged.

TWO COUNTRIES

by them in coming to Kiwanis in Peterborough. The spirit of Kiwanis shown here and further north had impressed him as especially good.

Dr. Richardson confessed an interest in the growth of Canada and the common spirit between the two countries. "My impression is that Canada has a destiny which is to work out and develop her resources—she has national problems that could not be worked out were she joined with the United States of America," said he. "The immigration problem is one faced by both countries, and we are having our troubles just as you are.

"Speaking of development, I think of the tariff question as we faced it over there, and I suppose you have the same problem to face over here. Another problem which you must have (passing to my own field) just as we have, is the matter of consolidated schools. We feel that they have many advantages and can offer all services that city schools provide.

"Other problems come to us over there—adult education being one made the more acute by our foreign population. The extension of the school system into the junior college is another matter which will work itself out according to the people and conditions generally.

"I would drop a word of warning to you—look with caution upon the number of functions which a school may take upon itself, lest it intrude upon the home and other organizations and cause parents to pass responsibility for their children's upbringing over to the schools.

"We should confine ourselves to the fundamental principles of education, the development of character, that our children may live well physically and morally, encouraging loyalty, character and ideals for a brotherhood and finally that for what we are all hoping—universal peace.

F. G. Stinson moved the vote of thanks to the speaker and to Mrs. Doig and the meeting closed with the singing of O Canada, followed by "My Country Tis of Thee."

Previous to the closing President Joe John, addressing the American visitors, expressed the wish that they carry away with them as happy memories of their visit to Peterborough as Peterborough Kiwanians will have of their visit here.

How can we improve it?

"How can we make it better?" is the constant cry of manufacturers of advertised merchandise.

Why?

It might well be pride in the product that bears their good name. Often it is.

But not always.

It's just good, hard-headed business, mostly. The improvement of a product that is already considered satisfactory makes that product play a more definite part in the life of the user. It wins and holds an added loyalty, and, of course, added business.

Every product being advertised in these pages is studied continuously by its maker in order that it may be more and more useful and helpful to you in your daily life.

Isn't that the sort of merchandise you want? It's all presented in a straightforward, honest way here in the advertisements, day after day. Read them for economy's sake!

Advertised Merchandise is Trustworthy Merchandise

Long years ago, when bustles were all the vogue, and men boasted of their "coach and four" the inns of little old New York were famous for their comfort and good cheer. The Victoria, today, is proud to follow that same tradition of true hospitality.

THERE'S a FAMOUS Tradition BEHIND the NEW VICTORIA!

Now Open

It's a smart hotel, of course—you're proud to say, "I stopped at the Victoria!" It's convenient, certainly—you're in the very heart of the theatrical and business and shopping districts! But above everything else, you'll remember your stay at the Victoria for its old-fashioned courtesy, its warm hospitality!

Rooms with Bath, Shower, Sunlight, Running Ice Water, Servidor $3.00 a day.

Single Rooms, $3.00, $3.50, $4.00.
Double Rooms for two persons—$4.50, $5.00, with twin beds $6.00.

Y.P.S. PICNIC MUCH ENJOYED

Societies of Peterborough Presbytery Meet at Birdsall's On Wednesday.

ATHLETIC EVENTS.

The fifteen Young People's Societies of Peterborough Presbytery gathered at Birdsalls on Wednesday, July 25 for their annual picnic. Keene and Westwood Sunday schools joined in to help give the young people an enjoyable outing. Almost every Y.P.S. in the Presbytery was represented by a number of young people coming from Campbellford, Hastings, Warkworth, Keene, Westwood and Norwood. The Keene society had a booth on the ground which the children patronized well. The crowd started to gather at 10:30 and continued until late in the afternoon. Both young and old had dips in the water off the lovely beach which Birdsalls possesses. During the afternoon a program of races and softball was enjoyed by young and old.

The following are the races:

Boys and girls, 5 year and under—Marion Hope, Jean Hope.

Girls, nine years and under—Agnes Cameron, Gladys McFarlane.

Boys, nine years and under—Hugh McFarlane, Lloyd McNevan.

Girls, twelve years and under — Nelly Thompson, Maeme Renwick.

Boys, twelve years and under — Hugh McFarlane, Lloyd McNevan.

Girls, sixteen years and under — Zetta Wilson, Marion Comrie.

Boys, sixteen years and under — Boyd Renwick, Bruce Graham.

Young ladies race—Katie Thompson, Zetta Wilson.

Young Men's Race—Fred Whalen, Harold Wilson.

Married Ladies—Mrs. Donald Hope Mrs. Hugh Renwick (equal).

Married Men's Race — James Wilson, John Comrie.

Fat ladies race— Marjorie Renwick, Gwen Renwick.

Partners race—Fred Whalen and Marion Comrie, Harold and Zetta Wilson.

Girls coat race—Marion Comrie, Reta Wilson.

Boys coat race—Sinclair Comrie, Bruce Graham.

Soda biscuit race—Jessie Graham Reta Wilson.

Mixed three legged race—Harold and Zetta Wilson, Ernest and Reta Wilson.

Boys wheel barrow—Harold and and Ernest Wilson, Bruce and Jack Graham.

Relay race—1st team—Harold, Ernest, Zetta, and Reta Wilson. 2nd team—Fred Whalen, Marion Comrie, Isabel Graham and Clarence Robertson.

Girls marshmallow race — Marjorie Renwick, Jessie Graham.

Boys marshmallow race—Sinclair Comrie, Malcolm McFarlane.

The remainder of the afternoon was spent in softball games between the different societies. The picnic in every way was a splendid success and it is hoped that it will be held another year.

GIRLS DROWNED IN LAKE SIMCOE

Two Young Women Lose Their Lives While Bathing at Beach.

SUTTON, July 27.—Despite the heroic efforts of a companion to rescue them, two girls were drowned while bathing at Mossington Park near Jackson's Point, off the southern shore of Lake Simcoe, yesterday afternoon.

Their names were Eileen Villaneuvre, aged 19, of Montreal, and Eleanor Nichols, aged 34, recently from England. Both girls were working at summer residences near the beach where they were drowned.

Gertrude Johnson, aged 16, who was with the girls at the time of the accident, made a heroic effort to save them. She was the only member of the trio who could swim and when she saw they were in difficulty made a frantic effort to drag the struggling girls into shallow water. She was drawn to the bottom several times, and only managed to escape their drowning struggles.

The fatality occurred at the mouth of the Black River, where the flow of the water had dug out a deep channel. Miss Johnson, a few minutes before her companions had walked beyond their depth, had warned them about the deep channel which had been cut through the beach at that point.

She immediately gave the alarm, and a few minutes many people had collected at the spot. The bodies had been in the water but a short time when brought to the surface by Chief Big Canoe and Alfred Port, from Georgian Island. They rushed to the spot where the girls had disappeared and pulled their bodies to the surface with a boat hook.

Coroner Dr. J. C. Edwards and Dr. O. M. Beattie of Sutton, and Dr. Highland of Toronto, worked over the bodies with a pulmotor for two hours in an attempt to restore life.

The remains were taken to the undertaking parlors of James Taylor & Son. No inquest will be held Dr. Edwards stated last night. County Constable George Shadwick is conducting an investigation of the fatality.

BARONET DROPPED FROM WHIP'S LIST

Action Equal To Expelling Sir Basil Pets From Conservative Party.

LONDON, July 27 (Canadian Press Cable).—Unusual disciplinary action has been taken by the Government Chief Whip, in removing from his list of members receiving notices from the Whips the name of Sir Basil Peto, Conservative member for Barnstaple. This action is tantamount to expulsion from the Conservative party.

Apparently the Whips were dissatisfied with Peto's activities in opposing the Government, notably in pressing the claims of the South Irish Loyalists for compensation; in opposing the adoption of the race-track totalisator bill, and in promoting the movement for the extension of the safeguarding of industries system. This irritation is said to have come to a climax Wednesday night, when Sir Basil moved an embarrassing resolution after the majority of the Government supporters had departed from the House.

Sir Basil Peto received his baronetcy in 1927, "for political and public services."

Campbellford

CAMPBELLFORD, July 27.—(Examiner Staff Correspondence).—Warden Davidson and Reeve Bygott attended the funeral of the late Mrs. John McMillan in Cobourg on Wednesday. Warden Davidson was a pall bearer.

Miss Kathleen Ferris, B.A., is at home after several weeks in Toronto. Ferris Kearn, her nephew, returned with Miss Ferris.

Douro

(Examiner Correspondence.)

DOURO, July 27.—The farmers in this locality are finishing haying. Owing to the showery weather, the work was somewhat delayed. Some have started to cut fall wheat and report a fairly good crop. The gardens and spring crops are looking fine, the frequent showers proving quite refreshing.

Personals.

Mrs. Mary Condon have returned home after visiting her daughter, Mrs. Wilfred Burke, of Kirkfield.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Burke, of Kirkfield, accompanied by Miss Burke, were Sunday visitors with friends here.

Mr. and Mrs. Ignatius Condon and baby, of New York, are visiting the former's mother, Mrs. Mary Condon.

Mr. Austin Cranley, of Rochester, is visiting friends here.

Mrs. John McCauley, of Cobalt, is visiting her mother, Mrs. Ellen Towns.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Maloney are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Jeremiah Maloney.

Mrs. John Smith and daughter, Miss Kathryn and Miss Nancy Augsburger have returned home after spending some time with Mrs. Smith's sister, Mrs. William H. Allen here. They were to call at Toronto, Hamilton and Niagara Falls on the way home.

home with the colt, his father knew of his adventure.

Mr. Lowe says that in those days the grain was all cradled, raked and bound by hand.

The threshing machine was run by horse-power and would thresh the grain but would not clean it; the chaf would always have to be raked off and the grain cleaned. Threshers received the sum of five dollars for threshing.

Ploughed in Bare Feet

He remembers ploughing summer-fallow on hot days, when he would take off his boots and go in his bare feet.

As many as forty-six yards of flannel have been spun in one year by his wife, for dresses, shirts and blankets, from the wool of the sheep.

There was no post office at Ida; they had to get their mail at Cavanville, where the post ofice was situated on the lot where Mr. Albert Tinney's garage is now. A man by the name of Graham kept the post office. Later, a post office was established at Ida, and was kept by Thomas Sharpe, an unucle of Mr. Lowe's, then by William Graham, and later by Sandy Baptie, a brother of the late Mrs. William Lough. Afterwards it was taken over by Mr. William Lough and is still in charge of his son, Roy Lough.

There was a hotel on the vacant lot across from William Elliott's farm, and the present hamlet of Ida always went by the name of "Sharpe's Corners."

Saw King Edward

He remembers well, being present when King Edward VII. visited Canada, coming to Ashburnham as the Prince of Wales.

Mr. Lowe attended St. John's Church, then a large frame building, which was situated southwest of the present church.

The church would be packed every Sunday. The church at Fairmount was not built then, and there was no church at Cavanville. Cavan church was at the Ninth Line cemetery, hence the large congregation gathered at St. John's.

He recalls the time when the middle road from Port Hope to the boundary between Cavan and Emily was only a mud road, and when he was but a lad of fourteen years, he drove a team hauling gravel on it. Wages at that time were two dollars and a half a day for a man and team. The middle rod at the thirteenth concession corner went straight over the hill. It was when the road was gravelled, that it was built around the bend. All along the road from the twelfth concession, south to the farm of James Armstrong was bush.

Mr. Lowe was married to Mary Eleanor Thexton in Lindsay on May 9th, 1867. They lived in the house now owned by William Elliott in Ida for one year, moving to Mount Pleasant and living in the house now owned by his son Ira and occupied by Bert Morden. They resided there for four years, and then they purchased the farm now occupied by his son Fred on the boundary between Cavan and Emily. This was the only time he lived out of Cavan Township during his life. The farm on the boundary being in Emily. In the year 1877 his wife died. He later married Mary Ann Telford, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Telford of Ennismore in 1884, and in 1899 purchased the farm where his son Ira resides, and lived there for twenty-nine years; after which he retired from farming and wetn to reside in Mount Pleasant in November, 1917.

Mr. Lowe was one of eleven children; six boys and five girls. William, David, Wesley, Thomas and Wellar; Mary Jane, Mrs. James Foster; Elizabeth, Mrs. Matthew Gardiner; Caroline, Mrs. William Magill; Pidge and Annie, all of Michigan, and is the father of nine children, five girls and four boys. Olive, Mrs. Joseph Thexton, St. Thomas, N.D.; Gertie, Mrs. G. McLean, Mount Pleasant; Annie, Mrs. Austin Best (deceased), Mount Pleasant; Jessie, Mrs. H. Keen of Toronto, who died 25th September, 1927; and Mrs. Lloyd Sutton, Cavan.

Fred of Omeemee; Stanley of Peterborough; Harry and Ira, both of Mount Pleasant.

BEGIN WORK ON SURFACE NEXT WEEK

Paving Company Is Assembling Asphalt Plant at Campbellford Now.

BASE NEARLY FINISHED.

Surfacing Will Take About One Month—Inconvenience Now.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, July 27.—Provided there are no unforeseen obstacles in the way, the surfacing of the Campbellford streets should be begun on Monday morning, July 30. This is the information given out by the foreman of the heating plant this afternoon. Six railroad cars of equipment are being assembled at a point a few yards north of the Hydro pulp mill and sand and crushed rock are being unloaded in sufficient quantities to assure steady progress once the work is begun.

The machinery for the work consists largely of mixers and heaters which burn oil as their fuel and heat the mass to a high temperature. A clam shell loader is busy unloading the sand and gravel and a crew of men are at work getting teh plant in readiness for operation. This work has been going on since Sunday morning and is now nearing compietion. Although there is some local albor employed, the majority of the men have been brought in from outside and are regular employees of the company.

Unless the plans of the operators go astray, surfacing will be started at seven o'clock on Monday morning, and will continue at the rate of about fifteen hundred yards daily. Thus it may be estimated that the amount of surfacing to be done will require something more than thirty working days.

The material is heated to a degree which will leave it at 325 to 350 degrees Fahrenheit when dumped on the road and ready for rolling. Men with ordinary garden rakes spread it as it is dumped and a steam roller rolls it hard and smooth. The trucks for hauling the heated material are mostly five-ton vehicles specially adapted for the work. Since the plant has not been centrally located, the haulage distance in some cases will be well over a mile. The foreman of the heating plant stated that the plant would not be moved during operations.

One feature of the surface material which will be popular with motorists, is the fact that only a few hours is required before it is ready for ordinary vehicular traffic. A short additional period of time is required before heavy trucks and wagons will be allowed to pass over it. If the weather is cool, three hours is sufficient and in hot weather, six hours are necessary before the barriers can be removed. Of late there have been many tempers lost on account of the condition of the streets and considerable comment is current on the streets along the same lines. Next week will show an improvement by way of some the streets being finished.

On Centre street, the concrete base is almost completed as far as possible. From the intersection immediately south of the C.N.R. crossing it has been impossible to lay the base on both sides of the street since there is no way of arranging a detour. The base is being laid on the west side, while the east side of the street remains open to traffic. Front street north and south and Mill street are being prepared for the concrete gang on their next move.

One feature of the work which seems to afford amusement for the men on the job and irritate motorists to the same extent is the fact that car drivers are sometimes allowed to proceed some distance along a closed street before being told they must turn back. This never fails to amuse the men on the job. An incident yesterday afternoon, where two business men and one professional man of the town were made the butt of this humour resulted in the loss of at least four tempers. One of the paving foremen allowed a car to proceed more than a hundred yards before he stopped it and ordered it to back up to allow one of the gravel wagons to pass. This was done while the workmen looked on and smiled at the joke. The motorists were more than a little irritated and their feeling have been made known.

GERMAN VESSEL IN NO DANGER

1,800 Passengers Aboard Ship Are All Reported Safe.

STUCK ON ROCK.

OSLO, Norway, July 27 (Canadian Press).—The 1,800 passengers aboard the German motor ship Montecervantes which struck a rock in Bell Sound, Spitzbergen, last were were relieved of all fears. The vessel, it was declared, was in no danger and would be able to resume its voyage southward Saturday or Sunday.

The Russian ice-breaker Krassin which rushed to the aid of the Montecervantes Wednesday when the latter's SOS signals were picked up, was standing by and helping to pump water from a flooded compartment.

The Montecervantes was on a tour of the Spitzbergen waters.

100-GALLON STILL FOUND BY POLICE

Mash, Grain and Bottles Also Discovered in Digby Township.

LINDSAY July 27.—Hidden away in a bush on the McFadden farm, in Digby Township, 45 miles from here, a galvanized iron still was found yesterday by Customs Excise Enforcement Officer Edward Floody of Toronto and Police Sergeant E. R. James of Lindsay. The officers, being unable to remove the still from its location, because of the density of the bush, broke it up. It had a capacity of 100 gallons and near by were mash, grain and bottles in plentiful supply.

According to the police, the still has been in the bush for four years and prior to that was on another farm farther north or five years. There is no other farm close to the McFadden farm. Local officers said today that the still was probably moved to its location on the McFadden farm during the winter, the only wide path through the bush being from the river front, 400 yards away. A trapper walking through the bush discovered the still and communicated with the authorities.

Local police say the liquor made in the still has been sold at Orillia and at most of the summer resorts in this district. The officers say an excellent quality of liquor was manufactured and it found a ready sale.

A FURTHER ATTEMPT.

Stockholm Flight Will Be Attempted in Three Weeks.

ROCKFORD, Ills., July 27 (Canadian Press).—Backers of Bert Hassell and Parker Cramer on their proposed flight to Stockholm, Sweden, announced yesterday another attempt would be made within three weeks. The first attempt came to a sudden halt at dawn yesterday when the "Greater Rockford" airplane crashed in a corn field less than half an hour after the take-off from the airport here.

Pantry Scouting Late at Night

WHAT makes a man scout through the pantry late at night? He has a hungry feeling . . . yet ordinary foods do not appeal. Quaker Puffed Wheat, that's just what he wants.

Quaker Puffed Wheat entices appetite and satisfies hunger. Because of its lightness, it does not impose on the digestion. All the wheat bran is there, but delightfully concealed.

The man in the pantry likes the toasted, nutmeat flavour of these whole wheat grains. Puffed to eight times their natural size, and exploded, then cooked and oven-crisped. Serve direct from the package, or warm if you wish.

Quaker Puffed Rice, too

Rice grains, also puffed and exploded. Dainty and light. Easily digested. Always pleasing and inviting to the appetite.

THE MIRROR OF THE MODE
By Mary Marshall.

Tennis frock suitable for general sports wear of yellow crepe de chine with box-pleated skirt.

It was Suzanne Lenglen, I believe, who popularized the sleeveless, one-piece wash frock for tenins wear. And now when we speak of a tennis frock it is precisely this type of frock that we have in mind. If every woman who wore frocks of this sort this summer really played tennis then there would have to be tennis courts on every block or square to make room for them all. But it is with tennis frocks as it is with yachting ensembles and as it once was with golf capes. Everybody wears 'em!

Though bare arms no longer seem especially out of place anywhere now a days the sleeveless sports frock does look much better when accompanied with some sort of sleeved jacket when it is chosen for street wear in town. There are straight short jackets of pique or linen that may be worn over cotton or linen tennis frocks without adding an unbearable amount of extra warmth and some of the new crepe de chine sports frocks are accompanied with little jackets of light-weight flannel in matching tone. Short capes of crepe de chine or light-weight flannel are also to be seen and these certainly ought not to be considered a burden.

The excessive popularity of figured chiffons has led many women to return to solid colored materials for street wear. I really marvel at the courage of some of the older women I see wearing large printed chiffon frocks that look as if they had been designed to make the wearer look as broad and conspicuous as possible. Some of the more sophisticated small figures in subtle shadings may be worn with good effect by stout women. It is the large rose figures in rose tones that are so unkind to them.

Miss Angela Fitzgerald, nurse in training at St. Joseph's Hospital, Parry Sound, is spending her vacation with her mother, Mrs. Ann Fitzgerald of Indian River.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Johnston of Maynard, Massachusetts, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Baumwell during their recent stay in the city.

Londerville and a few words of appreciation were voiced by Mrs. B. Watts, speaking of the assistance given by Mrs. Bolam in the work of the Lodge, as a member of the Degree Staff. Mrs. Bolam thanked the ladies for their gift and the evening was spent in the enjoyment of cards and music and the service of dainty refreshments.

THE WHATNOT

A Place for Little Bits of Everything of Local Interest

PROBABLY you have a cordial, pleasant smile for friends and acquaintances you pass on the street, and probably your smile is as pleasant for the poor woman to whom you rent a house, as it would be for the Governor's General's wife.

• • • •

But there are women, you and I know, who have a number of smiles graded according to the social positions of those upon whom they are conferred.

• • • •

Then there are some women who have just one smile, for any one they pass on the street—not a real smile at all, but just a gesture of the lips that is no more like a real smile than chalk and water is like milk.

• • • •

Every woman, I think, ought to approach herself in the mirror and bid herself good morning. Then she could see herself as others see her and learn whether her smile of greeting is as pleasant as it ought to be.

• • • •

Frocks of chiffon, georgette and dainty materials may be wrinkled very badly if put away before they have a chance to air.

• • • •

If a georgette frock is wrinkled when you come in, you may find it best to steam it. This may be done by allowing it to hang in the bathroom while water is being drawn for a hot bath. Let it dry after that and the wrinkles will disappear.

• • • •

To clean enamelled ware, fill with water, add a teaspoonful of chloride of lime and boil for one or two hours, or till stains disappear; then fill with pure water and boil. Care should be taken in handling chloride of lime as it will burn the skin, and in not leaving any quantity of the solution in receptacles.

• • • •

Bows are very fashionable for the evening dress, particularly at the back of frocks at the termination of the V decolletage and also at the waistline and hips. Scarf panels that tie in bows are also observed.

• • • •

A practical addition to the wardrobe of any Peterborough Miss, is the figured dress of chiffon or other sheer material, an dcharacterized by an uneven hem line. A dress of this kind serves for both afternoon and evening wear.

• • • •

"What shall we have for dessert?" is a question that proves a problem to the housewife during the warm months of summer. Variety she must have and for a fitting end to a meal, she must serve a light dessert that will appeal to the appetite already almost satisfied.

• • • •

Icebox desserts, which are either frozen or allowed to cool before they are served, are the most popular during the warm weather.

• • • •

The next time you happen to get a spot on your dress, don't discard it, but try the following suggestion; cover the spot with French chalk, then put a towel both over and under the material and saturate with cleanser, rubbing with the grain of the cloth.

• • • •

When you are on your vacation and have a little time for sewing, to "initial" or monogram one of the plain linen sets you find in the shops would give it just that individual touch to distinguish it from dozens the same.

• • • •

To make an attractive addition to your supply of garden and porch furniture, get a deck chair of the sort consisting of folding frame and trip canvas for seat and back. These may be carried about easily and provide a comfortable seat when you wish to assume a half reclining poition.

• • • •

A dainty ribbon neck ruche may be easily made with the sketches and instructions given free this week. Just send in the coupon.

• • • •

Get just an ordinary chair of this sort and then a little enamel of high lustre paint given the wooden parts a surface of some gray color. The canvas may be brightened by stenciling it in some interesting pattern in the same color, or better still the original canvas of the chair may be replaced by a strip of some unusual patterned cretonne.

• • • •

Fruit sandwiches are a delicious addition to the summer luncheon menu and really deserve to be better known than they are at present. A very satisfactory luncheon ofr child or adult on a hot summer's day might consist of one or two of these fruit sandwiches and a glass of milk.

• • • •

Raspberries and blackberries may be mashed on slices of bread and then served sandwich fashion. Of course such sandwiches should be made just before time to serve.

• • • •

Banana sandwiches are very good too, and may be made with white or whole wheat bread. The bananas should be cut lengthwise into slices and laid smoothly on the bread. Sprinkle with a little lemon juice if desired.

• • • •

A little lettuce with the banana and a bit of mayonnaise may be used to make very good sandwiches and these are especially attractive if made with toasted bread.

• • • •

To make apple sandwiches select juicy apples and make thin crosswise slices. Remove the core and skin from the slices, lay on slices or bread, spread over a little cream cheese and then add the second slice of bread.

A Tip or Two

OUR HUMBLE VEGETABLES

Vegetables did not form part of a meal a few centuries ago, as they do today. In those days th dishes consisted mainly of flesh, fish and fowl.

Potatoes were introduced into England by Sir Walter Raleigh from Virginia over 300 years ago. They did not, however, come into general use till the beginning of last century, when they were—very wisely—always cooked in their skins.

The Romans knew the onion, turnip, cauliflower, and cabbage, to which last vegetable they ascribed the quality of preserving them from drunkenness.

Cucumbers are said to have originated in India, and were known to have been introduced into China 200 B.C.

The carrot came from Greece, and the English name is derived from a Greek word meaning "root."

CHICKEN IS GOOD

Cut two spring chickens into pieces for serving. Roll the pieces in flour, and then in egg and cracker crumbs until well covered. Place in a roasting pan and bake for a half hour in a hot oven, basting frequently with melted butter and hot water. Remove to a platter, sprinkle with salt and pepper. Make a white sauce with the drippings and sweet milk thickened to a creamy consistency. Pour over chicken and serve.

MAYBE BOTH

One of the queerest touches in th "matchmaker" libel action which ended in the high court, was the reference to the advertiser who inserted an appeal "strictly for companionship only," and described himself as "practically single." It is a state which it must have been hard to chieve, for in the ordinary way it is rather difficult for a human being to avoid falling under one of the two heads, "married" or "unmarried."—Manchester Guardian.

TRAVEL-LOG.

ABBOTSFORD

If there are seven wonders in Scotland for the tourist to see, then one of them is Abbotsford, the old home of Sir Walter Scott, on the banks of the Tweed, not far from Melrose and Galashiels. I do not know whether to call it Gothic or Elizabethan. It is probably only "Waverly," a new form which grew in the poet's imagination. On the walls are niches in which I met with the strangest medley brought from many places,—Indian gods, heads of Roman emperors, and figures from old churches. Everywhere I met with the same museum-like effects,—a gate from Linlithgow, a portal and door from the old Tollbooth of Edinburgh, a roof from Roslyn, and carvings from Dunfermline. Inside, after I had seen Scott's chair, desk and pictures, I found the sword of Montrose, Rob Roy's gun and sword, Helen MacGregor's brooch, a lamp from Herculaneum, Napoleon's pistols, Queen Mary's seal, the pistols of Claverhouse, and Bonnie Prince Charlie's drinking cup. It is nearly a hundred years ago since Scott died in the dining room here, and was buried in Dryburgh Abbey nearby. But the uppermost impression in my mind was that I had been looking at some of the research material which a writer had collected with which to pen pages of thrilling interest on the great events of history.

To whiten a kitchen table add a few drops of ammonia to the hot water used for scrubbing the table in the ordinary way. This will prevent it turning a yellowish colour.

Hard To Tell

By MARY MARSH

It had been a dull executives' meeting. Mr. Stewart, the president of the concern, was going to Europe, and Mr. Stone, of the Chicago office, was coming to take his place at the New York office. The meeting had been called to make final arrangements—arrangement which it seemed to Rodney could have been made as well without his presence.

But when the six other executives were making their departure from Mr. Stewart's office, Mr. Stewart stopped Rodney, placed a fatherly hand on the young man's shoulder and asked him to wait.

"There is something I want you to do—something simple, but very important," began Mr. Stewart. "I have the greatest respect for Mr. Stone and know that his coming here may be fraught with many inconveniences and anxieties. "Now," Mr. Stewart hesitated and then plunged ahead: "It's about Miss Drew. It would be a trifle difficult for me, you see. She's an excellent young woman, and invaluable. Miss Drew knows so much about the business, we couldn't possibly have her go. She is to be Mr. Stone's secretary. I'm used to her, but Miss Drew is, well, rather——"

"Yes," agreed Blaine, calling to view the snapping black eyes and vigorous, waving black hair of Mr. Stewart's secretary. "She is a trifle."

"Quite so. I don't mind it now. Though I must confess she rather upset me at first. And of course, if she becomes really annoyed at anyone I imagine she would be a tartar.

"Just suggest that as Mr. Stone is a stranger, she might treat him with gentleness. We decided before you got to the meeting that someone would better suggest this to her, and for reasons we decided that you would best be able to do it."

This was the hardest assignment that Blaine had ever had in his association with Mr. Stewart. Rodney had never taken much notice of her before, but now he deliberately studied her face and her carriage when she was not looking. He had made up his mind that the only way to go about it was to become friendly with her, to get her confidence and then to make an honest breast of the matter. He was unsuccessful in the usual wedge of an invitation to luncheon, so he sought to make the acquaintance of those who knew Miss Drew socially.

He would meet her after working hours and thus show his finesse. Meantime Mr. Stewart had sailed and Mr. Stone had come to take his place—Mr. Stone, who proved to be a blond young giant who accomplished twice as much as Mr. Stewart. Something, possibly the long hours and the strenuous business methods of Mr. Stone, very decidedly softened the edge of Miss Drew's sharp temper. Her dark eyes snapped less fire now and the wavy black hair that seemed to typify her high-spirited nature seemed to wave more softly to her face.

Three months had passed and it was on the eve of Mr. Stewart's return. Rodney Blaine had done his best. He had never fallen down on an assignment before, and he had not had his little talk with Miss Drew simply because she had never given him an opportunity.

Rodney Blaine was the first of the firm to see Mr. Stewart after his return home, and after a very brief discussion of business interests, Mr. Stewart brought up the subject that was apparently uppermost in his mind. "Were you successful in giving Miss Drew her little tip off?"

"Not exactly——" began Rodney.

"Heavens, man," interrupted Mr. Stewart; "you don't mean you let her boss Stone around the way she has been bossing me. Don't explain. I was afraid you wouldn't tell her. Of course, Stone wouldn't stand for her tongue—and now she's left. I'm sorry you let this happen. Miss Drew was one of my greatest business assets."

"But she hasn't left," Blaine explained." Then they were interrupted by the overtowering Mr. Stone, and Rodney Blaine was glad to withdraw.

Mr. Stone waived all discussion of business.

"There is something I want to ask you," he said. "I didn't want to write it. But a good share of my happiness depends on the answer you give. Is Rodney Blaine serious in his regards for Miss Drew? He seems to follow her about, always seems to be trying to tell her something. I am more than interested in the girl myself. Frankly, I'd ask her to marry me——"

"Marry you?" gasped Stewart, sinking back in his chair. "Marry a girl with a temper like that?"

"The best tempered girl in the world," interrupted Mr. Stone. "The point is this: "I am a newcomer. I have no right cutting Blaine out if he really loves the girl. But what I'm asking you is whether Blaine is in love with her. Why does he dog her around so?"

"I guess I told him to," said Stewart weakly. "But it's all right. He doesn't love her. I'm sorry to have you take her away, but——"

Mr. Stewart never finished the sentence; for Mr. Stone had hurried into Miss Drew's office to deliver the words of a long-po tponed proposal, which did not come as a surprise and that did not wait long for an answer.

DE LAVAL BEATS THE ELECTRICS IN CLOSE GAME

C.G.E. Lead Up Until Last Half of the Eighth Inning.

SCORE 4 TO 2

Jack Hall's Triple, Driving In Two Runs, Wins for Leaders.

Sixty minutes were all that were required to play the nine fast innings of softball at Confederation Square last night when the De Laval won from the C.G.E. by a 4 to 2 score after a tight game of ball.

Both teams were held scoreless until the sixth inning when Carruthers dropped Playford's infield fly and let him reach first. The next man, Crary, filed out and Barrie doubled over second, to bring Playford in, scoring the first counter of the game. In the seventh Dyer reached first on a single, stole second, advanced to third on McDonnough's single, and came home on errors, making the score 2-0 for the C.G.E., and ended their scoring.

The De Laval started in their half of the seventh when a long drive in left field gave Frick his usual homer and scoring the first run for De Laval. In the eighth they broke loose and scored three runs. Kennedy arrived on first safely on a single, Carruthers advanced him, and arrived at first on Wilson's error. The next two men up got out, and Jake Hall was the hero of the day when he drove a long triple over second and bringing in Kennedy and Carruthers, finally scoring himself on errors. This put them two up and on the long end of a 4-2 score. It also finished the scoring for the game. In the first half of the ninth the C.G.E. went out in succession.

Jake Hall was the outstanding man on the field, making more assists than anyone else and making perfect throws to third, as well as winning the game for De Laval with his triple. Miller, Kennedy, Frick and Fowler were the outstanding De Laval men. Jones at short made many nice assists as well as getting a brace of singles.

It was still the same Smiling Reggie Dyer that was behind the plate for the De Laval who nipped the foul tips off as his regular diet. Jones and Weese, as well as Barrie, were the outstanding C.G.E. men.

The C.G.E. pulled the only double play when Playford at short cut Jones off at second and threw Fowler out at first for the second put-out.

Frick made the only home run of the game.

The teams lined up as follows:

De Laval—B. Miller, c; Jake Hall, 3b; Jones, ss; Frick, 1b; Simmons, cf; K. Miller, lf; Kennedy, rf; Carruthers, p.

C.G.E.—Jones, cf; McDonnough, 2b; Wilson, cf; Playford, ss; Crary, lf; Barrie, 1b; Weese, 3b; Dyer, c; Richmond, p.

Score by innings:

De Laval	00000013x—4
C.G.E.	000001100—2

Struck out—Carruthers, 1; Richmond, 0. Home runs—Frick. Triples—J. Hall. Umpires—W. Ranger at the plate and H. Ranger at the bases.

The game was not a heavy slugging match, very few of the hits going past the infield, where the infielders on both sides held the ones at the plate at bay.

Saturday's soccer bill is a cup-tie game between the Canadian General local works and Davenport C.G.E. of Toronto. Kick-off is at three o'clock at the Oval. Please note change of place.

All representatives and executive members of the local P. and D.F.A. are requested to attend a special meeting in Chamber of Commerce rooms at 8 o'clock. Deloro's application will be discussed; also other important business.

TILDEN MEETS LACOSTI TODAY

Opening Match of Davis Cup Played This Afternoon.

U. S. CONFIDENT

PARIS, July 27 (Canadian Press).—Big Bill Tilden, United States tennis ace, and Rene Lacoste, French master, will face each other across a net at the Auteuil Stadium, at 2 o'clock this afternoon in the opening match of the first Davis Cup challenge round ever held in France, and one which will go far to decide the custody of the cup.

That it also may be the last meeting of these two great stars at least for some time to come was indicated by statements from them yesterday.

While Rene reiterated his announcement that he would not go to the United States to defend his American championship, thus practically ending any hope of another Lacoste-Tilden battle this season, Big Bill made the surprising declaration that if he makes a poor showing in these Davis Cup matches he may retire from play at the end of the year.

"No, I am not thinking of turning professional," Tilden told the Associated Press, "but if we should fail to win back the Davis Cup this time I feel someone else should try it next year."

COMMITTEE BARS FOOTBALL

Soccer and Tennis Federations Are Banned From Olympic Games.

STANDARDS DIFFER

AMSTERDAM, July 27.—(Canadian Press).—The International Olympic Committee after a hot debate yesterday adopted the proposal advocated by the U.S. representative. General Charles N. Sherill, to bar the tennis and football federations from the Olympics because of differences in amateur standards. The vote was sixteen to fourteen.

General Sherrill, supported by the British mpire and Scandinavian representatives, led the fight for adoppresentatives, led the fight for adopafter what he described as the "hottest battle the committee has had over an issue in 15 years." The hot opposition came chiefly from the Latin-American countries who were interested chiefly in soccer football and desired the privilege of reimbursing athletes for time lost in Olmypic competition.

PRESENTATION TO WESTWOOD FAMILY

Mr. and Mrs. Neilson Honored By St. Andrew's Choir.

(Examiner Correspondence)

WESTWOOD, July 27.—Mr. and Mrs. Neilson were honored on Thursday evening when the members of St. Andrew's Church choir met at their home for the weekly practice.

After the practice an appropriate address was read by Don Cameron and a wicker arm chair was presented to Mr. and Mrs. Neilson on behalf of the choir, of which Mr. Neilson is a faithful member. Mr. Neilson made a fitting reply.

The evening passed pleasantly, the entertainment being an impromptu program, in which everyone took part. Refreshments were served at the close.

Personals.

Mr. Fred. Lynch, of Ottawa, is a guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Drummond.

Mrs. Ivan Jory, of Alliston, is visiting her parents and other friends in the vicinity.

Miss Mary Barrie, of Birdsall, is spending a few days with her sister, Mrs. Thomas Cardwell.

Mr. and Mrs. William Stewart and daughter, Joan, Mr. H. Stewart of Peterborough, and Mrs. J. Stewart, of Toronto, called on friends here on Sunday.

JASPER CHOSEN FOR GOLF MEET

National Championship Will Be Decided On Western Course in 1929.

AT MONTREAL IN 1928.

TORONTO, Ont., July 27.—For the past few years the Royal Canadian Golf Association has been endeavoring more closely to associate the interests of the parent body and the Provincial associations in what they have termed "The broadening out policy." In 1926, the secretary, Mr. B. L. Anderson, was authorized to visit the Canadian West with a view to discussing golf matters with the various western associations and to look over the various golf courses to assertain which of them was of championship calibre.

As a result of this visit, together with the spirit of co-operation of the leading golfers of the west, a policy had been worked out which led to a complete revision of the constitution of the parent body, which was adopted at its last annual meeting held in Montreal.

By these changes the national amateur championship will now swing from coast to coast, the provinces each sending a team to compete in a dominion national interprovincial match to be held at the Royal Golf Club, Montreal, for which His Excellency Viscount Willindon, Governor General of Canada, has donated a trophy and has graciously consented to present the trophy to the dominion team.

The Canadian Amateur Championship will be held this year in Montreal, over the links of the Summerlea Golf Club.

It has been decided by the executive committee that the National Amateur Championship be held in the West next year. As the championship is to be held in the West, it was felt the Western people should select a course over which the championship should be played. A meeting was therefore arranged at Edmonton on the 19th of August, where the entire west was represented and a unanimous recommendation was made to the executive committee that the championship be held at the Jasper National Park Golf Course.

This recommendation was submitted to the executive committee at the meeting held at Hamilton, on Wednesday night, July 25th, and was approved. A recommendation will, therefore, be made to the next general annual meeting that the invitation of the Jasper Club be accepted. While this is the usual course by which the National Championship is decided, it is a routine formality and it may now be considered definitely settle that the next amateur championship, in 1929, will be held at the Jasper National Park course.

In making this selection due consideration has been given to the features to make a national championship a success. The secretary has reported to the committee that the golf course at Jasper leaves nothing to be desired in the way of a real test of golf, that it is one of the best championship courses in Canada and that it has many attractive features.

"A prophet is without honor in his own country" is not true in golf courses, as the people of the West have themselves selected the Jasper Park course.

OUTLAWS SAFE IN SECOND PLACE

Win For St. Andrews in Postponed Game Would Cause Three-Cornered Tie.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, July 27.—Winning their game by default last night puts the Outlaws in second place with only one game standing between them and the Clerks, leaders of the league. As this was the last game for the Outlaw team they will remain in second place unless the Clerks should lose to St. Andrew's. In that case, all three teams would be tied for first place.

For some reason it was impossible for the Electrics to oppose the Outlaws last night, and since the game meant nothing to their standing and chances for being in the play-off, they agreed to default the game and play an exhibition fixture which would be more interesting than the regular schedule game. At the end of six innings the Electrics had bested the Outlaw collection by a score of twelve to seven and did not take their last turn at bat. Armstrong, pitcher for the Electricians and new to Campbellford softball this season, did some snappy pitching and was largely responsible for the success of his team. Reynolds' home run in the second innings afforded the opportunity for applause from the fans. Aside from the home run, the only other long hit was a three-bagger. Lambert (Outlaws) made a single and almost stretched it into a home run on errors, but he was caught at the home plate.

The teams:

Outlaws — T. B. Horkins, p; L. Bush, c; H. Lambert, 1b; C. Haig, 2b; J. Gay, 3b; S. Flint, ss; C. Massie, cf; O. Sarginson, rf; E. Bush, lf.

Electrics — H. Armstrong, p; B. Reynolds, c; H. Tinney, 1b; E. Coulter, 2b; F. Dennis, 3b; H. Atkinson, ss; J. Nesbitt, cf; H. Saunders, rf; P. Saunders, lf.

By innings:

Outlaws	001141—7	10	4
Electrics	07041x—12	13	2

Umpires — J. Haig, ball; H. Denike, base.

League Standing.

	Won.	Lost.
Clerks	8	1
Outlaws	8	2
St. Andrew's	7	2
Electrics	3	7
Mill	2	7
Legionaires	0	9

There are two postponed games yet to be played, Legionaires vs. Mill and Clerks vs. St. Andrew's, before the schedule is completed and the play-offs can begin.

DOUBLE HEADER WILL DRAW BIG CROWD OF FANS

Deloro and Petes Clash Here in Double Baseball Bill To-morrow.

STILL IN FIGHT.

Petes Can Climb Considerably By Taking Both These Games.

To-morrow's double-header with Deloro is attracting a great deal of interest, and the indications are that one of the largest crowds of the season will line up to see Bob Elliott's Smelter crew and the Petes hook up in two battles that will have a great deal to do with the league play-offs.

If they can take both games from Deloro to-morrow, the Petes will be right back in the hunt, and they are determined to do that very thing, even although the invaders won on their first appearance of the season at James Stevenson Park.

The first game to-morrow will get under way at 2 o'clock, and the second will follow ten minutes after the conclusion of the first.

Neither team has announced its pitching selections.

The staging of the first double-header that has been seen in years in Peterborough has aroused the local fans, and they are looking forward to seeing two good battles. With Kingston and Oshawa faltering in the home stretch, the Petes still have a chance to beat them to the wire, and they hope to start their drive with a double win to-morrow.

QUEEN'S BOWLERS WIN.

Bring Home First, Second and Third Prizes From Tweed Tourney.

KINGSTON, July 27.—Players of Queen's Bowling Club enhanced the enviable record which they have held by winning first, second and third prizes in the Tweed tournament. Three rinks represented Kingston and rinks skipped by J. S. Derry and J. S. Singleton won all their games, while Joseph Newman's rink won three games and lost the last one by one point.

OLYMPIC DIPLOMAS ARE DISTRIBUTED

Lindbergh, Pigeon, and Derrault Honored By Committee.

AMSTERDAM, July 27 (Canadian Press).—Three Olympic diplomas were awarded yesterday by the International Olympic committee for individual meritorious conduct on the field of sport last year. One went to Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, the flier, and the other to Captain Harry Pigeon of Los Angeles, who built a yawl and sailed it all over the world. The third diploma went to the French sportsman, Alain Derrault, who circled the world in his yacht, "Firecrest."

TOM MIX AND TONY THE WONDER HORSE IN "HELLO CHEYENNE" A LONG DISTANCE WESTERN CLASSIC, WHICH SHOWS TOM AT HIS BEST, AT THE CAPITOL TO-NIGHT

The Prince of Wales has a staunch champion in Tom Mix, the famous Western star. During a recent discussion on the merits of the Prince as a rider, a member of the group was inclined to scoff at his abilities, calling on numerous newspaper accounts relative to his falls while riding.

"Listen, pardner," Mix exclaimed. "A man who ain't never been throwed, ain't never rode, and that goes for me, too. If you'll pay more attention to the pictures of the Prince, you'll find that the horse, nine times out of ten, is down also. All of which goes to prove that the horse more than likely, threw itself."

Mix' contention is borne out by a recent dispatch from London to the effect that the Prince of Wales, riding his third cross-country race within a week, finished second in a field of thirteen in the Blankney Hunt "point-to-point" meeting near London.

The race was run in a heavy downpour of rain and all the riders were drenched before they started. The Prince got away first and led the field three-fourths of the way, but was overtaken several fences from home and finished three lengths back of the famous mare Degomme. The rest of the field trailed the distance.

Tom Mix gives an excellent display of horsemanship in his latest picture, "Hello Cheyenne!" which begins an engagement of two days at the Capitol Theatre Tuesday. In support are such well-known names as Caryl Lincoln, Jack Baston, Joseph Girard and Al. St. John. Gene Ford directed the production for Fox Films.

Tunney Retains Heavyweight Championship

TECHNICAL KNOCKOUT IN TENTH PUTS CHALLENGER OUT OF CHAMPION FIGHT

Tom Heeney is Subjected to a Most Severe Beating.

KNOCKED UNCONSCIOUS.

Lasts Into the Eleventh Round, But Referee Calls Bout.

YANKEE STADIUM, New York, July 27.—(Canadian Press).—Subjecting Tom Heeney, New Zealander, challenger, to one of the most severest beating any man ever took in the ring, Gene Tunney, heavyweight champion last night scored a technical knockout over the Anzac in the tenth round of 15 round match.

Tunney knocked Heeney unconscious at the close of the tenth round but the bell saved the challenger. Tunney scaled 192, Heeney 203½.

Heeney, after the seventh round still kept his feet to plunge stubbornly into the champion's flailing pnches. The challenger's left eye, hurt in the seventh round, left him half blinded throughout the rest of the fight. After reeling through terrific punishment in the eighth and ninth sessions, Heeney collapsed under the champion's bitter attack just as the tenth round closed. Tom rolled on his back almost out of the ring and had to be carried to his corner. Although he survived somewhat for the eleventh. Tunney slammed him viciously and the referee called it. About 50,000 spectators witnessed the battle.

Heeney, burly Anzac, climbed first through the ropes. The crowd throwed up a volley of cheers for him as the New Zealander, a colorful figure clad in a cream maori cloak, dotted with black feathers turned under the blazing light and smiled his appreciation.

The cheers that greeted Heeney which was as nothing compared to the volume of sound that rolled back and forth across the big ballyard as Tunney, clad in a simple purple robe with scarlet trimmings appeared in the ring.

Round One.

Grimly determined Tunney whipped a solid right to Heeney's jaw. The challenger ducked and swarmed into Gene with a short left and right hooks to the chin that drove the champion to the ropes. Heeney shot over a solid right to the head on the break. Sticking to his right hand. Gene crashed two rights on Heeney's jaw but a sweeping left hook almost bowled the champion from his feet. Tunney was out fast, stabbing now with his left, but Tom beat both hands like a tattoo on Tunney's chin as they swapped in close. Gene ripped a solid right to Heeney's head but it never moved the challenger and Tunney was on the run. As Tom ripped after him, both hands falling to the head, there was a bad bruise over Tunney's left eye as the round ended.

Round Two.

Tunney was astonished at Heeney's offensive, starting boxing the challenger. He shot his left to Heeney's head but could not keep the bulldog of the Anzac away. Tunney blasted left and right into sturdy head of the hard rock without causing a flicker of Heeney's eyelashes. Gene swapped with his challenger and they ripped left and right hooks to the chin in a furious exchange. Tunney sparred as Tom ripped in. When Gene's left hook dropped low. Tom mentioned it and Gene smiled and asked forgiveness. A second later they were crashing each other all along one side of the ring in a slugging exchange of head clouts that rocked both on their heels. The bell broke up the exchange as the crowd stood and roared its approval.

Round Three.

Absolutely awed by the power in Tunney newly-found right. Heeney poldded into a right handed exchange with the titleholder. Tom dropped his guard and stood before the champion, hands ready and daring another exchange. Gene accomodated him and they cracked lefts and rights, short vicious pokes that stung jaw and cheek. Gene did not seem to like that and he bounced on defense spearing the challenger with a succession of lefts as Tom stalked after him. Tunney slipped as Heeney sweep a right hook to his head and nearly fell, but came back to firmer footing, without having been down and unhurt. Heeney slugged viciously at the champion's head while Tunney met his attack with solid left hooks to the body.

Round Four.

Rising in sympathy with Heeney's unexpectedly determined onslaught, the crowd bellowed the invader on as he whipped a short left and right into Gene's chin. Tunney bounced two rights off Tom's flinty chin and shot the challenger's head back with a stinging left hook. Gaining the upper hand decisively for the first time in the fight Gene threw a right into Heeney's head with every ounce of his weight and strength behind it. This time, Tom's eyelids actually fluttered and Tunney pressed his advantage with two crushing rights to the heart. Sensing the turn, with blood beginning to drip from a cut under his chin, Heeney tore savagely into the champion and nailed him to the ropes with a rocking volley to the head. Back to the hemp, in the same position as when Dempsey floored him last fall, Tunney fought vainly to sway out of danger but Heeney nailed him repeatedlv on the head.

Round Five.

Tunney's smashed his right under Heeney's heart, but the Anzac seemed to like it and bounded in close to slug at the champion's body. Gene drilled left and right into Tom's rugged head and blood dribbled from the challenger's nose. Gene probed Heeney with jolts to the head and body as Tom sturdily ploughed into what ever punishment came his way. Tom slipped as Gene hooked him into a clinch, but was up without a count.

Round Six.

Tunney's masterly defense had Heeney quite muddled now as Tom ploded in only to find his clouts caught on the champion's arm and his body battered by Gene's thudding right. The champion stepped up with a bullet like left hook to the body and bounced his right again off Heeney's corrugated features. Taking a breather Tunney was content to maul with Heeney, killing the effectiveness of Tom's left hook by carrying his right high against his cheek.

Round Seven.

Taking a breather, Tunney was content to maul with the challenger, killing the effectiveness of Tom's left hook by carrying his right high against his cheek. As Tunney danced about, spearing Tom with his left, the Anzac missed frequently, his short arms going by Tunney's head. Tom caught the champion again near the ropes, Tunney's vital spot, and slashed a left and right to Gene's head. Gene wobbled a bit and tore out of the precarious position so fast that he landed in the centre of the ring before Tom could get away from the ropes. Gene was boxing his man easily, spearing him with his left deftly.

Round Eight.

Freshened by halt bucket of water poured over his head, and new hair comb. Tunney came out to hold the challenger helpless. Heeney's left eye flooded and nearly closed. Tom shook his head in desperation as he could hardly see from that eye. He closed in of his own accord and tore into Tunney with one good eye. Quick to see his advantage Gene held the challenger a moment, locked over his difficulty, then he pumped lefts and rights to Tom's head and body. Tom wobbled under the blows, but blood spurted from his nose as he lashed forward in one desperate effort.

Round Nine.

Hardly able to see from his left eye, Heeney gallantly piled into the champion, Tunney stood and slugged with the challenger but Tom got the worst of it. Blood began to ooze from Heeney's battered left eye. A gory sight and becoming gorier, Heeney again summoned his strength for another surge and ripped his right and left to the champion's head.

Round Ten.

Heeney's eye looked almost normal as he came out to batter the unmarked champion, Gene grabbed Tom as the Anzac lunged forward and sunk left and right to the body. The snap seemed to have disappeared from Heeney's punches and Tunney apparently had little desire to cut up the challenger further. Gene grabbed Tom as the Aanzac plunged in close and showered him with left hooks to the head and body. Tom reeled under full left and right hand clouts to the head. Plodding forward now by instinct, Heeney went down under a right to the head. As Heeney rolled almost unconscious from the ring the bell rang.

Eleventh Round

Recovered, Heeney came out with left that missed and Tunney measured for levelling blow. Recuperating amazingly. Tom again plugged into the champion, smashed with right head and received right that sent him reeling again his back to the ropes. Tom staggered forward and Gene, half kidding, stabbed him easily with left. Gene flayed Tom about the head and Tom reeled under the punishment.

The challenger was helpless and Referee Forbes stepped between to halt the fray as Heeney collapsed.

FIRST OF THE PLAY-OFFS RESULT IN A TIE

GRIMES WINS FOURTH GAME FROM GIANTS

Pirates Hit McGraw's New Texas Leaguer Hard—Support Fails.

CARDINALS WIN

Four-Run Rally in Ninth Gives Reds a Win Over Philadelphia.

NEW YORK, N.Y., July 27.—Canadian Press)—Burleigh Grimes, traded by the Giants to the Pirates last winter, won his fourth game of the season from New York yesterday, 7 to 3, but had a hard time holding a seven-run lead given him in the second inning. The home team came back with five in its own half of the second, confining all the scoring to one inning, unique in a game where twelve runs are made.

McGraw started young Carl Hubbell, fresh from Beaumont of the Texas League. The kid southpaw was hit hard and supported weakly in the second when three New York errors accounted for all but two of the Pirate runs.

Brooklyn Beaten.

The veteran Alexander was supreme yesterday afternoon as the league-leading Cardinals mauled Jess Petty and his successors to take the third game of the series at Brooklyn, 6 to 1. Frank Frisch, returning to the St. Louis line-up after an enforced lay-off due to an injury, led the attack with a home run and a triple. Taylor Douthit and George Harper also hit for the circuit, it being Harper's fourteenth of the season.

Koupal and Erhardt followed Petty into the box. The veteran southpaw was trying to come back after meeting defeat in the first game of the series only two days ago.

Rally in the Ninth.

A four-run rally in the ninth inning gave the Cincinnati Reds a 6 to 4 triumph over Philadelphia. Russell Miller pitched a good game until he weakened in the ninth and gave way to Benge. Hughey Critz delivered the big blow of the uprising by hitting a two bagger that cleared the bases. Fred Leach spiked Charley Dressen sliding into third in the ninth on his triple to center and the Reds' third baseman had to be carried off the field.

Boston Wins.

Richberg's single in the 14th inning, with two out, scoring Farrell from second base enabled Boston to defeat Chicago, 7 to 6, and gave the Braves two straight over the Cubs in the present series at Boston.

Charlie Root and Bob Smith staged a great pitching duel for 10 innings before a decision was reached, each taking up the burden after the starting pitcher had failed. The Cubs overcame Boston's early five run lead to tie the score before the long deadlock.

KATHEA WINS GEORGE CUP

Leads Acadia by 18 Seconds and Vitesse by Over Minute.

TOTAL SCORE 14

SUMMERVILLE, N.Y., July 27. — Kathea, of Watertown, took the George Cup in the final race sailed yesterday in a north-east blow, leading Acadia, of Toronto, by 18 seconds and Vitesse, of Rochester, by 1 minutes and 18 seconds. The victory gives her a total point score of 14. Vitesse was second in the three days' racing with 11, and Acadia 3rd, with 10.

Suited Winner

The race was sailed in conditions completely suited to the winner. Acadia's performance was a complete surprise. She was within striking distance of Kathea down the last leg of the windward and leeward course and would have been through in another half-mile.

Vitesse furnished the best performance in a breeze in her history. Barbara, of Oswego, finished fourth and Diana, of Kingston, reefed was, last. Start, 11 a.m.

First Round

Kathea	12.16.50
Vitesse	12.17.25

Second Round

Kathea	1.37.04
Acadia	1.37.22
Vitesse	1.36.22

VIEWS ON SPORT

Crescents and the Cogs meet to-night in the Exhibition Park. Whoever wins is sure of being in the finals.

If ever a man took a severe beating in the ring, it was administered to Tom Heeney last night by the champion.

* * * * * * *

Heeney was knocked unconscious in the tenth, but the bell saved him. His seconds drew him into the ring in the eleventh. What else could a referee do?

* * * * * * *

Heeney's extra 11½ pounds in weight did him no good last night. From the first bell it was just a question of how long would he last.

* * * * * * *

Riley & Hickey will meet Grafton's on Monday night to decide a winner of the second half of the Bantam series. Riley & Hickey won the first half, and a win on Monday night will give them the championship. The game is scheduled for 6 o'clock at James Stevenson Park, when all players are expected to be on hand on time.

Hastings and Lock Works put up a real battle last night in the first game of the County play-offs. The score was 5 to 5. The Lock Works had a great opportunity to put across a win in the fifth when they had the bases loaded.

* * * * * * *

Ralph was hit hard while Hastings only allowed two hits, but they allowed nine free transportations to the first sack.

* * * * * * *

De Laval added another to their string of wins last night when they defeated the C.G.E. in a softball fixture 4 runs to 3. The Leaders have only lost one game this season. A. Frick knocked his usual horse run.

* * * * * * *

All birth certificates of Junior, Juvenile, or Bantam teams from the Registrar-General, Clerks of Municipalities, or baptismal records must be in the hands of the City League officials before Monday, July 30. Affidavits are of no use, according to a new ruling of the O.B.A.

* * * * * * *

Lock Works and Hastings will clash again in Hastings on Saturday afternoon. The County section boys are playing a much better game than the ordinary fan believes possible.

* * * * * * *

Teco and Lock Works will hook up to-night at Confederation Square in a City Softball fixture. It should be an interesting struggle.

HASTINGS AND LOCKWORKS PLAY TO DRAW IN FIRST OF COUNTY LEAGUE FINALS

Lockmakers Fail to Push Across Winning Runs With Three On.

SCORE FIVE ALL

Second Game Will be Played in Hastings on Saturday Afternoon.

Hastings and Lockworks deadlocked at 5 to 5 in their opening playoff game at Exhibition Park last night, the lockmakers failing to push over the winning run in the fifth when they had the bases loaded. The second game will be played at Hastings tomorrow afternoon.

The visitors plastered Ralph for eight hits while the local gang got one single off Scriver who worked three frames, and another clout off Forbert who finished the game. But while they were stingy with safeties, Bill Wellman's second string hurlers were liberal with transportation, the pair of them walking nine batters. Scriver losing all signs of control when he passed five in the third. Ralph should have come out of the fray with a win in spite of the visitors' hitting ability.

Doc Green showed the youngsters how to get along the runways, purliong the sacks at will, and stealing home with the pitch, to give Lock Works a run in the first.

Hastings tallied in their first. Baker's grounder deflected off Hunt's glove, bounded over to Baird, and the runner was safe. Stevenson fanned but Forbert doubled to score Baker. The next two went out.

Green's grounder was fumbled by Stevenson and Smith was hit. Westbrooke and Griffin were struckout. With Black at bat, Green who had ambled to third stole home. Black flied to C. Zufelt.

A pair of real singles, a forecout at third, and Baker's single gave Hastings another run in the second. Lockworks failed to make the grade.

Hastings got a runner to third in that frame and went out. For Lockworks, Green, Smith, Westbrooke and Griffin were passed in a row for the tieing run. Black grounded to Baker to force Westbrooke at third. A wild throw by Cowell sent two more in, and Lockworks had a lead of two runs.

Two singles and the catcher's high throw to second gave Hastings a run in the fourth. Hunt's error, a pass and Forbert's sacrifice fly gained another tally, and a second lapse by Hunt scored a third counter, giving the visitors the lead.

Lockworks recovered the tally in their half with Forbert pitching. The former Lindsay ballplayer walked Ralph who stole second and third to score on Green's single.

The visitors were retired in order in the fifth. For Lockworks, Barry, who had replaced Griffin, went out to C. Zufelt. Black walked and was sacrificed by Jobbitt. Conners batting for Hunt drew a pass. Black should have moved up to third on a passed ball, and he was still at the bag when Ralph came through with a single. Black was held at third where the watched Conners batting for Baird fly out to Scriver.

Kiwanis Win Juvenile City League From Moose

DEFEAT MOOSE JUVENILES 8-4 IN SECOND GAME OF PLAY-OFFS

Losers Match Winners in Fielding, But Victors Hit Harder.

GOOD PITCHING.

Small Crowd of Fans Sees Smartly Played Game at James Stevenson Park.

By netting a run in the first, two more in the second, two in the third, four in the fourth, and one in the fifth, while the opposition was counting a total of four all told, Kiwanis Juveniles won their second game from Moose 10 to 4 last night at James Stevenson Park. With the victory went the Juvenile championship of the city and the privilege of meeting Oshawa juvenile representatives as the next step in seeking provincial honors.

Called on account of darkness at the half-way mark in the sixth, the game, which was the second of the play-offs, proved a lively scrap for the small audience of fans, with Merrett doing the heaving for the victors until relieved near the conclusion of hostilities by Jones, who took up the burden in the last of the fifth, and Fitzgerald working effectively for the losers. He had seven strike-outs while the opposing twirlers totalled five. However, he walked six men to three by Merrett.

With all due credit to the losers, who put up a real struggle and were by no means badly trimmed, the Kiwanians looked the better of the two to enter the play-offs, particularly when at bat. Their hitting was fairly consistent, which, added to the six free tickets by Fitzgerald, gave them a good reputation as offensive workers. In the field, there was not a great deal that could be found fault with, though errors were not unknown to either outfit.

As for the Moose players, they matched the victors in more than one stage of the battle and were up and coming, particularly toward the end when they added a brace of counters with nine men getting a chance with the willow. In the entire game, twenty-six of them faced Merrett and Jones, while thirty-one Kiwanians were given a chance to distinguish themselves in a like manner.

The game started out fast, with Jack Deannard's crew on the offensive. They collected. Assisted by two hits, two free tickets and an error they populated the paths, yet only one run materialized as the first runner was forced at the plate as was the third, while another batter struck out.

They had better luck in the following session, with three free tickets and a forth batter hit by the pitcher. While two others were striking out and a third lying out to centre fielder, two runs crossed the platter, while in the third, of seven batters, two crossed the platter, two were struck out, another flied out and two others died on base. Then came the big fifth when they registered no less than four tallies on three hits and an error. They added another in the fifth for luck.

Moose, on the other hand preferred to go broke in all save two sessions, though they placed runners on the paths in practically every inning. On three hits and a walk they capitalized to the extent of two runs in the second and then in the fifth, when things were getting dark, they stacked up another pair when three free tickets came their way with which they combined a like number of hits.

Moose—Price, l.f.; McCarroll, 3b.; Perdue, s.s.; Rogers, c.f.; Morocco, c.; Dinesen, r.f.; Fitzgerald, p.; Busby 2b.; Kay, 1b. Umpire—Alex Kay.

HELEN WINS WAY INTO TENNIS FINAL

Manchester-by-the Sea, Mass. July 27.—Miss Helen Wills of Berkley, Calif., queen of American tennis won her way into the finals of the Essex county club's annual women's invitation tournament here yesterday.

She eliminated Miss Marjorie Morrill of Dedham 6-2 6-0.

BISONS BEATEN BY PRUDHOMME

Buffalo Drops Opening Game of Series at Maple Leaf Stadium.

SCORE 2 TO 1

TORONTO, July 27.—Johnny Prudhomme's superb pitching beat Buffalo in the opening game of the four series here yesterday afternoon, 2 to 1. He allowed only four scattered hits and walked two and would have had a shutout to his credit but for Webb's bad throw to first in the fourth.

Mills was almost as effective. Five hits were picked from him, though he passed five, two of them purposely. He walked three in the fourth, but a double play on Styles with the bases full prevented any score.

Toronto counted first on Styles' walk. Prudhomme's hit, Cote's sacrifice and Webb's fly to left.

Buffalo equalized in the fourth on Archdeacon's bunt hit and steal, and Webb's throw to the stand on Cooney. The game was won in the eighth. The first two up were outs, but Sheedy doubled to left. Alexander was handed a deliberate pass and Bedore singled Sheedy home. With men on third and first Sexton fanned.

Knotty Lee returned yesterday from his scouting trip with a Chicago semi-pro, outfielder signed and to deliver himself here Monday. His name cannot be divulged until after Sunday, on which day he plays at Chicago.

He met the usual thing—any young player of promise already bespoken for some major club. He met on his southern trip Hughie Duffy, scouting for Boston. George Whiteman, player-manager, and still going strong for Salisbury, and Rowe, former Ottawa player, now an owner.

Reading Loses

READING, PA., July 27 Canadian Press).—Reading opened a long home stay by losing to Newark yesterday, 8 to 5. Hugh McQuillan kept Reading's ten hits well scattered, but needed assistance in the ninth.

Fourth Victory

By defeating the Baltimore Orioles in the opening game of their series at home, the Jersey City Skeeters won their fourth victory in their last six starts since returning home. The score was 3 to 0, Maurice Bream, Yankee, registering his fourth shutout of the season.

Royals Beaten

Rochester captured the opening game of the series at Montreal yesterday afternoon from the Montreal Royals, 6 to 2. The contest marked the first appearance of the Red Wings in Montreal, the entire engagement having been washed out in their last visit here.

The Red Wings had much the better of the argument, outhitting the locals, 15 to 9, while H. Smith outpitched three Royal twirlers. The Red Wings, too, looked better in the field despite the fact that the Royals staged two snappy double plays in the early innings. Brown, Rochester third baseman, was the battting star of the afternoon, making four singles and drawing a walk in five trips to the plate.

BIG REGATTA AT MONTREAL ON SATURDAY

Don Woods and Bill Coursey Are Going With Outboard Boats.

JOHNSON MOTORS

A Real Competition is Expected As Race is Open to All Outboards.

Don Woods and Bill Coursey of the Canadian Johnson Motor Company are going to Montreal to participate on the Beauharnois Regatta which commences Saturday, July 28.

This is one of the big regattas of the year and Don and Bill are going down with the intention of bringing home the proverbial bacon. They have unlimited confidence in the Johnson new giant twin motor because it led all competitors to the finishing mark recently.

In the last race they competed in the Johnson motors ran one, two. It was in this race that the Johnson new giant twin motor led all competitors, including their own big twin motor, which was second, by two miles. This is understood to be a Canadian record for outboard motors in Canada.

As the outboard motor race will be open to all comers at Beauharnois Regatta, Don and Bill are expecting a real competition, and hope to see some of the local enthusiasts there to cheer them on if not to compete. If local competition shows up they say they will like it all the better.

TEST "SAFE" GASOLINE

PARIS, July 26.—Gasoline that will not burn in its liquid state is being tested by government engineers and it is believed that the new fuel may become widely used in aviation. If it proves satisfactory in airplane motors it should save many flyers from death in flaming planes that crash in forced landings.

The Fight By Radio

Yea! It may have been the battle of the century. It certainly was the battle of the century to get a report by radio—but while scores of people who owned radios were calling up The Examiner asking for a report of the big fight, we were sitting here in the office getting comparatively clear details over our De Forest Crosley set loaned for the occasion by J. W. Watson. Summer time is static time, but there wasn't much broadcast about the fight last night that we did not pick up.

The WEAF broadcast through thirty stations offered a wide selection, and McNamee was our pick of the fight broadcasters. We recalled the last championship fight, when his description was really better than the actual sight of the battle from the kind of seat we could afford—and we lost no time in tuning in on his station. Graham has the happy knack of making news interesting—even if it is not so interesting—and he sure can tell clearly what he sees. The fact that he was brought back from vacation to describe last night's battle for the fans did not detract one bit from the vividness of his description, but we missed the masterly summing up that followed last year's battle because he was in a hurry to get back to his summer home.

There was a lot of applesauce about the crowd (which wasn't enough to guarantee Tex Rickard a retiring income) and the famous promoter was quoted as remarking that if he had nothing else out of the evening he would at least have a good time. The weather was apparently fine, with a gentle breese sweeping the stadium where Babe Ruth has hit so many of his home runs. Forty new-type aluminum encased lamps of one thousand candle power each cast their radiance on the ring, which rose five and a half feet above the ground on iron supports. (Later developments showed that the iron supports were needed). David Velasco, who is to direct the stage work or Jack Dempsey in a play to be produced late this summer, was in a ringside seat more than two hours before any vital blows were exchanged, and his arrival, as well as that of several other prominent and near-prominent persons, was duly recorded by the all-seeing eye of McNamee. Jim (otherwise James J.) Corbett, who won the heavyweight title from John L. Sullivan 36 years ago, was another early arrival at the ringside. "Gentleman Jim" was on record as predicting a smashing Tunney victory. There too, according to Graham McNamee over the DeForest Crosley, was Sammy Mandell, lightweight champion, who had given Jimmy McLarnin a fierce beating within the stadium confines.

It must have been a heart-breaking disappointment to Tex, however, when the second preliminary got under way and the crowd on the surface of the infield and outfield was many thousands short of capacity. "Maybe a flop" said headings in metrolopitan newspapers, and perhaps it was, as a money-maker. As a fight, however, it was anything else. The fight fans who deliberately missed it must be kicking themselves to-day.

The loudest gong in the world (it must be; so many things are superlatively this and that in United States) sent cold shivers up and down the spines of the customers in the ringside seats and here in Peterborough as the first of the preliminary boxers crawled into the freshly resined ring to whet appetites of the assembled throng. The bleachers were not the farthest removed from the scene of the fray. McNamee told us, because roofs of apartment houses many blocks away from the stadium had their full quotas of optimistic persons who might or might not see something for nothing. And then, here in Peterborough, we had scores of people listening-in to picture in their minds the "battle of the century."

Probably no one in Peterborough was interested in the preliminaries except insofar as they offered an opportunity to tune in the station and tune out the static. At the same time one must remember that in the last championship bout there was more ginger in the prelude than in the sparring contest that was billed as the big attraction. Bill Daring blasted Frank Lang out of the picture last night in one minute and 53 seconds of the second round of the first preliminary last night. After finding out all he needed of Lang's style in the first round, Daring floored the mid-westerner in the second with a crushing right to the chin for the count of eight, and hardly had Lang regained his feet before another left, zooming into him from the off-side, stretched him motionless under the ropes in a neutral corner. His two pounds superiority in weight did not count Lang much value in the result.

Then Jimmy Bryne tried his unorthodox punches on Big Boy Peterson and gained a draw after six bruising rounds. Johnny Gregso eliminated Francisco Crus of Portugal in just 37 seconds of another six rounder; George Larocco won in a gory encounter from Heiller; Warren tackled Hoffman in a 6-round semi-final and won out. The former college boxer weighed 185 and Hoffman 187.

The big battle drew near. During the announcement of the combatants it sounded here in Peterborough like an anvil chorus. Someone kept pounding on that loudest gong in the world until we began to think there was only one bell in the world.

It was awful—and this Deforest Crosley brought in every 'ding-dong' the bell gave.

Then there was a minute's respite for Jack Dempsey. The former champion reached his seat in the front row of the ringside (the same seat that Gene Tunney occupied when Dempsey knocked out Jack Sharkey last summer) amidst a roar of cheering. He entered the ring to shake hands with the combatants of last night and was again the recipient of the plaudits of the crowd. In fact anything Jack did seemed right to the fans. As Graham McNamee said, "Jack can pull it down better than any other man on the continent." Then Humphries introduced him to the crowd, and he got another long cheer.

Shortly afterwards, Humphries announced that Heeney weighed in at 203½, while Tunney turned the scales at 192.

The fight was on. The crowd was yelling. The announcer was trying to get his message across. The fans didn't care. Here in Peterborough we could hear them yelling for the principals; newspapermen shed their coats in the heat of the 40,000 candle power lights beaming down on them from the canopy over the ring, their shirts polka-dotted from blood shed in the preliminaries. The whistle; the bell! The fighters are in the ring.

The bout started fast with Tunney using his right in assaults on Heeney's face and head. His first was a solid right to Heeney's Jaw, that opened some agony when Tommy swarmed into him with short jabs that drove him to the ropes. "Oh-h-h" we heard the crowd yell. Gene's two rights to the jaw rocked Heeney, but the challenger took a sweeping right hook that nearly knocked Tunney for a row—anyhow, according to McNamee, it severely rocked him. There were, according to the report by radio, 26 blows exchanged, and the 21st was a humdinger of an uppercut to Heeney's jaw, while number 11 brought a bad bruise over Tunney's left eye.

The second round opened more slowly, but even the critical McNamee admitted it was no boxing match. Gene was evidently amazed, if not affrighted, by the challenger's offensive tactics in opening, and the bout developed into the real battle which most folk had little expected. If the second round had been known beforehand, there would have been more calls for results at The Examiner office. There were six clinches, but the fight was so stiff between times that these can be excused. Yes, indeed. Said McNamee over our DeForest Crosley, Gene swung his left to Heeney's head; Heeney landed a stinging right to Tunney's neck, and a right to Tunney's head; Gene reached the button with a right while Tommy countered with a sharp jab to the chin. Tunney lands a left right to the side of the head; Heeney swung to Tunney's head; Tunney got in a swing to Heeney's head while Heeney's short right found Tunney's jaw and his left shook Tunney's head; Tunney landed hard on Heeney's chin and Tom sent home two stiff ones to Tunney's heart. They didn't do anyone any good. Tunney rocked his opponent with two to the head and Heeney came back with another stinger over the heart; two more from Gene to the head brought two from Tom to Gene's head; Gene caught Tom two on the face, one on the nose, fololwed with another to the head and a right to the side of the face. When the bell sounded they were mixing it up with quick exchanges to the head. The crowd is standing up to yell its approval.

"The third round opened with Heeney's left to the body, and right to Tunney's chin, followed by Tunney's left to Heeney's body and his right to the challenger's head, a left to the body, and Tommy's left right to Gene's body, wilth a left right, hard, to Gene's head; Gene came back with a left-right, left-right, left-right to Heeney's head and Tom got in two to Gene's chin; a quick exchange of ineffective blows; Gene caught Heeney with a sharp one-two on the body, another on the head, and then, while Tom swept one to his head, dug in a blow to the challenger's heart that made him wince. It was a hard right, followed by another to the body and one, two, three, four to the head. Tunney stumbled after Heeney's hook to his head. "Everybody thought this was to be a blow-out as a fight, but it is a record maker," says McNamee.

Apparently, from the noise coming over the radio, the crowd approved Heeney's game fight. It sure cheered. And when, in the fourth round, Tunney swung ineffectively at his opponent's face and Heeney rocked Tunney with a hard right and left to the chin, the crowd went wild. Then Gene hit to Tom's body, face, chin, body, and Tom countered to Gene's body with a stinging left-right; Gene swung a wicked uppercut to Heeney's chin and knicked his head over while Heeney was landing a right in Gene's face; landed another right on Heeney's head and followed with another uppercut and a body blow; Heney came in with a left-right-hand to Gene's face, and then came the turning point of the bout, when Gene threw a right into Heeney's face with all his weight behind it. As Graham McNamee said, "Heeney's nose is looking funny." Then Tom attacked savagely, with a quick right-left to the head and drove Gene to the ropes. Tunney couldn't escape the punishment and when the round ended he was nailed to the hemp.

The fifth round opened with Gene smashing a right to Heeney's heart, drawing the challenger in to batter his body. Three quick lefts on Heeney's face and a jab over the heart when Heeney drove over Tunney's shoulder didn't make Tom feel any too good; then Tom landed a hard right over Gene's heart and Gene again found that bad nose with a left and Tom's body with a right, pushed in another right to the face and a left to the head and took a typical Heeney left on his face. When Gene landed quick left-right-left-right on his head, Heeney slipped and it looked like a knock-down, but he got up in time to take a hard right-left to the jaw and return a swing to Gene's shoulder as the bell rang. "It was," said McNamee to his radio audience, "Gene's best round so far."

The seventh round found Tunney holding Heeney's frantic efforts. Heeney was short in opening, and Gene landed with his left to the body and his right over the heart; a left-right to the face, and a right-left-right to the face, body and head, while Heeney swung a hard right to his head. Gene gave light taps to Heeney's chin, while the challenger passed out a hard right to his head; Gene passed out a right uppercut while he took a body blow and traded a right to Heeney's neck while he jumped away from Heeney's furious attack on his head; Gene's two to the face were countered with one that caught his cheek-bone, but Tom was wobbly and his nose was not improved any by the battering it received in this round. One eye, too, seemed to be giving Heeney trouble, and he blinked it as if there was a cinder in it.

When the eighth round opened Heeney was hardly able to see out of his left eye, but he bored into the champion, leading with a left-right to the face, a right over the heart, and a right-left to the head, while the champion handed out a left and a right-left to the face, a right-left to the body, and a blow to the head. Heeney's left to Gene's head was followed by the champion with a right-left to the chin, a right-left to the head, and a right-left to the face, quickly followed by three body-blows that rocked his opponent. Then Heeney fought back hard, with left-right-left-right to Tunney's face; Tunney countered with four vicious head blows and Heeney bored into Tunney's head as the bell sounded.

The mystery that seemed to shroud Heeney's bad eye was dispelled by McNamee when he declared, "It's only what we would have called in the old days, 'A Black Eye.' They say Gene poked his thumb in it. Certainly Heeney is not very pretty looking—he never was a beauty, but he's worse now."

In the ninth round there were, according to the radio report, 36 blows exchanged. Maybe the announcer missed some, but probably he caught all that counted. Ten of them landed on Tunney, and the remainder were going the other way. Tunney opened with 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6 to Heeney's body, and Heeney answered with a hard right that rocked Gene's head over on his shoulder; there was a quick exchange of blows, mostly to the head and neck, Heeney taking two more on his much-battered nose. Then Heeney landed a hard left-right on Tunney's chin that staggered the champion (it was not certain whether he fell down or was pushed). Gene caught Tom with a right to the head and the challenger was practically out when the bell rang. "It was Tunney's round," said McNamee in summing up, "and so far it is Tunney's fight."

The tenth round opened with Tunney leading to Heeney's heart, taking two rights to the body in exchange. Then Gene drove in two lefts to the face, took a body blow, passed out a nasty left to Heeney's head, took a left over his heart, and bored in with a straight left to Heeney's face, followed by a hook to the chin and a right-left to the chin. Heeney's retaliation was weak. He passed out a wallop to Tunney's head and took in return a right to the neck and a terrific left to the body that made him sag. He was half out the ring, and when the bell sounded he was outside the rope. "He can't possibly last," McNamee told us. "He is being dragged to his corner by his helpers. Gene is sitting quietly in his corner waiting. No one knows whether Heeney will come up for the eleventh or not. . . .

"He is up. He is on his feet. The bell has rung for the eleventh round. Heeney lands hard on Tunney's cheek with his right. Tunney hits Heeney with his right. Heeney comes back with his right. He is taking punishment, and he is taking it like a he-man. Tunney rocks Heeney with a right to the heart that didn't do him any good. A left-right to Heeney's head; Heeney lands a right-left on Tunney's head; Gene hits left-right-left-right on Heeney's face and head; a hard left-right to Heeney's chin—he is almost upset—a left to the heart. Heeney makes a brave attempt to come back with a left to the body, but it is ineffective. He looks bad. Tunney jabbed Heeney over the heart again — three times this round—and followed up with two body blows. Heeney drove a hard right to Tunney's jaw and Tunney came back with five hard blows to Heeney's head. Heeney led to Tunney's chin. Tunney's left-right found Heeney's body, but Heeney found Tunney's head and bounced it around. Tunney hooked Heeney . . . Heeney nearly fell down without a blow . . . he can't last . . . the referee has stopped the contest.

"Gene Tunney can't be beaten as a boxer, but Heeney is anybody's equal as a hero."

And thus ended the "fight of the century."

And Afterwards.

Heeney declared that Tunney had won on his merit, and his manager went further. "The British race is not in disgrace through this fight," he said. "We will have another trial, and in the meantime we say to Gene Tunney, 'Keeora.' That means "good luck.' And we say the same to all of you."

In his summing-up of the battle, Graham McNamee, who was called off vacation to tell the story over the radio, said: "Heeney was virtually knocked out at the end of the tenth, but the bell saved him. He was dragged to his corner by his seconds, and they got him on his feet. But nature took her toll, and in spite of his gallant spirit he was wilting on his feet. The referee mercifully stopped the slaughter. Few men have the courage that Heeney showed, and when he left here he went out a hero—perhaps greater in defeat than he might have been in victory."

Then followed some applesauce about a possible comeback by the popular idol—Dempsey—and McNamee retired into oblivion until another world championship calls him forth to do his stuff in its own inimitable manner.

And we reluctantly return the DeForest Crosley radio set to Mr. Watson awaiting the same occasion.

RED SOX DROP DOUBLEHEADER

Langford's Triple With Two on in Ninth Beats Boston.

SENATORS BREAK EVEN

NEW YORK, July 27.—(Canadian Press).—"Sam" Langford's triple following as it did Autrey's single and pinch hitter Miatt's double in the ninth inning of the second game against Boston, carried the Cleveland Indians from a run deficit into a 4 to 3 victory and insured a double triumph at Cleveland.

The Indians won the first game 4 to 2, Billy Bayne allowing the Red Sox six hits while Cleveland hammered Charley Ruffing for ten.

It was the second double victory aver the Red Sox in two playing days and made the count four to one for the series.

Thomas and the White Sox were again easy victims for Philadelphia and the Athletics won their third straight of the series 9 to 1.

Lefty Grove held the team that won 10 of its 17 games on its recent eastern invasion to eight hits while his teammates were collecting 13 off Thomas, one of the two aces of the Red Sox hurling staff.

Senators Break Even.

Washington came back to win the second game of a double header from the St. Louis Browns six to four, after dropping the first by 5 to 7 and increasing their losses to St. Louis to seven straight. Sam Gray pitched the Browns to their third straight win in the present series, in the first game, and clinched his fifteenth victory in twenty-two starts.

Garland Braxton was batted from the mound in the fifth inning of the opener and an eighth inning assault on Marberry enabled the Browns to win.

Tigers Beat Yanks.

Harry Heilmann's batting enabled the Tigers to take the second game of a double header from the Yankees as Detroit, 13 to 10, after they had lost the opener 12 to 11 in twelve innings. Heilmann contributed a home run, a triple and a single to the winning Tiger attack and drove in eight runs.

Miller Huggins used 12 players in a futile attempt to avert defeat in the second encounter.

McGILL TAKES LEAD IN SUMMER SCHOOLS

Library School Attains Something of Prominence Attached to Summer French School.

MONTREAL, Que., July 27. — (Canadian Press).—While 3,000 collegians who keep the halls and campus of old McGill stirring with incessant activity throughout three seasons of the year are scattered far and wide in quest of pleasure, dollars or experience, two busy groups are pursuing their studis under the July sun. They are the Summer French School and the Library School.

The Summer French School has gained an international reputation during recent years and draws its large enrolment from United States as well as Canadian centres. But the work of the Library School is less generally known, although the fact that it has been found necessary to limit the enrolment this year proves that Canadian libraries have come to realize the necessity of maintaining specially trained staffs. McGill was the first university to inaugurate instruction in this comparatively new vocation and still holds the premier place. This year the school's muster includes student from every province in the Dominion.

Twenty-four years ago McGill established the first summer course in library work in Canada and since that time these courses have continued to expand, save for the war period, when all summer work at the university was suspended. The first all-year course to be undertaken by any university in Canada was inaugurated by McGill in 1927.

Students completing the summer course and obtaining their certificates are qualified to undertake the librarianships of small libraries or to work as assistants in large libraries. Those taking the all-year course are fitted for executive positions in the larger institutions.

The McGill school is under the directorship of Gerhard R. Lomer, M.A., Ph.D., assisted by Mary Duncan Carter, Ph.B., B.L.S. Among the branches in which particular instruction is given are cataloguing and classification; reference work and bibliography; circulation, publicity and extension, and book section. There are also interesting elective courses in the history of books and reading, story telling for children, library work with children, school libraries, library architecture and binding.

A practical apprentice course in the fundamentals of binding is now given for the first time in connection with the Summer School. The course, which is attracting much interest, includes lectures on paper, binding materials, the making of book hats, scrapbooks, blotters and boxes. It is under the special charge of Dr. Lomer, with Philippe Rondeau and Oliver Carignan as instructors in practical work.

While McGill University is fostering library work, the vocation is still in its infancy in Canada and offers no justification for the establishment of a graduate school. Those library workers who wish to continue their studies beyond the limits of the McGill course must go to one of the graduate schools in the [illegible]. But the [illegible] educationists who are devoting their energies to this new field are confident that in the not very distant future changed conditions will make feasible the establishment of such a school.

ALADDIN'S LAMP IS MODERNIZED

Industrial Chemistry Explores New Realms of Sympathetic Products.

BREAKS MONOPOLIES.

CHICAGO, July 27—The magic of Aladdin's lamp is the only magic that compares with the wonders that the American Chemical Society is indicating at the North-Western University.

Weeds, straw, the lowly molds, fungi and Germs, corn stalks, cobs and such, touched by the wand of synthesis already loom through the glass of research as great industrial empires.

"Munition makers are using their plants and their chemists to make commercial solvents and cellulose used in the manufacture of useful articles from the wastes of the farm," said Professor Frank K. Whitmore.

"Furfural, a recent trick invention, has developed possibilities. It can be made out of oat hulls and corn cobs. Within a few years men will be making parts of chairs and other furniture from the artificial resins produced from it. At present it is used in insulation and radio parts. Quantities of the material come from one oatmeal factory."

O. M. Rommal, of the Department of Agriculture, told of the expanding use of corn stalks to make silk. A large factory at Danville, Ill., is turning out cellulose for silk and other products from corn stalks. They are worth $6 a bale on the farm.

Common mold, the despair of every housewife, has been put to work by science and has reduced the cost of producing gluconic acid from $100 a pound to 20 cents, H. T. Herrick, of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, said.

The mold, a minute microscopic plant, is being used to turn out citric acid, which formerly was an exclusive product of lemons and other sour fruit.

"It is my belief," Herrick said, "that the possibilities of future mold formation are literally infinite."

Sir James Irvine, of the University of St. Andrews, said:

"Monopoly in raw materials is a thing of the past. By reducing many forms of matter to simple elements, or compounds and then fabricating by synthesis a desired substance, chemistry works for equal industrial and commercial opportunity.

"Science, with an eye single to production, is producing unprecedented plenty in a world organized financially and politically on the basis of 'scarcity values'—chemistry is always creating new values."

BYRD IS BELIEVER IN REGULAR SLEEP

Tries to Keep Right Hours Himself and Sometimes Oversleeps.

NEW YORK, N.Y., July 27.—(Canadian rPess).—Commander Richard E. Byrd, who on occasion can get along with almost no sleep at all, oversleeps "one in a while."

This was revealed in a newly published juvenile biography of the explorer. "I think sleep is the most important thing a man can get for his health," the man who spent 42 hours awake over the Atlantic last summer told Pitshugh Green, author of "Dick Byrd, Air Explorer."

"I always try to sleep right hours", he said. "oftmetimes I try to add an extra hour when I know I am going to have a hard spell of work ahead."

Thomasburg

(Examiner Correspondence)

THOMASBURG, July 27.—Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Holbert and daughter Dorothy, of Toronto, are spending their holidays with Mr. and Mrs. William Holbert and other friends here.

Mr. Clifford Adams spent Sunday at the home of Mr. Thomas Emerson.

Mr. Ross Wilson and his father, Mr. Wilson, of Smith Falls, and Mr. and Mrs. Wilson, of Montreal, spent Sunday at the home of Mr. Harry Lee.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Fennell and sons, Douglas and Teddie, and Mrs. Doxie spent Sunday at Twelve O'Clock Point.

Miss Mary Porter is visiting Mrs. Gordon Webb, at Bonarlaw.

Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Semmith and little daughter, of Sydney, visited Mrs. Margaret Embry one day recently.

Mr. and Mrs. Dudgeon and family visited friends at Bogart on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Southworth, of Detroit, accompanied by Mrs. Walter Harrison and Miss Mildred of here motored to Syracuse on Wednesday to visit Mr. and Mrs. Albert Forsyth.

PASSES ENTRANCE IN HER 11TH YEAR

Alastha Kidd, of Warsaw, Goes Through School in Five Years.

(Examiner Correspondence)

WARSAW, July 27.—Lostha Kidd, fourth daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Kidd, at the age of ten years and seven months wrote on the Entrance examinations and passed. She was a pupil of Everett Sloan of the Union School No. 12, and as her home is on the second line of Dummer, she had to walk two miles to school. The children next younger than she are twin boys, and she had to help at home. She started to school in September, 1923, at the age of five years and nine months, so that she has attended school just five school years; duping four of these years Mr. Sloan was her teacher. She never seemed to worry about her lessons. Her parents intend sending her to the high school at Norwood.

Severe Storm.

A short but very heavy electric storm passed over Warsaw on Monday afternoon between one and two o'clock. Besides putting some telephone lines out of order, no damage was reported though many people thought surely some damage had been done. Several people who were about a mile apart, reported a flash accompanied by a peculiar blowing sound, followed a couple of second by a crash; the telephone bells tingled more than once. They were all sure something near had been struck and that had caused the peculiar sound.

There was very heavy rain at Warsaw but two miles west there was very little until later in the afternoon.

Hail is reported at Stoney Lake.

Personals.

Mrs. Harger returned to her home on Monday.

Miss Coleman and Miss Helen Lloyd returned to Toronto on Tuesday.

Mr. Nelson, District Agricultural representative, has been inspecting the school children's gardens during the past week.

Mr. Nelson is having a team judging class for lunches at the school fairs throughout the county. Every school is to send a team of three to judge the lunches which will be provided.

Warsaw cheese factory cheques $30 in the bank. The monthly reports were sent around on Monday. Payment was made at the rate of 49 cents a pound butter fat. During part of the season of 1918 payment was made at the rate of 50 cents a pound butter fat.

MARITIME LEADERS TO VISIT ONTARIO

Association Hopes to Have Governors and All Legislators.

TORONTO, July 27 (Canadian Press).—To have three Lieutenant-Governors, and the entire membership of the legislatures of the Maritime Provinces as guests in Toronto for three days during the Canadian National Exhibition is the hope of the Maritime Provinces Association of Toronto. The Empire Parliamentary Association is to be in Toronto about the last of August, and it is planned to have the Maritime Provinces representatives present to participate jointly in the entertainment that will be provided by the Ontario Government, the City of Toronto, His Honor W. D. Ross, Lieutenant-Governor, and many of the leading clubs in the city.

Invitations have been sent to the Lieutenant-Governors, all the legislative members, the presidents of the Maritime Provinces universities, and the representatives of the Associated Board of Trade and of the press, and it is expected that practically all will accept. Special trains have been arranged for and well-considered plans are being made to make the occasion memorable.

The Maritime Provinces Association of Toronto now numbering over 800 members has been interesting itself for the past year in encouraging Ontario farmers to look to the Maritimes for larger supplies of the produce of the farm, factory, fisheries, and the forest. They have also been distributing literature intended to bring home to Ontario readers the contribution they can make to Canadian industrial life. The Maritime Provinces Association is composed of Maritime people now resident here. The Honorary President is Lieutenant Governor W. D. Ross; Vice-Presidents, Sir Robert Falconer, Most Rev. Archbishop McNeil, and Chancellor H. P. Whidden.

YOUNG MOTORIST KILLED.

GLENCOE, July 27 (Canadian Press).—Jack Howe, 14, stalled his car, on the Canadian Pacific Railway tracks yesterday afternoon and was instantly killed by a west-bound flier. He had been driving his father, A. I. Howe, to work. His mother was recently charged with manslaughter, following the strangling of her child, aged 2, and is now in Ontario Hospital, London. Coroner Dr. L. M. Fresle opened an inquest into yesterday's crossing tragedy.

New York Letter.

Under the influence of continued good earnings reports and the failure of the money market to tighten, stocks exhibited buoyancy and under active buying were generally higher. While the credit situation appears, for the time, to be easy, the street is still being warned of the possibilities of further tightening of credit later on. The unusual spectacle is seen at this time of companies engaged in industrial enterprises, with spare funds, offering these funds for call money purposes, thus in a measure substituting for the bankers who have been somewhat restricted in their loan of ferings of late. It is apparent that later on these same industrial companies will require funds for the conduct or further expansion of their business which will necessitate a withdrawal of their funds from the loan market. At the same time we are now rapidly approaching that period of the year when money will be required for the crop movement and the interior banks will be calling upon New York for their funds that have been placed to their credit in the New York institutions. There is unquestionably an undercurrent of bullish feeling which would probably break out in a wild buying movement such as occurred earlier in the year if the credit situation would offer the opportunity. The general public is optimistic as to the country's future, believing that the progress of industry and business generally will continue upward despite the fact that there are some particular branches of business that are not prospering. It is probably just as well, therefore, that restraint is imposed, as another period of speculation such as we had in the spring would put market prices in a perilous position and would eventually result later in another break with tremendous losses.

Toronto Trading Dull With Changes Small

TORONTO, July 27. — (Canadian Press). — The morning session of the Toronto Stock Exchange remained mostly dull and active, with little fluctuation in prices. International Nickel, the feature of the market for the past few days, again was the most important issue on the list, making a gain of 2¾ to sell at 95¾, with the heaviest trading on the market. Brasillian light and power, with very few sales slackened half a point to 64½, and Zimmerknit ⅛ to 19, while Abitibi increased two to 55. Massey-Harris preferred, selling at 108½ made a gain of 1¾. Oils and Breweries were slightly active on curb section, but losses and gains were only fractional.

Mine Prices Fluctuate With Trend Uncertain

TORONTO, Ont., July 27 (Canadian Press). — Trading remained unchanged at the Toronto Mining Exchange during the morning session. Ajax Oil, after reaching a high of 65, gradually sank to 58, and closed at noon with a loss of seven points. Area rose 1¼ to 42, Goodfish 1¼ to 49½, and Howey Gold ⅛ to 96½. Hollinger sustained a loss of forty to 10.50, Barry Hollinger 5½ to 46, and Teck Hughes 10 to 9.50. Tough Oakes Burnside showed an increase of 1¾ to 22, and Noranda gained 45 to sell at 55.90. Big Missouri at 36½ was up ½, and Hudson Bay stretched five to 18.40.

Corn Trade Is Active Wheat Opens Weak

CHICAGO, July 27 (Canadian Press). — Active trading and higher prices formed the rule in the corn market to-day during the early dealings. An enlarged eastern demand for corn available for prompt shipment helped to lift values in the corn market. Opening at ⅝c off to ¼c up, corn soon scored a sharp general advance. Wheat and oats were easy, with wheat starting ¼c to ⅝c lower, but afterward recovered.

Opening prices were: Wheat, July 121, September 123¾. Corn, July 109¾ September 96. Oats, July 47, September 40¼.

Stock Prices Continue To Advance In New York

NEW YORK, July 27.—(Canadian Press).—The recovery in stock prices made further progress to-day under the influence of favorable trade news and an ample supply of call money. Early gains of one to seven points were distributed over a broad list with the Motors, Coppers, Rubbers, and Airplanes giving the best demonstrations of group strength. Several weak spots developed during session but they failed to stem the upward surge of prices. Banks called $5,000,000 in loans, but there was no strain on call money, which renewed unchanged at 5½ per cent.

The resumption of pool operations in radio sent that stock up seven points, Eastman Kodak advanced nearly six to a new high record at 190¾ on buying influenced by the reported development of color photography with amateur motion picture machines. Wright Aeronautical also soared six points and Curtiss Airplane, American Smelting, International Nickel, American Express, and A. M. Byers sold three and four points higher. Oils responded to stiffening gasoline prices. Coppers were under accumulation on reports of large current earnings.

Market Opinion On Various Issues

MONTREAL, July 27.—A slightly more active market was noted yesterday accompanied by a firming up in price of a number of the recent leaders. International Nickel was in excellent demand and sold up to above 94, representing a gain of over two points; the issue, however, reacted slightly before the close. On a semi-official announcement of the terms of the purchase of Laurentide Power by Shawinigan, Canada Power and Paper Common eased off to 34½.

The strength in International Nickel bears out what has recently been maintained. The majority of traders in New York are of the belief that the stock is too high in the nineties and have sold the stock short. They are now finding themselves in an uncomfortable position and now and again a covering movement develops which causes the price to advance. The move-up yesterday is attributed to this factor. Should a strong market develop suddenly, there is a possibility of Canadians giving the American shorts a bad trimming.

All things considered, the market still invites considerable caution by its action. Stocks are not moving up as a unit and many of the recent advances have been the result of either special developments or of pool activities. The majority of Montreal brokers still look with disfavor upon attempts by their customers to follow the highly speculative issues on their upturns.

As far as the writer can ascertain, the newsprint situation still hangs fire. Both Quebec and Ontario are striving to find ways to regulate out put and restrict wanton over-production. This seems difficult in view of the fact that a large number of new companies got limits during the post-war boom and built extensive plants with public moneys on which interest and dividends must be paid. These plants are generally lower-cost producers than their older competitors and can afford to slash prices if necessary. Final outcome of the Newsprint Association-Hearst litigation may be of some help, though it may drag in the courts for a long time.

It is understood that the softness of Lake of the Woods, the past few days is due to the liquidation of a fair-sized block of stock. The stock, a few weeks ago, reached a high of 80½, but the sharp run-up invited considerable profits taking and a reaction ensued. At present prices of 54½ the issue affords a return of very close to 6 per cent, and when one considers the Lake of the Wood Commons status as a high grade investment, its present earnings and future prospects, it is apparent the stock can sell considerably higher before discounting its merits.

Canadian Pacific Railway Common has figured prominently in the trading in New York recently on an advancing scale. The issue around present prices of 204 affords a return of close to 5 per cent. It is an acknowledged fact that his great transportation system, with its steamships, hotels, land and interests in many outstanding mining companies, will prosper as this country develops. Canada at the present time is on the threshold of great prosperity and consequently the future of Canadian Pacific Railway is exceptionally bright. A New York investment house recently compared the Canadian Pacific Railway with other great systems of the United States and it was apparent that the Canadian railway's stock was selling substantially under the shares of the other systems on a value basis. O.P.R.'s equity in Consolidated Mining and Smelting and other promising enterprises is an important factor that should not be lost sight of.

MINING BRIEFS

Further news of the cutting of the Goodfish ore body comes from the north. It is said that on the 600-foot level, the workings are just breaking into the ore. Regarding the vein on the 300-foot level, which was cut a few days ago, the report states that it is 30 feet wide and shows some of the best values yet found in the mine.

Newbec is reported to have commenced drilling from the surface at a point about 200 feet east of the shaft so as to cut the ore at about the 150-foot horizon. Additional drilling, the report continues, will be done further to the east along the line of strike when the present hole is completed. It is said that the management intends deepening the shaft to 150 feet.

Following an extensive examination of 16 claims in Hess and Harty Townships, in the Sudbury mining area, the Capital Rouyn management have decided to take over the properties, decided to take over the properties, and were formerly owned by S. C. Stirling of Timmins. Surface stripping has exposed an outcrop over 30 feet wide, and three assays averaged $8.70 in copped, etc. The outcrop is said to have been traced for about 1,000 feet. On Monday, July 30th, ten men will start work on the properties under the new management. This follows upon the announcement that shaft sinking is about to start at the company's Quebec properties.

Drifting toward a section which formerly yielded some of the finest ore in the mine is being vigorously pushed at the 700-foot level of the Castle-Trethewey. This is 300 feet below that part of the rich section which was formerly worked and while it is possible that the 700-foot level is a little too deep to duplicate results at the 400, it will carry exploration into favorable zones eastward. No new discoveries of any great importances have been reported recently. Production is about as usual.

The shaft at the Ore Grande Mines, operating in the central Manitoba field, was recently completed to the 800-foot level. This is working pretty close to the schedule laid out for himself by Mine Superintendent M. S. Donald, when he estimated some time ago that he would reach this depth. It is expected that from 30 to 90 feet of crosscutting will be required to intersect the vein on this level. On the way down between the 400 and 500 foot levels a new vein was cut. This was between 2 and 2½ feet wide, said to be well mineralized on both foot and handing walls. The formation at depth is said to be continued very good and the shaft was in clerlie a long way down.

Good progress is being made in sinking the shaft from the 1,500 foot level to 2,000 feet at the Sylvanite. It is reported that the working are now at about 1,850 feet and about six weeks will be required to complete the job. Levels are to be established at 1,625, 1,750, 1,875 and 2,000 feet. Present plans are to first open up the 1,750 and 2,000 foot levels and use them to to a greater or less extent as haulage ways. Development of the 1,625 and 1,875 will come later. The coming fall should give considerable information as to the Sylvanite ore bodies and vein systems at depth. On the 1,500-foot level, a crosscut is now being run to pick up the south vein. This body was cut at the 1,375 and developed a better than average grade of ore.

It is unofficially reported that Amulet broke into a good grade of ore on the 150-foot level. Drifting is now said to be going on.

MALCOLM STOBIE, DIRECTOR OF SISCOE GOLD MINES

At a meeting of Siscoe Gold Mines, Limited, T. W. Anderson of Stobie, Forlong & Company, Limited, Montreal, and Malcolm Stobie of Stobie, Forlong & Company, Toronto, were elected to the board of directors.

Mr. Anderson is a member of the Montreal Curb Market, director of the Cartier Malartic Mines, Limited, and other mines.

Mr. Stobie is on the board of directors of a number of mining enterprises and is well known throughout Canadian mining circles.

Announcement was also made of the appointment of J. M. Forbes, M.E., of Ottawa, as consulting engineer of the company, and W. A. Hooton of the Southwestern Engineering Company of Los Angeles as resident engineer on the property.

LAKE SHORE'S WESTWARD DEVELOPMENTS GROWING IN MAGNITUDE

Lake Shore Mines in two crosscuts at 1,600 feet depth about 800 feet from the Teck-Hughes line has exposed widths of 30 to 40 feet in ore, averaging high grade and comparing with the dimensions of Teck-Hughes ore at about the same horizon. The two crosscuts are 100 feet apart and a third one will be cut another 100 feet along. This was in No. 2 vein. Lake Shore found widths up to 40 feet at the 800 foot horizon in the western workings and indications are that this enormous bulge will persist at least for 800 feet vertical, although workings at 1,200 and 1,400 feet have still some way to go before getting into this ground. The new ore body between No. 1 and No. 2 veins found some little time ago is opening up well. Some 50 feet length of 6 feet width showing $60 to $70 a ton. This vein may be related to No. 2 vein.

The new crusher has been installed at the 1,500 foot level and the new shaft is completed down to 1,000 feet.

Lake Shore may be expected further to multiply the ration of physical assets to its stock of which there is only $2,000,000.

NORANDA REMAINS CANADIAN

Despite heavy American buying and large decrease in small Canadian shareholders' holdings, majority ownership of Noranda stays in Canada by good margin, says The Northern Miner. At June 30th the ratio, as shown in stock records, was two and one-half shares in Canada to one in the United States. In the first two weeks of July, American buying predominated, but only slightly. During the course of the last few days Canadian buying appears to have been slightly larger. The June-end records show a drip in individual shareholdings from 9,000 to 6,000; they have since started to come up again.

TRUTH VERSUS ERROR

There are four or five passages in the New Testament, where the term "priesthood" or "priests" is used, and in every instance, the term is applied to every member of the "Church." Christ the Prophet and Priest, for all men, is the end of the prophetic office and of the priesthood. To adopt into the Christian Church a ritualistic priesthood after the pattern of the Levitical, is nothing else but an attempt to sew together again the veil, which the everblessed God had Himself rent in twain; and also to abolish the chief feature of the New Dispensation, that is, the proclamation—"There is now no respect of persons with God"; for now all have access by one Spirit unto the Father. Gal. 3, 28; Eph. 2, 18. The word "Church" used here does not mean an ecclesiastical organization, but simply an assembly of the children of God, wherever they may be found.

WANTS BOAT TRIP THROUGH SYSTEM

Toronto Lady Would Like To Tour Trent On Regular Steamers.

The following enquiry just received at the Chamber of Commerce, Peterborough, suggests the completion of the Severn Division of the Trent Waterway, and the inauguration of passenger boat service through the Trent Waterway. The enquiry comes from Toronto, but, with proper advertising, thousands from nearby adjacent states could be induced to take the boat trip. This is another incentive, points out the Peterborough Chamber of Commerce, to Trent Municipalities, to work for the completion of the Severn Division of the waterway:

"I have heard much about the beauty of the Trent Waterways, and have been wondering if one could have a continuous trip through the waterways as a holiday trip. I have your descriptive booklet, and although that gives all the principal lakes, rivers, cities, etc., I could not decide that there was a boat that one could make the trip through the whole waterway, or if one could change from boat to boat at different points and thus make the trip. A friend and I want to do what we can of this trip in September and would consider it a great favor if you would advise us."

ENDS LONG TOUR ON TRENT SYSTEM

Schenectady Man Has Been Down Atlantic Coast and Up Mississippi.

The following interesting letter has just been received by the Trent Waterway Association, Peterborough, is indicative of, first, the desire of a great many boat owners to cruise in these delightful, protected waters; Secondly, of the necessity of Canadian advertising to fully acquaint the greatest number with the attractiveness of the district.

Racine, Wis.,
July 24, 1928.

Tren Waterway Development Assoc., Peterborough Canada.

Gentlemen.—Pleast advise me cost of the 12 charts and guide book for navigating the Trent Waterway. I have a private yacht, 42 feet long, registered in U. S. and I wish to return to New York that way, having come down the Atlantic coast, around to New Orleans, up the Mississippi and Illoinois Rivers to Lake Michigan to this point, where I will await you reply. Should formal permission be necessary, will you please send it if possible.

Following is the description:

Name, Evelyn K II; Owner, E. K. Alexander; Home port, Schnectady, N.Y.; U. S. Register No. K. 16161; Length, 42 feet; Beam, 10 feet, 6 ins.; Draft, 3 feet.

Please address: E. K. Alexander, 917 St. Patrick street, Racine Wis.

OLD GREATNESS OF PORT HOPE IS FORGOTTEN

Harbor Once Greatly Used Is Now Practically Deserted.

WAS LUMBER CENTRE.

Hundreds of Men Earned Living On Docks and Ships 40 Years Ago.

PORT HOPE, July 27—As far as a harbor is concerned, Port Hope is but a shadow of departed greatness. Once a bustling hive of industry, with many vessels claiming this as their home port, the harbor now only shows a few ripples cast up by swift-running launches which ply their trade with United States.

On nights when Lake Ontario was swept by gales, this was a much-desired haven, and many ships owned Port Hope as their home harbor. But that was away back in 1881. It was prosperous then, with fine ships from every part of the lake using its facilities. Lumber was the big freight, but there was enough other merchandise to keep many hulls busy in its transportation.

Hundreds of willing hands were employed at the docks unloading these cars and loading the vessels, in fact, the docks were the main source of employment for the men of Port Hope. The Port Hope Sanitary Company, McCarthy Lace or Mathews Gravity plants were unheard of in Port Hope in those days, and the Nicholson File was practically the only industry in town, then operating on a small scale. Thus, the youth of Port Hope looked to the docks for employment, and usually found it, as there was always lots of work to be done there.

Schooners and sloops of all shapes and sizes were tied up along all sides of the harbor and along that side of the harbor which runs along the east side of the Mathews Conveyor plant. The depth of water along that side of the harbor at the present time is not sufficient to float a toy boat, but back in the "eighteen eightyies" the pride of many a sailor's heart cast anchor along that shore. The sands on which the Mathews Conveyor factory now stands, was once washed by the waters of Lake Ontario, which extended as far back as the old Sculthorpe elevator.

Four Ships Left.

Two schooners and two sloops comprise the only sailing vessels now operating on Lake Ontario, mariners state. All of them trade at Kingston. The schooner "Lyman M.. Davis," is owned by Captain Daryaw, of Kingston, and the schooner "Julia B. Merrill," owned by W. H. Peacock and Co., is still used in the coal-carrying trade. The two sloops are owned by Captains George and Arthur Sudds, of Simcoe sland, near Kingston.

Captain Peacock bought the "Julia B. Merrill" in Napanee, eight years ago and has made many trips from Oswego to Port Hope, carrying cargoes of coal. However, in conversation with Captain Peacock, The Daily Times was informed that the "Julia B. Merrill" no longer carries coal for W. H. Peacock and Company, as they find it cheaper to buy coal by rail. Captain Peacock stated that they could get coal here by boat all right, but they could not find men to unload it.

Port Hope harbor, once the pride of Ontario, and a mecca for mariners, has fallen into a state of dilapidation, admits The Port Hope Times. The beacon lighthouse, which guided hundreds of vessels to safety, has toppled over into the lake, the end of the east pier has crumpled away, and the west breakwater is entirely gone. The west pier is rapidly following suit.

POST'S BED BUG POISON.

Post's Bed Bug Poison is composed of carbolic acid, Methyl Hydrate and Corrosive sublimate. When this preparation is used according to directions, it is sure death to bed bugs, cockroaches and insects of all descriptions. Two or three applications are all that is necessary, but as it is very poisonous, this preparation should be kept out of reach of children.

BOY'S BODY FOUND IN WATERLOO LAKE

Nine Year Old Lad Loses Life While Wading Alone.

WATERLOON, July 27.—The body of Ernest Neudoerffer, Jr., 9-year-old son of Rev. E. Neudoerffer, registrar of Waterloo College, was found yesterday afternoon in four feet of water in Silver Lake, Waterloo Park. The lad and three other companions had been wading there in the morning, and at noon he stayed in the water when his friends left for home.

Nobody apparently, saw him drown and it was not until his father missed him some time later that an alarm was raised, and dragging operations were commenced.

The drowning is particularly sad in view of the fact that the youngster was the only son of Rev. Mr. Neudoerffer, who, a year ago, lost his wife a short time after coming to Waterloo from India, where he had been engaged in missionary work for years. No inquest will be held.

BIRTH.

DELAHEY.—To Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Delahey (nee Viola Ferguson), at 189 Hunter Street, July 24th, a daughter (Shirley).

HARVEY—HOUN.

LAKEFIELD, July 27.—The marriage took place at Shelby, Ohio, on Saturday, July 21st, of Ada, daughter of Mrs. J. L. Houn to William C. Harvey of Lakewood, Ohio, son of Mrs. J. C. Harvey of Lakefield, Ontario. The bridal couple are spending their honeymoon at Lakefield and Stoney Lake and on their return will reside at 2022 Atkins avenue, Lakewood, Ohio.

Mr. Harvey is a Lakefield boy and has a large circle of friends in this vicinity who will be interested in the above event and will unite in heartiest good wishes to Mr. Harvey and his bride.

OBITUARY

FREDERICK McLENNAN.

VANCOUVER, B.C., July 27. — Frederick McLennan, pioneer of the days of '98, is dead here, aged 76.

MRS. GEORGE WINDREM.

MOUNT PLEASANT, July 27.—The funeral of Margaret Fitch, wife of the late George Windrem, took place from her late residence on the 12th concession of Cavan on Thursday afternoon and was largely attended by sorrowing friends and neighbors. The services were conducted at the house and graveside by the Rev. F. Carpenter, of the United church, who spoke very feelingly to the bereaved family, taking for his text Hebrews, 6-12.

Many floral tributes showing the esteem in which the late Mrs. Windrem was.

The pallbearers were Messrs. G Fitch, Wm. Windrem, F. Eggleton, and her three sons, Gilbert, Elmer and Walter.

GERALD B. DOULTON.

MONTREAL, July 27 (Canadian Press).—Gerald B. Doulton, assistant general manager of the Imperial Bank of Canada, died on a train travelling from Metis, Que., to Toronto. He had been suffering from bronchitis.

JOHN McCONKEY.

The funeral of the late John McConkey will take place on Saturday, July 28, at 2 p.m., from his late residence, Lot 19, Concession 11, of Smith Township, to Lakefield Cemetery, the Rev. Mr. Stark and the Rev. Mr. Cutton officiating.

ELINOR IRENE CARLETON.

The death took place in Peterborough on Thursday, July 26, of Elinor Irene Carleton, infant daughter of Dr. and Mrs. H. S. Carleton, of Norwood. The funeral took place to-day in Norwood.

FRANCIS KEENAN

The death of Francis Keenan occurred in St. Joseph's Hospital, Peterborough, Wednesday, night at 9:30.

Mr. Keenan was a highly respected resident of Hastings for over a half century. He was also a member of the Catholic Order of Foresters.

He was born in Picton, Prince Edward, County, June 1, 1847, then moving with his parents, to the Cobourg Road when three weeks old and when in his early twenties, moved to his present home.

The funeral is being held from his residence on Saturday morning, July 28, to the church of Our Lady of Mount Carmel, where Requiem High Mass will be held. Interment will be in the Roman Catholic Cemetery.

He leaves to mourn their loss, his widow, Mrs. Mary Keenan, and six children, Hugh of Everett, Washington; Anna and Mrs. J. A. Fisher, of Kitchener Ont., James of Windsor, Ont., Joanna and Harry, New York City.

Around the City

Defective wiring was the cause given for a run made by the fire department to 524 Murray street at 8.07 last night. Very little, if any damage resulted from the trouble. At. 1.17 this morning, the firemen were again called out, this time to the Canadian General Electric plant. An overheated motor was the cause of the alarm, chemicals being used to eliminate the danger.

OIL BARGE BURNS AFTER EXPLOSION

One Man Believed Fatally Hurt When Hurled Into Buffalo Harbor.

BUFFALO, July 27 (Canadian Press).—An explosion aboard the oil barge James F. Kale, owned by John E. Russel of Toronto, in Buffalo harbor early to-day, destroyed the boat and endangered shipping in the harbor. Nelson H. Farsteen of Toronto, who was blown overboard, was believed to be fatally injured, and another man was missing.

Accompanied by a tug the barge arrived last night. The tug managed to get away after the explosion. Flaming Oil on the water drove fire boast off, leaving several oilers and freighters in danger for more than an hour. The loss is estimated at $50,000.

BIRTH

SHAW.— To Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Shaw (nee Isabel Thomasin), at Nicholls Hospital, on Thursday, July 26 a.m. Both doing well.

IN MEMORIAM.

THOMPSON. — In loving memory of my dear husband, Richard H. Thompson, who departed this life July 28, 1927.
Sleep on, dear husband, thy work is o'er.
Thy willing hands will toil no more;
God thought it best, I will not complain,
But hope some day to meet again.
—Ever remembered by Wife and Family.

THOMPSON. — In loving memory of my dear father, Richard H. Thompson, who died July 28, 1927.
As I loved him, so I miss him,
In my memory he is dear;
Loved, remembered, longed for always,
Bringing many a silent tear.

REV. GORDON LANG IS NEW ARCHBISHOP

INVESTMENTS SHOW ONTARIO PROSPEROUS

FARMERS NO LONGER PLACE SPARE FUNDS IN MORTGAGES BUYING GOOD BONDS INSTEAD

Telephone, Radio, and Automobile in Common Use on Farms.

CONDITIONS BETTER.

Social and Financial Status of Rural Residents Steadily Improving.

TORONTO, July 28—It is no longer safe to assume that the old homestead is covered by a mortgage. The well-known painting entitled "The Mortgage," depicting a hard-working farmer and his sad-faced wife watching completion of foreclosure papers is not quite so typical of rural Ontario as it used to be. The better-endowed farmer, who invariably put out his surplus funds on mortgage to his neighbors, is buying bonds and other securities. At the same time, saving deposits in rural Canada have increased.

The rural telephone is everywhere. Increasing numbers of farms are being served with hydro. The radio is in common use. Motor cars have increased the farmer's travelling radius many times over. There are worse places in which to live than old Ontario right now. Notwithstanding the vagaries of seasons or the effect of periodic depressions, the social and financial condition of rural Ontario is steadily improving, it is disclosed by a survey made from the Department of Agriculture, results of which are summarized in the annual report of the Department, issued yesterday.

Questionnaire Sent

"A questionnaire was sent to the local representatives of the province," Hon. John S. Martin explains, in his preface to the report, "asking for information as to the number of farm mortgages held, where held and the rate of interest. Information was also asked as to the amount of money on deposit in rural banks and the forms of investment favored by the farmer, also the amount used for home improvement or labor-saving equipment.

"Comparative information was naturally sought on these points to determine how present conditions compare with those of five or ten years ago. It was recognized that specific figures would be difficult to obtain, but at the same time it was felt that by conferring with local registrars, local bank managers and other leading citizens, who are in close touch with such matters in rural communities, much useful and reliable information might be obatined.

"On the question of farm mortgages, 18 reports suggest a slight decrease, 9 suggest a slight increase, and the remainder indicate no particular change. Examination of the records of one county in Eastern Ontario revealed that in 1922, 158 mortgages were applied and only 134 discharged, while in 1927 there were 106 applied and 113 discharged. The percentage of mortgages of $1,000 and under had increased from 40 to 48.

One township in this county showed 50 per cent of the landowners carrying mortgages. Another registry office division reports a total of 217 farm mortgages in 1926, the smallest number in ten years, the highest having been 324 in 1920. Mortgages in 1926 aggregated $259,529, as against a maximum of nearly $1,500,000 on other occasions.

"Reports indicate that the old-time practice of investing surplus savings in farm mortgages is now rapidly disappearing 'Very few farmers now lend money on farm mortgages,' is the report from one county, which is repeated from many other sections. This is not due, apparently, to any feeling of lack of security as far as farm mortgages are concerned, but rather to the greater convenience of bonds, which were a new field opened up to the farmer by the educational processes of the Victory loan campaigns. The Agricultural Development Board, under the Ontario Government, provides financial accomodation all over the province, and is generally being taken advantage of because of the absence of local funds.

"As to the amount of money on deposit in banks, opinion was fairly unanimous that there had been an increase, especially over five years ago. This increase was variously estimated at 10 to 30 per cent. The fact that the increase is not very much larger is evidently due to the changing practice of the farmer in the matter of investment.One bank manager said: 'The savings bank is now only a place to keep funds until sufficient have accumulated to enable the owner to invest in securities. This is a contrast with the practice of some 10 years or so ago, when it was not unusual for a prosperous farmer to have as much as $10,000 on deposit.

An Age of Investment

"In the words of another bank manager, 'this is an age of investment, both in town and country. Hundreds of thousands of dollars from the country have been placed

HICKMAN'S ATTORNEYS ARGUE FOR NEW TRIAL.

LOS ANGELES, July 28.—The State Supreme Court yesterday was reviewing a ninety-seven page brief filed by William Edward Hickman's attorneys. The petition for a rehearing of Hickman's case sets forth ten points of law on which error is claimed.

The court will give a decision on the petition within ten days. If the rehearing is not granted, the attorneys indicated they would take the case to the United States Supreme Court.

FRENCH TEAM FAILS TO TAKE OLYMPIC OATH

Quarrel Between Official and Gatekeeper Cause of Last Minute Refusal.

MAY QUIT GAMES.

This Course Would Be Unfair To Athletes, French Spokesman Declares.

AMSTERDAM, July 28 (Canadian Press).—France's Olympic team withdrew from to-day's opening parade at the last minute as a result of a row with a gatekeeper begun yesterday, and there was a threat of their quitting actual competition. The Dutch authorities, through the general Olympic secretary, immediately issued a statement saying that the French withdrawal was caused by the weather.

It was learned, however, that the action was a result of an encounter yesterday in which one of the French Olympic officials was struck by a Dutch gatekeeper who had refused him admittance. The committee's failure to discharge him is said to have caused the withdrawal to-day.

The question was raised whether the French athletes who missed taking the Olympic oath by not attending the inaugural could compete in the games. M. Reichel issued a formal statement and said the French Ambassador would be consulted for the decision reached. He added, however, that it was unlikely the team would be withdrawn as that would be unfair to the athletes.

Opened By Prince.

AMSTERDAM, Holland, July 28 (Canadian Press).—The ninth Olympiad of the modern era was opened this afternoon by Prince Consort Henry of the Netherlands, on behalf of Queen Wilhelmina.

Athletes of forty-seven countries, a record in Olympic history, filed before this Mecklenburg Duke upon whom, in the Queen's absence, fell the honor of representing the ancient royal house of Orange-Nassau.

Presenting a colorful picture in variegated sport costumes, the cream of the world's athletes stood at attention as the historic national anthem "Wilhelmus Van Nassaen" was struck up by the Royal Military and Marine Band, and sung by a massed chorus of 1,200 voices.

No sooner was the royal party seated than the historic march of the nations into and around the stadium began. They then formed in the centre and listened to an address by J. T. Debisser, former Minister of Fine Arts, reviewing the Greek idea of Olympic competition and admonishing the contestants to conduct themselves according to the old Greek ideal of friendly and sportsmanlike rivalry.

Canada was fifth in the procession, two blocks behind the Australians. The athletes of the Dominion were given a wonderful reception as they marched three abreast in 35 rows. Completing the first round, the Canadians joined with the Finnish athletes, then moved straight to the Royal tribunes.

FOILED PURSUIT.

NEW YORK, July 28.—Celebrating the two hundred and fiftieth robbery this year of the McAn chain of shoe stores, a bandit entered one of the establishments the other day and ordered the manager to remove his trousers. After looting the till, he dropped the trousers at the door and walked out. Before the manager had dressed and rushed to the door, the thief was gone.

WOULD BUILD NEW ELEVATOR FOR STORAGE AT PRESCOTT

Land in Montreal Harbor To Become Too Valuable For Purpose.

RAIL HAUL CHEAP.

Elevators Now at Montreal Could Be Used Solely For Transfer To Ships.

MONTREAL, July 28.—Development of the new lake terminal port of Prescott in co-ordination with the grain handling facilities of the port of Montreal is one of the plans now being considered by officials interested both in the Prescott development and the terminal project contemplated here.

The growth of business in the port of Montreal will, it is figured in 20 years or less cause the space for elevator expansion to become more valuable for other purposes than for the storage of grain. The land adjoining the water front may be needed for docks or other port facilities or industrial purposes.

In consequence it has been suggested that additional storage elevators, instead of being constructed at Montreal, should be built at Prescott, with the elevators in Montreal devoted more essentially to the transfer of grain to the ships. The distance between the two ports is 118 miles, and the level or downgrade from Prescott to Montreal would make the handling of grain by rail economically feasible as well as the further development of water carriage of this commodity.

While the present plans for Prescott contemplate only one elevator, more are likely to be constructed if the idea of co-ordinated development of the two ports is given effect. Engineers at a conference at Ottawa this week determined the initial layout at Prescott and plans will now be prepared so that tenders may be invited for the elevator and other projects which are in contemplation.

BUTTER SELLS AT 42 TO-DAY

Eggs Are 36 and 38 Cents—Chickens Drop Towards Close.

RASPBERRIES 17.

A trio of adorable little Scotch collies drew a crowd at the farmers' market this morning. They were pure-bred little fellows with pointed faces and soft eyes and were offered at $4 apiece.

Butter was priced at 42 to 45 cents a pound, and eggs at 36 to 38 cents a dozen. Chickens were sold at 40 cents on an opening market and offered for 35 cents a pound later on.

New potatoes were 35 cents a peck, string beans sold at 25 cents for four quarts, and green peas were three quarts for the same price or 30 cents a quart, shelled.

Red raspberries were 17 cents a quart box, and cherries were 10 cents with 6-quart baskets at $1.00. Black currants and blueberries were 20 cents a quart.

Tomatoes were 25 cents in a well filled quart box; cucumbers were a dime apiece; carrots, beets and onions were a nickel a bunch.

TWO MEN SHOT BY STOREKEEPER

Druggist Finds Them in Store Shortly After He Had Closed.

MONTREAL(July 28 (Sanadian Press).—Perve Rousseau and Ferdinand Hetu were shot and seriously wounded early this morning by Wilfred Gagnon when he found them in his drug store shortly after he had closed it for the night. One of the men dropped on the spot when Gagnon opened fire and the other was arrested when he appeared at a hospital for treatment.

THE WEATHER

Another heavy rain came last night The total was .53, or a little over one-half inch. The total for the month is now 3 inches and 3/100. Three inches is the average July rainfall, so this month has not been unduly wet, at least as far as the amount that has fallen, although showers have been more frequent than usual. In many parts of Ontario, and particularly west of Toronto, the rainfall has been excessive, in many places twice what we have had, and in a few sections, three times our rainfall. Lowest temperature last night 63 degrees; highest point yesterday, 74 degrees.—W.P.

TORONTO TOURISTS TRAVEL WITH BUNGALOW ON WHEELS

Cretonne Curtains Included in "Fixings" of Complete Motor Home.

TEN PERONS IN PARTY.

Women and Children Use Trailer While Men Sleep in Tent.

A complete little bungalow on a trailer roused the curiosity of the passers-by at the corner of Charlotte and Aylmer Streets shortly after noon to-day. R. Yates and a party of ten travelling from Toronto to Loon Lake had a trailer on the back of one of the two cars, and it was this that caused so much comment.

Complete even to cretonne curtains on the window, it is fitted up like a little house, with electric lights, screened windows, and a refrigerator which holds ten pounds of ice.

At night supports are placed on the ground and the sides opened out, which makes sleeping room for four people, two on each side. One of the party said not to forget that also two children sleep on the floor. By day everything is stowed away in this compartment, and as one looks in he is impressed by all the items of comfort that they are carrying—a Coleman gasoline stove, Coleman lights, mattresses and cushions galore. They have everything that is necessary for an expedition of this description.

When fitted up as sleeping quarters this serves as the ladies' boudoir by night, while the hardier males sleep in a tent. Complete copper screening all around is an item of comfort that they told The Examiner was very much appreciated.

On the roof of this travelling bungalow is carried a boat 14 by 3 feet, powered by a high speed outboard motor, which is carried inside of the house while en route. The equipment of the trailer was built in Stratford. A two weeks' trip is planned, and all were very enthusiastic over the success of their comfortable mode of travel.

Ford Rubber Plantation Ship Leaves Detroit; Will Set Up Base On 6,000,000 Acre Tract

DETROIT, July 28. — The motor ship Lake Ormoc of the Ford Motor Company left Detroit yesterday, bound on her 5,700-mile journey to Santarem, Brazil, loaded with supplies, machinery and personnel equipment for first operations on the prospective rubber plantation of the company.

The Diesel-powered Lake Ormoc follows on the heels of the tow ship Lake Fargo, which set out July 11. The ship was loaded to draft capacity for passage through the Welland Canal and the Canadian locks.

Both ships were to dock at New York long enough to complete their cargoes and are to meet at Para. From Para the ships will proceed up the Amazon and Tapajos Rivers to Santarem, a river port 100 miles north of the northern apex of the Ford plantation.

The plantation is estimated at between 4,500,000 and 6,000,000 acres and is diamond shaped.

The Tapajos River, presumbably navigable for seagoing vessels to a point about midway of the plantation, forms the northwestern boundary of the Ford property.

The immense acreage is one of the most productive areas of Brazil.

FOUR YOUTHS DIE IN CRASH

Speedboat Runs Into Side of Large Steamer in Lake Michigan.

STEERING GEAR FAILS.

HOLLAND, Mich., July 28 (Canadian Press).—Four Holland youths were killed and two companions were suffering from injuries to-day as a result of a collision last night between a speedboat in which they were riding and the passenger steamer "City of Holland."

The dead are: Paul Landwehr, 21, son of a Holland millionaire furnace manufacturer; John C. Nystrom, 14; Earl Van Lente, 18, and Jim Arends, 32, all of Holland.

Witnesses said the speed boat had circled the steamer several times when its steering gear gave way and it crashed head on into the whirling paddle blades of the steamer. The two young men injured were thrown clear, but four were trapped and either killed or drowned. Their bodies have not been recovered.

VOLCANO ERUPTS AFTER BAD 'QUAKE

People Flee From Vicinity of Mayon, As New Crater Opens.

MANILA, July 28. — (Canadian Press).—Shooting forth tons of lava hundreds of feet into the air, Mayon, an active volcano in Albany province resumed violent erruption this morning after the entire surrounding countryside had been rocked by a series of earthquakes.

A few hours later, as the flow of lava showed no signs of abating, and the earthquakes and rumblings continued, the few persons remaining in the town of Libog, near the foot of the mountain, fled to safety. This was said to be the worst eruption of Mayon since 1900. A new crater was opened about 500 feet from the summit of the montain this morning.

JUNE REPORTS ARE AVERAGE

Latest Stock Shipments For District Are Released To-day.

CALF SHIPMENT HEAVY.

The stock shipments for the month of June, according to the latest reports were about average. From the various shipping points the following numbers were sent. Hastings, 48 cattle, 393 calves and 55 sheep and lambs; Indian River, 14 cattle, 32 calves, and 9 sheep and lambs; Keene, 22 cattle, 74 calves and 14 shep and lambs; Lakefield 35 cattle, 235 calves and 27 sheep and lambs; Norwood, 57 cattle, 385 calves and 61 sheep and lambs; and Peterborough shipped 25 cattle.

From these figures it will be seen that Norwood leads throughout the list for the three divisions. The shipment of calves appears heavy, but J. B. Nelson, local agricultural representative, says that this is characteristic of the locality.

Norwood also leads in the shipment of good cattle, 15 classed under this head. Other shipping points figures are as follows in this classification: Hastings 10, Indian River 3, Keene 8, Lakefield 6, Peterborough 12.

For good lambs the figures are: Hastings 29, Indian River 7, Keene 7, Lakefield 24, and Norwood 49. The classification of good sheep from the shipping points is: Hastings 14, Indian River 2, eene 5, Lakefield 3, and Norwood 8.

Ex-Maid Wills Savings To Mrs. Harriman; Pensioner For 18 Years, She Leaves $6,000

NEW YORK, July 28. — Maggie A. Fleming, who for eighteen years was personal maid to Mrs. Oliver Harriman, left her life savings of about $6,000 to Mrs. Harriman by her will, filed in the Surrogate's Court yesterday.

Seventeen years ago the maid left Mrs. Harriman because of poor health and advancing age and went to live in the Home of the Sisters of Divine Compassion in White Plains. While there she had a White Plains lawyer draw up a will in the best legal form bequeathing her entire estate to her former employer. She left the White Plains institution in 1926 and went to St. Joseph's Home for the Aged in West Fifteenth Street, where she died on May 17 last, just after Mrs. Harriman sailed for Europe for the summer.

Mrs. Harriman first engaged the maid thirty-five years ago, according to an affidavit filed by Miss Frances O'Connor of Beverley, Bogert & Co. , who represented Mrs. Harriman.

"Mrs. Harriman always remembered her faithful maid," Miss O'Connor said yesterday. "She regularly sent her sums of money, and on holidays she always prepared baskets of delicacies and presents, and made it a point to see her frequently. Mrs. Harriman had no idea that she had a penny to her name, and was greatly surprised and moved when she heard that Mrs. Fleming left her savings to her.

"Just before Mrs. Harriman sailed for Europe in May she learned that Mrs. Fleming was dying. She must have been between 70 and 75 years old and had anticipated her death by the purchase of a grave in the Gate of Heaven Cemetery, but Mrs. Harriman arranged for the funeral and burial."

NEW BUICK CAR IS INTRODUCED AT G. M. PLANT

Models For 1929 Exhibited To Party of Newspaper Men.

BEAUTIFUL COLORS.

R. S. McLaughlin Tells of Corporations Achievements and Expansion in Past Year.

A body of newspaper men, numbering approximately fifty persons and representative of all the important papers of Central Ontario were the guests of the General Motors Corporation of Canada on Friday in Oshawa, at the premier public showing of the 1929 Buick models.

The party in charge of M. D. Bergey, of Campbell Ewald Limited) met at 10.30 a.m. at the King Edward Hotel, Toronto, from where they travelled in chartered buses to Oshawa. There the party assembled in the new General Motors' convention hall and were guests of the corporation at a very fine banquet. During this banquet, betwee courses, the lights were slowly dimmed and all eyes were turned toward the stage, where the curtains parted and under a fascinating lighting effect appeared the first of the new models, a big six brougham in two shades of green. Applause broke forth from the gathering to show their appreciation of this beautiful new model. The banquet was then resumed at the close of which R. S. McLaughlin, of the General Motors spoke to the gathering in a very informal manner.

"I have asked you, as representatives of the public, to be the first of the public body to see the new Buick. On Thursday, 675 dealers gathered in this hall to have the new models presented to them. It is a great pleasure to have you here to see the cars and inspect them in detail and have a ride on our own track to experience their performance.

"Our finest expectations have been more than realized in this new model and General Motors this year has set some wonderful records. This year we have produced 105,420 cars. Our greatest month ran 13,506 and our greatest shipment 17,773 cars. Nine hundred and seventy cars were produced in one day under regular conditions. The largest number on the payroll was 8,018, representing a total wage of $11,300,000. We have paid to the government $7,000,000 in duties, etc., and $2,175,000 in excise taxes.

"This only represent a small part of what General Motors is doing for Canada. There is a tremendous purchase of materials, and cars manufactured in Canada are increasing and plans are being made for faster developments. The Walkerville plant is on the eve of great developments and it is necessary to enlarge it as it was not possible to manufacture everything here. The trucks are now being built in that plant. At the Fisher Body Plant in Walkerville are being made truck bodies, cabs and busses.

New Plant in West

"The Northwest, we feel, is entitled to some benefits as the people there are big customers and they have been neglected. Now it is economically correct to go there and manufacture, so we located in Regina, where more than $1,000,000 has been spent. We hope to visit the plant on December 1, and see the first car off the line. There is room for expansion there in the Chevrolet and Pontiac.

"The new model is 'handsome is as handsome does' and you will agree with me it is a handsome car. We have been making an honest effort to make an honest and attractive car.

"This is its 21st birthday and we are turning out something worth while. We are blazing a new path and are turning out models that will not be produced by any other manufacturer this year, but will probably be copied next year. The public is demanding new models and we are here to serve them.

"The General Motors organization is at its best, a happy and contented organization who will do anything

FORMER PREMIER SAILS FOR CANADA

Ramsay MacDonald and Three Daughters Leaving England To-day.

LONDON, July 28 (Canadian Press).—Accompanied by his daughters, Ishbel, Joan, and Sheila, Ramsay Macdonald, former Prime Minister, left London for Southampton this morning to take the Empress of France to Canada for "a holiday full of sun and leisure," as he expressed it.

IN POLICE COURT

A "shiner" of generous proportions and particularly roseate hue, failed to have any bearing upon the court's decision when exhibited by William Prior to prove that he was not the one and only aggressor in a fight with one Nick Altonchick, a fellow-employee on a railroad gang. Nick had laid a charge of assault against Prior, and as there was some doubt as to where Prior had acquired the shiner, Nick, with his bona fide "injured lamp," was given the verdict. Prior's share was a one-day jail sentence imposed by Magistrate O. A. Langley.

Frank Vidore was remanded until Tuesday, August 31, on a serious charge.

PLANE ROUTES AROUND LAKES

Will Be Operated In Conjunction With Railways of Two Countries.

AROUND UPPER LAKES.

NEW YORK, July 28 (Canadian Press).—Airplane routes working in connection with the railways are to be established between Minneapolis, St. Paul, and Winnipeg, between Minneapolis, St. Paul, and Detroit, by way of Duluth, and between Chicago and Duluth, if negotiations which are under way between the New York Central Railroad, the Canadian Pacific, the St. Paul and Sault, Ste. Marie, the Boeing Airways Corporation and the Mid-Plane Transit Company, of Minneapolis, are successful. Another route is also planned between Detroit and Duluth across Lake Michigan, but it will not be established until later.

YOUTH IS KILLED WHILE DEMONSTRATING PROWESS.

MONTREAL, Que., July 28.—(Canadian Press).—An effort to show his prowess in swinging along an electric wire between two standards yesterday cost Francois Richards, 21, his life. He touched an uncovered spot on the electric wire and fell to the ground twenty feet below, suffering serious head and internal injuries, which brought about his death three hours later.

HIS MAJESTY APPROVES OF NOMINATION OF DR LANG TO HIGH POSITION IN CHURCH

Archbishop of York Will Succeed Rt. Rev. Randall Thomas Davidson.

63 YEARS OLD.

Like Predecessors He Comes From a Scottish Presbyterian Manse.

LONDON, July 28 (Canadian Press Cable).—His Majesty has approved the nomination of Most Rev. Cosmo Gordon Lang, Archbishop of York, to succeed Rt. Rev. Randall Thomas Davidson, Archbishop of Canterbury, when Dr. Davidson retires from the Canterbury see on November 12. It was announced officially last night.

The translation of Rev. Dr. Lang from York to Canterbury was generally anticipated ever since Dr. Davidson first intimated his resignation was impending. Indeed, in view of the peculiar circumstances in which the Church of England finds itself in Britain at present, it is difficult to imagine any other selection. The Archbishop of York has been Dr. Davidson's devoted adjutant in his long efforts to guide the Established Church aright in devising new formulas for public worship.

For exactly twenty years Dr. Lang has been head of the northern ecclesiastical province. Like Dr. Davidson, he comes from a Scottish Presbyterian manse, and his aged father, then an ex-moderator of the Scottish Church, was present at his enthronement in Yorkminster.

Perhaps the most active years of Dr. Lang, who is now 63 years old, were when as Bishop of Stepney, he was the present Bishop of London's deputy in overseeing the spiritual life of the east end of London. Possibly the responsibilities of his high office at York have moderated somewhat his earlier enthusiasms; nevertheless, he is still one of the most forceful debaters in the House of Lords, and one of the best platform speakers in the country.

Archbishop Lang has always maintained an intense interest in Canada. Twenty years ago he was offered the Archbishopric of Montreal. If he was not the first man of note who asserted that Canada was a nation, he was certainly one of the first who was convinced that she was.

ACCIDENTAL DEATH PORT PERRY VERDICT

VERNON MILLS' AUTOMOBILE STRUCK BRIDGE ON JULY 11 IS CORONER'S JURY VERDICT

Oshawa Man Met Death As Result of Injuries Sustained Then.

MODERATE SPEED.

No Evidence Was Submitted, Indicating He Contemplated Suicide.

PORT PERRY, July 28.—The only evidence to be brought before the resumed inquest into the death of Vernon Mills of Oshawa and Lindsay whose body was found floating face downwards in Cedar Creek near here early in the morning of July 11, is the report of the Provincial analyst, and evidence of the sister of the deceased, Miss Helen Mills.

After listening to the evidence the jury brought in the following verdict: "This jury is of the unanimous opinion that Vernon M. Mills came to his death on the Oshawa road near Cedar Creek on the morning of July 11, 1928, as the result of injuries sustained by him when his auto struck the bridge and that the conditions were entirely accidental."

Miss Mills was the last person, so far as is known, to see Mills alive. As she only saw him go into Mills' home at Lindsay and come out again and was not speaking with him, it is not thought that she will be able to throw much light on the happening. While the report of the Provincial analyst will be made to the coroner at the resumed inquest, it is understood on good authority that no traces of poison were found in the organs of the body whatever.

Mills was driving along towards the Cedar Creek bridge, when his car, edging slowly off the road for some distance, collided with the edge of the bridge. The rate at which the car was travelling, as indicated by the marks on the car and bridge, was very moderate, not over 15 or 18 miles an hour. The theory is that his foot having slipped off the accelerator as he dosed off to sleep just after rounding a curve he struck the abutment and the resultant impact was transmitted through his feet, limbs and spinal column to the sphenoid bone causing a fracture and profuse internal bleeding.

Dazed and suffocating, Mills is thought to have climbed out of his car and leaning on the rail of the bridge for support, fallen over into the creek. While letters found in Mills' desk at the Phillips Glass Co. in Oshawa, clearly indicated that he contemplated suicide and while the police have in their possession code telegrams as evidence that Mills had been playing the races at a loss, these have not been brought in as evidence and it is not expected in view of the finding of the analyst that they will be. Mills was in a very difficult financial position, relatively speaking, and it was learned that he had four separate loans against his car around $400 each, the car being valued at a little over $800. Also he has somewhere around $12,000 insurance. He was in debt to the extent of nearly $1,400 and had given up hopes of making any further loans which he badly needed.

Campbellford

(Examiner Staff Correspondence).

CAMPBELLFORD, July 28.—Mrs. A. E. Montgomery, Turlosk, California, was the guest of Mrs. Alex. Walkinshaw, Seymour East, this week. Mrs. Montgomery is returning to the south by a devious route and calling on friends as she travels.

Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Fogg and daughter, Chicago, Ill., are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Dunk, Crow Bay.

Mr. and Mrs. Bertram Dawson, Batavia, N.Y., are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Walkinshaw.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Puttman and daughter, Georgina, of West Huntingdon, are visiting friends in Seymour East.

Another record fish has been reported from Crow River. This time it is a pickerel weighing nine pounds and measuring thirty-one inches. The fish was landed yesterday by George Boehn, of Erie, Pa., and is at present on the ice at his camp at Crow Bay. Mr. Boehn was accompanied by Louis Balkey, also of Erie. Yesterday afternoon the fishermen had not decided whether to eat the mighty monster of the deep or to put it in the hands of a taxidermist in order that they might have proof to substantiate their fish story.

Jowett, wife of the Canadian Pacific Railway station agent of Rockaglen, Sask., suffered a severe shock when lightning struck the station during a violent electrical storm during last night. The premises were badly damaged by the bolt, the roof being ripped from the building, windows broken and parts of the interior charred.

S. S. MONTROSE COLLIDES COAL STEAMER ROSE CASTLE

Vessels Collide Yesterday in St. Lawrence River—Nobody Hurt.

IN CHARGE OF PILOTS.

Collier Outward Bound Has To Be Beached Near Scene of Collision.

MONTREAL, Que., July 28.—(Canadian Prss).—The S. S. Montrose of the Canadian Pacific Steamships, arrived in port here yesterday, two hours late, after a collision with the Collier Rose Castle of the Dominion Coal Company, off Cap De La Madeline in the River St. Lawrence. The Rose Castle is lying on a bank of sand and stones where she was beached shortly after the collision occurred. Officials of the Canadian Pacific said last night that despite the damage sustained it is probable the Montrose will be able to sail as scheduled for Cherbourg and Southampton next week.

The collision occurred at 1.20 yesterday morning. Both ships were in charge of pilots; Fortunat Hamelin being on the bridge of the Montrose and Ferdinand Marchand on that of the Rose Castle.

The night was clear and the channel at the point of impact fairly wide. Each vessel was approaching the Cap De La Madeleine curve, the Montrose being on the Becancour upper and destined to alter her course slightly to port. The Rose Castle, which was outward bound from Montreal to Sydney, N.S., after discharging 11,000 tons of coal, had to change her course to starboard in order to round the curve.

Hold Investigation

It was claimed that both ships held their own sides of the channel until the curve was reached. Subsequent movement of either craft will explain in the prescence of the Dominion Wreck Commissioner, who will probably hold an investigation next week. The collision took place port to port, the bow of the Montrose was torn and her stern twisted and the Rose Castle was badly holed which made it neccessary for her to be beached. No casualties were reported on either vessel.

The stem of the Montrose is badly bent to starboard from the peak to the waterline, and a small gash shows several feet below the anchor house-pipe, which itself was twisted out of shape. The liner's anchor was torn from its cable and now lies in the 'tween decks of the Rose Castle. Repairs to the bow of the Montrose were started tonight.

The Rose Castle is reported to be badly holed abaft the engine room. Although she is down by the stern, and partially full of water, the large coal boat is safely ashore on a bank of sand and stones, with the salvage vessel, Lord Strathcona, standing by.

Official Statement

The following official statement was given out by the Canadian Pacific: "The S. S. Montrose, while approaching Cop De La Madeline, was in collision with the S. S. Rose Castle, the latter vessel being bound down the river. Some stem damage was done to the Montrose, consisting of a light duckling of the stem and damage to the house-pipe. Damage to the Rose Castle unknown, she anchored off Becancour Buoy 33-S. The collision occurred at 1.20 a.m. yesterday morning, Friday, July 27th. The weather was fine and clear."

NEWS IN BRIEF

DIES IN RESCUE ATTEMPT.

LONDON, Ont., July 28.—Russell B. (Verne) Plewes, 31 years old, 3 Dalton street, this city, was drowned at 6 o'clock last night at Port Stanley after he had gone to the rescue of an 11 year old girl.

Plewes was sitting on the bench with his wife and four young children when he heard the girl's screams for help. Doffing part of his clothing he went into the lake and succeeded in reaching the girl, and then handed the child to two other rescuers who had swam out to him. A moment later Plewes disappeared, and he had drowned before aid could reach him.

BULL KILLS FARMER.

PAKENHAM, July 28.—An enraged bull to-day gored to death Allan Hunt, 27 year old farmer of this district. Hunt and his older brother were attempting to drive the animal into a chute preparatory to shipping, when the bull swung on the young farmer, bunted him to the ground, and then tramped and gored him.

BURNED TO DEATH.

KIRKLAND LAKE, July 28.—Sound asleep after working for 37 straight hours, Real Cousineau, aged 19, whose home was in Hull, Que., was burned to death when fire destroyed a log shack at the property of the Granada Rouyn Company, according to information reaching here yesterday. A fire had been started in a stove filled with old paper and near which was a can containing coal oil.

CONDITION IMPROVED.

MONTREAL, Que., July 28 (Canadian Press).—Improvement is still being noted in the condition of Sir Vincent Meredith, Bart., chairman of the Board of Directors of the Bank of Montreal, it was announced yesterday.

BIG ISSUES WILL BE PUSHED BY STRESEMAN AT SIGNING

German Minister Plans To Discuss Rhineland Freedom and Reparations.

WANTS ARMIES OUT.

Will Also Seek To Have Total of Germany's War Debt Fixed.

CARLSBAD, July 28. — Foreign Minister Stresemann will go to Paris at the end of August to meet Secretary Kellogg and affix Germany's signature to the multilateral anti-war compact.

He will also—which may prove far more important—confer there with Premier Poincare, and, of course, with Foreign Minister Briand, too.

Out of these parleys the Germans hope will come complete Allied evacuation of the Rhineland and ultimately a definite totalization of the Reich's reparations debt.

The above information comes from a high official source close to the German Minister, and is absolutely authoritative. In the same quarter it is gathered that the Berlin Government foresees only one important obstacle to the withdrawal of the French troops from the Rhine and that is a demand by M. Poincare for direct financial compensations from Germany. Any such demand, it is understood, would be rejected by the Reich.

Bond Mobilization Feasible.

Mobilization of German railroad bonds or other securities on behalf of France to enable the French Treasury to meet its American obligations now is feasible, according to the German view, only as an integral part of the general reparational settlement that would fix the total Germany must pay war creditors at a sum commensurate with her economic capacity.

In other words, Dr. Stresemann does not intend to let M. Poincare at this late date resurrect the Thoiry plan which the French Premier himself killed two years ago. In the interval the price Germany is ready to pay for Rhenish liberation has depreciated very considerably and indeed sings daily as the period of occupation grows shorter.

Dr. Stresemann said on Thursday that he had just received an official invitation to attend the ceremony of signing the Kellogg treaty at Paris, and was communicating his acceptance forthwith. He expressed his gratification at renewing his acquaintance with Mr. Kellogg, whose guest he had been in the American Embassy in London on the occasion of the adoption of the Dawes plan.

Meanwhile the German Foreign Minister expects to remain at Carlsbad to complete his cure and keep away from politics—as much as it is possible for one of his active temperament. Already, although he is still under the doctor's orders, and by no means restored to normal health, he provides work for three secretaries. A diplomatic courier circulates between Carlsbad and Berlin. Dr. Stresemann has dictated replies to several hundred letters of congratulation on his recovery, despite the frequent fatigue and loss of appetite which continue to oppress him.

The Anschluss Agitation.

He resolutely declines to discuss current affairs for publication, but lets it be known that he is quite willing to talk with Dr. Benes, the Czechoslovak Foreign Minister, or any other qualified representative of the Little Entente about the Anschluss agitation precipitated by the Austro-German speeches delivered at the Vienna Saengerbund Congress.

Over the telephone it was learned from Prague yesterday afternoon that Dr. Benes is not likely to come here, as he is reluctant to consult Dr. Stresemann until the latter's recovery is complete. Reports from M. Titelescu, Chief of the Rumanian Foreign Office, was planning to confer with Dr. Stresemann here apparently lack confirmation.

What Dr. Stresemann would tell Dr. Benes if he should ask about the Anschluss issue can be assumed to be about as follows.

The German Government cannot be held responsible for the utterance of Herr Loebe, President of the Reichstag, or anybody else not a member of that Government; the Reich has no intention of violating the peace treaties by arbitrarily undertaking Austro-German unification against the wishes of the Entente Powers; no new policy for realisation of Anschluss has been adopted either at Berlin or Vienna.

REPORTS OF CAMP ARE GIVEN LEAGUE

(Examiner Correspondence)

NORHAM, July 28.—Miss Ida Clare and Miss Mildred Curtis gave reports at the July meeting of the Norham Young People's League of the week which they spent at the Summer Camp at Oak Lake Park.

Miss Clare outlined the routine of camp life and told of the matters and results of the week spent with about one hundred and forty people. She sketched the work taken up in the Bible Study group under the direction of the Rev. J. G. McKee, and in the Missionary Methods and Program group under direction of Miss Rena Mills.

She told of the twilight dramatizations the fellowship meeting, the fireside talks given by the Rev. W. H. Rowland, and the urge for love and service this gained.

Miss Mitchell dwelt on the morning worship and the addresses of the Rev. R. M. Patterson, which combined with well-planned music and literature to form a very impressive and helpful meeting. She told of the work gone over in the Young People's Period of Worship conducted by the Rev. Mr. Neal, of Wooler. Miss Curtis reviewed the athletic contests and events, telling of the afternoon devoted to aquatic sports; canoe races, row boat races, swimming races and volley-ball in the water. On this afternoon Cobourg Presbytery ranked second.

In the softball tournament between the various Presbyteries, Cobourg ranked second to Oshawa. The sports of the camp did much to break the ice, as it were, between the students, to form and mould true friendships and to increase the enjoyment of the week.

One afternoon was devoted to a Treasure Hunt, which proved very enjoyable, but ludicrous. The treasure was a skull which had been unearthed a short time previous.

Many of the students were conducted throuhg the old and new Albert College, of Belleville.

The time passed very rapidly and pleasantly, but through all the fun and gaiety of the week a deeper spirit prevailed, and this is the spirit which will make the week precious to both students and leaders.

Miss Lulu Mitchell conducted the Worship Period of the program and the scriptural lesson was read by Edna Evans.

The Rev. W. R. Clare spoke for a few minutes about the lesson, taking for theme, "If we follow after the light as Jesus followed after the light, we shall be in fellowship one with another.

The business part of the meeting was briefly conducted, and refreshments were served at the close.

RAIN INTERFERES WITH S.S. PICNIC

CAMPBELLFORD, July 28.—To be or not to be was the question which the committee in charge of the annual picnic of St. John's United Church was called upon to decide yesterday morning when thunder, lightning and rain combined to form a gloomy prospect for an afternoon outing by the lake. The affair had been advertised for several weeks, but when the rain came it was cancelled. Later there were signs of fair weather, and the picnic was again declared on. Arrangements were made for the merrymakers to meet at the church at one o'clock, but at noon the weather seemed to forecast more rain, and there was not as large a crowd as had been anticipated.

More than one hundred members of the congregation and Sunday School met at the church and journeyed by motor to the picnic grounds on the lake shore drive at Presqu'Ile. Softball and other sports constituted the list of sports that made the afternoon a success. Lunch was served under the trees in a grove a few yards from the beach. Some of the older members remained for the evening dancing at the pavilion, but the majority of the picnickers returned shortly after the sun had disappeared below the western horizon of the lake.

All the sports were of an impromptu nature. In the softball game, the Bear Cats won from the Giants by a tremendous score. The reason for this was given as the excessive weight which the Giants carried. Many of the members of the congregation were surprised to learn that men could thread a needle with much more despatch than women. This was the case in the contest which resulted in several of the men being required to thread a needle in order that they and their lady partners would not be the last to finish. Bathing was another sport which was greatly enjoyed by the younger members of the crowd. Older people regretted the fact that they either did not possess or had forgotten to bring bathing suits. The lake was calm and the bathing ideal.

General Motors Research cylinder head gives Pontiac amazing Ease and Smoothness

PONTIAC is the only six in its price-class in which you obtain the effortless, velvety smoothness of the famous G-M-R Cylinder Head . . because it is the only six in its price-class which has the advantage of association with General Motors.

This new type of cylinder-head, giving high-compression performance without the use of special fuels, is a development of the General Motors Research Laboratories. Here, in the largest and most modern laboratories of their kind in the world, skilled engineers sought a means of producing greater ease and smoothness.

The result was the G-M-R Cylinder Head, and after the most conclusive tests in the Laboratories and on the General Motors Proving Ground, it has been incorporated in the New Series Pontiac Six.

The G-M-R Cylinder Head is but one of many vital contributions which General Motors has made to Pontiac . . including the rich beauty and luxury of Body by Fisher . . the new automatic fuel-pump (replacing vacuum tank) . . the comfort of Lovejoy Shock Absorbers . . and scores of other advancements.

TRUSTING IN JESUS

BY VERY REV. J. J. S. PERowne, D.D.,
Dean of Peterborough, Eng.

Matt. xi. 25-30.—"I thank Thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, because Thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes. Even so, Father: for so it seemed good in Thy sight. All things are delivered unto Me of My Father: and no man knoweth the Son, but the Father; neither knoweth any man the Father, save the Son, and he to whomsoever the Son will reveal Him. Come unto Me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take My yoke upon you, and learn of Me, for I am meek and lowly in heart: and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For My yoke is easy, and My burden is light."

OUR LORD JESUS CHRIST comes before us in this remarkable passage, giving utterance both to His sorrow and to His joy amidst the encouragements and discouragements of His ministry. The passage, or at least the former part of it is found also in St. Luke's Gospel, although there it stands in a somewhat different connection. There we are told that Jesus uttered the words on the return of the Seventy from their mission; there it is said that He rejoiced in spirit when He heard the tidings of their success, and expressed His joy in these memorable words, "I thank Thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, that Thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes." Here, on the other hand, they stand in close connection with thoughts of sadness and feelings of depression. He is thinking of His work in the world, and of the way in which it has been received. Culture, fashion, intellect, religious profession, all that is most powerful and all that is most worldly-wise, and all that is most esteemed among men disregards and rejects Him. He is, at the moment, absolutely alone. The voice of His forerunner is silent; the Baptist is languishing in his prison, and even he seems to have misunderstood the Christ to whom he was to bear witness. Jesus has wrought many mighty works in the cities of His native land, but who would listen to so humble a teacher? If he had come as a philosopher or as a rabbi, if he had come with some pretension to the wisdom of the schools or as some teacher of asceticism clothed in sackcloth garb, and with the austere sanctity of a prophet, then they might have listened to Him; as it was they put Him on one side, and went one to his farm and the other to his merchandise; for what heed need the wise or the wealthy give to the Carpenter's Son? And what is the thought that sustains Him as He looks on the apparent failure of His mission? Wherein is His consolation in the midst of reflections such as these? It is that which marks all His ministry—absolute, unhesitating submission to His Father's will; His sorrow is turned into joy as He rests in that supreme will which governs all things, both in heaven and in earth, "I thank Thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, because Thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes. Even so, Father, for so it seemed good in Thy sight."

In the words I have chosen for my text, our Lord propounds, first of all, the two great laws of His kingdom, and then, as the Sovereign of that kingdom, He issues His gracious invitation. The first law is that which declares that the revelation of God can only be received by the child-like heart, and the second is that God can only be known as He has been pleased to reveal Himself in His Son, Jesus Christ our Lord. The first law of God's kingdom, I say, is this, that God's revelation of Himself is made, not to man's pride, but to man's humility; not to the intellect, arrogantly asserting itself, but to the candid, unprejudiced, childlike temper, to the receptive spirit which is willing to accept the teaching of God; not to those "who are wise in their own eyes, and prudent in their own sight," but to those who have simple, unprejudiced minds—children crying for the light, and with no language but a cry; not to those who say, "We have the truth, and others have it not," but to those who long after wisdom, which they feel they have not, and search for it as for hid treasures; to those who, because they are poor shall be made rich, and because they hunger after righteousness shall be filled and our Lord rejoiced in spirit as He beheld the moral beauty of this Divine order whereby the hungry are filled with good things, whilst the rich are sent empty away. Christ our Lord did not rejoice because the wise and the prudent failed to understand His revelation. We know and we thank God for it, that some of the greatest in this world in intellect and in knowledge have also been the foremost and the truest of Christ's disciples; but Christ did rejoice in the thought that it was not by wisdom nor by prudence that man found out God. He rejoiced because He saw the humble and the contrite spirit cleaving to the dust under a sense of its own defilement and sin, lifted up to God, and filled with the light and peace of His Spirit; He rejoiced because he saw this righteous law, written in letters of light over the portals of His kingdom: "Except ye be converted and become as little children, ye shall in no wise enter therein."

But while I have been insisting that it is this Divine law, this Divine order of the world, which called forth our Lord's thankful acknowledgments, you will remind me that He does not here seem to speak of a law. He says, "Thou hast hidden." You will say, "Is not that an arbitrary act? Is it not plain that God has interfered to prevent certain persons from attaining a knowledge of salvation? I know there are those who would cut the knot of all difficulties by a bare reference to the sovereignty of God, but I cannot understand how such a sovereignty differs from the caprice of an arbitrary tyrant." I should be very sorry to suppose that the constitution of the world, of the moral government of the world, were not in the hands of supreme wisdom and love; and if you once admit this, I conceive it matters very little whether you attribute the facts and phenomena of life to the general course of God's providence, or whether you attribute them to the immediate operation of His fingers; it matters little whether you say, "God has done this," or whether you say "this happens as the consequence of the laws by which God governs the world." It matters little, for instance, whether you say, "God hardened Pharaoh's heart," or whether you say, "God has so constituted human nature that if a man persists in wilful rebellion against Him he most assuredly hardens his own heart." And so it matters very little whether you say, "God has hid these things from the wise and prudent," or whether you say, "The wise of understanding will not stoop to God's revelation, and, thinking themselves wiser than God, have drawn a veil over their own eyes, so that those things which pertain to their everlasting welfare are hid from their sight."

Here, then, we see the first law of Christ's kingdom. If any man will enter therein he must enter, not, indeed, by ignoring his intellect, but by putting his intellect in its right place, by doing under religious conditions exactly what men have found to be their true wisdom under physical conditions; not beginning with the assertion that the world ought to be this or ought to be that, and then bending facts to their theory, but sitting down reverently and considering what God would teach them by the facts that lie at their feet. If a man would become wise he must first be a fool that he may become wise. And so it is with God's revelation of Himself in Christ. Whether it be a revelation of Himself in nature, or whether it be a revelation of Himself in His written law, in both cases, it is true, we must receive the revelation as a little child—"Even so, Father, for so it seemed good in Thy sight." This is the first law of Christ's kingdom—"He who would enter therein must enter as a little child." And, brethren, would we have it otherwise? Would you have it left to the exercise of man's intellectual powers to find out God and determine the nature and the limits of revelation? Would you have it be a privilege of the great discoverer or of the wise philosopher to tell the world what they are to believe about God? I say nothing of the imperfections of the human mind or of the terrible moral perversions of the human heart which most cloud men's thoughts of God, and drive them, as it has driven them in all ages, to make God the creature of their own baseness, their own imperfection, their own sin. I say, would we rebel against this law of Christ's kingdom? Would we have, this honour put upon man's intellect and this the sign of its eminence and greatness—that it shall need no help from above; that religion, like philosophy, or art, or science, shall spring from the brain of man? Ah! my brethren, what then will become of the poor, the simple, and the suffering? What then will become of those who lack the intellectual capacity to grasp the high truths which arrogant and self-satisfied reason holds up? What would become of those vast crowds who plod along the dusty highways of the world, carrying each his weary burden of work, and sorrow, and toil? They cannot explore theories, they cannot study systems, they cannot construct theologies, they cannot follow elaborate proofs; they need the message of a Father's love, they want the sunshine which will stream in upon hearts and light up their daily lives; they need for their spiritual being, for its temptations, its struggles, its griefs, the same beneficent provision which is made for them in the world of nature. The sunshine and the rain are God's gifts to man by which he lives; they are not in man's power to summon or to destroy.

And now, what is the second law of Christ's kingdom? All that would know God can only know Him as He has revealed Himself in Jesus Christ. There is no other way; He is the perfect and absolute revelation of God. He is one with the Father in His Divine pre-existence, and one with us as having taken our nature in the Virgin's womb; all other revelations of God have been only fragments and syllables of truth; they waited for their completion and fulfilment in Him who was the Incarnate Word. In Christ there has been made, once for all, a perfect and final revelation, to which nothing can be added, and from which nothing can be taken away. And it is just this, brethren, which it is so necessary to insist upon: for men will accept anything but this. They will not accept it, because it rebukes their pride, and compels their submission. Christ, a teacher, came from God, like other teachers, that they will allow—not Christ the Eternal Light, who lighteth every man that cometh into the world. Christ, the beautiful and all but perfect, whose life may be gently criticised and whose death they profess to admire—not Christ the spotless Lamb, the sacrifice for human sin. Christ, the martyr, sealing with His blood the truths which He proclaimed—not Christ the victim and the Priest, through whom alone, man, guilty and sinful, can draw near to God. And yet this is a revelation which we are bound to proclaim. Christ came to manifest God in human flesh. Christ came by His precious blood-shedding to put away for ever human sin; Christ came to open Heaven to all believers; Christ came that, having accomplished man's redemption by His death, He might rise again from the grave the Lord of Life, and ascend into Heaven and live there for ever to plead man's cause with the Father. In Christ, God is manifested to man; through Christ, man can come near unto God.

These, then, are the two great laws of Christ's Kingdom; these that called forth the acknowledgment of our Lord in His communion with the Father, "I thank Thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, because Thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes. Even so, Father, for so it seemed good in Thy sight. All things are delivered unto Me of My Father: and no man knoweth the Son, but the Father; neither knoweth any man the Father, save the Son, and he to whomsoever the Son will reveal Him."

And, now, following on these two great laws of His kingdom, comes the gracious invitation, "Come unto Me all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." And what shall I say of these words, brethren? Shall I call them most human, or most Divine? Certainly they are most Divine. But these words into the mouth of an apostle, and then you will feel what I mean. Let the saintliest, purest, noblest, most loving, and most truly inspired of God's messengers to man, address you in words like these—let a St. Paul or a St. John say unto you, "Come unto me, and I will give you rest," and how many of you would listen to the invitation? Would you not recoil from the human teacher who gave you such a promise of rest? Would you not feel instinctively that it must be treacherous on his lips? You cannot trust man; you cannot find rest in man; none but God can say to you, unless in mockery, "Come unto me, and learn of me, and you shall find rest unto your souls." My brethren, if I were asked to point out one passage in the whole of the Gospel which should teach most plainly, which should bring home to the heart most consolingly, the precious truth of the divinity of Christ our Lord, I would choose this; and I would choose it not because of the sublime acknowledgment which it contains of the eternal righteousness of the Father, not because of the sublime witness which it bears to the perfect and intimate union between the Father and the Son, but because of the sublime invitation which falls from the lips of Him who speaks as man never spake, saying, "Come unto Me." I say these words are most truly Divine. He who utters them, utters them in the full consciousness that all things are delivered unto Him of the Father. I see here, God interpreting Himself; I see in these words the answer to all cavils against the righteousness of God; I see here the true expounding of the law of His kingdom. But I say, also, these words are most assuredly human. This invitation, so full of Divine power and grace, is also full of human tenderness and pity; so soothing in their matchless sympathy, so precious to the poor, struggling, fainting, human heart is every syllable of that invitation, "Come unto Me." Why? "Not because I am the Lord of angels and of men; not because I have all power in heaven and in earth; not because resistance to Me is vain, and submission to Me is necessary; but come unto Me, for I am meek and lowly of heart, and ye shall find rest unto your souls." Blessed words! Sweet as the dews of heaven, precious as the droppings of a summer cloud! for they fall from human lips, they are the words of One who has wept as you have wept, and whose heart has been wrung with anguish as your heart has been wrung with anguish, He who bids you bring to Him the burden of your sorrow and the burden of your sin, and gives you His precious promise of rest, is One who has taken upon Him your nature, with all its varied experience. There is not a grief that He has not felt, there is not a load beneath which He has not stooped, there is not a temptation which He has not met with. He knows your frame, and He knows it, not only with the omniscience of God, but He knows it with all the loving, tender sympathy of a human friend. He has borne our griefs, He has carried our sorrows, He has suffered being tempted; He can be touched with the feeling of our infirmities, for they are His.

Mark the largeness of the invitation: "Come unto Me all ye that labour." That invitation is wide as the world and large as the ages. That invitation reaches to every phase of human life; for where is the life that does not confess its weariness and long for rest? Where is the man, when he has left the haven of his childhood behind him and has launched upon the stormy ocean of life, who does not feel the weariness of the uneasy tossing of the billows, and long for rest? Is not the sadness and the weariness of life the constant complaint even of those whom we might be disposed to think most free from the troubles of life? Men who have been admired and flattered by the world, men who have been happy in their families and beloved and applauded by their friends, cannot repress the cry which goes up from their hearts, as they look upon life and think how weary a burden it is. "I have run nearly to the length of my tether," writes one; "I have grown old, and apathetic, and stupid. All I care for in the way of personal enjoyment is quiet ease, with nothing to do, nothing to think of. My only glance is backward; there is so little before me, that I would rather not look that way."

But that invitation is yet more. It might be large, it might be wide—and yet it might not be winning; the accents might be kingly, but they might be cold and awful, and we might fear to obey them; but here is the blessedness of Christ's invitation—not only its freedom, but the certainty that none can be rejected, none can be misunderstood. "Come unto Me, for I am meek and lowly of heart." Who shall fear to come unto One who thus invites them? It is not so with any child of man. Take your burdens to men, and what will you find? If you are poor, you will find no sympathy, or, at best, but an awkward sympathy from the rich; for they have never been in your place, and therefore, with the best intentions, they cannot fully understand you. If you are in pain a few commonplace words of condolence is all that you can expect from those who are in health; if you are unhappy, if you are miserable, and tell your grief, you may have the shame of feeling that you have bared your bosom to one who could not enter into your feelings; if you are tormented by doubt, where should you carry your perplexity? Your religious friends will suspect you or turn away from you, or perhaps call the anguish of your heart "infidelity." If you are bowed down by a sense of guilt, to whom shall you tell your tale of shame? To the hard judges who in their Pharisaic righteousness can make no allowance for the power of temptation? You shrink from a human judge; you know that you must have either his merciless condemnation or what is equally bad, his indulgent allowance. Where should you go? Sin lies like a burden upon you, crushing, heart-withering; and you exclaim in the bitterness of your soul, "My iniquities are more in number than the hairs of my head, and my heart has failed me." Who shall help you? You dare not go to God—He is a judge of purer eyes than to behold iniquity; He is a Spirit dwelling in light unapproachable. Who shall bring God near to you? Who shall take away your fear? Man is like yourself—hard in judgment and weak to help; but Christ says, "Come unto Me. I am the perfect revelation of God, come unto Me." Then it is that, repulsed on all sides, lonely and helpless, we turn to Him whose mighty heart understands and feels all; then it is that the soul hearing in the stillness that voice, which says, "Come unto Me," answers, "To Thee, Lord, will I come. Thou callest the weary and the heavy laden, and I am weary—weary with my sin, weary with the conflict of life, weary with my load of unbelief, weary with my temptations, weary with my struggles, weary with my fears, weary with my sorrows, weary with my despair, and I bring all to Thee; for Thou art meek and lowly of heart. I bring all to Thee, for Thou hast promised me rest. Lord, I come to Thee, give rest to my soul." And that rest Christ does give. His promise is not a deceitful promise; He does take away our weariness of life, He does fill the heart with His own mighty peace. But He does so, dear friends, remember, on one condition. Oh, do not let us in wilfulness hide that condition from ourselves. Christ says, "I will give you rest," but He says also, "Take My yoke upon you, and learn of Me." Yes, brethren, it is a yoke and it is a burden which Christ asks us to take up. It is a yoke to lay a restraint upon our natural inclinations, to mortify self, to crucify the flesh with its affections and lusts, to watch over our desires, to curb our unruly, peevish, and irritable tempers; it is a yoke, when we are naturally fretful, when we are naturally proud and overbearing, to give up our own will and our own way, when we are naturally bent upon having our own will and following our own way. It is a yoke to have to say to ourselves day by day, "I will follow a Master who bore for me shame and spitting, the crown of thorns, and the cross, and I must forego my own selfish desires, and my own will, and my own pleasures, and I must be as He was; it is a burden to feel the flesh lusting against the spirit, and to know that when we would do good evil is present with us. Not a day can pass without a conflict which, alas! too often brings to us defeat. It is a burden to find by painful experience that when the spirit is willing the flesh is weak; to kneel in prayer and to be chilled and weighed down in heart, instead of rising, as on eagles' wings, towards heaven. It is a burden to see our efforts baffled, our good evilly spoken of, our motives misunderstood, our character maligned; it is a burden to feel that after all we make but little progress ourselves, that we get but a very little nearer heaven, and that others seem little better for our words or for our example.

And yet this yoke is easy and this burden is light, and to have this yoke and this burden is to have the mind of Christ and of God; it is to be on the side of truth and purity and gentleness and goodness and love, in the great battle against wrong and wickedness and selfishness in every form. There is no deeper joy than the joy of self-sacrifice, the joy of self-conquest. Struggle? Yes. Pain? Yes. Weariness? Yes. But their triumph that no words can paint, victory beyond that of kings and of armies—a joy so Divine that it is a foretaste of heaven. This is Christ's yoke, this is Christ's burden. If we take up that yoke and that burden, we shall find that His blessed promise of rest will come to our souls. O, dear friends, He is speaking to you now, and is uttering His invitation now; He is here in the midst of this great congregation, here in the midst of this great city with all its eager, jostling crowds, with all its sin, its folly, its splendour, its crime. He stands, as He has stood for centuries, and still He says with that awful and piercing yet, withal, loving and tender voice—"Come unto Me." Oh, listen to His words, accept His invitation, and then you shall enter into His joy, you shall be made free with His blessed freedom, the burden which presseth upon you now shall be taken away, life shall no more be weariness—"you shall find rest unto your souls."

A PRAYER
For Contentment

O Almighty and most Merciful Lord God, Whose Divine Providence governs all things in Heaven and Earth, and Who hast taught us to know Thee to be our Father through Christ; Help us ever to believe that all our life and everything that happens to us is ordered by Thy Fatherly wisdom and mercy; and that all things, even sorrows, trials, and difficulties, will work together for our good in the end, if we live in Thy holy love and fear. Give us grace so to feel the many and great blessings with which our life is surrounded, and so to believe in Thy loving-kindness to us, that we may never give way to any weak or wicked repining or murmuring against anything which Thy providence shall order for us. Enable us, we humbly beseech Thee, to put away all unprofitable and idle thoughts and wishes, casting all our care upon Thee, knowing that Thou carest for us. Lord hear our prayer, for the sake of Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

STORIES FOR LITTLE PEOPLE

SAMUEL, or THE DISOBEDIENT LOOK
1 Sam. vi. 13; vii. 1 to end.
"(By M.B.)"

The Israelites in the field took the ark out of the cart, and placed it on the great stone, and they took the cart, and cut it up for wood for a sacrifice, and they killed the two cows and burned them as a sacrifice. They did this to show they were grateful to God who had made the cows bring the ark back.

The Philistines were much surprised at the wonderful thing that God had done, and they went back to their own land. Ought they not to have left off worshipping idols, when they saw how great the God of Israel was? Yes, they should have burned their idols when they got home, and only worshipped the true God. But they did go on worshipping idols, and God was angry with them for it.

And the Israelites did a thing that displeased God very much. They looked into the ark. God did not allow anybody to look into the ark. You know what there was inside the ark. The book of stone on which the ten commandments were written.

God is very angry when people dare to disobey him: so he made those Israelites fall very ill, and a great many of them died. Then they were afraid of keeping the ark in their city; and they sent messages to some other Israelites to come and fetch it: and they came and fetched it, and put it in the house of a man. This man lived upon a hill, and he and his son took care of the ark in one of the rooms of his house.

Do you know why the ark was not sent back to the tabernacle at Shiloh? The people of Shiloh had worshipped idols, and so God was angry and would not let the ark go back to Shiloh.

It was very kind of God to let their ark come again into the place where the Israelites lived.

* * * *

The Philistines, with heathen pride,
Have set the ark by Dagon's side,
Within their idol's temple walls:
The door they close,—
Lo! Dagon bows,
And on his face he falls.

In vain they set him up again;
He cannot near the ark remain!
Ah! see, he trembles where he stands,
Falls from his place,
With dire disgrace,
And breaks his head and hands.

CHILD

And are some children taught to pray
To such a god as fell that day?
My parents, in my babyhood,
Instructed me,
To bow the knee,
To Israel's mighty God.

All we like sheep have gone astray; we have turned every one to his own way; and the Lord hath laid on him the iniquity of us all.—Is. liii. 6.

This is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptation, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners; of whom I am chief.—1 Tim. i, 15.

Knowing that a man is not justified by the works of the law, but by the faith of Jesus Christ, even we have believed in Jesus Christ, that we might be justified by the faith of Christ, and not by the works of the law: for by the works of the law shall no flesh be justified.—Gal. ii, 16.

These things have I written unto you that believe on the name of the Son of God; that ye may know that ye have eternal life.—1 Jno. v, 13.

What iniquity have your fathers found in me, that they are gone far from me, and have walked after vanity, and are become vain? For my people have committed two evils; they have forsaken me the fountain of living waters, and hewed them out cisterns, broken cisterns, that can hold no water. Thine own wickedness shall correct thee, and thy backslidings shall reprove thee: know therefore and see that it is an evil thing and bitter, that thou hast forsaken the Lord thy God, and that my fear is not in thee, saith the Lord God of hosts.—Jer. ii, 5, 13, 19.

The Natural Man

"(By Robert C. Chapman)"

The religion of the Natural Man is made up of pride, ignorance, and a guilty conscience: these effectually keep the sinner far from God. Grace, on the contrary, moves us to draw near to God by the blood of Jesus. It was the obedience of faith that made Abel the acceptable worshipper.

The fairest things in the world's sight are the foulest in the sight of God; to wit, the world's Wisdom and the world's Religion.

To judge by the number of creeds in the world, its Religions are many; yet there are but two—man's Religion and God's. The former ever builds on the false righteousness of the flesh; the latter on the rock, Christ.

All the Religion of the Natural Man turns the Bible upside down: it begins with works, and then leads men to hope for mercy. Whereas the Bible begins with the pardon of sin, and then enjoins obedience.

Nadab and Abihu went up with Moses into the mount with God, yet afterwards perished while offering strange fire. Were natural men that profess Christ to be caught up into heaven, and sent down to earth again, they would be still but Nadabs and Abihus at enmity with God. The carnal mind must be crucified; it cannot be mended or improved.

The man who worships God without the new birth is a mocker of God, not a worshipper.

It is natural to the corrupt heart of man to deny its weakness and sinfulness, and to boast of its strength and righteousness.

If Adam in his state of uprightness could not uphold himself, how shall we, his corrupt seed, by native strength rise up out of our fall?

There are many stirrings of conscience in the Natural Man which are not grace, though often mistaken for it. Balaam, Saul, and many others, had such stirrings—conscience pulling one way and the heart another. Without grace there is no self-abhorrence, and therefore no looking to the blood of Christ. Where grace is, the soul desires deliverance from the power of sin as well as its punishment.

If you be not converted to God, you have not to be doing good works, but to learn that you can do none, and that you are to come empty to receive God's gift of eternal life by faith in Christ Jesus. Your best prayer for mercy is the true confession of your sin. Made alive in Christ, you are to bring forth fruit to God. That fruit will not be apples of Sodom or grapes of Gomorrah: such are all your good works in your natural state—your fruit will be from Jesus, the true and living Vine.

There is no difference: for all have sinned and come short of the glory of God.—Rom. iii, 22, 23.

NEWSPAPER HAS INSURED READERS

Recently Railroad Accident Cost One English Paper $250,000.

LONDON, July 25 (Canadian Press).—Following the disaster on the London & North-Eastern Railway at Darlington, when over a score of people lost their lives, one newspaper here of large circulation has proclaimed widely that it paid out $250,000 in insurance to the families of some of those who were killed. This was under the scheme whereby registered readers of the paper were automatically insured against accidents. Insurance for readers against casualties has become an immense factor recently in circulation-getting among the larger British newspapers.

The Executive Council of the National Union of Journalists has carried a resolution protesting against "the attitude of certain newspapers in endeavoring to make advertising capital from the payments of insurance on readers who were killed in the train smash at Darlington." The resolution followed a protest from the Northern District Council of the Union, representing 1,200 working journalists in the North of England, which declared that the treatment of section of the press "subordinates the the news of the disaster by a certain best traditions of journalism to the aims of circulation advertisement." The Protestants regarded "the means employed by certain papers on this occasion as being both derogatory to the profession of journalism and repugnant to a sense of common decency." Following these protests by journalists, but independently of them, the Hetton-le-Hole District Council, in whose area the disaster happened, have issued a protest on similar lines.

Philip findeth Nathaniel, and saith unto him, We have found him, of whom Moses in law, and the prophets did write, Jesus of Nazareth, the son of Joseph. And Nathaniel said unto him, Can there any good thing come out of Nazareth? Philip saith unto him, Come and see. Jesus saw Nathaniel coming to him, and saith of him, Behold an Israelite, in whom is no guile! Nathaniel saith unto him, Whence knowest thou me? Jesus answered and said unto him, Before that Philip called thee, when thou wast under the fig tree, I saw thee. Nathaniel answered and saith unto him, Rabbi, thou art the Son of God; thou art the King of Israel. Jno. i, 45-49.

LIGHTS ON VEHICLES.

It is announced from Toronto that Hon. Geo. S. Henry, Minister of Highways, has written to the high constables of the Province calling attention to the fact that the law stating that all vehicles must carry lights after dark must be observed.

Up to the present this measure has certainly not been carried out.

Although it has been in force since the autumn of last year, it is violated by many people in this part of the Province, and it probably will continue to be violated until enough offenders are fined to convince everybody that it is cheaper to comply with the law than to take a chance.

The people of Ontario have been given every chance to acquaint themselves with the requirements of the legislation, and there will be no reason to complain now should offenders find themselves in police court charged with failure to observe this particular section.

The trouble with many of our traffic laws is that the impression has been created that these measures have no teeth in them, with the result that a large percent age of people believe that they are quite safe in ignoring these regulations.

THE CHAMPIONSHIP BATTLE.

While a victory for Tom Heeney, the New Zealand challenger, would have been popular with most Canadians as an Empire win, there is satisfaction in the fact that he fought like a real Britisher and battled until the fight was stopped.

Just as there never was doubt of Tunney's superiority, there never was doubt of Heeney's gameness.

The battle has shown Tunney to be a better fighter than he has been given credit for, and just at present there is no one in sight who appears to have a chance to pluck the championship crown from the head of the "Fighting Marine."

But more important than that, the fight has also revealed the fact that the popularity of the fighting game is on the wane, and that the day of the two million dollar gate has passed.

The ace of promoters, Tex Rickard, has had to take a loss, and the chances are that it will be some time before he will guarantee fortunes for prize fighters to compete for.

As for the champion himself, it would occasion no surprise were he to retire.

He is an unusual titleholder, who does not greatly care for the game, except as a money-making enterprise, a man who mentally stands above all champions in the history of the ring, and Thursday's fight may on his own choice be his last.

ITS FAME IS SPREADING.

The Trent Canal continues to attract attention and to draw tourists to this part of Ontario.

The fact that three American vessels were in port here at one time yesterday shows that the reputation of the waterway is becoming widespread, while the space that is being devoted to the Trent in newspapers and magazines is another sign that its importance, especially from a tourist viewpoint, is being more and more recognized.

If members of Parliament read the Canadian newspapers and periodicals as faithfully as men in their positions should, it is difficult to see how they can fail to withdraw the opposition many of them have offered against the expenditure of any more money on the Trent Canal.

The Trent is on the map.

In the past seven or eight years, according to such an authority as Professor Goforth of McGill University, it has shown a larger passenger traffic than any canal in the Dominion.

Obviously, the completion of the Severn section would materially increase that traffic, for it is true, as the Toronto Globe puts it, that "as a contribution to Canada's attraction for tourists its value should appreciate yearly."

The canal must be finished, and it is the duty of the people of the district served by it to keep hammering on for its completion.

ASTOUNDING GROWTH OF PROSPERITY.

"Truly this country has much for which to be thankful. We often grumble and complain, and we magnify our problems. Yet the fact is that this land is a blessed one, a land of opportunity for the humblest and of shelter for the weakest; and instead of complaining we should daily thank Providence for the blessings showered upon us."—Ottawa Journal.

That is a little sermon that Canadians should take to heart.

As a people we are slow to recognize our luck in being citizens of such a country as Canada and quick to see advantages elsewhere that we overlook at our elbow.

This country is experiencing an astounding growth of prosperity, revealed by many signs that he who runs may read.

And it is true, as the Journal has pointed out, that while the period between 1900 and 1914 has been called Canada's "golden era," the progress made in those years was as nothing compared with our rate of progress now.

"Between 1900 and 1914 development of water power, for example, was comparatively trivial," says our Ottawa contemporary. "Our great pulp and paper industry was but in its infancy; our mines were undeveloped and yielding little; our trade but a bagatelle in comparison with to-day. In all of these fields, since 1920, growth has been all but marvellous. Our forests, to-day, are producing wealth beyond anything we dreamed of; our mines are among the richest in the world; power is our second greatest industry; our trade, railway traffic, bank deposits, revenues, insurance policies —everything that denote expansion and prosperity, both for the State and the individual—have grown with bewildering speed."

WHY NOT UNIFORM TRAFFIC RULES?

Those organizations which are working for development of the greater safety of motorists would confer upon all those who operate motor cars a real boon if they could manage to bring into effect a uniform code of traffic rules so that there would not be the slightest doubt on the part of drivers of what is demanded of them in the different communities which they visit or through which they pass.

Local traffic laws are being broken unwittingly day by day by motorists who are quite ignorant of their provisions and who may be conforming to practices acceptable in the towns or cities from which they come. There is really no way in which they may familiarize themselves with the regulations prevailing in the various municipalities through which they pass. For one thing, the "Stop" signs vary greatly in their location. In some cases, as in Brockville, they are placed on the roadway as well as on sign-posts at its side; elsewhere, they are given a different position. Similarly, a right-hand turn is permitted in some places and forbidden in others.

It is all most perplexing and constitutes a great trial to the motorist who is anxious to obey the law, whatever it may be. In the United States ten of them have now banded themselves together with the idea of formulating a uniform code of traffic rules and signals, and the movement is rapidly gaining in momentum. Ontario, Quebec and other Canadian Provinces will be lagging behind if they do not also take steps to correct a situation which inevitably increases the hazards of motoring by confusing drivers in a particularly exasperating manner.—Brockville Recorder and Times.

DIVIDENDS.

On the question of paying dividends there are undoubtedly two schools of sharply divided views. There are those who favor paying out most of a company's earnings in dividends and those who favor paying out as small an amount as possible. It is not unfair to designate the generous dividend policy in industrial companies as following the usual British practice and the policy of keeping the dividend rate low as the American practice. In Canada, we have companies of both sorts. It is not uncommon for a broker's letter or a column of financial gossip to recommend with bland inconsistence the stock of one company because the directors pursued a policy of "ploughing back" earnings, and the stock of another company because a generous dividend policy can be expected.

Someone remarked the other day that the Ford enterprises could never have been built up to their present size if there had been a large group of shareholders. Ford and his son, in recent years anyway, have only had to take out of the business what sufficed for their personal living expenses. Every dollar of profit over and above that small amount stayed in the business and in a very few years became a mighty pyramid of wealth. Had there been many shareholders, more extensive dividends would necessarily have been paid, and the constant drain on the company's resources would have slowed up the growth of the company. The Ford business grew as rapidly as it did because it was virtually a one-man practically synonymous. It was not so much the Ford Motor Company as Henry Ford, manufacturer of motor cars.

In a smaller way many Canadian companies have grown to large size because the directors have paid only moderate dividends, and have permitted profits to accumulate and provide funds for expansion, making constant borrowing unnecessary. Montreal Light, Heat and Power Cons., directed by Sir Herbert Holt, is probably the outstanding example of such a business. This is not an industrial, but rather a public utility company, assured of a steady yearly growth, but the example loses little force on that account.

The so-called Moore group of companies, on the other hand, comprising Wm. A. Rogers, American Sales Book, F. N. Burt Company and several others, are the outstanding examples of companies that always pay out a large proportion of profits in dividends. The policy has been successful, but would undoubtedly have been less successful were the companies less ably managed. In this case the reserve is provided by the management less than by dollars and cents invested in plant and bonds.

One cannot set any hard and fast rule as to what is the proper policy in regard to paying dividends. Generally speaking, however, directors should be as generous as possible in paying dividends after proper reserves have been built up. The larger the number of shareholders the greater will be the demand for this generous dividend policy.

On this continent directors, in declaring dividends, are restrained somewhat by the fact that the general public considers it as an indication of bad management when a company pays a smaller dividend in one year than it did in the last. Here again the British practice differs. Many large British companies pay small dividends during the year and wind up with a large final payment at the end of the company's fiscal year that may easily be much larger than all the smaller dividends put together. Mond Nickel Company, for instance, has just paid a four shilling final dividend, after paying out interim dividends of only one shilling, six pence. It is obvious that under a system of paying out as large a total dividend as the year's results warrant that the rate will fluctuate from year to year. But the British shareholder does not seem to worry.

It may be that the policy of conservatism in dividend payments on this continent, giving as it does stability in the annual payments, has led investors to expect dividends that never decline but only increase. But they would not take long to become educated to the British system of dividends that fluctuate with the earnings of the companies represented.—Financial Post.

TORONTO CATTLE

TORONTO, July 28. — With practically no change from last week in cattle prices, the market was well cleaned up in the closing session of everything offering in the week's run.

Plain common quality grass cattle were a little too conspicuous during the week, and shippers were again advised that it would be good policy to keep unfinished feeders on grass for a week or two longer before shipping them to market. While the poorer class of cattle were slower in moving, prices held fairly steady until all were cleared.

In the small meats, lambs weakened about 50c in the closing market and sheep were correspondingly easier.

Calves steady for choice veals.

Hogs firm all week, advancing 25c in the close.

Choice butcher steers and heifers, all weights in good demand. Choice baby beeves in strong market and wanted. Good market for stockers and feeders.

Milkers and springers in very slow market, and not wanted, unless of fancy quality.

Lambs a little easier at 12c to 15c tops.

Calves steady for choice quality, but easy for heavy roughs and grassers.

Hogs firm and 25c higher at $12.50 f.o.b. selects.

Choice butcher steers and heifers, all weights, in good demand at $10.75 to $11.75; fancy, $12.00; medium, $8.50 to $9.50.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., July 28 (Canadian Press). — A feature of the export grain trade here yesterday was the improved demand from the Continent for Manitoba grades of wheat for deferred shipment and sales of about one-quarters of a million bushels were made for October-November shipment from the port of Montreal, and in addition to this a few loads of oats were worked with the United Kingdom for nearby loading.

In the domestic market trade was quiet, and the only business of importance was sales of a few odd loads of No. 3 Northern wheat at 2¼c to 2½c per bushel over the Winnipeg July option, c.i.f. Montreal. The demand for car lots of grain was limited and prices were unchanged.

A moderate amount of business was done in butter at unchanged prices. The receipts were 2,305 packages.

The demand for cheese was of a limited character, but prices were steady. The receipts were 3,181 boxes.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, July 28 (Canadian Press). — Numerous corn traders yesterday emulated what Joseph did of old, accumulating the grain to provide against expected scarcity. Other traders, however, acted on belief of plentifulness of corn in the future. During the fluctuations which resulted, corn values in some cases went to the highest point since last April, but the extreme advance failed to hold.

Closing quotations on corn were nervous, ⅝c to 1⅝c net higher, with wheat 1c to ⅝c off, oats ¼c to 1c down, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 35c.

Upturns in corn prices began early, with trading active and with much notice being taken of the fact that eastern interests were buyers of corn available for prompt shipment. Prices paid for such corn were equal to $1.11 a bushel for No. 2 yellow, and were substantially above the current quotations for July delivery, as well as for above the price of September. Under these circumstances, sellers of corn future deliveries became scarce, and the market scored a quick advance all around, helped by talk about further export business in new crop corn and by announcement that vessel-room had been chartered for 265,000 bushels of corn to be loaded to-day for Georgian Bay, Canada.

On the other hand, arrivals of corn in Chicago yesterday were of liberal volume, 447 cars, and a fairly large amount of corn was being sold to go into store here. Besides, there were deliveries yesterday of as much as 594,000 bushels on Chicago July contracts, with heavy receipts of corn here to-day looked for, as well as on the first two days of next week, mostly to be delivered on July contracts.

Profit-taking sales on the part of many holders tended further to the late dealings, but demand increased again before the close.

In the wheat market, buying power was virtually confined to previous sellers. Meanwhile, receipts here were larger, and were promising to increase next week from central states and from Nebraska. Export business totalled 50,000 bushels, but was mostly Canadian. Oats sagged with wheat.

Scattered investment buying gave an upward slant to the provision market.

STERLING EXCHANGE.

MONTREAL, Que., July 28 (Canadian Press). — Sterling exchange rates were quoted here yesterday as: Demand—$4.85⅝. Cables—$4.85⅝.

BUTTER AND EGGS

TORONTO, July 28.—The trend of butter and eggs on the local wholesale produce market has been every quiet during the week. About 38 cents per pound for No. 1 creamery solids has been the ruling quotation with No. 2 butter quoted a cent below this level.

Unpasteurized supplies are very hard to sell, local dealers report. A good volume of business is reported, however. There is much speculation as to what the month's storage figures will be. Some dealers are inclined to believe that an increase will be shown in stocks in storage when the figures are released next month. On the other hand, there are other dealers of the opinion that figures will not show much change over those issued one year ago.

The cheese market is steady at the recent increase in price.

The situation on Canada egg markets is practically stationary with the undertone remaining steady.

The demand is steady but not keen. The Montreal egg market is firm and active. There is a particularly good demand for good quality fresh eggs. Prices are unchanged.

There has been no change in prices of eggs on this market. The demand, however, is not keen and the tendency is easier. Consumptive demand continues good, but in the absence of any demand for storage purposes, it is now down to a basis of supplies and consumptive demand. At the present time brokers report some difficulty in making sales and there is a slight surplus of stocks here over consumptive demand.

Only Chrysler could achieve such style

To achieve a new group of cars with completely original body designs, so illustrious and distinguished as to give every beholder an entirely fresh appreciation of the artistic and mechanistic possibilities of today's science of automobile manufacture—that is the gigantic task which Chrysler engineers and craftsmen have accomplished so notably in the new Chrysler Sixes—"75" and "65." At their exceptionally low prices, we confidently believe the new lines of Chrysler cars initiate not only a new vogue in design and a new supremacy in mechanical perfection, but establish also an entirely new conception of automobile values in the fine car field.

HOW THE GIANT SAID FAREWELL

I have lost Indian forever. He was a good dog, and I loved him as I knew he loved me. But he will never come bounding up to me again, or bark with delight at the sight of me, for they found his little broken body this morning, under a pile of rock and wreckage, at the foot of the stone steps in the cave into which the stone-wall house fell. Poor old Indian! I'll never see a dog like him again.

I have not been writing in this book for some days. After the stonewall house caved in and fell into the hollow hill on which it had stood, I couldn't do much of anything for a while. I was nervous all the time, after that, and jumpy at every sound. Doc Waters said it was "reaction." He said we boys had too much excitement around here. And I had about twice as much as any boy in our club. For a couple of days I didn't go near the river bank. I didn't even want to see the clubhouse. Even when somebody would mention it, I would get jumpy and there would come over me a scared feeling as I realized how lucky I was to escape from the dangers of the stonewall house.

Judge Granbery gave orders to dig into the wreckage of the stonewall house that had fallen into the hollow hill beneath it. The men have been working ever since, but they are about to give up. It will probably never be known just what struck the stonewall house and crashed it down into the cavern over which it stood. Jeckerson says it was a meteor, just like the one that fell on Burney's field some weeks ago. The servant man who worked in the stonewall house said it was a message from the stars for which Dr. Drago had been waiting. Everybody laughs at him, however. If you ask me, I think like Jeckerson does—it was a meteor, may be another part of the star from which the first one came that landed on Burney's Field. It is strange, though, that the two should strike the earth so close to each other. The other boys in my club came to see me today, and Shadod Loomis asked me where I thought Dr. Drago was.

"Maybe he succeeded in reaching the stars in his bullet machine," I said; "but I don't think so. I was talking to the man who invented the gun from which the machine was shot, and he said it couldn't do it. He said most likely it traveled pretty far from here, but finally it must stop traveling and fall. He thinks it fell into the sea—and Dr. Drago was drowned."

But that doesn't get us anywhere. All this guessing just makes us wonder more. Perhaps if we could dig further into the ruins of the cavern under stonewall hill, we might find the great cinder from the sky and see whether or not it was a message from the stars. But most likely that will never be. For the men who were digging there reported back today that it was too dangerous to go deeper and that there was nothing to find out in all that wreckage. The thing that struck the stonewall house drove too deep into the ground. They won't find out anything about that.

But they found out about Indian this morning. The men had started from the cave entrance, which was choked up with broken stone and rocks. And under the first pile of rock inside the lower entrance, where the big stone rolled away as a door, they found Indian. More than likely he had gone down into the cavern below the house to warn the giant; anyway, that's the way I think it happened, for I know Indian. He was a good dog. And he lost his life, there, at the foot of the rocky steps—

Johan, the giant, has been ill since his escape from the wreck of the stonewall house. How he ever managed to live through it and climb out of the ruins to safety will always seem a miracle. But he was badly hurt. Doc Waters took charge of him, and says he has been a very good patient. There was no house big enough for him, so Doc made a kind of a hospital room for him in Cliff Cave, in the very same chamber where Norman and David stayed for a while. The cavern is very high and wide inside, although the big man had to crawl into the entrance at the top of the cliff path. But once inside he found it plenty big enough for him to stand up. Only he couldn't stand up very well—Doc made a bed of carpets on the floor of the cave.

"Hawkins," said Doc Waters to us boys today, as we gathered around our one pine table in the clubhouse for our first regular meeting since the day I started on my last trip to the stonewall house, "the giant is feeling pretty well again, now, and if you boys want to take a good look at the big fellow, I think I'll give you a chance to come along with me."

"I don't know," I says; "the way I feel, I don't think I ever want to set eyes on him again. He reminds me of too much terror, Doc. I think I'd be afraid of him, now."

"Pshaw!" says Doc, with a laugh. "He wouldn't hurt a baby, Hawkins. I asked all about him—the servant of the stonewall house told me that the giant was a part of a big circus—had him in the side show, you know—the biggest human being in the world they called him. Said he made big money at it, too, but he didn't get much of it because there was a little man who managed him—you see, the big fellow couldn't talk a word of English. So this other fellow, who seemed to be a greasy cuss from the way the servant told me about him, took charge of the giant and got a job for him in the side show of the biggest circus in the world. All the giant ever got out of it, though, was his meals and seldom a place to sleep, because no place was big enough for him. But the greasy little cuss got the money—the giant was his meal ticket, so to speak. Then Dr. Drago visited the circus, saw the giant and must have hypnotized him—anyway, the giant was afraid of Drago and did what he was told. Drago got him away from the circus and brought him here—to the cave under the stonewall house. The little greasy cuss must have been mad when he found his giant gone—"

"Say, Doc!" broke in Harold, "why don't you take the giant now and put him in a side show and make some money on him?"

"No, thanks," says Doc, with a grin, "you boys are enough for me to look after. Can you imagine me traveling around with that big fellow trotting at my heels—but come on, let's go down and see him. He's rather interesting to watch, even though you can't talk with him."

Nothing could have suited the boys more; and by this time, too, I was losing a great deal of my nervousness, as I realized that there was nothing more to be frightened about. But Doc didn't take us to Cliff Cave, where I expected to find the giant.

"No," says Doc, as we passed the

Johan, the giant, has been ill

entrance to the cave, "he's been too long in that dampness—I wanted him to get some sunshine—better than all the medicine in the world, you know—so we'll find him on top."

And on top of the cliff, on the grassy place that we boys called "the plateau" we found the giant. He was lying comfortably on the grass, resting on one elbow, and blinking at a small group that sat a short distance from him. In this group were Judge Granbery, Jeckerson, Norman and David and their daddy, and a soldier whom I recognized as the Major who wanted the plans of the big gun that the giant had made in the cavern.

Jeckerson rose when he saw us coming toward them.

"Ah, here they come, Major," he said to the soldier man. "Here's one boy whose hand I want you to shake. And from that hand I'll take whatever he gives me—but nothing else, since he's the boy who risked the most and figured this business out and found your precious gun and its inventor. Seckatary Hawkins, shake hands with the Major."

I was a little hazy and surprised as the big soldier man stepped up to me and took my hand.

"My boy," he said, with a fine smile on his fine face, "I can't find words to say to you—but I've heard all about your work in finding back this man and his two little boys, and our friend Mr. Jeckerson assures me that you are the one to have this."

He left in my hand an envelope. The flap was not pasted. I opened it and took out—two of the biggest pieces of money I ever saw at one time. They were five-hundred-dollar bills!

"The reward that was offered," said the Major, smiling, as he saw me look up with a questioning stare.

"Not mine!" I blurted out, suddenly. "No! Jeckerson said he was going to give me half—"

"If I had earned it first, I would

They were five-hundred-dollar bills have done just that," said Jeckerson; "but I don't want any credit for something I didn't do, Hawkins. You were the one who found Norman and David, and by doing so you found their daddy, who was the man for whom the reward was offered."

I stared at the money for a moment. And then I stared again at Jeckerson. He was smiling. Good old Jeck! He and Doc Waters—what would we boys do without them? I walked over and placed one of the five-hundred-dollar bills in his hand.

"Fifty-fifty," I said, and my voice was shaking a little; "just fair and square."

"Thank you!" he said, and laughed. At which everybody there began to clap their hands—all but the giant—he seemed to blink harder and faster, but not at any of us. No. His eyes were fastened on the big money we were passing back and forth.

"Well," said the Major, walking up to the place where David and Norman sat with their daddy, "we will just have time to get ready—"

I didn't hear what else he had said, because Norman came up to me and grabbed my hand. "Goodbye, Hawkins," he said, "I want to thank you and your boys before we go—"

"Must you say goodbye so soon?" I asked him. "Now that we have found you back again, after these many days—we thought sure you and David were going to join our club and be with us in the clubhouse every day."

"Perhaps," he said, and there was a far-away look in his eyes, "someday we will come back again. We are going with daddy now—the Major is taking us all to Washington. I've never been there—and I'm just crazy to go and see the Capitol and the White House and the big Washington Monument and the house where Lincoln died, and just everything—the Major has been telling us about them all day."

His face wore such a happy look, it made me happy, too. And in spite of the fact that I was sorry to lose him now, I smiled as I took his hand.

"Goodbye, Norman," I said; "but you'll never forget me—us boys, I mean—and this old river bank, and—"

"How could I!" he exclaimed in a whisper. And then he pressed my hand tighter and turned away. David was walking over to the giant, and Norman ran to lead him. David's hands were outstretched, and the big man, seeing him approaching, slowly got up on his feet. David touched his boot-tops and the big man stooped down and looked into his little face.

"Johan," said David, "I'm going away now, Johan. I must go with my daddy. But I'll never forget you, Johan. I only wish I could see you, before I go.. But daddy says he will have my eyes fixed—there is a great doctor in Boston—we are going there, after we leave Washington. And Johan, I hope you will be happy, now. I will pray for you, Johan, so you get your job back. And I shall go to every circus when my eyes are fixed so I can see well, and I shall look for you in every tent until I see you. And I'll know you, too, Johan. You are so big—so strong, Johan. I think I can see you in my mind now. When we get across the river and up on the hill road I am going to look back. Then you must stand up, Johan, on the highest place, and maybe I can see you.

It was the little old man with the gold rings in his ears—

Goodbye, Johan, hold out your hand."

The giant put out his big paw, and the little fellow's hand fell into it. There was not another word spoken. It was strange to see that last handshake between David and his Goliath. Something one never forgets in a lifetime. And somewhat sad, too. For the next moment Norman had led his brother away and the little party was slowly moving down the cliff path. The giant straightened up, and stared stolidly at the disappearing figures. And then he lifted his great arms and turnedhis face to the sky and gave one loud bellow. Poor fellow! Too big, he was. And he could make no one understand him.

And even as we stood there, silently watching the big man, not knowing what to say or do, there came the sound of a soft bell. By Jinks! The ghost bell! Here it was, over on this side of the river, just as we had heard it on the island. Norman and David and their party were now out of sight. Was it some danger that was following the footsteps of those two poor little boys?

I was as steady as I could be. But I happened to look up, and saw that the giant, too, had heard the sound of the soft tinkling bell, and was staring with his big eyes toward the cliff path. The sound suddenly stopped. Probably the boys and their daddy and the Major had met it. That's what I thought, anyway. And I looked again at the giant, and I saw him brush his big hand across his forehead, and wipe away large drops of perspiration. And then all suddenly the sound broke out again, more wildly now, and seeming close at hand. Nearer and nearer it came. The giant seemed to cringe, his shoulders drooped, his huge muscles actually trembling. He seemed to be terribly afraid of the ghost bell—perhaps he knew—perhaps he had come across this ghostly thing in his nightly roaming through the woods. Louder came the sound of the bell from the cliff path, and Jeckerson moved back and crowded us boys around Judge Granbery and Doc Waters.

"It's coming here!" I shouted, unable to keep still in my excitement. "Jeckerson! It's right around the cliff there—"

"Don't worry!" shouted Jeckerson, for the bell was loudly jangling now, and the next moment, as we stared at the corner of the cliff where the path came up, we saw a strange figure suddenly come into view. The sound of the bell stopped suddenly, and a rusty voice cried:

"Johan!"

It was the little old man with the gold rings in his ears, and his bagpipe under his arm. On his left shoulder sat the red parrot with the long tail, and on his right the chattering monkey. In the monkey's right paw he clutched a peculiar bell shaped like a ball with a little wooden handle on each side. The man didn't seem to see us. No. He stared only at the big giant, and for a moment I thought his eyes would pop out of his head.

"Johan!" he called again. And the next moment both parrot and monkey went tumbling off his shoulders as the little old man ran forward and clasped the giant around the knees, babbling a stream of words in a strange language, that only he and the giant could understand. The huge man stood like a colossal statue, staring down at the strange old person who clung to his thick legs.

Jeckerson was the first to move. With a swift stride he reached the bagpiper, gripped his arm and tore him away from the giant.

"What's this mean?" he demanded. "Why are you playing that crazy bell trick on everybody around here—"

"Meester, meester!" cried the little old man, working frantically with both hands to loosen Jeckerson's grip on him. "me goot man—you no hurt me? Deece moonkey—he play bell—yump in tree—hoopla! yump in 'nudda tree—look! See! Deece beeg man—he my Johan—he bad boy—he run away f'um me—I make no moneys no more—I take heem back, now. Look! Meester! Let me go! I take Johan, go far away!"

"Ah, so you're the one who puts this big fellow in the circus, eh?" asked Jeckerson, as he let go of the greasy old man. "Put him up in the side show, so you get the money, eh? Well, you'll get out of here as quick as you can. If I were that giant, I'd give you a good, swift kick. Fancy," he continued, turning to Judge Granbery and Doc Waters, "fancy that big fellow letting this little shrimp boss him!" He turned again to the bag-piper. "Get out!" he said, sternly, and pointed his finger.

The little man gathered up his monkey and his parrot, and with a look at the giant, he walked across the plateau and started down the opposite side of the hill, toward the railroad tracks in the freight yards. Half way down he stopped and looked back. And then the monkey on his shoulder started jumping up and down and ringing wildly the little bell. And the giant turned to look down at them. For a moment they faced each other; then the little bagpiper turned and continued on his way. With a loud bellow, the giant leaped over the side of the grassy hilltop and the next thing we knew he was plunging down after the little man. He did not overtake the bagpiper, however. No. The little man with his strange pets ran for the railroad tracks. A freight train was slowly moving out of the yards. The bagpiper threw his monkey and the parrot through an open box-car, and then ran along with the train until he could get a chance to pull himself into the car. The giant was at the foot of the hill; now he was lumbering along with the freight train. He slowed up until a big flat car came by, and then he stepped into it, much as we would step into one of our coaster wagons. The train began to move faster. The big man stood up in the car and waved his great arms at us, as though he were glad to be free again. Then he stretched himself lazily, and settled down to sleep in the car—just in time, too, or he would have been bumped off by the big bridge the train was just about to go under.

The train began to move faster

"Well," said Jeckerson, "I'm sorry, Judge—"

"What's to be sorry about?" snapped the old Judge. "You couldn't have held him. There was no charge against him. And, furthermore, where could we have put him? And what's more, who'd want to pay his food bills? No. That little bagpiper is welcome to him. Let them go back to the circus and the side show, where they belong."

"Sure!" I chimed in. "That's only fair and square, Judge. And now, sir, if you will please change this five-hundred bill, Judge, we boys will divide it up."

Which we did.

Seckatary Hawkins

THE CLUB

Will Start Next Saturday

The Examiner has been making arrangements to start a branch of the Seckatary Hawkins Club in Peterborough, and application forms will be printed next Saturday.

The dandiest membership cards and buttons have been prepared for every boy and girl who becomes a member, and a competition of a new kind will be announced.

NEW COLLARS.

Gorgeous velvet evening coats are using shirred, rolled or other unique collars of the velvet, instead of fur.

The Woman Driver

I like to drive with Champion Spark Plugs because I know I'll not be annoyed with engine trouble due to faulty spark plugs.

Champion is the better spark plug because it has an exclusive alli-manite insulator specially treated to withstand the much higher temperatures of the modern high-compression engine. Also a new patented solid copper gasket-seal that remains absolutely gas-tight under high compression. Special analysis electrodes which assure a fixed spark-gap under all driving conditions.

RABIES BROUGHT ACROSS BORDER

First Human Life Taken When Girl Succumbs To Cat's Scratch.

MAY TIE UP PETS.

TORONTO, July 27.—Its origin traced to dogs from the United States, rabies has been epidemic all this year in certain border districts of Ontario. Large numbers of persons who became "contacts" have availed themselves promptly of the Pasteur treatment, but the Health Department has been apprehensive that early diagnosis and good luck would not always combine to save human life. Hon. Forbes Godfrey has been urging for months that the Federal authorities establish safeguards at the border. Ottawa has consistently declined to accede to this appeal, and advised instead that dogs be tied up.

The first human life was sacrificed this week. On Wednesday, Loraine Goyeau, aged three, died at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Goyeau, 471 Janet Avenue, Windsor. She had been ill about four days. On Tuesday night she suffered convulsions.

Dr. Fred Adams, M.O.H., suspected rabies as cause of the fatality. By consent of the bereaved parents, the child's brain was rushed to the Health Department laboratories here, its transmission surrounded by extraordinary precautions against infection. Hon. Dr. Godfrey's analyst late Wednesday reported that his examination had disclosed the negra body of rabies.

Scratched By a Cat.

Dr. Adams is being advised accordingly. How many persons have been exposed to the disease the Department does not know, but Hon. Dr. Godfrey ordered Pasteur treatment for members of the Goyeau family.

This little girl, the M.O.H. advised the Minister, was bitten or scratched on the face about two months ago by a cat. There had been a rabid cat in the neighborhood, bitten, no doubt, by one of the many dogs in the border district affected by rabies. Under the circumstances, Dr. Adams suspected rabies and took prompt steps to determine definitely. His fears were confirmed.

It so happens that a cat's head was received at the Provincial laboratory on June 16, from Windsor. The test then made resulted in a "positive."

"All points of trouble in the Province have been at ports of entry from the United States," said Dr. Godfrey. "People bring in pets during the tourist and hunting seasons, and as far as I know there is no intelligent effort made to examine them at the border. Dogs coming from Great Britain are subject to strict quarantine. There are safeguarding restrictions with respect to other animals, even in this country, but we have not been able to bring it about with respect to dogs. There ought to be an embargo, and we have been urging it upon Ottawa right along, but find the authorities immovable.

Tendency to Carelessness.

"If it were only to protect the worth-while dog, we have to stamp out this rabies. Vaccination has proven a fairly effective preventive measure, as far as dogs are concerned.

"As to human beings, we would have had a panic if it had not been for the Pasteur treatment. There is a tendency for people to grow careless because of it.

"Certain people thought I had taken this thing too seriously. Here is a human fatality, a child victim dying after great suffering. All that we can do, by way of warning, analysis and remedial treatment constitutes an endless battle until such time as preventive and precautionary steps are taken, and these lie with the Dominion Department of Agriculture."

The Provincial laboratories do a great deal of "animal work," testing for disease in heads of dogs, cattle, etc., but this is the first instance of a human brain being submitted for analysis. Dr. Andrew McNabb, bacteriologist, acted in this case

The funeral of the Goyeau girl was held at Windsor, with service in St. Alphonsus Church.

Ottawa Is Silent.

OTTAWA, July 27.—Dr. George Hilton, Veterinary-General, asked last night to comment on the death of a Windsor child from rabies, said: "This is the first I have heard of the kcase. I know nothing about it. Hon. W. R. Motherwell, Minister of Agriculture, whose department has control of health of animals branch, is in Europe."

Other departmental officials would not comment on the case or the efforts of Hon. Dr. Godfrey to bring about an embargo on United States dogs entering Canada.

ISLANDERS TO RECEIVE RADIO SET.

MONTREAL, July 24. — (By NEA Service). — Early in 1928, a Canadian Pacific liner will stop for a moment at a tiny, isolated island and lower over the side the first radio set that the inhabitants have ever seen.

The little colony on Tristran da Cunha, 1500 miles from St. Helena, seldom receives a visit from the outside world. The people are self-governing and self-supporting, raising everything to their needs on the rocky, volcanic island.

In 1814 an English garrison was sent to the place, but withdrawn leaving only a corporal of the Royal Artillery, his wife and two soldiers. Nearly all of the present inhabitants are descendants of the first settlers. Three Americans found on the island in 1814 are said to have been bucaneers who buried a rich prize along the shore.

SPOILT MUSIC

A Splendid New Serial by Ruby M. Ayres

THE STORY THUS FAR:

JENNIFER FRY is saved from drowning by NICHOLAS GAUNT, wealthy young man-about-town. Later he takes her to tea and asks to call, but she refuses because she is ashamed of her humble surroundings. They continue their friendship and Jennifer comes to love Nicholas, but he is suddenly called abroad by his mother's illness. During his absence Jennifer's father dies. She reads of his engagement in the paper, and stands in the crowd to see him and his bride come from the church after the wedding. Her mother dies. Five years later she meets Nicholas again. He decides to divorce his wife, Lady Edith. But just then Lady Edith becomes ill. The doctors promise her only a year of life and she makes Gaunt promise not to see Jennifer for that year. Jennifer is angry and decides to be as gay as she can on a legacy of eight thousand pounds left her by an uncle. She gives up her job and goes to work to have a good time. She meets DOLORES and BUDDY, two women who live in the flat above her new dwelling place. Through them she meets CHESNEY, who quarrels about her with Buddy and proposes to Jennifer. Jennifer asks him to wait for her answer. They meet Gaunt and his wife at a night club. Jennifer, tired and unhappy, promises to marry Chesney.

CHAPTER XXVII

Discouraged Buddy.

The lunch with Chesney's sister was less of an ordeal than she had expected.

Mrs. Harrup was a widow with a large income and a cheerful disposition which nothing ever seemed to disturb. She told Jennifer frankly that she had always expected that Malcolm would marry a chorus-girl or a barmaid.

"At any rate, I was always positive she would have golden hair," she declared.

Jennifer had a momentary vision of Buddy's golden head. Mrs. Harrup rattled on:

"From all accounts, you've turned my brother into a saint. I hope you'll manage to keep him in that happy state—at least, if you like saints. I prefer sinners myself."

She laughed heartily. She was not in the least like Chesney, but it was evident that she was very fond of him.

"You must come down for a week-end to my place on the river," she told Jennifer when they parted. "Where are you going to live when you're married?"

Jennifer flushed; her thoughts had not as yet taken her so far.

"I don't know at all," she answered. She glanced at Chesney. Mrs. Harrup gave her brother a contemptuous smile.

"Oh! he's in that infatuated state when anywhere with you would be a Paradise," she declared. "He's in love!"

"Dolly always makes fun of me," Chesney said happily.

"But she's wrong. I'm more than in love," he told Jennifer when, after lunch, they drove away together. "I'm in Heaven!"

Jennifer moved restlessly. She had hoped that he would go on being the quietly devoted friend she had always found him; the sudden passion in his voice and in his eyes disturbed her.

"I like your sister," she said with an effort to change the conversation. "I hope she will like me."

"It makes no difference either way," he answered. "I love you more than enough for myself and all the rest of the world."

"You love me too much," she faltered in distress.

But she was glad of his love; she tried to believe that it was an additional stronghold between herself and Nicholas Gaunt. She dined out with Chesney and then he took her home.

"What time may I come tomorrow?" he asked.

Jennifer laughed. "After lunch." His face fell. "Not before?"

"I can't spend all my days with you," she protested.

When they reached the dark landing outside her door, Chesney took her into his arms.

"I love you. . . I love you," he whispered. "And I mean to make you love me."

"If only he could!" Jennifer told herself as she slipped away from him and shut and bolted her door. "If only he could! Life would be so much happier and more simple."

She fell asleep almost as soon as her head touched the pillow, and it was some hours later that she was awakened by an insistent knocking on her door and by a voice crying her name.

Half asleep still, she tumbled out of bed and put on a wrap.

A glance at the clock told her it was past two in the morning, and her heart beat fast with apprehension as her trembling hands unfastened the lock and bolts.

Dolores stood there, her face ghastly white and her eyes terrified. She could only gasp one word: "Buddy!"

"I'll come at once," Jennifer said briefly.

The two women ran up the stairs together. Fortunately the knocking had not roused anyone else.

The door of Dolores' flat stood wide open and all the lights were full on.

Buddy lay huddled on the big divan in the sitting-room. She looked like a doll that a child's careless hand had flung down. She was lying half on her side, her face turned up to the light, her lips parted.

Dolores fell on her knees beside her, her face hidden in her shaking hands. Brokenly she tried to explain:

"I was out late. I've only just come in. She was here; she seemed half mad. I couldn't understand what was the matter at first; then she told me—she'd heard about you and Malcolm."

"Oh!"

"She swore she'd kill herself; she said she would not live without him. I laughed at her. I didn't know what to do. Then before I could stop her . . . ." She pointed to a little glass bottle lying on the floor at Buddy's feet.

Jennifer stood like a statue. She felt cold as death. Then suddenly she came to life; she flew to the telephone.

"We must have a doctor. Have you got any brandy? Try and rouse her. Dolores, for God's sake do something! Don't kneel there like that! Don't let her die."

Dolores had utterly lost her self-control; she was moaning and sobbing, kissing Buddy's limp hands passionately.

"Buddy! Buddy! Buddy!"

Jennifer had got the doctor on the telephone and was trying to explain.

"But come quickly! Come quickly!" she implored.

She hung up the receiver and turned to Dolores.

"You'll let her die while you think only of yourself," she said fiercely. She tried to drag Dolores to her feet; then finding it useless, turned her attention to Buddy.

She looked such a child! Something like a sob caught Jennifer by the throat as she raised the little golden head and gently began to chafe the cold hands.

Dolores looked up with haggard eyes.

"Is she dead?"

"I don't know. Haven't you any brandy? Oh! for God's sake, Dolores, do something—anything! You drive me mad!"

Dolores seemed not to hear; she had crept on her knees closer to Buddy and was peering into her still face.

"Is she dead?" she asked again, hoarsely; and again Jennifer could only answer: "I don't know. . . . I don't know. . . ."

It seemed an eternity, although it was only moments before the doctor came. He looked at Dolores.

"Take her away," he said to Jennifer. Dolores screamed.

"She's dead, and you're afraid to tell me! I know she's dead!"

Jennifer caught and held her.

"You're wasting time. Can't you see that every moment is precious. Dolores, I implore you . . . ."

She succeeded at last in dragging her from the room and laid her down on her bed.

"I'll come back as soon as I can. I'll come as soon as I possibly can," she promised breathlessly.

Dolores raised herself on her elbow; she was almost fainting. She held shaking hands to Jennifer.

"Save her for me! Save her for me!" she wailed.

Jennifer went back to Buddy.

The doctor turned round when she entered, and met the tragic question in her eyes with a reassuring smile.

He was a young man with kindly eyes and a sensitive mouth.

"She won't die," he said. "It was a near thing, but she won't die this time. Let her sleep." He looked down at Buddy. "How old is she? She looks such a child."

"I don't know."

The relief made Jennifer weak; she wanted to cry, but she held herself sternly in check.

"I don't know what the girls of today are coming to?" the doctor said again. He looked at the little bottle, which he had picked up from the floor. "I suppose it was an accident," he said deliberately. "I suppose she took it in mistake for something else."

Jennifer met his eyes squarely.

"Oh yes; it was an accident, of course," she whispered with white lips.

With these lines President Llewellyn A. Morrison, of the Peterborough Old Boys' Association, celebrates the old home week-end, which brought about 2,000 visitors to the town.

HERE'S HOW TO REDUCE

INSTRUCTIONS TO BE FOLLOWED ON SUNDAY AND MONDAY

After your morning exercise and bath, take the following breakfast:

Breakfast: One Egg (prepared in any manner except by frying.)
Three oe four pieces of Melba Toast, or One Shredded Wheat Biscuit (e-toasted).
Choice of one of the following stewed dried fruits: Prunes, raisins, apricots, figs, or pears, or baked apples, or stewed apple sauce.

This is a good breakfast for you to use every day in the year, and one which you will find more satisfying than any other combination of foods which you have been in the habit of using for breakfast.

Some of you will find that you can use two eggs daily without gaining weight or becoming bilious. You must cautiously try this out. Unless your weight has returned to the normal, it is not wise for you to use more than one egg each morning.

Be sure to cook your stewed fruit without sugar, and do not add sugar or cream as long as you are over-weight.

Sometime before lunch, take your usual morning walk.

Lunch: Choice of one of the following acid fruits: apples, apricots, peaches, nectarines, pears, grapes, plums, cherries, berries, pineapples, tomatoes, or melons. One ounce of pecan or almond nuts. One glassful of water.

I have named again a number of fruits which are not always in season, but I want to show you what class they belong in so you will know that you can use them when they are available. You will find you can make a delicious meal out of one of these fruits and a handful of nuts. The pecan and almond nuts are the richest in protein value, and are the best to use.

Remember! Cocoanut, peanuts, and chestnuts should not, really, be classed as nuts as they contain so much starchy material which renders them unfit for combining with such foods as acid fruits.

In the afternoon you are to take your four-mile walk, and upon returning go through the complete list of exercises which I have given you. Increase the number of movements of these exercises daily.

After your exercises are completed, take a cold shower bath, and lie down for a half hour's rest before dinner.

Dinner: Choice of one of the following protein foods: beef, mutton, turkey, chicken, rabbit, or fresh fish (except salmon). Prepare as given previously.
Choice of one or more of the following non-starchy cooked vegetables: Celery, asparagus, spinach, egg plant, small string beans, summer quash, beet tops, small beets, small carrots, small parsnips, small turnips, pumpkin, lettuce, chayotes, oyster plant (salsify), okra, mallow, zucchini, and kale. Prepar according to previous instructions.
Choice of Plain Jello or Fruit Whip.

I hope you have been studying over the list of vegetables which I gave you yesterday. I am repeating the same dinner in today's paper, which you are to use tomorrow, but in addition, I am adding a dessert which you have been looking for.

Jello, o Gelatin, is a kind of protein which combines perfectly with the above combination given you. Gelatin is a very nutritious food, and may be used in many ways with your meals.

A delicious way to prepare it is to take a salad of the proper combination, and then cover it with gelatin and chill in the ice-box. This may be used quite often without any danger of using more gelatin than your body can assimilate.

FRUIT WHIP: May be made from prunes, figs, apples, pineapple, pear, apricots, or berries, by mincing or grating up any of these fruits and adding same to the white of an egg, which has been well beaten. The fruit should be beaten in thoroughly with the white of the egg, and it is not necessary to add any other seasoning. You will find that any of these fruits may be prepared without the addition of any sugar. Fruit Whip may be served with a small amount of cream, if desired.

for its employees, who in turn will do anything for it."

He then spoke a word about the room in which the gathering had assembled.

"It used to be the old accounting offices and after we moved into our new offices it was decided to make it useful. It is equipped with the most modern stage, finest electrical equipment and will seat 900 people. This is turned over for the employees' use at all times except during conventions."

He then introduced the heads of the different departments who were seated at the head table.

After this four more models were displayed on the stage in the same artistic way, using various shades of light and changing colors.

Fine Convention Hall.

The convention hall is worthy of note. It has a slightly arched ceiling with small beams and is finished in two shades of cream throughout walls and ceiling. The stage is modern to the last detail, as complete an electrical equipment as there is in the finest theatres in the country. Provision is made by a regulation moving picture booth for movies. The window curtain and stage curtain are of a rich blue shade, trimmed with silver. Over each of the side windows there are the names of the cars manufactured, and over the windows at the rear are the names of the manufacturing plants of General Motors.

The party then moved to the new garage in the rear of the new office building to inspect the new models, where there was one of each model of the 1929 Buick on display. After closely inspecting the new cars the party was taken to the "line" where they saw the new models assembled from start to finish. A demonstration was then given on the testing track of the General Motors, where each member of the party was taken for a ride in the new cars.

This finished the business end of the trip after which the party were the guests of Mr. McLaughlin at his lovely home, "Parkwood," where afternoon tea was served. Then they travelled to the farm, where Mr. McLaughlin showed his famous horses.

After returning to Toronto they were provided a buffet luncheon, which was held in a suite of rooms on the mezzanine floor of the King Edward. This ended the day.

Three completely new and strikingly original series of sixes comprise the McLaughlin-Buick offering. They are announced as longer, larger, faster and more powerful; but more immediately apparent are their remarkable new body lines and colors.

Beautiful Cars

There is no car now on the road to which the new McLaughlin-Buick may be compared, a fact which makes description difficult. However, among the innovations affecting its appearance may be listed the gentle "swelling" of the body, just below the windows, which are arched across their top where they were formerly straight; a complete blending of the side and roof lines in a pleasing curve which is carried around the sides and rear of the car; massive, graceful new radiator emphasizing the curve motif further; new one-piece front fenders and long and deep rear fenders.

The car's appearance is still further be enhanced by smaller wheels and larger section tires, which make the new McLaughlin-Buick seem lower, though its road clearance is actually unchanged. Large new hubs, new easy-on radiator cap of radical type—optional instead of mono—and relocation of the trademark, in a new and distinctive monogram, on the radiator housing instead of the shell, lend additional touches of beauty. The new head and parking lamps, on their chromium-plated brackets, also are note-worthy features.

Inferior refinements include a completely adjustable front seat in every closed models, longer gearshift lever, foot-operated cowl ventilators, and a tandem-blade electric windshield wiper cleaning right across. The severely plain instrument panel is entirely new, being simply a grouping of the dials on the black background of the dash. The 80-mile speedometer is mounted directly before the driver, and the hydrostatic gasoline gauge is of the latest and most accurate type.

More Powerful.

Less apparent to the casual eye but no less vital, are the enlarged and improved power plant and strengthened chassis, designed to provide a reservoir of energy and reserve of safety. Wheelbase lengths in each of the three series have been extended an inch, the new lengths being 116-inch, 121-inch, and 128-inch. Horsepower of the two McLaughlin-Buick engines has been stepped up, that of the smaller from 63 to 74 and of the other from 77 to 89½. Increased piston displacement accounts for part of the power increase, the remainder being due to new design of camshaft, valve mechanism, carburetor, intake manifold, and exhaust. The power increase is out of proportion to the increase in weight. While some of the engine and chassis improvements, notably the addition of a mechanical fuel pump, are seemingly radical departures, none of them affects the car's basic design.

The "vibrationless performance" claimed for McLaughlin-Buick's engine has been guarded in preparation of the 1929 car, specifications show. The crankshaft is heavier, and so are bearings, pistons and pins, while greater attention than ever before has been paid to their balancing as a single working unit. And McLaughlin-Buick has now cradled the entire engine in mountings of thick, soft rubber to absorb the last vestiges of vibration. Smoothness of clutch action is assured by tiny indentations or waves on each of the ten plates which permit the driving and driven faces to engage gradually.

Despite the advance in performance built into the 1929 McLaughlin-Buick, its gasoline consumption remains virtually unchanged, and it operates efficiently on any fuel. Retention of the centralized lubrication system introduced in the 1928 models makes it easy to grease, and heightened economy of servicing is sought by several of the mechanical improvements, such as the interchangeable main bearings. A simple and ingenious method of lubricating the differential gears by deflecting the grease within the differential housing downward upon the gears is a distinct advance.

Eighteen models, a complete range of open and closed cars on the three wheelbase lengths, make up the line.

UNCLE WIGGILY

To-day's Bedtime Story

By HOWARD R. GARIS

UNCLE WIGGILY'S MUSICAL NIGHT

From the green bower of lily leaves near the edge of the brook, some voices croaked as Uncle Wiggily and Baby Bunty listened.

"Here we come!" croaked a loud voice.

"All ready!" croaked a still louder voice.

"And we'll jump all over him!" croaked the loudest voice of all.

"Oh, dear!" cried Bunty. "I'm going to run! This is terrible! Did you hear them say they were going to jump all over you, Uncle Wig?"

"Yes, but I'm notworried!" laughed the rabbit. "None of the Bad Chaps have croaking voices like these. I think they must be—"

"Frogs! Frogs! Look!" suddenly cried Baby Bunty as three green frog boys hopped out of the green bower and jumped right over Uncle Wiggily's head without touching the rabbit.

"There! What did I tell you?" croaked the biggest frog boy. "We all jumped over you; didn't we?"

"As long as you didn't jump on me I'm all right!" laughed Uncle Wiggily.

"You're just in time," croaked another frog boy. "We are Hippy, Skippy and Nippy," and he waved a paw at his two brothers. "We are always trying to see who is the best jumper and when we saw you and this little rabbit girl coming, we decided to have a race and let you be the judge, or umpire."

"Right gladly will I be that," spoke Uncle Wiggily formal like, yet sanitary. "But first you must guess my puzzle of three things you need in school," and he pointed to the picture he had made on a lily leaf, a picture of a playing card, an apple and other things.

"Ho! Ho!" laughed Hippy as he answers. In school you need an eraser, a blackboard and a principal."

"Where's the principal?" asked Nippy.

"There are some finger prints, and an apple," answered Skippy. "And prints and an apple make PRINTS-APPLE; don't they?"

"Indeed they do," said Uncle Wiggily. "I'm glad you guessed. And now for the jumping race!"

Baby Bunty laughed as the three frogs hopped to and fro. And each one was so good a jumper that Uncle Wiggily could not tell who was best, so he said they each had won the race which pleased Hippy, Skippy and Nippy very much.

"Let's sing for Uncle Wiggily!" croaked Hippy, when the jumping was over. So the frogs began to croak in a chorus and the two rabbits liked it very much.

When Uncle Wiggily reached his bungalow that evening he found his wife and Nurse Jane almost in tears. They were jumping around very sad and excited, and saying: "What shall we do? What shall we do?".

"What's the matter?" asked Uncle Wiggily.

"Why, I'm giving a party tonight," answered his wife, "and now, at the last minute, we have no music to play for dancing. I forgot to telephone about it."

"Well, I'll get some music for you," promised the bunny uncle. "I have just heard some frogs singing. I'm sure they'll come and help at your party. We'll have a regular musical night."

"Frogs won't be enough," squeaked Nurse Jane.

"I'll have more music than that," promised Mr. Longears. Quickly he hopped to the green bower to tell Hippy, Skippy and Nippy to come and sing. "Bring all the other music you can," begged the bunny.

And with the three croaking frogs came some tree toads that made a trilling sort of music. Then some Katydids and Katy-didn'ts and some crickets joined in and everyone said the music at the party was lovely. And when it came time to play games, Uncle Wiggily made up a puzzle like this. It was an animal lady dressing to go out.

"What is wrong with this picture?" asked Mr. Longears.

LYRICS OF LIFE

INSPIRATION

I cannot think the heart that writes,
Or think the voice that sings,
Or puts on canvas shades and lights,
Unaided does these things.
I'd rather think that someone stands
Beside us all the time,
And puts the pencil in our hands,
The music in our rime.

I know not if it be the dead,
Aye, if it be the dear,
And yet I feel when something's said
That someone else was here.
The distances are often far,
The nights are often long,
And yet the sky's remotest star
Is near us in a song.

GOD'S MINUTE.

Whatsoever we ask, we receive of Him.—I John 3:22.

O God, our Heavenly Father, by Whose good hand upon us we are brought to see the light of a new day, and to enter upon its duties, we lift up our hearts to Thee, praising Thee for Thy continued goodness. We humble ourselves before Thee, Holy Majesty, confessing that we are unworthy to receive anything from Thee. We have sinned against Thee daily, in thought, word, and deed, yet Thou hast been long-suffering to us, and hast borne with our shortcomings. Grant unto us true repentance, and Thy Holy Spirit, that we may perfectly love Thee and worthily magnify Thy Holy Name, through Jesus Christ our Lord.

As we address ourselves to the responsibilities of another day, we beseech Thee for the wisdom that is profitable to direct. Hold up our goings that our footsteps slip not, and bestow upon us needful energy of body and mind for the efficient discharge of the duties of our calling. While diligent in business, may we be fervent in spirit, serving the Lord. Doing justly, loving mercy, may we walk humbly with Thee, our God.

These mercies, we ask, with the forgiveness of our sins, for the sake of Jesus Christ, our only Lord and Saviour. Amen.

HANGS HIMSELF.

Toronto Man Found Dead in Cellar—Had Been in Good Spirits.

TORONTO, July 27. — Thomas Smith, 50 years of age, was found hanging from a beam in the cellar of his home at 219 Lauder Avenue at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

Tying a clothesline to the beam, Smith jumped off a box to his death. He was in good spirits so far as his step-daughter, Mrs. Agnes Hilliker, knew, when she left him at 10 o'clock in the morning. When she returned at 2 o'clock she found a note on the kitchen table saying that he proposed doing away with himself. Alarmed, she went for E. Norrish, a neighbor at 221 Lauder Avenue, who found the body. A physician was called but life was extinct.

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY WE LOOK UP TO SOME AND DOWN ON OTHERS

By Mehran K. Thomson, Ph.D.
(Author, The Springs of Human Action)

It is a common human trait to look up to some and look down on others. We look up to those who have some advantage over us, in wealth, social position, skill, learning, personal beauty, anything. Envy is the chief urge. We would look up to no one unless we envied him, and were eager to get in his class.

This envy may be quite sincere and without ill-will towards those, whom we envy. In fact we envy because we are overcome by a sense of inferiority in some particular. The people we envy exert a mysterious power over us. We often admire them and try to emulate their distinguishing characteristic. It may not be as strong as hero-worship in most cases for it is not a ways the man that we envy so much as his superior position and power that we would like to secure for ourselves.

We cultivate those we look up to. There is a certain satisfaction in hob nobbing with people a little above our station in life. Physical proximity is unconsciously interpreted to mean a closeness in quality. One man naively boasted that he sat very close to a celebrity at a banquet. This made him feel that he was not very far removed from this man's greatness.

In a democracy the people laugh at the idea of a cast system such as exists in India and the titles of nobility and other purely social class distinction. These seem ridiculous to us because they appear to be based on artificial distinctions. We prefer the ideal situation of basing superiority and class distinctions on character and ability.

The motive back of it all, however, remains the same. Human beings the world over look up to some and look down on others regardless of the standards used. We do this to satisfy the double-barreled impulse of self-assertion and self-abasement.

The Question Box

W.S.L. Q.—Can you give me any information about the British artist, Muirhead Bone?

A.—Muirhead Bone was born in Glasgow, in 1876. He was educated there, afterwards studying in the school of art in that city. In 1897 and thereafter he produced some excellent work in black and white for the Scots Pictorial. He established himself in London in 1901, where he quickly made a reputation by his etching. He was elected to the New English Art Club, and was prominent in founding the Society of Twelve. In 1906 his etching, "The Great Gantry, Charing Cross," was bought by the National Art Collections Fund and presented to the British Museum. During the World War his services were enlisted by the British War Office for production of pictures of the western front.

J.A. Q.—Please give a comprehensive definition of the words "capitalist" and "capitalism."

A.—A "capitalist" is a person who owns capital (that is, wealth), and especially a person who has large means which are employed in productive enterprise. The word "capitalism" means the ownership or possession of wealth or capital; the influence and power of concentrated capital, and the system which encourages the concentration of capital or wealth in the hands of a small number of people.

POLICE OFFICERS ORDERED PUNISHED

Men In Charge of Prisoner Who Escaped Lose Part of Holidays.

WINDSOR, July 27. — Two Windsor police constables are to be punished, and a sergeant reprimanded, the Police Commission decided yesterday afternoon, for the escape on Monday from the Police Station of Edward J. Dolan, American pickpocket, while he was being taken from the Police Station with nine others remanded to various terms in the county jail.

Doland was arrested on Sunday while in the act of picking a man's pocket on the streets of Windsor. He was lodged in a cell at headquarters on Sunday night, and appeared in Court next morning, was remanded for a week, and while waiting with the others in the station, slipped out of the line in headquarters and made his getaway to the Windsor ferry before he was missed from the station.

Running to the ferry, he was recognized by the same constable who arrested him, and this officer broke the news of the escape at the station.

Constable Tollafield, one of the two officers detailed to take the prisoner to the station, must lose his weekly day off for the next eight weeks, and the other member of the detail, Constable McLean, will lose four days of his annual leave, the Police Board decided.

Acting-Sergeant Bert Herod, in charge at headquarters at the time, was practically exonerated at the investigation yesterday afternoon, though the Commission recommended that he draw a reprimand.

WHEELS HELD WATCHES.

NEW YORK, July 26.—One hundred and fifteen small brass gear wheels sent from Switzerland lay for six months in the office of the customs appraiser. No one called for them and the appraiser used one as a paperweight on his desk. One day it was accidentally knocked to the floor, fell apart and revealed a 15-jewel Swiss watch. Each gear contained a smuggled watch and was intended to escape the $2 duty.

CONCERT PARTY VISITS APSLEY

Anglican Laymen's Association Puts On Entertainment in Parish Hall.

MUCH ENJOYED.

(Examiner Correspondence).

APSLEY, July 28.—Apsley people enjoyed a splendid concert last night when a party from Peterborough, arranged by the Anglican Laymen's Association, gave a musical program of great interest in St. George's Hall. It was the second of a series of concerts arranged in the northern missions of the county by the laymen of the city churches, who have formed this association in order to help their own clergy and those of the outlying parishes.

Three carloads of the visitors from Peterborough arrived in the village between 8.30 and 9.00, and the program was immediately proceeded with, President Charles Lacheur of the association presiding. Songs by Mrs. L. Groombridge included "I Passed By Your Window"; Frank Clarke's banjo selections included the favorite, "Watermelon Growin' on de Vine," sung at the special request of Webber Turner; Bob Hendry was forced to respond to several encores with his Scotch songs; Miss D. Worboy played two pleasing piano solos; Miss K. Vincent brought down the house with her two humorous recitations; and Mrs. P. Hooper's playing of old favorite songs as violin solos delighted the audience. Mrs. Hooper and Mr. Clarke added an extra number to the program when they played "Carry Me Back to Old Virginny," as a banjo-violin duet.

Rev. J. D. Paterson of All Saints', Peterborough, made a humorous speech, which he closed with reference to the good work being done by the laymen, not only for the northern churches but for the city clergy. Rev. C. A. G. Spence of Apsley expressed the thanks of himself and his congregation for the splendid program provided, regretting that there had not been a larger number present to enjoy it.

After the concert refreshments were served to the visitors in the Rectory, and then the party left for Peterborough, neither the bumps of the road, the late hour of return, nor the heavy storm encountered sufficing to dampen their good spirits.

ANNUAL CLEARING OF FURNITURE NOW

Annual Selling Event Promises To Be One of Profit and Pleasure To Shoppers.

Business has been gratifyingly brisk with the Home Furnishing Company, Charlotte street, this July, a month when in ordinary circumstances the turn-over in the furniture line is at its lowest point of the whole year. And now Harry Florence, the company's energetic manager, has launched his customary August sale with 25 to 35 per cent. reductions from all regular prices. This is annual clearing event, always looked forward to by the Home Furnishing Company's many customers, who have every confidence in the merchandise offered being exactly as represented, and who have learned by experience that the bargains obtainable at this store are real bargains not only in price but in quality also.

While everything in the store has suffered a drastic pruning of prices for this big value-giving event, Mr. Florence is featuring perfectly lovely creations in Chesterfield, Dining Room and Bedroom Suites with an attractive variety to choose from. Discriminating shoppers who know outstanding bargains and values when they see them are invited to call at the Home Furnishing Store to-night and next week—in fact any day during August—and look over an interesting presentation of the newest in Home Furnishings with a special appeal both in price and construction. Mr. Florence assures prospective patrons that a short visit to the Home Furnishing Co.'s Store the coming few weeks will be found one of pleasure and profit.

STOMACH TROUBLES, HEADACHES AND DIZZINESS

When your stomach is sick, you are sick all over. If you can't digest your food, you lose strength and "pep"; get thin and nervous; and feel as tired when you get up as when you went to bed.

This was the condition of Mme. P. Joyal, 2170 Letourneux street, Montreal. She says: "I was so nervous that the rustling of a newspaper upset me. My appetite had left me; indigestion was giving me a great deal of trouble; I could not sleep; and steadily lost weight. Tanlac soon had me eating again, corrected my stomach trouble, steadied my nerves, ran my weight up ten pounds, and made me feel just right in every way. Let Tanlac do for you what it did for this sufferer and thousands of others. It is marvelous to see how it corrects the most obstinate digestion troubles—relieves gas, pains in the stomach and bowels—how it restores the appetite, vigor, sound sleep and strong nerves.

Tourist Wanted At Home At Once

(Examiner Staff Correspondence)

Campbellford, July 28.—Late yesterday afternoon, J. Ernest Birk, druggist, received a phone message from Brockville asking him to stop a tourist from Buffalo who was motoring to some of the resorts in this district and inform him that his brother was seriously ill and that he was wanted at home at once. There was no name given by the message came from a man named Langdon or Rankin. Mr. Birk is anxious to assist as far as possible but has not the slightest idea as to whom he is seeking. By eight-thirty he had telephoned several of the summer hotels and failed to locate his party. One man who became anxious, telephoned his home in Buffalo but found that everything was as it should be with his family there. Every effort is being made by Mr. Birk and the local police to get the message to the man whose name can not be found. It is hoped that there will be a second message any moment which will give more explicit details.

INTEREST IS SHOWN IN NEW MOTOR CAR

De Soto Six, Built By Chrysler, Sets New High Standards.

Seldom in the annals of automobile history has the public awaited the announcement of a new car with such universal interest as that which is being demonstrated in the new Chrysler built DeSoto Six, according to Russel Paige, vice-president in charge of sales of the DeSoto Motor Corporation (Division of Chrysler Corporation).

Two primary factors are responsible for this remarkable manifestation of interest in the DeSoto Six, says Mr. Paige in analysing the situation.

"First, there is an insistent demand for new high standards of style, quality, value and performance in the low-priced six field. Secondly, there is a universal confidence on the part of the public in Walter P. Chrysler as the man able to produce a car to meet these high standards.

"During the last four years the automobile buying public has learned to look instinctively to Chrysler for the really significant betterments in quality motor car manufacture. From the outset Chrysler has sensed and served the public's desire in motor cars and the public in turn has rewarded Chyaler with the most remarkable sales rise in the history of the industry.

"The appearance of the original Chrysler in 1924 caused a well remembered sensation. Its unique features revolutionized the automotive industry, speedily rendering obsolete the heavy, cumbersome type of car then in vogue and paving the way for the graceful, alert automobiles now to be seen on the streets and highways.

"Remembering the heightened standards of motor car worth which resulted from the appearance of the original Chrysler, the public naturally expects the appearance of the Chrysler-built DeSoto Six to work similar changes in the low-priced six field. This expectancy is being manifested by countless inquiries which have been received at the factory and by DeSoto district managers all over the country as to the price and specifications of the new car.

"Despite this intense and highly gratifying interest in the DeSoto Six, no information concerning its details can be divulged at this time. I can only reiterate that it will set new high standards of style, quality, performance and value in its field; that it will in fact prove to be the kind of car the whole world expects Walter P. Chrysler to produce."

MUSIC USED AS STOP-GAP

Principal of Royal College Says People Afraid of Silence.

LONDON, July 26.—(Canadian Press).—"At every turn, wherever we go, music is made a stopgap to fill the silences which to-day humans dare not face. People are terrified of silences, so they have music, and I consider it a great insult to music."

Sir Hugh Allen, Principal of the Royal College of Music, made this declaration at a dinner in connection with the conference of British and American Music Educationists.

He paused at the end of a sentence and as he did so, a jazz band in the next room struck up.

"What did I tell you? That finishes it and I sit down," said Sir Hugh amid laughter.

LARGE HARVEST IS IN PROSPECT

Bank's Report Indicates General Prosperity Throughout Canada.

BUSINESS IS GOOD

Nothing has occurred during the last four weeks to mar the prospect of a bountiful harvest nor to diminish the volume of current business. It may be said, indeed, that conditions commercially have never been better in Canada, nor prospectively have held out greater assurance of reasonable continuance. To this situation excellent harvests of three successive seasons have been an important contributing factor, and prevailing confidence in business circles is founded upon belief that this year's crop yield will at least compare favorably with that of 1927 and may even exceed it given propitious weather during the next six weeks. A larger area has been sown to grain in the Prairie Provinces, the lowest estimate of increase being a million acres and the higest nearly two million acres. There has been adequate moisture with continuous heat, and save an odd exception here and there over the vast territory conditions leave little to be desired.

In the several branches of production and manufacture a substantial degree of activity continues. Mineral ouput is large with prospects of expansion in respect of gold, copper and lead. Iron and steel manufacturers are well employed; the boot and shoe industry maintains geent improvement. Textile mills hold up under the strain of foreign competition although operating under capacity; distributing trades find business better than of late years; and retail business maintains its volume, to which end a large influx of tourists contributes. Indeed, the latter has become an important factor in summer trade, estimate being made that not less than $250,000,000 will be spent in Canada by American tourists to redress the adverse balance of trade with the United States. The automobile industry experiences seasonal slowness, but statistics show a productoion of 29,764 passenger cars in May, a number in excess of any previous recorded month, while the production of 29,764 passenger cars same month, 4,178, has only twice been exceeded. The output of agricultural implements continues on a large scale.

Car loadings reflect commodity movements as commodity movements reflect distribution and consumption. There were 95,000 more cars loaded this year to July 7th than in the corresponding period in 1927 and 181,000 more than two years ago; and it is significant of the healthy state of business that merchandise and miscellaneous freight were substantially larger this year.

The newsprint industry has not abated its activity, production of Canadian mills having been 192,391 tons in June, and in the first half of the year 166,904 tons more than in the same period in 1927. These mills, however, operated last month at only 79.2 per cent of capacity, and largely as a consequence of capacity outstripping consumption prices have become less stable. The situation is a subject of much general discussion.

The foreign trade of Canada in June followed the trend of recent months, a small increase in export values being overcome by a much larger increase in imports. Exports of domestic produce last month amounted to $107,121,000, as against $105,678,000 in June of last year; imports had a value of $110,693.000 as against $101,018,000 the year before. On the export side there was an increment of $5,740,000 in the item of wheat and of $688,000 in newsprint, but in the case of the latter quantity export was relatively greater than value export, indicating a slight cut in prices. In the three elapsed months of the current fiscal year exports of $364,117,000 compare with imports of $302,766,000, the pendulum having thus swung to an adverse balance. A year ago in the three months' period exports exceeded imports by $23,071,000.

Reflecting and contributing to general prosperity is unabated activity in the building trade, and of the construction of houses and offices there is yet no end. All principal cities have shared in these undertakings. In the first six months of this year permits issued in 63 Canadian cities represented an expenditure of $101,606,000, being $20,763,000 in excess of the preceding year, and still more in excess of any previous like period. In June the gain was again large, the increase in value of permits in Montreal being $3,667,000 over 1927. The price of building materials has been somewhat higher than last year, but much lower than in any other year since 1920. This activity has greatly stimulated all allied trades, and aided not a little in maintaining the high level of general business.

Values have not been so marked at the Port of Montreal to date as usual, owing to the fact that fewer ocean steamers have come in. Less grain has gone out, and less anthracite coal has been landed from Great Britain, the decrease in the latter to July 10th having been 187,109 tons. It is, however, noteworthy as unprecedented that on July 14th the visible supply of wheat in Canada amounted to 74,281,000 bushels, being 39,000,000 bushels in excess of the corresponding period last year. Nearly two months will elapse before the crop comes forward in appreciable quantity. Passenger traffic via the St. Lawrence steadily increases, as does also the number of regular liners in this service.

New York Funds have been in fair demand and with offerings light advanced to 7/16% premium, which is substantially above the export gold point. A sharp decline in Sterling was modified in the Canadian market by the advance in New York Funds. Sterlings cables declined from 4.89% to 4.87⅝ but recovered to 4.88⅛. French Francs fell from 3.94 to 3.92¼ and all other European currencies made losses during the month ranging from ⅛% to ⅜%. Continued uncertainty as to the immediate outlook for money rates has tended to unsettle the bond market and prices in all departments have shown a weaker tendency.

Quebec.

Wholesale trade is moderately active; retail trade is satisfactory, although inclement weather has contributed to an irregular movement of summer goods. Collections are fair. Silk mills and manufacturers of ladies' wear, rubber goods, automobile tires, structural material, hardware and paints are well employed. Sugar refiners and flour millers report domestic and export business fair. The boot and shoe, men's clothing, and woollen and cotton textile industries are operating below normal. A large amount of building and construction work is in progress. There is an improved demand for lumber for domestic use and for export to United States markets; prices are firm. The demand for pulpowod is slow with prices unchanged. Production of newsprint continues at about 80% capacity of the mills; contract prices are easy. The agricultural situation is favorable.

Ontario.

Wholesale trade reports show a substantial increase in sales, and retail business generally is good. Municipal taxes are being well paid. Tourist traffic has much improved with warmer weather and is now in large volume. Industry generally continues to be well employed with sales ahead of last year. Flour mills are moderately busy on domestic orders. Manufacturers of electrical equipment, automobile tires and automobile accessories are operating at high levels. Steel and agricultural implement manufacturers and canning companies report increased business over last year. Woollen manufacturers find an improved demand for cloth goods. Furniture sales are about normal. Pulp and paper mills continue to operate on a reduced basis. There is a good demand for lumber at satisfactory prices. Warm weather and recent rains have greatly improved agricultural conditions and good crops generally are expected. Pastures are excellent.

Prairie Provinces.

Wholesale business generally is normal with sales of hardware and builders' supplies reflecting the high level of building activity prevalent throughout the Prairie Provinces. Warm weather has stimulated retail trade in seasonable lines. Collections are improving. The wheat market has shown a downward tendency due to the record carryover expected and favorable crop reports; cash wheat on the 20th July closed at 129⅝ as compared with 163¾ a year ago. The livestock market has been firm with prices above those of last year. Sales at the five western stock yards from 1st January to 12th July were as follows the figures for the corresponding period last year being shown within brackets: Cattle, 141,552 (143,222); calves, 38,897 (44,853); hogs, 364,531 (392.047); sheep 15,883 (17,662). The hope of establishing a gold mining industry in Manitoba is proving to be well founded and development work in the copper areas is proceeding satisfactorily. Sheep shearing is almost completed in Alberta; a large proportion of the clip has been sold to Boston buyers. About 7,000 acres were sown to sugar beets, or 1,000 acres over last year. Production in the Turner Valley field is approaching 2,000 barrels per day of light crude oil and high grade naphtha.

British Columbia.

Wholesale trade is active; in some branches retail trade has been quiet owing to unseasonable weather. The curtailment of output in the lumber industry appears to have had the desider effect of cutting down volume and increasing prices; the export market is dull; the shingle market is strong and mills have heavy orders on hand. Activity in mining continues, with British Columbia now ranking second among the Canadian provinces in production value. Reports from the various fishing districts have been favorable and the outlook for a good season is encouraging. With the advent of more seasonable weather tourist traffic is becoming heavy. Wet weather has caused serious loss to the cherry growers, but other tree fruits are reported to be doing well. Lives tock is in excellent condition.

Maritime Provinces.

Wholesale and retail trade reports indicate an increasing volume. Coal mines, woollen mills, biscuit and candy factories of steel, cotton, shoes and paper are running but part time. The second catch of Bank fish, now ready for shipment, has been sold at satisfactory prices to Halifax exporters who had but small supplies on hand; the lobster catch has been average but prices are somewhat low. Lumber markets continue dull with some signs of firmer prices. Building is brisk in Halifax. Strawberries were below average but all other crops are showing rapid growth. Haying has commenced and a good average crop is expected. Recent weather conditions have been exceptionally good.

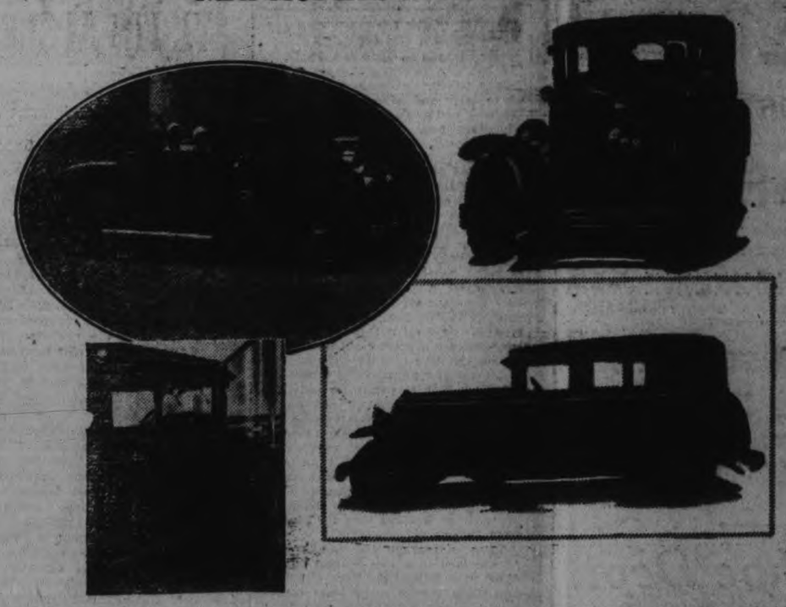
NEW MODELS INTRODUCED



Graceful curves have been substituted for straight lines in the 1929 McLaughlin-Buicks announced this week. The new cnvertible coupe at the left is shown with the short-spoked demountable wood wheels introduced as optional equipment. At the lower right is one of the four-door sedan models and above it a head-on-view of the two-door sedan showing the gentle "sweeping" of the body and the arched windows characteristic of the new car. The airplane-type instrument board is seen at the lower left.

PAYING BACK FIRM'S LOSSES

Exchange Broker Ruined by Post-War Slump Works for Creditors.

75 YEARS OLD

NEW YORK, N.Y., July 28.—(Canadian Press)—Back of a large bank window overlooking lower Broadway, in which are displayed sovereigns, doubloons, guilders and other foreign money, sits an elderly man at a large desk laboriously counting coins.

But his fingers are not those of a grasping miser, nor do his eyes reflect the greed of the money changer, for that fraction of each coin that he gains through transactions in foreign exchange is to be passed on to others, because, he explains, they had confidence in him.

The man is Leopold Zimmerman, who for 50 years strove to make Zimmerman and Forshay, investment bankers, one of the foremost foreign exchange houses in the Street. He succeeded, but the post-war financial crisis in Central Europe and the collapse of the German mark wrecked the house that was his life work.

Losses exceeded $6,000,000. Most of the creditors had little hope for salvage. Zimmerman had just rounded three score years and ten and nothing seemed more likely than that he should be forced into retirement. But the world didn't know Leopold Zimmerman, who thought only of the necessity that some experienced member of the firm should justify the confidence of his clients.

He worked hours daily with receivers to reclaim as much as possible. He got permission from the court to reopen his offices under the old firm name. And during the past year he has voluntarily repaid creditors some $100,000 of his personal earnings from the new firm.

"Single-handed," says this short, heavy-set, snowy-haired warrior of Wall Street, "I have fought my way back. It was hard work at first. Everything was gone. But now the business is coming back and I pray that I may live long enough to pay back every cent."

No clerk is more active than Zimmerman, who recently celebrated his seventy-fifth birthday anniversary by putting in his regular 10 hours at his desk. On that desk in his private office, which he reaches by stair with the aid of a cane, he keeps a list of more than 2,000 names. His greatest joy is to check them, one at a time, for each mark means that a ereditor has been paid in full. More than 500 names now are checked.

Zimmerman's work with the receivers salvaged enough to pay about 40 per cent of the debts. A recent award of $1,250,000 by the Mixed Claims Commission met 25 per cent more. Another suit for $500,00 is pending.

But it is through earnings that Zimmerman intends personally to settle remaining scores, eagerly watching each gain as it is made so that he may write a creditor, saying, "I take pleasure in informing you that I am ready to redeem in full," etc.

"Reedeming in full" has cost Zimmerman dearly. With his wife he occupies a single room in a modest hotel. Former pleasures, his automobile, the opera, are forgotten. His recreation now is his work.

VARIETY TESTS MADE ON WHEAT

Department of Agriculture Seeking Best Kind for Each District.

To find out as far as possible the varities of wheat best suited to the different types of soil and different types of soil and different localities in the Prairie Provinces, the Cereal Division of the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa has been conducting local variety tests in the different grain growing areas for the past four years. The ultimate object of this work is to prepare a cereal map which will indicate the varieties which are safest to grow in different zones or districts. The plan of procedure followed in conducting local variety tests with farmers is to supply the farmer who agrees to undertake the work with seed or five or six of the most promising varieties in time for the spring seeding. He is supplied with a form upon which he records his observations and gives his opinion as to the relative suitability of the different varieties for his particular district.

A member of the staff of the nearest Experimental Station visits each co-operator during the growing season to see how the work is being carried on and to supplement the growers own report. The farmers are said to be taking a keen interest in the test which they believe will bring out very valuable information. The hope is expressed that with the close and careful co-operation between the Experimental Farms and the co-operators, it should be possible in the near future to divide the grain-growing sections into variety districts where certain varieties may be safely recommended.

ROADS CONVENTION GOING TO REGINA

Tentative Program for September Gathering Announced

MONTREAL, July 28.—Announcement of the subjects of the tentative program of the fifteenth annual convention of the Canadian Good Roads Association, to be held September 25-27 at the Hotel Saskatchewan, Regina, Sask., was made here yesterday by G. A. McNamee, the secretary-treasurer. As has been the practice at previous conventions, the program has been made comprehensive in scope so as to take in all aspects of highway construction, maintenance and use, including financing, taxation, types of pavement, materials, repair methods, sectional problems, and motor and traffic regulations. The following partial list of subjects to be introduced by experts and discussed by the delegates indicates the wide range of information and experience which will make the gathering an educative and inspirational occasion for all the participants:

"Improvements in methods of construction and maintenance of earth roads, with especial reference to Western Canada. "Modern practice in the construction and maintenance of gravel roads." "Treatment of earth and gravel roads with light oils and other dust-layers and preservatives of road surfaces." "Urban responsibility for road improvement," "Use of tar sands in highway practice." "Conservation of road materials." "Treatment of gumbo before applying gravel." "Responsibility of the Dominion Government in regard to provincial highways, with especial reference to further federal aid." "Design and construction of cement concrete highways and bridges," "Maintenance of highways under winter conditions," "Interprovincial co-operation in the matter of uniformity throughout Canada," "Principle of the gasoline tax with experiences in connection therewith," "Regulations controlling the weight and speed of commercial vehicles and the taxation of autobuses and commercial trucks, and necessary traffic restrictions," "Highway safety and direction signs."

In selecting Regina, the capital city of Saskatchewan, as the scene of this year's convention, the association is pursuing its settled policy of emphasizing the Dominion-wide character of its activities and its membership by giving each province a turn at entertaining the convention. With Saskatchewan as this year's host, eight of the nine provinces will have been visited, leaving Prince Edward Island as the only one in which no convention has yet been held. The fourteen preceding conventions have been distributed as follows: Montreal (two), Toronto, Ottawa, Hamilton, (two), Quebec (two), Winnipeg, Halifax, Victoria, B.C., St. Andrew's N.B., Edmonton and Niagara Falls, Ont.

Representative committees of Regina citizens are preparing an attractive programme of recreation for the convention delegates and their ladies.

Copies of the tentative programme and other pertinent information regarding railway rates, hotel accommodation, etc., will be sent if a request is addressed to George A. McNamee, secretary-treasurer, C. G. R.A., New Birks Building, Montreal.

CRUSHED BY TRACTOR.

ST. THOMAS, July 28 — Crushed by a runaway farm tractor against the rear wall of the garage on his father's farm, Yarmouth Centre, Donald Soper, aged 20, was bought to the Memorial Hospital yesterday in a very serious condition. He suffered several broken ribs and internal injuries. The young man went to the garage to take out the heavy tractor, and was unaware that it had been left in gear. The engine started with the turn of the crank and the machine moved forward, pinning him against the wall. Fortunately the wall gave way and the tractor went on, crashing through two stout fances, finally being brought to a stop in the centre of a field. Young Soper was thrown to one side as the tractor broke through the wall. His mother, Mrs. Thomas Soper, found him lying in the debris.

FEED WORLD WITHOUT FARM

H. E. Barnard Says Chemists Will Provide Nation's Food.

CONVERT WASTE.

CHICAGO, July 28.— The economic plight of agriculture is directly responsible for the present intense interest in the chemical conversion of waste farms into industrial products Professor H. E. Barnard declared yesterday.

As far as chemical knowledge itself is concerned that is advancing to the point where the ultimate solution of the agriculture problem may be the abolition of the present agriculture and the causing of a radical alteration of human nutrition, he continued. That consummation is centuries away. It will only happen if there are so many human beings that standing room, not food supply, is the real limit of population.

For all science is concerned, the entire surface of the globe might be covered with kitchenette apartments, Prof. Barnard declared—and there will be no use for the kitchenette. The process of human metabolism, conversion of elementary sustances into heat and bodily energy, could continue. He continued:

"The chemist is impatient when he hears the Malthusian doctrine discussed in terms of wheat acreage, sugars and fats, for he is confident that when the fertile acres of earth do not produce crops sufficient for man's needs, the chemist can synthesize them in his laboratory. Indeed he already is doing that."

Will Convert Light to Food

"When the need comes" he declared, "the chemist will convert the light of the sun and nitrogen into food for the human family. Thirty men working in a factory the size of a city block can produce in the form of yeast as much food as 10,000 men tilling 57,000 acres under ordinary agricultural conditions. What right do we assume that millions of years from now man will be the same kind of organism he is today. He may live differently, he certainly will eat differently. The taste of good bread and meat may have been forgotten for ages, but his metabolic processes will go on just as satisfactory as today."

As to the present state of knowledge, Warren E. Emley of the Bureau of Standards said:

"This is one of the few outstanding cases where chemical information has been developed before it was needed. For years past the literature has contained descriptions of laboratory processes for making this or that product from this or that waste. Until recently no attempt was made to put these processes into production for obvious economic conditions, however, have aroused the interest of the seller. The American farmer has been called on to compete with farmers on the other side of the earth who have different labor costs, different standards of living and different climatic conditions. If he could realte a profit from these farm wastes, he would be in a stronger position to meet the competition on his main products."

NINE-TON PLANES FLY 16,500 MILES

British Naval Squadron Makes Trip To Australia Without Mishap.

LONDON, July 28 (Canadian Press) —The flight of four Royal Air Force "ironclad" flying boats, each weighing nine tons, from Plymouth to Melbourne, 16,500 miles, is termed the greatest flight of its kind in the history of aviation. The machines left England last October, and calling on the way at seventy ports, reached Melbourne at the end of June without having had any mishaps. No such formation flight had ever been made before with any kind of machine.

The flight went on steadily through tropical heat and storm and the machines made the first aerial coasting of India, accomplished the greater part of an aerial circumnavigation of Australia, and flew approximately 17,000 of the 23,000 miles scheduled for the cruise.

The great flying boats are now on the way to Singapore, the permanent base for a British Pacific air fleet of the future, of which the craft will form the basis. From Singapore at various times they will make long distance flights in the Far East.

Complete success marked the experiment of all-metal hulls in tropical conditions. They withstood every kind of test. Their wing span is 75 feet and fully loaded each plane weighs nine tons.

Two 500 horse-power Napier Lion water-cooled engine propel each craft at a maximum speed of 108 miles an hour. The reliability of these engines, which in 144,000 engine miles did not miss a beat, has astonished the technicians. The machines are bi-planes.

Group Captain H. M. Cave-Brown-Cave was in command. Each machine carried a crew of four, having sleeping and cooking accommodation as well as food lockers, rigger's stores, tailor's kit, medical supplies and two days' supply of fresh provisions in case of accident. Hammocks were slung from the cabin roof at night.

BALUSTRADE BROKEN BY UNKNOWN MAN

URGE LONGER NATIONAL SWIM

Some Contestants Would Have Wrigley Marathon Greatly Lengthened.

NO CHANGE

TORONTO, July 28.—(Canadian Press).—This year's Wrigley Marathon for a purse of $50,000 and the world's long distance swimming championship, to be held at the Canadian National Exhibition, has given rise to an international controversy among swimmers.

It started when a petition was received by Exhibition officials, signed by three United States swimmers and a Canadian, asking that the announced distances—10 miles for the women's race on Aug. 29 and 15 miles for the men's grind on Sept. 5—be increased to anything from 20 to 100 miles. Despite the fact that only three of the 299 starters, representing 42 different nationalities, were able to finish last year's 21-mile race at Toronto, the petitioners insist the distance should not be shortened.

Those making the request are Lotty Moore Schoemmel, of New York, who claims approximately 30 swimming titles and records; William Erickson, of New York, who was the third and last swimmer to reach the finishing mark here last year; Mille Gade Corson, conqueror of the English Channel, and Eva Morrison, formerly of Pictou, N. S.

With the exception of Mrs. Corson, all raced in last year's swim. Erickson completed the distance in approximately 19 hours, eight hours slower than the winner, Ernst Vierkotter, of Germany. Mrs. Schoemmel was taken from the water between the 15 and 17-mile marks, after she had been swimming slightly more than 15 hours. Eva Morrison, who has some remarkable salt water swims in Nova Scotia to her credit, swam only four miles.

Want 21 Miles.

Vierkotter has stated that he prefers the 21-mile route to a 15-mile race. His contention, however, is mainly that, since he won the world's championship title at 21 miles, he should defend it at that distance.

Byron Summers, the California "Flying Fish," twice winner of the Alameda Marathon and claimant of the American professional long distance title, says he is entirely satisfied with the shorter distance. He is now in training at Toronto.

Georges Michel, of France, holder of the English Channel record, and second to Vierkotter in the 1927 swim, has written that all conditions are satisfactory to him. He is on the way to Canada for this year's race.

Ethel Hertle, New York speedster, whom swam 14 miles in the 1927 marathon in approximately 9 hours, prefers the 10 and 15-mile races, as does Edgar Finlay, of Sydney, New South Wales, former western and southern all-round champion in Australia.

No Change.

So far the officials of the Canadian National Exhibition, conducting the swim, have contented themselves with the announcement that the distances of 10 and 15 miles stand, no matter what petitions are received.

"It was done to give both contestants and spectators an even break," they say. "There were scores of the world's best swimmers here last year, but only three were able to complete the course. In addition, there were 222,000 spectators and they certainly deserve consideration. A race which runs on from eight in the morning until the early hours of the next day is an endurance test for watchers as well as competitors."

The whole controversy, swimming experts declare, hinges on the question, still unsettled, of whether a marathon swim is a race or an endurance contest. Some athletes insist that speed is a secondary consideration and that the most desirable attribute of an aquatic marathoner is the ability to remain in the water for innumerable hours. Others insist that a marathon swim is similar to a marathon run, and though it may be a gruelling grind, it is nevertheless a race.

The 1927 marathon was to some degree an endurance contest. The 1928 contest, apparently, will be a race, or rather two races, since women entrants have an event and a $10,000 purse to themselves.

GUARD IS KILLED AT PRISON FARM

Two Sheriffs and Two Convicts Wounded When Five Escape.

HOUSTON, Texas, July 28.—(Canadian Press).—Henry Ward, a guard at the Imperial State Farm, was killed, and two sheriffs and two convicts were wounded last night following a break for freedom by seven prisoners at the farm. Five escaped.

Men Still At Large.

HOUSTON, Texas, July 28 (Canadian Press).—Pursuer throughout the night by thirty-five bloodhounds and 100 armed men; five convicts who shot their way out of the Imperial State Prison Farm, near Richmond, late yesterday are still at large in swamps and canebrakes along the Brazos River. One guard was killed and two deputies injured. Three of the eight men who escaped were captured, two having been wounded in the gun battle.

LAWN BOWLING

Last evening the Men's Bowling Club held their usual Friday night tournament, with ten rinks entered. Prizes of boxes of raspberries were won by four rings. The winners of the first prize was N. Routley's rink with three wins and a plus of 16 points. The rink was composed of N. Routley, skip; Gillies, vice; Anderson, second, and W. Wood, lead.

Second prizes went to the rink skipped by C. Seymour, with him being H. Martin, vice; Cullen, second, and Gemell, lead.

Third and fourth prizes were won by Sedgwick's and Johnson's rinks respectively.

The following is the personnel of the rinks, with their scores:

N. Routley, Gillies, Anderson, W. Woods; 7, 2, 6, plus 16.

C. Seymour, Martin, Cullen, Gemel, 6, 0, 5 plus 11.

Sedgwick, Fitzpatrick, Dyer, A. Brown, 7, 1, 0, plus 8.

Johnson, Braund, E. Coleman, B. Coleman, 0, 1, 6, plus 7.

G. Coleman, Ringer, Sorenson, Lowe, 4, 0, 2, plus 6.

Wise, Waddell, Seymour, Downey, 0, 6 0 plus 6.

BETHANY LOSES TO MASTERSON

Rays' Hurler Keeps Hits Scattered To Give Leaders Win By 7 to 1.

Casey Masterson, who lost his opening game to Bethany here, went back at Bethany last night, and turned in a 7 to 1 victory for Raybestos. The Rays hit the ball hard and gave Masterson fine support in the field. Russell did the hurling for Bethany.

East Peterborough League teams face a busy session next week, with two games scheduled, and two other contests to be arranged for at a meeting of the Executive on Monday night.

The scheduled games are:

Raybestos at Crescents on Monday, and Bethany at Cogs on Wednesday.

Including last night's games, the League standing is:

	Won	Lost	To Play
Raybestos	9	2	1
Cognawagas	5	5	2
Crescents	4	6	2
Bethany	2	7	3

THE MIRROR OF THE MODE

By Mary Marshall.

Little girl's beach coat and cap of red oilcloth lined with white bath toweling.

Children's beach clothes so successfully combine smartness with convenience that it is a pity that they are not worn inland as well as at the shore. Never I think have these miniature bathing costumes and accessories been more attractive than this year.

You really cannot get the right impression of the little ensemble shown today because it isn't shown in red. It was the bright, clear tone of the oilcloth used for the straight little coat and cap that made it so attractive. The bathing suit worn beneath was of wool jersey—white top and red trunks. White and red rubber beach shoes protected the little bather's feet from the sharpness of pebbles and sand and the bonnet was of red oilcloth made soft and cozy with a lining of white terry cloth. White terry cloth also was used to line the little coat.

There are large beach rugs specially designed for children this season, and one that carries out the red and white color scheme shows designs of frogs and fishes that any child would find fascinating. These rugs are nearly as large as a steamer rug and would be useful on picnics or in the garden or anywhere that children frolic and sit on the ground.

One or two sun suits are now included in the holiday wardrobe for boys and girls, and from the point of view of health they are decidedly important. The time may come when there will be specially set apart sections in city parks where children may play in these abbreviated health garments.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

SUNDAY, JULY 29, 1928

Astrologers read this as rather an unimportant day in planetary direction. Benefic aspects dominate.

Under this rule men and women are likely to be open-minded and inclined to accept religious teachings.

The sway is supposed to cause criticism of teachers while approving the doctrines elucidated.

The planetary government should be fairly favorable for the clergy who may have to combat much ignorant prejudice and stubborn bigotry.

There is a sign of promise for persons who are interested in oil speculation, for new fields are to engage interest, it is foretold.

This should be an auspicious sway for all who seek sermons in stones and books in the running brooks. All outdoor recreations should be pleasant and stimulating under this direction of the stars.

It is not a lucky day for courtship, for deception is supposed to be successful under this rule.

Love letters may be peculiarly perilous today since they may be misleading and may incline to false representations.

Organized crime is to flourish as never before all through the next three months, if the stars are rightly interpreted.

New war rumors may be expected next month when Europe will face serious problems.

New Zealand and the South Seas now come under a menacing planetary rule which may result seriously. Progress may be retarded in many places.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of a happy, prosperous year, but they should avoid temptation to be extravagant.

Children born on this day may be exceedingly fond of all the good things of life, generous and hospitable. The subjects of this sign usually love dress and amusement.

MONDAY, JULY 30, 1928

Benefic aspects dominate today, according to astrology, which reads in the stars pleasant promise for the planet Earth.

The rule is most favorable to merchants and manufacturers and presages a period of brisk autumn trade.

This should be a fortunate day for extending business interests or beginning new enterprises.

Lawyers are subject to a sway making for much professional activity. Success is indicated in paths leading to public favor.

Big business and all engaged in it may be assured of tremendous gains at this time when immense combinations are foretold.

Educators are well directed and those who specialize in science or research are exceedingly fortunate, it is foretold.

Inventions of marvelous bearing on the world of the world will be introduced before the end of 1928 when flying will be more popular than its most sanguine promoters could possibly foresee.

The rise to fame of a young man who is to follow the path of Edison is prognosticated.

Oriental disasters through war and other troubles will bring to the Pacific coast increase of trade, it is prophesied.

Wars will prevail in foreign countries through the early autumn, astrologers foretell; Roumania, Russia, Bulgaria, and Turkey may be involved.

Steel and hardware will bring in tremendous profits to manufacturers at this time, if the stars are rightly interpreted.

Hotels are subject to planetary influences making for increase of patronage and great profit.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of prosperity. Hospitals may be visited for the purpose of cheering friends.

Children born on this day probably will be bright and clever. Subjects of this sign usually know how to make money, but they are inclined to lose through speculation.

THE WHATNOT

A Place for Little Bits of Everything of Local Interest

OVER in England they are greatly exercised about the danger in kissing, and some are going so far as to suggest wiping the lips with iodine before indulging in loving embraces. None of the Peterborough drug stores has yet included compacts with a receptacle for iodine, but the innovation may be expected at any time. I presume colorless iodine will be used.

• • • •

Another suggestion, that can be put into immediate effect without waiting for the new compacts, is to use medicated gauze. The gauze should be placed over the lips so as to form a germ-proof barricade.

• • • •

All of this seems very silly, but it is the subject of many letters to the staid London Daily Mail.

• • • •

The writers labor under the delusion that typhoid, malaria, and other fevers are the only danger in kissing. They are a mere bagatelle compared with the dangerous predicament created when the love fever is precipitated into the system through the apparently harmless kiss. But the kissing habit has been going on for many centuries—although many present-day parents seem to forget it—and it is not likely that medical advice or wise contributions of controversial maniacs will put a stop to it.

• • • •

A George street restaurant keeper has printed on his menu cards a verse about life without cooks being empty and hopeless—but just fancy life without kisses!

• • • •

All of which leads up to a note, unsigned, which asks me whether a girl should kiss a boy to whom she is not engaged. That's a poser, because there are so many angles. Is she engaged to another man? Is he engaged to another girl? Are they in love, though not officially bethrothed, or are they just "petting"?

• • • •

Like many other things, a kiss is not, per se, wrong. A lot depends upon the circumstances and the relationship between the parties to it. Probably a wise rule is to use discretion.

• • • •

Among the letters which came to my desk this week was one from a woman who has just realized that summer is not all sunshine for the housewife. "I am kept busy every week-end entertaining guests, so that I look forward with dread throughout the week to what is coming on Saturday and Sunday." This correspondent has many acquaintances who come in from the country and call upon her.

• • • •

I would like to suggest that much of this summer entertaining worry can be avoided by concentrating on buffet meals. They need not be sketchy or inadequate. Buffet style simply means that the foods and dishes are placed on a table or buffet so that everyone may help herself to whatever and as much food as she desires. Everything is prepared in advance, possibly in the cool of the previous evening, and the food must be of a class that can wait patiently for the guests' convenience.

• • • •

A good buffet meal would be: Beef loaf, jellied vegetable ring filled with cress, radishes and onions served with mayonnaise, cornbread sticks. There's nothing famishing about that, and yet it could be easily and economically prepared in advance and served from the refrigerator to the buffet or dining-room table.

• • • •

Every woman must at some time in her life wish for wings; if not actual flying wins, then wings of imagination on which she might soar into the blue of mental delight. Why not? Too many of us repress our natural inclinations to indulge in journeys of imagination.

• • • •

Imagination's wings do make life's bumpy way so much more smooth! When you are discouraged and tired, relax your body and release your mind—and be the Cinderella you would like to be. I have a most vivid imagination, and I get a lot of fun out of giving it full rein.

• • • •

And in these flights into strange lands one often picks up ideas that help a lot in practical every-day affairs.

• • • •

It was out of such a flight that I brought this column.

• • • •

A young married woman inquires of me whether it is permissible for her to wear her skirts above her knees. Long skirts, my dear, are no evidence of marital bondage. It is entirely up to yourself, but one should bear in mind that the fashionable woman is never extreme. Ultra-short skirts and rolled stockings, while no doubt comfortable, are not yet sanctioned by our rather conservative society. It is, after all, not a question of right or wrong, but one of conceding or not to the demands of public opinion.

• • • •

So many people persist in mixing up morals with the mere whimsies of Mrs. Grundy and the opinions of next-door neighbors.

• • • •

At a river picnic last week I saw a girl having trouble with her light straw hat, which refused to stay put. She could have saved herself a lot of bother by sewing a two-inch band of velvet round the inside of the crown at the base.

• • • •

On these stuffy days, which seem so damp this year, doesn't one pity the poor male, compelled to wear the hot garb to which he has apparently become a slave? And isn't it about time some brainy woman got to work on a costume that would be more fitted to our summer weather? The poor men will never do anything about it themselves.

• • • •

One of the daintiest trimmings is the Pierrot Neck Ruche, in ribbon, which can be easily made from the printed instructions and sketches offered this week. Send for your copy to-day.

FAVORITE RECIPE.

PEACH SALAD

(Sent in by Mrs. P. D.

Twelve large halves of canned peaches, 1 cup white cherries, ½ cup hazel nuts or almonds, Carnationnaise, crisp lettuce leaves, 12 ripe olives. Remove pits from cherries, insert nuts; place 3 or 4 nuts in hollow of each peach. Put two halves on bed of lettuce; garnish with ripe olives. Serve with Carnationnaise.

"WE WILL BE!"

BY LAWRENCE WARD

Mr. Brent arranged his tie with precision, brushed an imaginary speck from the shoulder of his immaculate black coat, opened a window so that the room might air while he dined, and then with one glance around the four grim walls he closed the door and walked slowly down stairs. On the floor below he hesitated as he always did when Miss Wren's door was open. He liked the cheeriness of the crimson carpet, the wicker chair, the big Boston fern, the sewing table and an occasional glimpse of Elsie Wren, sewing or reading or feeding her bird with little housewifely airs that seemed strange in a fashionable boarding house.

But Elsie was not there, and her door was almost closed, so he did not absorb any of the hominess which he craved. He went down and dined with a dozen other lonely men and women who tried to make homes for themselves out of four walls in another man's house and with more or less success.

James Brent ate his dinner in an abstracted manner. He never joined in the general conversation about the long table, but occasionally someone would boldly address a remark to him, and he would answer in his deliberate manner, pleasantly but reservedly. He was a lonely man, alone in the world, and lately he had grown to detest the four walls of his room on the third floor front. The very sight of Elsie Wren's red carpet thrilled him—he wanted a cheery room with a red carpet, a singing bird, a Boston fern, and a wicker chair with——

This thought came to him as he took his after-dinner stroll down the street of the small town where he lived. Over there on the hill was the university where he taught every day. He wanted a home to come to after the day's teaching, but he had nothing to offer such a bright, charming little woman as Miss Elsie Wren, who was a music teacher as well as the favorite inmate of the boarding house.

"If I had a home to offer," thought Mr. Brent, blushing painfully in the dark, "but I could not take a wife home to a boarding house, though it has been done——" he added hopefully.

Out of the darkness an automobile flashed its lights. In the sudden glare Mr. Brent saw a white and black sign nailed on a tree—he saw a gate, a little lawn and a small house,—then darkness absorbed the picture as the car disappeared.

"Aha! A house to rent," mused the bachelor as he leaned on the fence. "A house—to—rent——"

A week or two later he went out for his Sunday afternoon stroll, overtaking Elsie Wren on a block beyond the house. He had to hurry a little to catch up with her swift pace.

"Isn't it a lovely day?" she asked. He agreed, then added nervously, "Are you in a hurry?"

"Yes—and no," she laughed. "Why?"

"I've been looking at a house—would like your advice," mumbled Mr. Brent, opening the gate of the little place and closing it behind her. His fine, clean-shaven face was set in tense lines; never had a greater problem confronted the gentle mathematician than this one.

"Fancy your taking a place and keeping house," murmured Miss Wren, as she followed him into the wee hall. "Isn't it the cutest place—one could have plants in that window," she said with the flower-lover's eagerness.

"Yes, in any of the rooms—the sun follows the windows all day," he heard himself eagerly saying. "Awnings in the summer will make it cool—the rooms upstairs are charmingly arranged, but they are, of course, unfurnished, so are the kitchen and dining room." He opened the doors, but Miss Wren quickly furnished them in her mind and the few suggestions she uttered betrayed the yearning of the single homeless woman for a real abiding place of her own.

"One room is furnished," he said at last, when it was time to go.

"Which one?"

"The living-room. I've had it furnished like one I've admired and—" he opened the door of the south room, and Miss Elsie Wren stood dumbly upon the threshold while her face grew pink, pinker, pinkest. Here was a reproduction of her own cheery room at the boarding house—a room furnished with odds and ends from her old home—a crimson rug, gray walls, white woodwork, cloudy white curtains, a Boston fern or two, a cozy fireplace, a wicker chair, tables, a big easy chair, a masculine touch not included in Miss Wren's room!

"Oh—how strange!" she breathed.

"You—like it?" he asked, looking worried.

"I must!" tears were in her kind eyes.

"We could be happy here—together, Elsie Wren," he declared desperately.

Then there was a little silence while the fate of the house hung in the balance.

Suddenly she lifted happy eyes to his tender ones. "We will be happy here," she whispered.

NOT ALWAYS

A woman advertised for a caretaker for her town house, and, after interviewing a large number of applicants, found one who suited her.

"Thanks for giving me the job," said the man; "and might I ask you a question? You stated in your advertisement that you wanted a married man. Does that mean you have some work in view for my wife?"

"Oh, no," replied the woman. "I wanted a married man so as to be sure I'd get someone used to taking orders from a woman."

"Dear Marion:—Is it proper for a girl to give her fiance an engagement gift upon their betrothal?

E. A. V."

No. This seems to be a worrying question, because it has been asked before. The man presents the girl with an engagement ring.

"Dear Marion:—Where should the salad be placed at dinner and at luncheon?

Jennie W."

At dinner the salad is served with the main course, on a small plate in front and a little to the left of the dinner plate. At luncheon the salad is served as a separate course.

COMPLETELY RUN DOWN.

Symptoms That the Blood is Thin Should Not Be Neglected.

Weak, run-down, lacking strength, energy and ambition, nervous, sleepless, poor appetite, digestion disturbed—these are the symptoms named by a great majority of people who have been benefitted by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These tonic pills correct the condition described and if you have any of these symptoms, you should give these pills a trial. Their great value in cases of this kind is shown by the statement of Mrs. James A. Tibbets Halifax, N.S., who says:—"I was completely run down in health. My blood was thin, and lately he had grown to detest the four walls of his room on the third floor front. The very sight of Elsie Wren's red carpet thrilled him—he wanted a cheery room with a red carpet, a singing bird, a Boston fern, and a wicker chair with—— and watery, and my nerves so bad that I did not sleep well at night. My appetite was poor and the least exertion left me weak and trembling. When I went out I would have a severe headache, and would have to lie down as soon as I got in the house. A friend advised me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I soon found they were helping me and by the time I had taken the sixth box I felt like a new woman, and have enjoyed good health ever since. For this reason I can highly recommend the pills to anyone run-down or troubled with their nerves."

Not only do Dr. Williams' Pink Pills help the nerves. Their main function is to enrich and increase the blood, and as the blood supplies the whole body, new life is given to the entire system. Better sleep, steady nerves, improved appetite, increased vigor—all these can be yours by taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Begin them to-day. Sold by all medicine dealers, or by mail post paid, at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

LITTLE SONGS OF LOVE

AND THE GREATNESS OF THESE

I have seen an old love falter,
Spent upon some ancient altar,
Where fires have turned to ashes gray
For one who lost the narrow way;
But in spite of wind and rain
I have seen old love remain.

I have seen a great house fall,
Taking with it wealth and all—
Bringing low the proud of name,
Blotting beauty, slaying fame;
But I have seen them rise again
By love that never can be slain.

Yes, I have seen old love survive,
Taking the dead to make alive,
Opening the eyes of one so blind
That even darkness held the mind;
I have seen love writhe in pain
Rise up and smile and love again.

EDUCATION DOESN'T AFFECT HOME LIFE

Marguerite Strathy Takes Exception to Fear of Neglect.

Montreal, Que., July 21 (CP).—Marguerite Strathy, writing from St. Agathe Des Monts to the "Gazette," takes exception to a statement made by that paper on "Women and Education," in which the editor appeared to fear that home interests would be neglected if women took up higher avenues of learning. She writes:

"From my own experience, I can furnish some "social effects" of the lack of education for women in the higher branches of learning in Canada. Some twenty odd years ago, four or five young and serious students of the arts asked for admittance to the Department of Architecture at McGill University, intending to take up the career of 'interior decorator,' then fast becoming a 'womanly' occupation. Though natives of Montreal and daughters of those men who had built up the city and its university, the young Englishman then at the head of the department refused the request for trivial reasons. The immediate social effect was to drive several of the intending students to the United States where they have since pursued their careers, unwilling and expatriate Canadians."

Sandwich Has Been Developed On North American Continent

Most Other Dishes the Product of European Culinary Art—Sandwich Now An Indispensable Part of Daily Life on This Continent—Easy to Prepare and Easy to Serve—Many Recipes.

While it is said that the sandwich was invented by an Englishman, the Fourth Earl of Sandwich, North America can now probably claim it by right of adoption. On this side of the Atlantic the popularity of the sandwich has grown by leaps and bounds, until now it plays a very important part in the daily life of the average citizen. Most other dishes of which Canadians and Americans are fond were originally the products of European kitchens—and we have done little to improve the old ways or to develop new ways of preparing them. But, with the sandwich, we have brought our culinary inventive genius into play.

An Infinite Variety

We have developed an infinite variety of methods of preparing sandwiches. There is the toasted sandwich, which has now a great vogue. Fresh, buttered toast supplants the usual buttered bread. And there is the rye bread sandwich, and the double decker kind, and the popular "Club", a veritable meal in itself. Sandwiches with salad fillings, eaten with mayonnaise or some other dressings, cut in small pieces, are popular at teas and late suppers. Hot meat sandwiches, made from roast beef, roast pork, corned beef, veal loaf, sliced chicken, and other meats have won favour particularly with men. The health sandwiches, made from whole wheat or bran bread, with specially prepared fillings of vegetables are especially favoured by persons who pay careful attention to diet.

Easy to Prepare

One of the reasons for the extreme popularity of the sandwich is that it takes little time or trouble to prepare it. It is easy to serve since it does not require trimmings, disposing altogether of knives, forks and other accessories. And it is delicious to the taste. The addition of a little mustard gives flavour, piquancy, and zest to any sandwich. The mustard should be of the dry, English variety to bring out the hidden flavours in meats, fish, cheese and vegetables. With a salad filling it should find its place in the dressing.

SOME SANDWICH RECIPES

Hot Cheese Dreams

½ lb. Canadian cheese or 1½ cups grated; 2 tablespoons melted butter; ½ cup milk; ½ teaspoon Keen's Mustard; ¼ teaspoon paprika; 1 teaspoon salt; 1 egg.

Mix all the ingredients together into a smooth paste. Spread between slices of bread. Fry the sandwich in butter until golden brown on both sides. This filling may be prepared and kept indefinitely. A slice of bacon may be used as a garnish.

Toasted Cheese Sandwich

Prepare a filling as for hot cheese dreams, but toast sandwich on both sides.

Peanut Butter Sandwich

½ cup peanut butter; ½ cup chopped pickle; 1 teaspoon Keen's Mustard; 3 tablespoons hot water; ½ teaspoon salt.

Beat all ingredients together until light. Spread between slices of either white or whole wheat bread.

Mock Paté de Foie Gras

1 calf's liver (20 ounces); ½ teaspoon black or white pepper; few grains cayenne; ½ teaspoon ground nutmeg; 1½ teaspoons Keen's Mustard; ½ teaspoon salt; 3 tablespoons water in which a minced onion has been boiled; ¼ cup liquor from boiling calf's liver.

Cook a calf's liver in salted water until very tender; grind in a meat cutter. Moisten with two tablespoons melted butter. Work into a paste with the butter and seasonings. Pack in jars that have been buttered, cover with melted butter and set aside to be used for sandwich filling.

Club Sandwich

1 saltspoon Keen's Mustard; 1 teaspoon fresh butter; 4 slices chicken; 2 strips bacon; 2 slices tomato; leaf of lettuce; mayonnaise dressing.

Mix Keen's Mustard with fresh butter and use to butter two slices of toast; Put chicken, broiled bacon, tomato, lettuce on the toast. Spread with mayonnaise. Season to taste.

WOMEN'S INSTITUTE WEEKLY COLUMN

AT WARSAW

Miss Elizabeth Hopkins was in Warsaw on Monday afternoon, holding her second coaching class. She was well pleased to have the thirteen out, as the thunder storm occurred when they would likely be starting out. Another thing that pleased her was the real interest shown by the girls and she urged the girls, every one to attend the Peterborough Fair and as many as possible to attend the Toronto Exhibition, and take part in the competitions. She questioned the girls in what she had given them last week, and gave some menus for a family of six, in the country, for a day in July. After having a few minutes to read and study the menus she asked for the placings of these menus, and for the reasons. Sometimes the placings were not correct but she wished them to give their reasons for the placings they gave, in all cases.

Charts, with pictures of dresses, shoes and some other garments, also lists making a supposedly complete and suitable wardrobe for a girl in the country were hung up. The girls were given time to study them and decide which was the best and most suitable and give reasons. The same was done with living rooms. None of the living rooms shown were ideal for a farm home. One was too cold-looking; one to hot, the furniture in the other two was not suitable for a room to be used as a living room should be. The girls made their placings quite well. Charts of four kitchens were given to each of the girls; between two of the kitchens it was very hard to decide which was the better, as each had some good thing to counter-balance the bad points. The kitchen put as poorest by all was one in which there would be a great amount of walking. No two pieces were conveniently placed, regarding any other piece.

Then there was a judging of lunches brought by four girls. The placing of these lunches was very difficult as all were good. Miss Hopkins had asked for a poor lunch, but no one had brought one. In giving their reasons, most of the girls were methodical, but nearly all lacked speed, which, as in other things, may be attained only by practice, and the teacher urged the girls to notice things and practice doing them methodically, and rapidly. By persistently so doing they can see at a glance and explain without hesitation.

Miss Hopkins expressed herself as pleased with the way the girls did their work.

One public school teacher was in the class. Most of the girls preferred judging lunches or wardrobes to household arrangements and it appears that is the case throughout the province

AT MOUNT PLEASANT.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

Mount Pleasant branch of East Durham's Women's Institute has been a live branch ever since its organization, which as near as can be related, was in the year 1905, since which time a monthly meeting has not been missed but for a few times in case of a storm or bad roads.

A meeting was held at the home of Mrs. Dr. W. E. Dean at Mount Pleasant on July 4th, 1905, at which the following officers were in charge:

President—Mrs. C. H. Shield.
Secretary-Treas.—Mrs. (Dr.) W. E. Dean, from July till her removal from the village in October, when Mrs. Henry Lowes was appointed secretary in her place.

The following are the officers from that time to the present year:

ENTERTAINING GUESTS

A Series Giving Hints on Arranging Parties.
By LAURA.

Almost all of our parties have been for older folk, so this week, I have chosen a party for a younger group, but which may also be used by older ones if desired.

Invitations for the one I have in mind, were sent out like attractive "literature" the hotels and summer resorts which lure people away in the summer, and made in the form of a booklet in which were pasted cuttings of scenes from mountains and seashore ads. On the cover was printed the name of the hostess and tour, such as:

Clarke's Tour
Big Vacation Trip
July 28, 1928

Inside were listed all the attractions to be enjoyed: boating, fishing, hunting, motoring, etc. Of course, all the guests were greatly surprised and waited in anticipation of the event. When they arrived on the lawn, they were presented with tickets, and after everyone had arrived, it was announced that the slips were numbered so they were to match for partners for the tour.

First of all, they were told that their luggage must be packed, so a suitcase was brought forth and a numerous collections of articles. Each couple were told to take turns in packing and were allowed only one minute in which to do it. The number of articles seemed appalling at first, but they were assured that everything would fit so they set forth. Some only got a few in, while others couldn't fasten the lock. The clever couple who managed to get all the articles in and walk off with case, were given a tiny suitcase of candy to divide between them.

The guests were next led to a double row of chairs, where the loud call of "All Aboard" called them to select seats. A small boy, through a megaphone, announced the "sights" on the way, and distributed "guide-books" when the passengers alighted to see the Hidden City. These books were folded slips of paper with an elaborate description of a city, but blanks were left for the names of the big buildings, mountains, etc. Guide book in hand, everyone had to find his way about town; in other words he had to search for the names of the places to fill in the spaces in his book. These names were written on small slips and pinned or hidden around the lawn. The first person to fill his correctly received as a prize a small pocket map such as motorists use.

The next stop, after everyone had gone back to his private car, was made at a "famous moutain resort." Here everyone was blindfolded, given a staff for mountain climbing, and started off with the guide to scale the peaks. The guide blew a whistle every few seconds as a signal to the climbers to keep in line, but without anything else to hold to but the staff, it was not easy to follow the whistle, so many got lost. Those left in the original party when the climb over the lawn was finished, were rewarded with a drink of water from the famous subteranean spring—a glass of cold punch from a clean bucket.

They visited also, Lakeside-by-the-Sea, where they made sand pies and raced boats over a tub of water, by breath-power, the winner getting a silver cup.

The tour ended with a visit to the farm. Here everyone was given a slip with the name of an animal on it. Then everyone stood in line and the first player passed down the line to "see the animals." As he paused at a player, that one had to make a noise like the animal names on his slip, and the other had to guess the animal he represented. Each player was privileged to keep on down the line as long as he could continue to guess right. His guess, by the way, was whispered into the ear of the player so the others in the line could not benefit by it. The players who managed to pass down the line of animals were rewarded with little fuzzy pin-cushions and pen-wipers in the form of cats, dogs, etc.

And now the guide at the wheel of the private car announced their arrival in camp. They disembarked, to find a real picnic supper spread on a long table on the porch with all the goodies they loved best. For the centerpiece the hostess had made a bonfire of twigs with an electric bulb and red paper to give the glow of fire.

MARION'S MAIL

DEAR MARION:—

Congratulations on your reply to "A Good Girl (?). She certainly does hate herself, and how!

TWO MODERN, BUT "FAIRLY-GOOD" GIRLS.

Thanks, 'Fairly-Good' Girls! That particular good girl who wrote a few days ago has certainly stirred up a hornet's nest—I have half a dosen letters telling her off. And I think, really and truly, she must have had a grouch when she wrote the letter. What say if we take that as an excuse, anyhow?

* * * *

"Dear Marion:—

We've just head "A Good Girl's" letter in this evening's paper and we just want to tell her a few things. We're not what are called "Hot Babies," but we are what you would call "Popular Kids" and we don't mean Dumbells. We're seventeen years of age. We don't pet or drink, although we do smoke occasionally, and we could have at lealt two dates a night. We don't see one bit of harm in smoking. We have never been out with a boy yet who had a flask.

We take it from your letter "Good Girl," that when people marry they are supposed to sit back and let the world go by. We just heard someone say the other day, "In a few years, most people will laugh at marriage." Of course, we don't quite agree with the saying.

We enjoy all sorts of sport. We don't condemn "Good Girl," but we certainly think that her criticism is too much against the Peterborough Girls. You'll find good and bad wherever you go.

Now, dear Marion, we would like to know what you think of smoking and also of our little talk to you.

Hoping to see our letter soon. We are

TILLIE AND BUBBLES."

I'm quite sure of one thing; "Good Girl" won't approve of your pen names. Tillie and Bubbles are altogether too frivolous to be in the good graces of Thursday's correspondent. Your note in regard to smoking, brings up a long-held idea of mine in regard to the double standard. There cannot be one standard of morals for men and another for women—not equitably. And I think that if women are entitled to all the liberties and rights that men have had through the centuries (and who would deny, now, that they are?) they should be ready to assume some of the obligations and free to achieve the vices if they wish to try hard enough. One hopes, of course, that they will not. Take smoking, for instance, since you have mentioned it. On what basis of equity can a man support the dictum that while he can smoke, his wife, because of her sex, must not? Mind you, smoking is not morally wrong. Our civilization has chosen to frown upon it as being unseemly among women, but there is no prohibition in the decalogue. The idea that married folk are "has-beens" is absurd, of course, and the fact that they can still enjoy life after a visit to the altar doesn't menace the marriage institution. Write again, Tillie and Bubbles.

* * * *

"Dear Marion:—

I don't see how anyone with 'Good Girl's' outlook on life could 'Just adore sports' as she says. And isn't she sweet when she say, 'Even playing baseball with my friends.' How condescending! I'm so mad at her that I'm almost stuttering in my writing, and I think your reply to her is just as great.

I am just about to outgrow my teens, and I have had a good time since I left school, but I hope to goodness I'm not a BAD girl just because I don't sit smugly back with all the ideas 'Good Girl' holds. Life must be terrible to her. And I'm sure that paragon of manhood, the 'most wonderful boy chum' she writes about, must be proud of her and must look forward with delight to the prospect of a lifetime spent with her.

Tell her again, please, how foolish she is. Or if she will give us her name I will invite her on a party where there will be no drinking, smoking, or petting, and yet where everyone will have a good time.

Yours sincerely,
JEAN A."

I think that is a splendid suggestion of yours about the party, Jean A. I am sure there are more parties in Peterborough where everyone has a good time without the objectionable features than there are of the other kind. To take 'Good Girl' on such a party would be the best possible answer to her mistaken ideas. How about it, 'Good Girl'?

"Dear Marion:—

I was surprised by seeing in this evening's Examiner a little note of mine, especially as you had been gracious enough to send me a little personal reply which was also a surprise to me. Yes, I received the 'Pot pourri' receipe, etc., for which I thank you.

Now perhaps I should be ashamed to say it, but I have really felt a thrill something like delight at your outspoken little sermonettes to the 'males' in general, continued in this evening's Examiner from yesterday's. I like the man in the story of 'Betty and the Bear.' I felt like saying, 'That's it, Betty, hit him again, and if you should not happen to kill him and he attacks you, well call on me and I'll be right here.

With all kind wishes. Yours very sincerely,
M. B.

Thanks, M. B., for your letter, and also for the beautiful pressed flowers. Not many bouquets come the way of a newspaper writer and for that reason those we do receive are all the more sweet. I'm glad you like my sermonettes. Everyone doesn't agree, of course, and I am always glad to have someone write giving a contrary opinion. Write again.

"Dear Marion:—

I am enjoying your column very much, especially the tips on household work. I would like to enquire about Esperanto. I read about it a few weeks ago, and haven't seen anything about it since. Are there going to be instructions or lessons in The Examiner? I'm interested in it, and would be very grateful for any information you could give me on the subject.

I haven't any good tips to offer you, so will just send wishes for success for your column.

Sincerely,
A. M. L."

Thanks for your good wishes, A. M. L. Since your letter came about a week ago (there are so many to answer!) I have tried to get more tips into the column. How do you like it now?

I'm afraid there is not enough interest shown in Esperanto to warrant running lessons in the paper. We might form a little Esperanto league next fall, though; and I could send lessons to those interested. You would do the lessons and send in homework; then I might dig up some correspondents for you in foreign countries and I think we could have a good time. What do you think? If I forget about it,, just remind me when the cool 'studying' weather comes after vacation, won't you?

* * * *

"Dear Marion:—

I am enclosing a marked and signed coupon for your recipes. Years ago I prepared a 'Rose Jar,' as it was then called, and it is still as fragrant as ever, but I forgot the proportions of the ingredients used, so am coming to you for yours.

Very truly yours,
S. E. G."

* * * * * *

I hope that your "Potpourri" turns out well, S. E. G., and that it last as long as your rose jar. I am using the recipe myself, but it seems awfully hard, this damp weather, to dry out the petals. Someone wrote me suggesting that a good plan under these conditions is to use brine first. The brine evaporates quickly, drying out the petals as it goes. The rose jar idea is specially attractive a year like this when so many flowers are shedding their petals early.

THE MIRROR OF THE MODE

By Mary Marshall.

The handkerchief shown tied to the wrist is of rose chiffon with black lace corner and just below is one of green chiffon with cream lace. The smaller handkerchief held in the hand is of mauve chiffon and lace, just beneath it is one of white chiffon edged with black tulle and appliqued tulle flower. Below at the right is one of black chiffon edged with black lace, which may be carried with colored frocks. Below at the left is a large sports handkerchief of yellow chiffon with initial embroidered in black.

THE SATURDAY MARKET BASKET

Homegrown market produce this week is largely vegetables, but there are a few new arrivals in fruit. These include raspberries, black currants, and huckleberries.

Cherries are abundant at 10 cents a quart or $1.25 a basket, and 20 cents a pound for the large black ones. Raspberries are 15 cents a pint box; huckleberries, 11 quart basket, $2.25, or 23 cents a quart box. Black currants are 20 cents a quart.

Plums, yellow and red, are 25 cents a dozen, and green Malaga grapes are 25 cents a pound. Large ripe watermelons sell for $1.25, cantaloupes at 25 and 30 cents each, and Honey Dew melons are 35 and 40 cents each. Large juicy pears are 5 cents each or six for 25 cents. Peaches are 5 cents each.

New homegrown potatoes are 40 cents a peck. Old potatoes may be had 2 pecks for 35 cents. Carrots, onions, and beets are very plentiful at 5 cents a bunch or 6 bunches for 25 cents. Iceberg lettuce is 10 cents a head and leaf lettuce 5 cents a bunch. Homegrown tomatoes are 25 cents a pound, hot house ones sell for 20 cents a pound, and imported tomatoes are 15 cents a pound. Celery is priced from 20 cents to 35 cents a bunch.

Cabbages are 10 and 15c each, large white heads of cauliflower are 20 and 25 cents a head. Cucumbers are 5, 10 and 15 cents each. Turnips 10 cents each.

Green apples are 30 cents a measure and eating apples are quoted at 6 for 25 cents.

Oranges are selling from 30 cents to 40 cents a dozen, and bananas are plentiful at 3 pounds for 25 cents.

Spiced Currants.

This recipe is a great favorite with men-folk. Take 7 pounds of red and white currants, 5 pounds of brown sugar, three tablespoons of cinnamon, three tablespoons of cloves, 1 pint of vinegar. Remove stalks and well wash currants. Put in a preserving pan, add sugar, vinegar, and spices tied in a piece of muslin. Heat to boiling point and cook slowly one and a half hours. Store in a stone jar and keep in a cool place. Spiced currants are delicious with cold meats.

With the revival of more feminine fashions in dress has come a revival of the feminine fashion of doing dainty needlework. The girl who busies herself occasionally taking dainty stitches in lace, chiffon and fine linen may be just as up to date as the girl whose fingers toy with cigarettes and cigarette cases and whose favorite fancy work on warm days consists in shaking cocktails.

I know of a number of young girls who would have thought themselves "fearfully Victorian" to have been seen doing needlework a season or so ago who now make a point of taking some dainty needlework when they go away for holiday trips or house parties. The fashionable shops here and in Paris report a lively demand for jeweled thimbles, scissors and other sewing equipment.

So you see no one could call you old fashioned if you begin now making dainty handkerchiefs for Christmas presents, or for the little gifts and prizes which you will find so useful next winter. For two of the large handkerchiefs, which are sure to be in even greater favor next winter than at present, you will need a half yard of chiffon—since these are usually about eighteen inches square. Smaller handkerchiefs, which many women prefer, may be made from nine inch squares, so that a quarter of a yard of chiffon will suffice for four. You may edge them with footing in matching or contrasting tone, or you may use fine lace edging an inch or so in width and use this with the straight edge on the outside. Black chiffon with white edging and white chiffon with black edging provides a very smart combination. Handkerchiefs for use with sports or tailored ensembles may be made with rolled edges finished with a neat one-two-three stitch, and with initial in matching silk.

CHEVROLET

Price puts it in the lowest class Quality in the highest

THE "Bigger and Better" Chevrolet is motordom's most striking illustration of the difference between "cheapness" and "low-price".

Chevrolet is low-priced, beyond doubt . . lower-priced than ever before in all Chevrolet history. But, so far from being "cheapened", Chevrolet has been improved—in appearance, in performance, in value! If quality, instead of price, were the means by which cars were classified, Chevrolet would take its place in the higher ranks.

Everything about the "Bigger and Better" Chevrolet . . from the big, luxurious Fisher Bodies with their smart, stylish lines, to the powerful Chevrolet engine with its countless new refinements . . everything bespeaks a high standard of quality that has never been sacrificed for any price advantage.

The Chevrolet you buy is, first of all, a bigger and better car. That it is also an outstandingly low-priced car is an additional important advantage, gained through Chevrolet's volume production and its association with General Motors.

Call around and drive this Quality, Low-Priced car today. C28-7-28B

Cognawagas Win With A Seventh Inning Rally

WITH TWO OUT IN FINAL FRAME COGS START RALLY WHICH ADDS THREE RUNS TO THEIR TOTAL

Crescents Drop Game To Cognawagas in Intermediate Loop.

SCORE 6 TO 5.

Eight Men Are Struck Out By Vannest, Seven By Frost.

With moonbeams lighting up a scene of wild excitement, the like of which only comes once in a lifetime, Cognawagas, with two out and two runs behind ,came to life again, and put three runs across to defeat Crescents at Exhibition Park, last evening, by the score of 6 5. The contest had been a nip and tuck affair with Crescents edging away from the Cogs until at the end of the sixth, Crescents had a lead of two runs. Darkness was descending rapidly as the Cogs retired their rivals in order in the seventh. Crescents were getting rid of the Cogs in fast order, and had two hands down, when Vannest shot a single into right. Rooke followed with a drive to Ted LeBarr, then playing second base. Le Barr failed to get the ball to his brother in time to get Rooke. Crary took a mighty clout, good for a single into middle ,scoring Vannest and Rooke, to tie the score. Not being satisfied, the Cogs secondsacker, took second, and proceeded to steal third. The grandstand was in an uproar. Vannest had come out to coach at third base. With Crary leading off. Frost shot the ball to second base, but Crary was dashing for third. Heard threw to Williams, the throw being wide. Williams lost track of the ball, and in an attempt to locate the spalding, he bumped into Vannest. Almost immediately, the two players started a scrap, and Crary went in with the winning run.

The victory gave Cogs a one game advantage in second place. They have two games with Bethany, one at home, and the other in Bethany. Crescents also have two more games, one with Raybestos and one in Bethany.

Crary was the handy man for the winners. In the sixth, with Crescents players on all three sacks, he went after a hard chance from the bat of Bob Ross and got the force at second base to stop runs and retire the side. What he accomplished in the seventh has already been told.

Three hits and a wild heave home gave Crescents two runs, in the first. F. Jones fanned and Brioux grounded out. J. Jones doubled to right Baker dropping the ball after a long run. Ross singled to score Jones, Billingsley's wild peg home allowing Ross to get to third. Williams shot a single through Corbett to score Ross, and went out at second on the return peg from Billingsley.

A low throw off Wilson's grounder, by Heard, allowed the runner the bag. Corbett singled into right. Vannest struck out. Rooke picked out his favorite spot for a smash through first to score Wilson and Corbett. Crary was passed. Billingsley tapped to the pitcher who hesitated on the throw and all runners were safe. Baker fanned, and Delahaye lined out to L. LeBarr.

A double to right by Lew LeBarr started the Crescents in the second but nobody could move him along.

Corbett tripled for Cogs in their half with two out, after which Vannest was thrown out by Williams.

The third brought trouble when with one out, Brioux was passed. On J. Jones' grounder, Vannest threw low to Rooke to let the runner on and Brioux go to third. Vannest got back at Crescents by whiffing Ross, and Williams popped to Wilson.

Cogs went into the lead in their half up. Rooke singled across second and went out stealing. Crary walked for the second time, and stole second. Billingsley fanned but Baker tripled to score the run. Delahaye popped to Williams.

Crescents evened the count at 3 to 3 in the fourth. L. LeBarr drew a walk and stole. Frost was struck out. Rooke moved in and Ted Le Barr's pop fell safe back of first. Heard grounded out by way of Wilson, Lew LeBarr going in. Corbett threw out F. Jones.

The Cogs stay was brief. Crips fanned, Wilson flew out to F. Jones and Corbett missed the third one.

The fifth brought Crescents another run. Brioux fanned but J. Jones singled and stole second. Ross struck out. Williams hit, and Jones scooted in with a tally. L. Le Barr grounded out.

With two gone, Crary got a hit across second but went out stealing. Brioux had retired with an injured finger, Ross relieving him, Ted Le Barr going to second, and McDonough to right.

The sixth saw Vannest waver. Frost singled, Ted LeBarr fouled out to Rooke, and Heard singled. F. Jones was passed filling the bases. McDonough was struck out, but J. Jones drew a pass, forcing in Frost. The bases were still populated when Ross slashed a drive down second, only a brilliant play by Crary saving the situation for his team.

Delahaye made it two bases on a drive that McDonough failed to handle but he was left stranded.

In the seventh, Williams was tossed out by Vanest; L. LeBarr went out on a foul fly to Rooke and Frost fanned.

Then along came the Cogs with their great rally to recover their lost ground and win the game.

END OF THE TENTH

This is a telephoto of one of the big moments in the Tunney-Heeney fight at Yankee Stadium, New York, in which Tunney successfully defended his title as world heavyweight champion. Heeney was snapped just after the champion had knocked him to the canvas. The New Zealander is supporting himself on his left elbow and instinctively holds his guard over his face with his right hand while Tunney towers above him. Toward the end of the tenth round Tunney saw that the battle was his and, rushing Heeney hard, knocked him to the ropes. The "iron man" went down almost unconscious, his body nearly rolling from the ring. Obviously he was unable to get up but the bell saved him.

VIEWS ON SPORTS

On Tuesday night the Royals and Kiwanis will meet at the Exhibition Park in the second game of the Junior finals.

Teco and Lockworks added a little excitement to the Softball League when they tied six all last night in Confederation Square. The cellar teams in the league are sure putting up a real fight.

* * * * * * *

Gene Tunney was well paid for the 32 minutes and 52 seconds that he worked on Thursday night in retaining his heavyweight championship. He drew $366.22 for every second's work.

* * * * * * *

Walter Hagen made his second round in the Canadian open of the Rosedale Golf tournament yesterday in 70 strokes. Would any Peterborough man want to do much better?

* * * * * * *

It looks as if the Canadian lawn tennis championship might leave Canada this year. Wright, the present champion from Montreal, lost yesterday to Van Ryn from Princeton in the semi-finals.

* * * * * * *

Tex Rickard blames the radio for his loss of $155,719.77 at the big Tunney-Heeney bout. Peterborough fans thought there was something wrong with the air that night.

* * * * * * *

Stirling girls have a nice lead in the Trent Valley League. They have already two wins and no losses. Madoc is second with one win and one loss.

* * * * * * *

Last night's victory for the Cognawagas gives then a one-game advantage on second place of the East Peterborough League.

* * * * * * *

Crary proved himself a real leader for the winners when he helped retire the side in the sixth by going after Bob Ross' drive.

* * * * * * *

The Cogs have still two games to play with Bethany and the Crescents; also two games, one with Raybestos and one with Bethany.

* * * * * * *

On Monday night Harrison's and the De Laval will clash in a softball game and on Tuesday night the K. of C. and Teco. August 2 will see the C.G.E. and Lock Works take on each other.

* * * * * * *

With the play-offs in the City Baseball League well, on the following bulletins are being published re the birth certificates of the players taking part:—

All players on championship teams in the City League must have their birth certificates, baptismal or church record handed in to the secretary of the league by Tuesday, July 31, 1928.

* * * * * * *

In the Junior, Juvenile and Bantam, players of the champion club must sign form in triplicate and forward their birth certificate along with playing certificate. Birth certificate will be returned after inspection.

* * * * * * *

Birth certificates and players' certificates of the Bantam, Juvenile and Junior league winners must be filed with the O.B.A.A. Secretary not later than August 2nd.

* * * * * * *

No extension of time will be granted associations or leagues to declare winners who are drawn to play in the following series:

Bantam—First game, August 11.
Juvenile—First game, August 11.
Junior—First game, August 11.

LEADERS ARE IN BATTING SLUMP

NEW YORK, July 28.—(Canadian Press).—The first division of the Big Six, made up at the moment of the three National Leaguers, Rogers Hornsby, Paul Waner and Frank Frisch, collaborated on a one-day slump yesterday as the American League half remained idle. Waner got one hit, which represented the afternoon's work of the three stars.

Frisch all but slipped into the second three when his average fell to .329. He now has a lead of only one point over Cobb and seven points over Babe Ruth.

WHITE SOX BEAT PHILADELPHIA

Athletics Take Their Fourth Straight Victory From Chicago.

WASHINGTON WINS.

NEW YORK, July 28 (Canadian Press).—A six-run rally in the eighth inning yesterday gave the Philadelphit Athletics their fourth straight victory over the White Sox at Chicago. The score was seven to four.

Young Ed. Walsh started for the Sox, but could not hold the four-run lead his mates gave him in the first inning. Double plays saved him until the eighth, when he retired in favor of Connally. Cox pitched the last inning. The Sox loaded the sacks in their half of the eighth but could not score on Rommell and Grove, who succeeded Quin on the mound. Two pinch hitters failed to connect in this round.

Jimmy Fox gave Philadelphia its first run in the fourth when he hit a home run.

Washington Wins.

With the score tied, four all, the Washington Senators pushed across three tallies in the ninth inning and defeated the St. Louis Browns 7 to 4. The victory gave the Senators two wins in five starts.

Six two-base hits, three triples and a homer featured the hitting during the contest, with Manush, Brown outfielder, con necting for the circuit jaunt.

RACE NAMED FOR HARRIS ARDIEL

WINDSOR, July 27.—The handicap performers which have been enjoying a life of ease in their stalls for two or three days, will go back to work again to-morrow. The sixth day of racing at "Old Windsor" provides a pair of events in which the best of the talent will compete.

Each Worth $1,500.

For the sprinters the feature will be the Harris-Ardiel Handicap, a six-furlong classis named after the local automobile mogul and sportsman. It will be open to three-year-olds and up, and carry $1,500 in added money.

Immediately after the event for the speed merchants will come the Mary Tudor Handicap, also worth $1,500, but arranged for the distance horses. The route is a mile and 70 yards.

Two other sprints, one mile heat and two at longer distances will make up the offering. Since to-day is another ladies' day, Bill Woolatt is not worrying about unlucky Friday. He is assured of another bumper crowd when the first race goes at 2 o'clock.

Mr. Ardiel is a well known ex-resident of Peterborough.

ROYALS RALLY TO WIN GAME

Four Runs Are Scored On One Hit in the Eighth Inning.

GULLAY HITS HOMER.

MONTREAL, Que., July 28 (Canadian Press).—The Royals rallied in the eighth inning of yesterday afternoon's game with Rochester to score four runs on one hit and register an 8—7 win over the Red Wings to even the series at a one triumph each. Keen enjoyed a two-run lead going into the eighth but a walk, a double and then two more passes tied the score. He was yanked in favor of Decatur who also walked Haines, the first man to face him for the run that put the Royals one up and when Gilbert muffed Gulley's easy grounder another run came in.

The Red Wings made a determined attempt to tie it up again in the ninth and Southworth's single after Brown and Gelbert had hit for one base scored Brown, but the Royals pulled a double play to retire the side. The Royals used four pitchers, Hopkins being the only one who showed any effectiveness.

Gulley clouted his seventeenth home run of the season with Haines on base in the first inning.

Orioles Even Series

JERSEY CITY, N.J., July 28 (A.P.)—Baltimore came back strong yesterday afternoon to even up with the Jerseys by taking the second game of the series, 6 to 1. Rain halted the game for fifteen minutes at the end of the fifth inning.

The victors garnered a total of thirteen safe blows off the delivery of the opposing boxmen. Baltimore scored what proved to be the winning run in the sixth inning. A base on balls to Barton, C. Walsh's error, Lamotte's bunt, a force out and a single by Pinchhitter Bolen brought in the run.

They got to Walsh for four more runs in the ninth.

PIRATES DROP FINAL GAME TO N. Y. GIANTS

Jackson's Home Run in Second Starts Winning Streak.

BROOKLYN WINS.

Cincinnati Reds Take Fourth Game of Series From Philadelphia.

NEW YORK, July 28 (Canadian Press).—The Giants made it three out of four from the Pirates, winning the final game of the series here yesterday 4 to 2. Both Fred Fitzsimmons and Fred Fussell pitched good ball, but superior support brought victory to the New York hurler. Pittsburgh's four errors contributed much to the Giant cause, figuring in three of McGraw's runs.

Travis Jackson started the Giants on their way with a home run in the second.

Brooklyn Wins.

Jim Bottomley's twenty-second home run failed to prevent Dazzy Vance from winning a 5 to 3 decision over St. Louis at Brooklyn, giving Brooklyn an even break in four games against the League leaders. Vance fanned five and held the Cardinals to six hits. Bottomley's drive put him within one homer of Hack Wilson, the Chicago outfielder, who leads the League.

Clarence Mitchell pitched shut-out ball for the visitors until the sixth, when he was routed by a fusilade of singles. Harold Haid and Sylvester Johnson followed him into the box, and also suffered damage.

Drop Final Game.

Sheriff Blake, pitching one of his best games of the season for the Cubs, defeated the Braves, 2 to 1, in the last game of the series at Boston. Boston had won the two previous games. Blake held the Braves to five widely scattered hits, and probably would have registered a shut-out but for his generosity in walking Boston batters in the seventh. It was American Legion day at Braves Field, and members of the Legion placed memorial wreaths on the tablet dedicated to Christy Mathewson and Tony Boeckel both of whom were connected with the Braves.

Take Fear.

The Cincinnati Reds completed their series yesterday by taking the Phillies into camp for the fourth game in five, by a score of 3 to 1. Four singles off Jimmy Ring in the first inning gave the Reds two runs that Pete Donohue proceeded to make sufficient. Don Hurst's sixteenth home run of the year saved the Phillies from a coat of whitewash.

JUNIOR FINALS TUESDAY NIGHT

Kiwanis and Royals Will Meet in the Second Game.

EXHIBITION PARK.

The Royals and the Kiwanis are scheduled to meet each other in the second game of the Junior City League play-offs on Tuesday night in the Exhibition Park. The Royals, champions of their groups for the last three years, are in the junior loop this year, and in the game last Saturday they carried off a win by two runs, the score being 4 runs to 2. The Kiwanis, Junior City League champions for the last two years, are expected to put up a real struggle. A win for the Kiwanis will make a third game necessary, while a win for the Royals will give them the Junior championship.

The winners are scheduled to meet the Oshawa St. Andrew's, which are a real team this year.

DELORO GIRLS BEAT MARMORA

Winners Secure Three Runs in Fourth Frame of Game.

MARMORA, July 28.—Deloro girls' softball team won their first Trent Valley League game on Thursday in defeating Marmora by the odd run. The game had all the closeness suggested by the score, both pitchers being effective and the fielding good. The fourth innings decided the game, Deloro securing three runs when two in arrears, and holding the lead through tightened play.

The teams:

Marmora—E. Rice lf, H. Williams 2b, G. Williams ss, M. Flynn c, C. Robertson 3b, J. Williams rf, J. Thompson p, M. Leonard 1b, A. Archer cf.

Inside Sportin' Dope—By a Wise Cracker

Mister Sporting Editor:

Well, Mac, our ball team has had a perfect average since my last scribble. They played 1 game and won it, which was the longest winning streak the lads has had since Dominion Day. Them and Mister Bennett attracted a big crowd to Oshawa's lakeshore park last Sat., and while Mister Bennett mightn't of done Oshawa any harm, our finely trained athaletes knocked off their pet ball team, and should of done it a lot easier'n they done. If our Mister Rose hadn't of got bogged down or something out there in the middle garden our margin woulda been 4 runs bigger. It looked for a while like Mister Rose wasn't much of a insurance risk out there, for they was no telling when 1 of them floaters that were dropping around him for hits mighta fell on his bean, but fortunately he come into 2nd base in time to save his life, so all's swell that ends swell.

She was a free and easy affair that game till all at once the massive figger of none other than Hap Harrison strode out to the mound. The crowd give Mister Harrison the dirty laugh when he arrived on the scene, but the fellows up there at the bat couldn't see nothing to laugh at—in fact, they couldn't see nothing at all, and it's a cinch that you can't hit what you can't see. Anyway those birds didn't do any hitting, and Mister Harrison and Mister Swanston did at the right moment, and so we win a ball game, which, seeing it was the 1st since July 2, was quite a notable event.

Wed. both the Belleviles and the Deloros give us a helping hand by slipping a k.o. to the Motorists and the Ponies, and so the lads still got a chance to get into the playoffs. If we had only tuck 2 games from Kingston outa the 5 played with Mister Daley's men, the Petes would be sitting pretty right now.

Mister Angie Macdonald, which has been a very useful member of the team for the past month, is gone to Scotland for a holiday. He'll be missed. This boy had enough fight for nearly a whole ball club, Mac, and he is 1 of them rare birds—a ball player without a alibi. Nearly every guy that plays baseball can think up a excuse any time he boots 1 or pulls a boner, but this Mister Macdonald is different. He'll be a big help next season.

Well, Mac, if I'm going to get a earful of the fight returns it's time I quit. At that I ain't much excited over the battle somehow.

Sportfully yours,
A. WISE CRACKER.

RICKARD DROPS OVER $150,000

Financial Failure is Blamed on Radio and High Federal Tax.

46,400 ATTENDANCE.

NEW YORK, July 28 (A.P.).—Tex Rickard's loss on the Tunney-Heeney fight was announced by the promoter yesterday at $155,719.77.

Rickard attributed the financial failure of the bout to the radio and high Federal tax.

"This is the last big fight I will stage and permit the radio at the ringside unless they pay a handsome royalty," he said. "My contract with the radio people expires soon and I will not renew it unless they are willing to pay high for the privilege."

The estimated figures follow:

Gross gate receipts (first official check), $691,014.50.

State (5 per cent) and Federal (25 per cent.) taxes, $156,193.00.

Net receipts, $521,422.23.

Tunney's guarantee, $525,000.

Heeney's guarantee, $100,000.

Estimated attendance, 43,191.

Like the gambler that he is, Rickard took the loss calmly. "I can take the bitter with the sweet," he said.

The promoter has contended all along that July was no time to hold a championship bout, but selected the date at the insistence of Tunney, who, at the time wanted to fight in July and Sepember.

MILITARY FUNERAL TROOPER GORDON

Victim of Railway Collision Will Be Given a Military Funeral.

MONTREAL, Que., July 28.—(Canadian Press.)—A military funeral will be given Trooper Thomas Gordon, of the Royal Canadian Dragoons, who met death in the troop train collision at Sand Point on Wednesday, according to an annoucement at Military District No. 4 yesterday.

A brief funeral service will be held at the funeral chapel of a local undertaking establishment this afternoon, after which the body will be taken on a gun carriage for interment in Mount Royal cemetery.

Body Shipped.

The body of Trooper Vincent Cullinan, who was killed in the troop train collision at Sand Point on Wednesday, will be taken to Saint John, N. B., for burial. The body has been shipped from Arnprior, where the victims of the fatality were taken following the collision.

WALTER HAGEN IS LEADING

British Open Champion Shoots Spectacular 70 After Thursday's 69.

PLAY WITH BOOMER.

ROSEDALE GOLF COURSE, Toronto, July 28. — Walter Hagen, his clubs swinging just as he wanted them to, except at the 17th where he took three putts, made his second round in the Canadian open in 70 strokes, one worse than his 69 of Thursday.

Aubrey Boomer, his English partner, lacked breaks or he would have been better than his 73. His shots were hit beautifully.

The crowd again awaited the "Haig" institution, and the tee was packed when Boomer and his partner set out.

Several other pairs were ready and drove off to fill in the Hagen absence.

Walter has a bad throat. He had a fever the day before he left New York, he says, but all that did not prevent the American golfing tiger from dolling himself up in a powder blue sweater with trimmings to match.

It was exactly 2.10 when the 'Haig' answered the call for "Aubrey Boomer—Walter Hagen," shouted in stentorian tones by the starter.

Both players smacked screamers from the first tee.

Walter outdrove Aubrey and the gallery had a halt of several minutes until Hagen's caddie trundled down the clubhouse hill with his big brown bag of clubs, a trifle late. Both reached the green with mashies but Boomer missed his second putt, a two-footer. Walt sank his, Hagen 4, Boomer 5.

Hagen drew a place for his spoon to the green at the second and so did Boomer with a much faster swing, but his was just over. Walter lipped the cup with a 30 foot putt for an eagle 3, and took 4. Boomer 5.

Hagen, one yard behind Boomer from the tea, slashed into a rough lie with a mashie to get home. Two putts, Hagen 4; three putts, Boomer 5.

At the short fourth, both golfers laid two beauties on the green. Hagen just missed a birdie by two inches, Boomer also 3.

Hagen is three strokes up on Boomer at end of fourth and one stroke better than par.

SWIM FEATURED WATER SPORTS

Marathon Swim Of One Mile To Be Held at Chemong.

BEAUTIFUL TROPHY.

Feature upon feature follows upon the program of the Chemong Regetta to be held in Chemong Park on August 8th. A marathon swim of one mile in length is taking the interest of the would-be Wrigley stars of Peterborough, as all the swimmers are anxious to show their stamina and speed in distance, as well as in the shorter races to be held. The winner of the long race will receive a silver trophy donated by J. K. Hughes, W. Thomson and J. Patte, which is to be a beautiful prize.

Those who remembered the thrills and the spill in the sea flea race held in the Peterborough regatta in June will not be neglected at the Chemong affair as there are some very promising fast outboard motor boat races chalked up and some surprising and interesting entries will be ready to start. Drivers of the best boats in the district are tuning up their boats for this event and if the lake is a little bit choppy there will be thrills aplenty as these little crafts are very temperamental.

To round out the program there will be the full quota of swimming, paddling, tilting, motor boat races and everything in the acquatic line is on the program to make this the regatta of the season.

LOCKWORKS AND TECO DRAW, 6-6

Storemen Score Three Runs in Ninth To Even Count in League Game.

Lockworks and Teco battled to a 6-6 draw at Confederation Square last night in the City Softball League. The game, although rather sloppy at times, proved very interesting for a fair attendance of spectators.

The Lockworks were leading 6-3 when the ninth inning commenced. Two walks and a home run by Board tied it up and Umpire Batley called it at the end of the session on account of darkness.

Reginald Green twirled them in for the Lockmakers and, although a trifle wild at times, turned in a nice card. Outside of the second and ninth innings when the Teco scored their runs he had the Big Store gang at his mercy. Dormer dished them up for Teco and went great guns. With a little better support from his teammates he would have had a win.

Saunders for the Teco gang and Westbrooke and Jobbitt for the Lockworks were the fielding stars. Board and Dormer did the heavy hitting for the Teco, the former having a home run and a single, while the latter had a double and two singles. Green had a home run and a single, and Haskill three singles for the Lockworks.

Batteries:

Lockworks—Green and Haskill; Teco—Dormer and White.

Umpires—Batley and Nixon.

UNDERTOW DRAWS SWIMMERS TO DEATH

BUFFALO, N.Y., July 16. — Two Buffalo swimmers lost their lives yesterday, one perishing in the attempt to save the other at Pleasant Beach, on the Canadian shore of Lake Erie, a few miles from Port Colborne, Ontario.

Vincent Brennan, a salesman, was caught in the undertow and carried out into the lake while high winds whipped the waves into a rolling sea. He cried for assistance and George Brown plunged into the water to attempt the rescue. He was pulled under, however, while still far from the side of the man he sought to save. Neither body has been recovered.

PLAY BOY FIRST.

J. Joel's Horse Wins Liverpool Cup Race To-day.

LIVERPOOL, July 27.—(Canadian Press).—Play Boy, owned by J. Joel, won the Liverpool cup to-day. Reid Walker's Dellus was second and Mrs H. Lawrence's Regalo third. Eight ran. The odds were ten to one, eleven to two, eleven to two. The distance was a mile and a quarter and 70 yards.

THEATRES

AT THE CAPITOL.

TOM MIX IN "HELLO CHEYENNE"

One of the entertaining pictures which feature the children's favorite star, Tom Mix, is "Hello Cheyenne," running at the Capitol Theatre for this week-end. The hero is Tom Trask and the mix-up which always engages his energies in these Western pictures has to do this time with the efforts of rival telephone companies to get their lines into Rawhide first. Buck Overland is the leader of the unscrupulous group of competitors who do everything possible to outwit Tom and his company and the star, with his broad-leafed hat and clever horse have their usual series of swift adventures and hair-breadth escapes. Diana Cody is the heroine and she, with the help of Zip Molten, do a great deal to assist Tom in various tight corners.

A very interesting addition to the program is in one of the short-colored pictures which add such a dramatic tone to the usual lineup of feature and comedy pictures. This is "The Czarina's Secret," and centers about the romance of Catherine the Great and one of her courtiers.

"THE RACKET"

Comes to the Capitol on Monday and Tuesday — One of the Greatest Crook Pictures in Years—Thomas Meighan and Marie Prevost Are the Featured Players.

On Monday and Tuesday of next week the Capitol will offer "The Racket," one of the greatest crook pictures of this or any other season. Thomas Meighan and Marie Prevost are the leading players.

Although it is a strictly he-man melodrama, replete with gang warfare and gun-play, "The Racket" has a peculiar appeal to women.

Marie Prevost, Meighan's leading lady, is the only feminine members of the cast, and very few women are in the atmospheric background of the screen thriller. However, the Meighan photo-drama, has an undercurrent of the crusading spirit and its realism is so pronounced, that intelligent women regard the film as an educational influence. And for this reason, it has a singular appeal to feminine fans who glory in truth, and applaud when current conditions are so graphically exposed as to demand reform.

"The Racket" from the stage sensation by Bartlett Cormack, is Meighan's first starring production under his new contract with Howard Hughes, president of Caddo Production's with Meighan's latest effort being released by Paramount Famous Lasky Corporation. Lewis Milestone directed.

The author, Cormack, was at one time a metropolitan police reporter and his story is based on first-handed knowledge of conditions as they exist in many modern American cities. His story has been brought to the screen by photographic fidelity.

RAIN SOAKS COURSE FOR FINAL ROUND

Downpour Ceases Before Play Starts, But Clouds Continue To Threaten.

TORONTO, July 28 (Canadian Press).—Heavily clouded skies and a rain-soaked course ushered in the final day's play at the Canadian open golf championship at the Rosedale Golf Club to-day. The early morning downpour had ended before the first pair teed off, but the threat of rain remained and it is probably that heavier stroking will be in order among the early starters.

Sixty-one qualifiers will take up the final grind of 36 holes, with Walter Hagen, British open champion, leading the field, and Archie Compston, Great Britain, second.

TOTTENHAM OPENS IN SECOND DIVISION

Once Great Team Has Recently Fallen On Evil Days—Other Changes.

LONDON, July 28.—(By Canadian Press).—Soccer football will get under way in the British Isles in the middle of August and will continue to hold the athletic stage until the following May. The usual changes in the various divisions of the English and Scottish leagues due to promotions and regulations will take place.

In the British first division the great Tottenham Hotspurs team, now fallen on evil days, will accompnay Middlesborough to the second division, their berths being taken by Manchester City and Leeds United.

Millwall comes from the Southern section of the third division and Bradford from the northern section into the secondd ivision, while Fulham and South Shields go down.

The shakeup is expected to strengthen all the branches, though the English first division still shapes up much the same as last season, where a most extraordinary state of affairs developed, more than half the teams being found struggling to avoid relegation as the end approached.

In the Scottish league Ayr United and Third Lanark are promoted to the first division to take the place of Dunfermline Athletic and Bo'ness.

The first English league games are set for Aug. 25, though there will be some interesting preliminary matches. The Scottish clubs kick off two weeks earlier.

SERGEANT WORSICK LEADS RIFLEMEN

Shoots 66 Out of a Possible 75 in Lieut. Governor's Match.

WINNIPEG, Man., July 27 (Canadian Press).—Sgt. W. Worsick of the Winnipeg Light Infantry, won the Lieutenant Governor's match yesterday, the final day of the Manitoba Rifle Association's annual prize meeting. Sgt. Worsick, who led the field with 100 out of a possible 105 on entering the final shoot yesterday, shot a 66 out of a possible 75 for a total of 166. This was three points better than his closest rival, Sgt. W. Davidson, who won the match in 1925.

Besides winning the Lieut.-Governor's event, Sgt. Worsick captured first money in the All-Comers' Aggregate. He also takes the Hudson's Bay Cup, first presented in 1873, and one of the oldest trophies in Canada.

OLYMPIC JUDGES.

Robert Kerr and P. J. Mulqueen Are Appointed Olympic Officials.

AMSTERDAM, July 28 (Canadian Press).—Robert Kerr of Hamilton, captain of the Canadian track and field team, was appointed a track judge for the Olympic games opening on Sunday. Dr. A. S. Lamb, president of the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada, will be one of the timekeepers, while P. J. Mulqueen, chairman of the Canadian Olympic committee, will act as a field judge.

O.B.A.A. TO ENFORCE RESIDENCE RULE

Executive is Determined To Put An End To Players Changing Every Year.

The executive of the O.B.A.A. are desirous that their efforts to curb the practise of a number of players changing their place or residence every year should give prominence in all sections of the province as the day when baseball players can offer their services and other clubs bolstered up by individuals offering inducements to certain players from other centres is going to be a thing of the past. The clubs and players are either going to be amateurs in every sense of the word and live up to the spirit as well as the laws of the Association or there is no room for them in the Ontario Baseball Amateur Association and the public will have no false delusions as to their true status.

"The by-laws and constitution make it necessary for O.B.A.A. players who change their residence after August 1st to notify the Association."

During the early part of this season, a number of certificates were refused and others held up until the individual cases were investigated and in all such instances certificates were granted for this season on approbation, with a warning that if any further moves were made these players might find it difficult to obtain certificates for the 1929 season.

The Executive are looking to all leagues officers for co-operation in this effort to put amateur baseball on a strickly amateur basis.

U.S. SPLITS EVEN WITH THE FRENCH

Tilden Beats Lacoste, Hennessey Loses to Cochet.

Roland Garros Stadium, Auteuil, France, July 28 (A.P.).—Big Bill Tilden yesterday defeated his old rival, Rene Lacoste of France, in the first match of the Davis Cup challenge round by scores of 1—6, 6—4, 6—4, 2—6, 6—3.

Lacoste won the first set 6—1, Tilden winning only the second game of the set.

Tilden then won his service after deuce had been called six times, the American serving four aces, and the score was one all.

Big Bill carried the third set by a score of 6—4 and was leading two sets to one.

Lacoste came from behind to win the fourth set, 6—2, squaring the match and forcing it to a fifth set, which the American took, 6—3.

The last sea was nerve-racking. It meant the end for one or the other of the two old enemies. "Big Bill" started by losing his service in the first game. He retaliated in the second game, but Lacoste broke his service again in the third to lead 2—1, but Tilden soon forged ahead to take the game and set and match.

The stands had given Tilden and Lacoste one of the greatest ovations in sport history when they entered the court and watched the flashing ball through the match with intense absorption.

Henri Cochet of France, in the other match of the day, defeated John Hennessey of the American team, 5—7, 9—7, 6—3, 6—0, and the teams ended the day at one match all. Three victories for either team will decide who shall hold the cup for the ensuing year.

The last two matches will be played Sunday—Tilden against Cochet and Hennessey against Lacoste.

HOUSTON PLAYER HAS GOOD SCORE

TORONTO, July 27 (Canadian Press).—Playing in a driving rain which made footing insecure, Larry Nabsoltz, Colonial Club, Houston, Texas, turned in a score of 71 in the Canadian open golf championship here, one under par, gaining the leadership of the second round. The scores of 69, registered yesterday by Walter Hagen, British open champion, and McDonald Smith of Tuckahoe, N.Y., have not yet been equalled.

"MY WHIPPET FOUR MADE 10 MILES IN 10 MINUTES"

says E. G. Herman, Montreal

"ON the road between Sorel and St. Ours," said Mr. Herman, "my Whippet Four maintained a speed of 60 miles an hour for 10 minutes. In other words, it made 10 miles in 10 minutes flat over a recognized distance, and against the stop watch.

"I have no doubt that, given the proper roads and the desire to keep it up, I could have maintained this speed indefinitely, as the engine showed no signs of overheating after this spurt. At this speed she seemed to take on a new lease of life and just settled down to a steady smooth purr. As for holding the road, the low-swung body simply hugged the earth's surface."

Enthusiastic owners are constantly furnishing us with testimonials regarding some remarkable achievement of their car.

But, considering the quality features of the Whippet, its remarkably powerful engine—low gravity centre—proven economy—big 4-wheel brakes—and its ability to withstand terrific punishment, such feats of performance are to be expected rather than wondered at.

In the Whippet Four and the new Whippet Six you will find a combination of quality features that will readily convince you of their incomparable value. Inspect them today — arrange for a demonstration.

WOMEN UNLIKELY TO ENTER PULPITS

United Church General Council Won't Take English Action As Precedent.

TORONTO, July 26.—(Special).—In spite of the action of the Wesleyan Methodist Church in England in extending to women the same ordination rites as men, Canadian women will receive but slight benefit from the procedure. Although the new ruling comes so shortly before the meeting of the General Council of the United Church it will not be regarded as a precedent by the members when discussing the question at the conference in Winnipeg on September 5.

"The question has come up in several Presbyteries but the time does not seem to be ripe for a discussion of the problem", said Rev. James Pedley, who has been nominated for the post of Moderator of the General Council. Rev. Mr. Pedley though that there was no serious objection to having women admitted but there were many technical difficulties, partly due to the constitution of the United Church after union.

"It is not really a live issue yet", Mr. Pedley declared, "and I think that the English decree will have little effect in the matter." Mrs. John McGillivray, President of the Dominion Board of the Women's Missionary Society of the United Church in Canada, expressed the same opinion. "The women are prepared to go slowly on the question," she said "and they are not keen for admittance to ordination rites. The women are content with representation on the courts of the church, has now been obtained and where interest in the administration of the work of the church is maintained. Women may admit that the principle of ordination for their sex is right but they are conservative about practicing it."

SALVATION ARMY BAND AT WARSAW

Large Number Present For Open-Air Service—Warsaw News.

(Examiner Correspondence)

WARSAW, July 26.—About twenty-five men and boys of the Salvation Army came to Warsaw on Wednesday evening and held a service on the corner by the Post Office. A good number were out to hear them and the best attention was given. There was singing, band music, and an earnest address.

One point the speaker made was the absolute necessity for a change of life, and the difference that change would make in one's life. Another was that because one becomes an Christian, one does not suddenly become perfect, but must grow in grace.

Fine Notes.

Wild raspberries are very plentiful and of good quality this year. Haymaking and wheat cutting are progressing, the wheat will be nearly all cut this week, if the weather remains favorable. Corn looks well, and the buckwheat and Hungarian crops look as though every seed had grown. Seldom does one see such thic crops. Potatoes have grown splendidly, at least there is a wonderful showing of tops. Mr. John Tucker has been using new potatoes for two weeks and reports that they are fine, large tubers. She has been using all sorts of garden stuff, except corn and tomatoes and expect to use tomatoes in another week.

SEA SCOUTS SEEK FOR MISSING COOK

Toronto Boys Fear Alex. Bell Was Drowned While Alone.

ST. CATHARINES, July 26.—Alexander Bell, of Toronto, who was engaged as cook at the Toronto Sea Cadets' camp at Fort Weller, has been missing since Saturday night, when he was left alone aboard the yacht Cricket to wash the dishes. Drowning is feared.

Man and Clothes Gone.

When the rest of the party returned to the yacht they found that Bell was not to be seen and that his clothes were missing also. Two theories have been advanced. One, that he deserted the post of cook to work for some farmer in the district. This suggestion is not seriously considered, for it is known that Bell was very keen over the position. He is said to have made a great effort to secure it and to have intimated a desire to retain it.

Dragging Is Started.

The second and more favored theory is that he was drowned. It is suggested that he might have started to go ashore after finishing his tasks, and that, tripping over a rope on the dock as he was climbing up, he might have fallen into the water. The accident easily would have escaped attention. The fact that his clothes are gone presents a difficulty to the retention of the drowning theory, but dragging operations have been commenced about the pier. The current at that point is strong, and no great hope of success is held.

WANTS ANALYST'S REPORT.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—Gaichacoma is a little summer cottage place north of Buckhorn, 15 miles, with a good road practically all the way. Now about the mineral springs. There is one, and perhaps two, but all the springs are 100 per cent. pure, because they come up through mari and red ironstone sand. If someone had pluck enough to get some of these springs analysed by the Government it would satisfy the public if the Government said there were minerals in the spring. I read what your correspondent says about radium in his spring and what the Toronto doctor said. That's all right, but let us see or hear or read what our Government chemists at Toronto say and then we will be sure and people with weak stomachs, weak kidneys, bad livers, blood pressure high and blood pressure low, goitre, and all them things will flock there because those things are caused by loss in the body of the very minerals we are now hearing so much about.

A GOOD BALL GROUND

Peterborough, July 27, 1928

The Evening Examiner:

In the inside sport news of last evening's paper, the write up on the exhibition grounds diamond it stated it was a long walk for better grounds. It is nice to have congratulations extended, but it is not so long a walk to the Canuck ball grounds and these grounds were always kept in the finest condition; the grass was kept short and everything in perfect shape. Congratulations to the caretaker, James Collins. Thanking you, Mr. Editor,

SAVE THE CHILDREN.

In Summer When Childhood Ailments Are Most Dangerous.

Mothers who keep a box of Baby's Own Tablets in the house may feel that the lives of their little ones are reasonably safe during the hot weather. Stomach troubles, cholera infantum and diarrhoea carry off thousands of little ones every summer, in most cases because the mother does not have a safe medicine at hand to give promptly. Baby's Own Tablets relieve these troubles, or if given occasionally to the well child they will prevent their coming on. The Tablets are guaranteed to be absolutely harmless even to the newborn babe. They are especially good in summer because they regulate the bowels and keep the stomach sweet and pure. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box

HOW DREAMS MATERIALIZE

It is our desire at certain times of the year to get away from the din of city traffic, and out to where the slightest noise would be instantly noticeable. We often think of being aboard a steamer out in mid ocean, where time hangs peacefully upon your hands, and the worries of life have fled. We dream of these things, yet little do we realize that these dreams can come true if we but pause for one moment to think. What of inland waters? We only think of them as being fit for anglers and those who delight in canoeing. But of steamers with broad white decks, where we can sit on some quiet corner and give ourselves up to dreamy thoughts, do we ever think of such possibilities? They do exist, and think of it, for two whole days on an ocean of your own, embarking at Port McNicoll, sweeping out across Lake Huron, through the great Soo Canal, and out over Lake Superior, the greatest body of fresh water in the world. Your dreams therefore, can materialize; and more so if you call upon the Canadian Pacific Railway, obtaining all information regarding this wonderful trip, and finally asking them for reservations.

MINE MARKET CLOSED

TORONTO, July 28 (Canadian Press).—There was no session of the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange to-day.

Beam Wireless Works; Shares Up Seven Times

Canadian Marconi Company, whose shares have changed hands recently in London at approximately seven times their par of a dollar, has successfully completed its beam service with Great Britain, and the system is stated to be satisfactorily operating at a considerable profit to the company. Preliminary work upon the beam system to Australia has been finished, and a service with that country will shortly be in operation.

Net profits of the company, which is capitalized at $4,505,682, amounted to $46,855 in 1927 against $34,362 in previous year. Manufacture and sale of the radios is now an important part of the company's business, which has shown substantial increases this present year to date; and with the contemplated heavy business for the beam service from now to December 31st, a substantial increase in earnings will likely be recorded for 1928.

Market Opinion On Various Issues

MONTREAL, July 28. — The local market yesterday did not reflect to any extent the strength prevailing in New York. Prices in Wall Street were very strong and many of the recent leaders went into new high territory. C.P.R. was in demand and gained 2¼ points to 207½. Further covering of "shorts" in International Nickel forced the price up to above 96 but the stock lost most of its advance before the close. A number of issues on the local board were weak, particularly Shawinigan, Abitibi, Montreal Power, Lyall, Winnipeg Electric and Power Corporation.

A substantial amount of Shawinigan changed hands yesterday on receding prices, the issue reacting to as low as 88¼ and closed at 88½, which represented a net loss of 1¾ points. It is believed the selling was done by shareholders who are taking up the new stock; the final payment of $27.50 on these shares falling due on the 31st of this month. The manner in which this selling was absorbed was favorably commented upon. Due to the fact that the "Street" has been officially advised with regards to the absorption of Laurentide Power by Shawinigan, it can be taken for granted that Shawinigan will continue in the limelight.

Production of kraft paper by the Dryden Paper Company, with mill at Dryden, Ont., during May, was the highest ever recorded by the company. In that month, the concern had begun to increase its output with the idea of laying aside a stock that would be available as soon as operations begun for the making of the paper into bags by the Bates Valve Bag Company. This work is expected to begin shortly and this new course will require a good many thousand tons of paper additional to be produced. The western markets are reported to be the best in the company's history, in the demand for the kraft that Dryden produces. There is a fair demand also for sulphate pulp, of which a surplus is produced beyond what is required for the paper mill.

Shareholders of Superest Petroleum are receiving their subscription rights to one new share at $27.50 for every five now held. Payment may be made in two installments of $10 by August 18th and September 15th, and a third of $7.50. No interest will be allowed on pre-payments, but new stock will rank for dividend from date of completion of payment. Earnings of the company are reported as showing a very material advance over those of the corresponding period of last year.

Dominion Textile and Penmans, two of the highest class textile companies, are understood to be doing well at the present time. The securities of both these companies have been stagnant for some time due in large measure to technical conditions within the market. Both these companies are in a strong and impregnable position from a financial standpoint and can continue to pay dividends for a number of years under practically any kind of conditions. Conservative quarters in the "street" are advising the accumulation of both these issued for the long pull, pointing out that both stocks are undervalued.

Asbestos common has been steadily selling around 30. There has not been a variance of more than two or three points in the past three months. A fact that is attracting attention is that there is always a buyer at 30 and a study of the sales sheets recently bears out that several thousands of shares have changed hands in the past month or so. One rumor current in the "Street" to account for the accumulation is that certain developments are in the "air" which if brought to a successful conclusion will mean an appreciable enhancement in the price of the security. Asbestos Corporation last year earned 86 cents on the common and present indications are that the company for 1928 will show a slight improvement in earnings over 1927.

Corn Prices Go Up Despite Large Arrivals

CHICAGO, July 28 (Canadian Press).—Despite large arrivals of corn in Chicago to-day, values went higher during the early dealings. The July delivery of corn led the upturns in price, with offerings scarce and with previous sellers of September active as buyers. Opening unchanged to 5-8 cent up, corn soon scored gains all around. Wheat and oats were easier. Wheat started unchanged to ½ cent higher, but soon underwent a general sag.

Opening prices were: Wheat, July 120¼, September 122 7-8. Corn, July 111 3-8, September 97. Oats, July 46, September 39 7-8.

International Nickel Features Light Trading

TORONTO, July 28 (Canadian Press).—International Nickel provided the only interest at the session of the Toronto Stock Exchange to-day. Opening at 97 5-8, and gaining another quarter, it finally closed with a loss of 1¼ to sell at 96¾. Other issues were very dull and prices were mostly unchanged, except for Abitibi and Bell Telephone, which lost one point each at 52½ and 162 respectively. Brazilian Light and Power gained ¼ point at 55, and F. N. Burt ½ at 67.

Recovery In Prices In New York To-day

NEW YORK, July 28 (Canadian Press).—A further substantial recovery in prices took place in to-day's stock market. Buying orders were distributed over a fairly broad list, but centered largely in the high-priced industrial specialties, motors, farm implements, steels, and public utilities. The gains ran from one to six points.

Bullish enthusiasm was created by the relative ease of call money in the face of approaching month-end settlements and the fact that the market had definitely broken out of the narrow trading area within which it had been moving.

The closing was strong. Total sales aggregated 1,000,000 shares.

Diamond Drill Finds Deep Ore At Jay Mine

Important discoveries are reported as a result of the diamond drilling operations underway at Jay Copper Gold Mines. Ore is reported at depth from the diamond drilling being carried on from the 500-foot level. It is understood that drilling will continue to 1,000 feet.

An official announcement is expected to be made concerning the results of the drilling at the annual meeting which is to be held on Monday next week in Montreal.

The meeting was orginally called two weeks ago, but was adjourned in order to permit the election of new directors to the board.

The company has been concentrating its energies on the copper-zinc zone in its number one property, Dalquier Township. The diamond drill hhas been operating from the 500-foot level, the drill being at a 60-degree angle in order to prove the ore body to depth.

The Metal Market.

"Hardware and Metal," Toronto, comments on hardware and metal market movements as follows in the issue of July 28th:

Statistics of building permits issued, iron and steel production, employment, trade and bank returns, some of the business indicators of the Dominion of Canada, showing a considerable advance over the first six months of 1927, for the same period of 1928, may be taken as showing the improved conditions which prevail in Canada this year. Production of iron and steel may be taken as an index of manufacturing activity, and with government figures showing a 94 per cent. increase in the production of steel in June, 1928, over June, 1927, an idea of the condition of this business factor may be gleaned.

Crop reports from various sections of the Dominion indicate bright prospects for the yield soon to be harvested. It is estimated that an acreage, equalling 9.95 per cent. more than in 1927, has been planted with wheat in the prairie provinces this year.

In the annual survey of the hardware trade, conducted by Hardware and Metal for 1927, it was shown that dealers increased their volume of business considerably, at the same time enjoying a slightly better margin of net profit. With business conditions brighter for the present year, it is the expectation that results for 1928 will be even more encouraging. Public buying power has been broadened, in the wide distribution of wages in 1928, and hardwaremen report bright prospects for fall business.

With the haying season in full swing in most districts and the harvest time for grains not very far off, the lines required by farmers during harvest are the most active in hardware stores. Harvest tools, rope, binder twine, etc., are moving very freely.

The recent firmness of raw cotton markets is reflected in advances in cotton goods in some hardware markets this week. Lead goods were reduced last week, following weakness in primary lead, and solder is still weak, following the reduction.

Michigan Mining Co. Coming To Ontario

Calumet and Hecla Mining Co., a large Michigan copper operating company, has taken up a group of 27 claims in Larder Lake. A road is being built and surface exploration will soon follow. The find, which brings these properties into prominence, is claimed to be a heavy mineralized zone 100 feet in width, with encouraging values in zinc and copper showing over this width. In addition to the main vein, another parallel outcropping has been located that is to be fully explored. The strike of the mineralized area is northwest and southeast and the vein occurs in a low depression in the ground.

The deal whereby the Calumet and Hecla obtained a working option on the properties involves the payment of $400,000, the owners retaining a small interest in the company organized to work the properties. This is the first time the Michigan Copper Company has undertaken the development of claims in Ontario and considerable interest attaches to their activities.

Kirkland Lake Finds Rich Ore At 2,850 Ft.

Kirkland Lake Gold has run into a rich ore shoot working east from the shaft on the 2,850 ft. level. The ore is running $50 to the ton over a width of 5½ feet, and $30 over eleven feet, the total width of the ore being 16 feet. The ore shoot was encountered 300 feet from the crosscut and has been drifted on for a distance of 100 feet. The drift has been in the high values for a distance of 40 feet, and there is still 200 feet to go to the boundary line.

The mill is treating 265 tons a day and producing from $40,000 to $45,000 a month. Millheads are averaging from $9 to $10, and one day last week ran as high as $14.25.

The winze is now down to a depth of 2,950 feet and will be carried down to 2,975 where a station will be cut, and a new level established. Work is also being carried out on the 1,300, 2,350, 2,475, 2,600 and 2,725 levels. A total force of 125 men ar employed.

NEW CHANCE FOR POWERS.

EDMONTON, July 27 (Special to The Examiner).—While Dr. Maximilian A. Langsner, Viennese criminologist, was giving a demonstration of his hypnotic powers by curbing the ardor of a pair of fighting cocks here last night, the city police discovered new material for his power to receive the thought waves of criminals. The murder of George Hodgson, 45, retired crippled farmer, of this city, furnished that material. With a bullet-wound in his head, Hodgson was found huddled in a chair in his apartment late yesterday by Frank Lavery, proprietor of a store on the ground floor of the block. The door of Hodgson's apartment was open and the lights were burning when Lavery entered.

PRINCETON MAN BEATS WRIGHT

Montreal Ace Is Not Disgraced in Fast Game of Tennis.

FINALS TO-DAY.

TORONTO TENNIS CLUB, July 28 —Jack Wright of Montreal, Davis Cup ace, and present holder of the Canadian lawn tennis championships, stepped on the courts yesterday afternoon to defend his title in the semi-final round against J. Van Ryn of Princeton, "the hottest thing since the Chicago fire," as Wilmer Allison of Texas said in the dressing room just prior to the match.

Van Ryn won the first set at 6—3, Wright started slowly and was down at three love but he seemed to be in good form and showed no worry over Van Ryn's fast service. The Canadian kept consistently good length in his drives but Van Ryn made many spectacular and effective assaults on the net to put away points with lovely glancing volleys.

The first two games in the second set were a little slow and uneventful. Van Ryn broke through Wright's service in the first, but Wright won his service in the third after a deuce game. Wright broke through Van Ryn's service in the sixth game, the Princeton man leading at 4—2. The Canadian champion was at his best in the seventh game, Van Ryn only scoring one point. Wright pressed his advantage and again took Van Ryn's service in the eighth game, bringing the score to 4 all. Van Ryn led Wright in the latter's service game in the ninth at love 30, 15—40 and 30—40, but Wright pulled up to deuce. Then two errors lost the Canadian the game. Wright led love at 40 in the next, and after it had gone twice to deuce he broke through the Princeton man's service for the third time in the set, and games were even at 5all. Van Ryn was losing a good few points at this stage with his back-hand drives, which he was netting with great frequency. He broke through Wright's service, however, in the eleventh and led at 6—5, and then took his own service and the second set at 7—5.

BATHING RIGHTS TO BE CONTESTED

Summer Cottagers Wish To Swim in Lake Supplying City Water.

QUEBEC, July 25. — Their Lordships of the Privy Council in London will be called upon to decide whether it is all right or all wrong for girls to bathe in the City of Quebec's drinking water.

Just now, summer residents of Lac Beauport, located in the mountains to the north-east of the ancient capital, are ranged against the citizens of Quebec because inspectors arrested two girls, daughters of a lake front proprietor, on Sunday, for taking a plunge in the cool and limited water of the lake. But, says the city, the lake is Quebec's reservoir, and a by-law says it is unhygienic to drink bath water. The summer colony replies that it is just as unhealthy to give up the daily dip, and the aroused vacationists add they are not going to sit and watch the ripples from the shore merely because Quebec does not want to spend money on a filter.

The girls are due to go before the Recorder, but it is likely the case will be suspended since the Lac Beauport colony has hired a lawyer to take a test case in the Civil Court. And, it is added, the case will go to the Privy Council if necessary, that the constitutional right to the bathe may be upheld.

VERY ROUGH.

LIGHTNING DOES GREAT DAMAGE AT WOODSTOCK

Power House is Damaged By Bolt and Current Shut Off.

BOARDS RUINED.

Seven Cows Killed On Downeyville Farm When Storm Proceeded East.

WOODSTOCK, July 28.—One flash of lightning at noon yesterday forced every industry in Woodstock to close down, endangered the city's water supply, delayed the issue of the local daily newspaper, and left Ingersoll, Tilsonburg and other adjoining towns without power or light.

The flash came in the midst of one of the severest electric storms that has swept this district in years. It completely crippled the Woodstock Hydro station. Two employes, Alfred Young, and Andrew Stringham, were hurled through the door of the station to the lawn outside and escaped with bruises.

Power and light services have now been restored in Woodstock but neighboring towns are still in darkness.

The bolt struck one of the cables carrying power to Ingersoll and Tillsonburg. The heavy wire snapped. As it fell it struck a number of other cables, causing a series of short circuits. The flash was so close to the power station that the breakers were insufficient to control the load. The switches blew out. The oil in the breaker tanks exploded with terrific force.

Pillar of Flame

The two employes had taken shelter from the rain just inside the door of the station. The explosion which followed the lightning flash hurled them clean out of the door. A pillar of flame shot through the building.

Stringham, dazed but conscious, ballantly crawled on his hands and knees into the burning building. He had just reached for a fire extinguisher when another explosion followed. It sent a fork of flame over his head. The fire brigade arrived and extinguished the blaze with chemicals.

It was an hour, however, before electricians were able to ascertain the full extent of the damage.

Seven Cows Killed

DOWNEYVILLE, July 28.—Joseph Lucas lost seven valuable cows during last night's severe storm. A herd of eight was standing near the barn and all were killed but one.

FARMERS PLACE FUNDS IN BONDS

in all sorts of securities during the last eight or 10 years. Many of these so-called investments are speculative, such as mining stocks. Many also, while safe enough, are not considered desirable because there is no market for these securities. The yield of first-class bonds and stocks on account of the plentiful supply of money is so small that many who desire a large yield overlook the principle of safety first."

"Numerous reports confirm the observations of this manager, that farmers are not immune from the speculative fever which has developed in mining stock, but on the whole, reports indicate that the farmer is devoting the major part of his surplus earnings to certain securities in the form of bonds or preferred stocks. The fact that savings deposits also show an increase is an encouraging sign.

Bank Deposit Money.

"One report estimates that the amount of farm deposits in the banks of one of the smaller cities of the province aggregated from two to three million dollars, or practically 35 per cent. of all deposits. Another report estimates deposits running from five to seven million dollars in the good farming centres of the country. It is stated that farmers still appear to have the saving habit in spite of the increased spending opportunities everywhere available.

"On the question of social conditions, opinions are practically unanimous that the present standard of living is very much higher than ten or fifteen years ago. Says a report from one county: 'In general, social conditions on the farm have been vastly improved.

"The general use of the automobile, accompanied by improved roads, has increased the farmer's travel radius many times. The advent of the radio provides entertainment hitherto inaccessible. The progress of rural electric lines is rapidly making possible the use of electricity on the farm. These features are being rapidly adopted by the farmers, and socially the farmer is far in advance of five years ago. This is echoed from many other parts of the province.

"Occasionally there is a reference to the matter of rural depopulation, as in this paragraph: 'Many of the young people have left the farms and are now working in nearby cities, but the condition is not as bad as some would think. The census of the young people recently taken shows that there are about 300 young people between 15 and 30 within a radius of six or seven miles from a certain point.'

"From all this it is evident that notwithstanding the vagaries of seasons and the effect of periodic depressions the social and financial standing of rural Ontario is steadily improving.

SNAKE "OIL."

"Quick, get a doctor. My frien' upstairs is blind."

"What's the trouble?"

"I asked him if he could see a snake. Said he couldn't and the room's full of 'em." — America'z Humor.

PARISH SOCIAL NEXT TUESDAY

Annual Event Will Be Held On Grounds of St. Mary's Convent.

GOOD PROGRAM.

The annual social of St. Peter's Cathedral Parish is to be held this year on Tuesday evening, July 31st, on the grounds of St. Mary's Convent, and an excellent program has been arranged for the entertainment of its patrons. The pretty grounds will be illuminated and there will be plenty of amusements of various types, with a fish-pond for the juniors, ice cream, candy and soft drink sales and a fine variety of articles on sale.

Rev. P. Costello extends a cordial invitation to the general public to attend the social.

U.S. TARIFF BOARD TO BE REORGANIZED

Problem of Rehabilitating Commission To Exclude Politics is Thorny One.

WASHINGTON, D.C., July 26.—(Canadian Press).—A thorough-going reorganization of the United States Tariff Commission is on the agenda of the next session of Congress. The extent of the changes will undoubtedly depend on the outcome of the November election, but it is unlikely that either Hoover or Smith will tolerate the continuance of conditions revealed by the report of the Senate investigating committee recently made public.

The commission had been repeatedly criticized in Congress, and disappointment in the performance of the commission designed to take the vexed tariff question out of politics was expressed in a senate resolution of March, 1926, calling for an investigation of the whole work of the commission. The attention of the investigating committee was directed especially to the operation of the Flexible Tariff provisions of the Fordney-McCumber Act of 1922 but in the course of its hearings it touched on every phase of the commission's activities. The hearings lasted from March, 1926, to February, 1927, but for various reasons the report of the committee was not presented to the Senate until the end of last May.

It appears from the testimony that the original tariff commission created by President Wilson in 1916 with Professor Taussig of Harvard as chairman, performed its rather limited functions to the general satisfaction. It was essentially a fact-finding and advisory board composed of members of both political parties; its chief duty was to assist Congress in that body's periodic revision of the general tariff schedules by preparing exhaustive reports on the financial and economic conditions of the principal protected industries. In 1922 the functions of the commission were enormously extended. The United States Tariff Act of that year was characterized by a wholesale increase in import duties. These increases were defended by the spokesman for the administration, Senator Smoot of Utah, as temporary measures intended to meet an emergency situation existing at that time. As circumstances changed the tariff schedules would be revised to meet them, provided always that the protection principle embodied in the Act of 1922 was observed in each adjustment. This task of revising the tariff was delegated to the President of the United States, who was to be assisted in this work by the tariff commission. Thus the commission which had been created to advise Congress in its work of tariff revision found itself faced with a virtually impossible problem. Its responsibilities were enlarged while the calibre and capacity of the commission was diminished by every change in its personnel made by Presidents Harding and Coolidge. Under the circumstances its failure to function satisfactorily is not surprising.

Six years' experience of the Flexible Tariff provisions administered by the President on the advice of the commission has led the majority of the investigating committee to recommend the repeal of this feature of the Tariff Act.

It appears from the hearings that the commission has been deadlocked on nearly every important issue that has come before it; this deadlock has at least been broken but only by the resignation of Commissioners Culbertson, Costigan and Lewis who have left the commission in disappointment and disgust. Their places have been filled in part by the appointment of commissioners whose previous association with special interests vitally affected by the decisions of the commission has created an unfavorable impression in many quarters. Under the circumstances the commission's prestige has suffered severely. Commissioner Costigan, in tendering his resignation, accused President Coolidge of undermining the usefulness of the commission both by the character of his appointments and by his direct interference with its quasijudicial functions. The charge has not been refuted so that it is likely that the composition and character on the Tariff Commission will play a prominent part in the ensuing campaign.

The fruit in this district is looking prosperous to being a bountiful crop. Raspberries in abundance while currants and gooseberries seem plentiful.

MINERS CONTEST PLACE ON COUNCIL

Trades Union Congress Meeting To Be Scene of Struggle This Year.

LONDON, July 26.—(Canadian Press).—According to the information given in the preliminary agenda for the Trade Union Congress at Swansea in September there will, for the first time for several years, be a contest for the representation of the mining group on the General Council.

It is expected that this will bring to an issue the discord that has arisen between A. J. Cook and the General Council, and that the voting in the Congress will, turn mainly on re-election or rejection of the miner's secretary.

The customs of the Miners' Federation is to select its nominees for the Congress General Council and the Labor Party Executive just over a year in advance. Last July the present representatives on the General Council, including Mr. Cook, were nominated for the election at this year's congress.

The contest at the forthcoming Congress arises from the fact that the General Federation of Colliery Firemen, Examiners, and Deputies Associations has submitted a nomination.

Apart from the persistent attacks by Mr. Cook on the council arising out of the Mond Conference it is contended that Mr. Cook has not observed the tacitly understood principles governing committee work, which at certain stages must call for confidential treatment if constant discord and misunderstanding are to be avoided.

OBITUARY

JAMES M. FRASER

The death occurred late last night at his home, 159 Hart avenue, after a long illness, of James M. Fraser, a former resident of Campbellford.

He is survived by his wife; two daughters, Magnolia and Genevieve, at home, and one son Dolan, of Rochester. The funeral takes place on Monday morning at 8.45 to St. Peter's Cathedral and thence to Campbellford for burial.

TYNDALL—DOIG.

The wedding took place on Friday, July 27, of Mary Elfrida, second youngest daughter of Mrs. M. Doig, and Wilfred Raymond, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Tyndall, of Peterborough. The Rev. Wm. McDonald of Knox United Church performed the ceremony.

IN MEMORIAM.

In memory of our dear mother and grandmother, Mrs. Thomas Hawthorne, who died July 28, 1927:

I came to Jesus as I was
Weary, worn and sad,
I found in Him a resting place
And He hath made me glad.

Ever Remembered By Her Daughter and Son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Wilfrid Jones and Grandchildren.

IN MEMORIAM.

HAWTHORNE.— In sad but loving remembrance of my dear mother, who passed away one year ago to-day, July 28th, 1927:

Peaceful be thy rest, dear mother,
It is sweet to breathe thy name,
In life I loved you dearly
In death I do the same.
You were always true and patient
Through the years struggled on,
And those faithful hands that rest forever
Made the home that now is gone.

NEWSBOYS' FATHERS USUALLY WELL PAID

Lack of Proper Playgrounds Brings Boys Into Street Work.

WASHINGTON, D.C., July 28.—(Canadian Press)—Contrary to popular belief, the average newsboy is not an orphan cast upon a cruel world, nor has he a widowed mother to support.

Information collected from eight cities over the country by the department of labor show that economic necessity was not the chief reason for selling papers by the majority of boys. The data did show, however, that newsboys are among the youngest of all child workers, from one-tenth to one-fifth being under ten years of age.

The great majority of the children were in normal homes, with both parent living and the fathers bringing home most of "the bacon."

The report blamed the lack of adequate playground and recreational activities as responsible for the presence of many children in street work.

OLYMPIC TITLES COME TO BRITISH EMPIRE

Finlander Sets New Record

Runs 10,000 Metres in Little Over 30 Minutes To-day.

THREE NEW CHAMPIONS.

United States Shot Put Star Shatters Record With 52 Foot Throw.

OLYMPIC STADIUM, Amsterdam, Holland, July 30.—(Canadian Press). —There's still only one Nurmi.

The Phantom of Finland came back to the Olympic arena yesterday afternoon a trifle balder and more mature looking but still the greatest runner of them all.

In one of the greatest races of his long and illustrious career, Paavo outclassed the little American, Joie Ray, outran his rival countryman, Willie Ritola, in a spectacular sprint and smashed the Olympic record in the 10,000 metre final.

Nurmi beat Ritola by four yards in a remarkable two-man duel and wiped out the latter's Olympic mark of 1924 by covering the distance of approximately six and a quarter miles in 30 minutes, 18 4-5 seconds.

Nurmi's striking triumph, his seventh in three Olympiads, climaxed a day of sensations in which the giant Kansan, John Kuck, competing under the colors of the Los Angeles' A.C., shattered the world's shot put record with a heave of slightly over 52 feet, and another westerner, Bob King of Stanford, captured the high jump crown from his veteran countryman, Harold Osborn, of the Illinois A.C

Spectacular Heaving

In the amazing weight-tossing battle, Kuck, on his next to last throw, heaved the 16 pound ball a distance of 52 feet, 11-16 inches, to beat his countryman, Herman Brix, of the University of Washington, and the German Giant, Emil Hirschfeld. Brix was second with a toss of 51 feet ,eight inches, and Hirschfeld third with 51 feet, 6¾ inches, all three eclipsing Pat McDonald's old Olympic mark by more than a foot.

Never before in Olympic competion had 51 feet been approached nor had 51 feet been touched anywhere in actual contest, yet on the same afternoon, the three Giants had these figures groggy.

Kuck's performance eclipsed the world's mark of 51 feet, 9⅝ inches, set by Hirschfeld last May. With Hirschfeld's mark went McDonald's Olympic record of 50 feet, 3⅞ inches set in 1912.

Produce New Champion

OLYMPIC STADIUM, Amsterdam, Holland, July 30.—(Canadian Press). —The opening of Olympic track and field competition was signalized yesterday by the production of three champions and the breaking of two Olympic records.

Canada's representatives in the dashes did remarkably well.

Among the outstanding performances was the winning of his heat in the second trials of the 100 metres by Percy Williams of Vancouver in 10 3-5, equalling the world's record. Fitzpatrick of Hamilton was second to Legg of South Africa in his heat. Both Williams and Fitzpatrick had won their preliminary heats in 11 seconds. In the second trial the first two finishers qualified for the semi-finals. George Hester and Ralph Adams of Hamilton were second in the preliminaries, but were unplaced in the second trials.

Edwards Stars

M. R. Wilson and the dusky flash Phil Edwards, in the colors of Hamilton Olympic Club, easily won their heats in the 800 metres trials. Wilson beat out the Swede, Byhlehen, and Sittig of the United States in 1.59 1-5. Edward's time was one fifth of a second slower.

In the second heat, Dr. Otto Peltzer of Germany, showing good form in his first race since his recent injury, closed fast to beat Little of Canada and Tatham of Great Britain in 1.57 2-5.

Pete Walker was unplaced in a heat won by Lloyd Hahn of Boston in the fastest time of the day, 1.56 4-5.

Douglas Lowe of Great Britain, the defending champion, qualified by finishing second to Dengra of the Argentine.

Lord Davy Burghley, of England, had the honor of scoring the first victory, winning the opening heat of the 400 metre hurdles in which Bob Maxwell of the United States was second. Monshene of Montreal was third in his heat.

In the first semi-final of this event three to qualify for the final on Monday, Lord Burghley finished third, but in the second semi-final Thomas C. Livingston Learmouth of Great Britain won in 54 seconds flat.

The United States sprinters made a clean sweep in the trials and second trials of the 100 metres, Frank Wyckoff, Henry Russell, Bracey and McAllister winning their

TAKING FILM TO MINISTER

Deputation From Trent Waterway Will Call On Hon. Mr. Dunning.

WITH "KELLY'S CRUISE."

Resulting from a letter received by His Worship Mayor Denne, in reply to his letter to the Hon. Charles Dunning, Minister of Railways and Canals, relative to the latter's proposed inspection of the Trent Waterway System, a strong deputation is likely to be formed to go to Ottawa some time within the next couple of weeks seeking an appointment with the Minister. The deputation will comprise representatives of all communities on the Trent System from Georgian Bay to Trenton, and among them will be His Worship Mayor Denne, F. D. Kerr, K.C., and President James Dutton, of the Chamber of Commerce, Peterborough.

The decision to send the deputation was arrived at during the meeting of the Chamber of Commerce executive, held during the latter part of the week, at which Mr. Dunning's reply, indicating that the Minister would be unable to inspect the canal this year, was read. While in Ottawa the deputation will ask the Hon. Mr. Dunning to view the now famous Trent Waterway film, "Kelly's Cruise."

WAR MEMORIAL IS UNDER WAY

Granite Work Is Being Put in Position By the Contractors.

WILL COST $32,500.

The Citizens of Peterborough City and County War Memorial which it is expected will be ready for unveiling in a month or six weeks' time, is well under way. The cement foundation has been built and workmen are now placing the granite in position, after which the bronze figures will be mounted.

The memorial was designed by Walter S. Allward, Canada's most eminent sculptor. It is costing $32,500 —of which $26,000 has already been raised through donations from organizations and individuals.

During the next two weeks there is going through the mails to our citizens a brief history of the work of the committee which was appointed at a public meeting some years ago. It was thought an opportunity should be given every home in the city and district to contribute to the funds required to take care of the balance that has not yet been arranged for.

In the matter going to the citizens is a reproduction of the memorial itself, the brief history of the committee's work during the past eight years, a letter from the officers of the committee, a subscription card and envelope to the treasurer.

If every home will do its part by contributing to this memorial to our brave men who gave their lives in the World War, there will be no necessity of a canvass being made.

It is expected the response to the opportunity to give will be liberal and prompt.

BURGLARS TAKE EGGS AND MISS JEWELRY

PARIS, July 30 (Canadian Press).—The only loot of burglars who broke into the residence of Mrs. William Vanderbilt, where a fortune in jewels was in a wall safe, was three eggs which they swallowed raw.

LODGES ENJOY RIVER TRIP

MASONS VISIT HIAWATHA ON ANNUAL PICNIC

Brethren Show Prowess in Many Lines of Athletic Endeavor.

ROYAL ARTHUR LEADS.

Excursion Down River On Steamer Enjoyed in Spite of Chilly Breeze.

For many seasons the Craft in Peterborought had held jointly by the three Blue Lodges of the city, an annual outing, generally a trip down the river, to Idlewyld, with a picnic lunch provided by a caterer. Agreeing with the suggestions put forward that the Craft in the district as far east as Belleville should hold a day for general getting together, on two summers such event was put on, at a suitable place, near Brighton. On one occasion the meeting was held at the Oval, Peterborough. When held abroad the members at Peterborough participated in fair number, though many could not spare the whole day, and again the outcome was a long and wearisome night ride getting home. Such a gathering is now on the cards for this summer, but the local Masons decided some time ago to hold their outing as heretofore.

The day selected was Saturday afternoon, and the steamer Stoney Lake was engaged for the occasion. It was thought that being held on Saturday afternoon, many members, engaged in the shops and factories would be able to attend. Such anticipation was not verified the crowd making the trip numbering a few over one hundred, another thing to be blamed on the motor car.

While the day promised to be a chilly one the steamer made the trip to the lake in good time with Idlewyld as the destination. On steaming into the lake, (Rice Lake) a pretty strong wind developed, (that not to be blamed on the vessel) and Idlewyld island not having a suitable pier or wharf, it was decided to go to Hiawatha, as on similar circumstances, has been the case in the past.

The shore was sheltered from the wind and afforded good ground for the games and sports, which were taken up at once. The general committee in charge were Bros. Charles Ray, W. L. Ferguson, George Evans and J. Fred Reed. Chris. Graham assisted and contributed to the general hilarity and success. Others were roped in to be useful, while the gallery found seats on the ancient piles of ground along the old road bed of the deceased Cobourg and Peterborough Railway, Hiwatha being the point on the north shore from which the late defective bridge had been built to span the lake. Following are the winners, in the several contests, the results to be lettered on the trophies that adorn the walls of the Lodge anteroom. This is important, in order that posterity may be advised of the prowess displayed by members.

Softball: For Grand Challenge Shield, 5 innings. Teams selected from the Lodges. Forst concussion. Royal Arthur Lodge, vs. Corinthian Lodge.

Royal Arthur—Sloan, Holyman, Cummer, Carruthers, Graham, (Chris), Cann, Hardwicke, Fraser, Snelgrove, Lacheur (Chas.), Lewis, Ferguson.

Corinthian — Killaly Sherwood, Couper, Telford, Cameron, Staples. Loucks, Gillespie, Ray.

Umpire—Stan. Lowe; base, C. Telford.

The ground was soft, wet and with numerous hillocks and other hindrances. Royal Arthur developed surprising agility and batting strength, swiping the ball (soft ball) into the lake with reckless indifference. The pitcher's box was a wet cavity until some useful brother borrowed a shovel and filled in with a few sods and soil taken from the roadbed. The players on both sides received plenty of encouragement. Those who wore 'plus fours," a popular garb, spashed through the wetness freely, while those in long breeks had to find a dryer portage. Royal Arthur is the youngest lodge, and has, consequently the youngest membership, as the frightful score testified. The score, when the disaster was over, was 12 to 1 in favor of that lodge. Dismal gloom amongst the Corinthian lodge backers.

The final scrap between Royal Arthur and Peterborough Lodges was watched with interest. The winners in the first bout, having got their hand in, were ready and affirmed their willingness to beat anything that offered. The line-up was as follows:

Royal Arthur—The same as noted above.

Peterborough Lodge— Lowe, Justice, R. L. Dobbin, Telford, Reed, Harris, Hood, Lester, Girvin.

Whale In River Below Sault Ste. Marie Ontario's Answer To Okanagan's Ogopogo

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., July 30. — Not satisfied with giant rainbow trout, Sault Ste. Marie boasts a new race of giant freshwater whales. Two men—neither of them anglers—claim to have seen the huge mammal.

Louis C. Graham, of Detroit, spending the summer at his cottage, North Shore Haven, at the Canadian Neebish, is the discoverer of the fresh-water whale. He has seen it, he says, if such an animal exists.

Sitting on an upturned boat chatting to another camper, he noticed something spout in the water. It approached the dock at a terrific speed.

The thing—whatever it was—passed under the dock. The spout of water shot high in the air. There was a loud hissing sound. In its mad rush it swung a boat around and almost tore it from its moorings. As it tore by another boat, James Perry caught a glimpse of the monster. He saw three feet of its black back as it shot by, he claims. It left an eddy like a steamer, and forced the weeds several feet apart as it returned to deeper water.

Graham came to the Sault to-day to learn what the monster was. If no one can explain the mystery, he says he will claim discovery of the first fresh-water whale in the lakes. Sault Ste. Marie may soon rival Okanagan. The whale, it is said, will prove as great a tourist attraction as Ogopogo, mysterious sea serpent denizen of the British Columbia Lake.

WITHOUT FOOD OR FIRE, MAN WANDERS IN BUSH 23 DAYS

John Helmer Tells of Sufferings When Lost in North.

MOSQUITOES RAVENOUS.

Prospector Could Not Find Companion and Canoe After Short Walk in Woods.

SIOUX LOOKOUT, July 30 (Special to The Examiner). — After having been lost in the Red Lake district for twenty-three days without food or fire, and with very little clothing, John Helmer, 48, prospector, of Duluth, Minn., was found near Pine Lake, not far from Red Lake, by John Kirkness, a trapper, on July 21. He arrived at Red Lake on July 25, and was brought to Sioux Lookout Hospital via Western Canada Airways for medical attention on July 26.

On account of his weakened condition, an interview was not possible with Mr. Helmer until to-day, when he seemed to be getting along fine, and was anxious to get away from the hospital. He talked freely of his terrible experiences in the bush, emphasizing the difficulty of keeping off the flies and mosquitoes, which, he declared, were the worst and the most ravenous he has ever seen. With only scant clothing, his only standby being a tough hickory shirt, he was forced to sleep on the bare ground. His hands, sore and blistered from pulling balsam boughs for a bed the first two nights, it was impossible for him to make any kind of bed thereafter.

On the 27th of June Helmer and his partner went up a stream from the Red Lake district to Pine Lake, where they intended examining the outlying country thoroughly. Helmer left the canoe and advised his partner to meet him about five hundred yards down the shore in about two hours. He then began prospecting until he was reasonably sure the two hours were up, and started winding his way back to the shore over windfalls and through muskeg. When he reached the shore of the lake, he could not find his partner or the canoe. He scanned the shore of the entire lake, and, finally, believing his partner had gone up the inlet, sat down to wait for him to return.

It was twenty three days from that day when he was found wandering, dazed and almost unconscious, along the shore of an entirely different lake. His feet were in a terrible condition, being badly blistered and swoolen from bruises and fly bites and his joints were swollen and stiff. His voice was entirely gone and he could scarcely whisper, so often had he shouted, hoping to attract some passerby.

"I was standing on the shore of a lake one day," said Mr. Helmer, "when I saw a canoe coming. I almost fainted from the shock, but pulled myself together and tried to attract the attention of the occupant, who was John Kirkness, the man who finally found me three days later. But I could make no sound above a whisper. I trudged on in the direction the canoe went pushing aside the brush and alder. There was no beach now, the water having risen two feet, causing it to penetrate into the bush.

"This made it difficult for any one in a canoe to find me, but I stuck to the shore, knowing that if I ever got back into the bush I would not get out again. I was picked up by Kirkness when I was sure I could go no farther. He carried my bodily over nine portages and was very careful not to let me eat anything to excess. We were four days getting back to Red Lake and all I was allowed to eat was a little portion Kirkness prepared from lard and flour. The flies—oh Lord they were terrible.'

Two Tourists Killed When Car Hits Pole

LONDON, Ont., July 30 (Canadian Press).—A man and woman were killed and three others seriously injured when a large touring car bearing Ohio license No. 802-876 plunged into a ditch and hit a telephone pole two miles from Glencoe late yesterday afternoon. Papers found at the wreck indicated that the party came from Jackson, Ohio, but neither the dead nor the injured have yet been identified. The injured are in Victoria Hospital here.

Protection Causing Split

Members of British Cabinet Differ on Policy of Extension.

BALDWIN OPPOSED.

Other Ministers Favor Placing Iron and Steel Trade Under Safeguarding Act.

LONDON, July 30 (Canadian Press).—Newspapers and politicians are discussing with keen interest the pronounced divergence in views of members of the Cabinet and other persons prominent in the Conservative party on the policy of protection of British industries whether the divergence is heading for a sensational split in party, as anti-Government papers claim, is yet to be shown. There is no question, however, that the Ministers are talking one against the other.

Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin recently emphatically turned down the appeal of some influential followers for an extension of "safeguarding" to the iron and steel industry. Sir William Joynson Hicks, Home Secretary, in a speech on Saturday, strongly advocated the extension and asserted that the question of general protection must be settled between now and the next election.

Wingston Churchill, Chancellor of the Exchequer, on the same day made a striking declaration in favor of Free Trade. Lieut.-Col. L. M. S. Amery, Secretary of State for the Dominions, and other members of the Cabinet support Joynson Hicks.

Will Attempt Hop Across the Sudan

LONDON, July 30 (Canadian Press).—Flying Officer P. Murdock of the South African air force left Croydon airfield yesterday in a 30 horse-power light plane in an attempt to fly to Cape Town and back, 16,000 miles, in 18 days.

Murdock said the object of the flight is to show that it is possible to fly through the Sudan during the rainy season which has never been done before, and thus prove the practicability of regular all-year air service.

SEVERAL HURT IN COLLISIONS OVER WEEK END

Mrs. Harold Telford Taken To Hospital After Accident Near Chemong.

CARS BADLY BROKEN.

Police Court Case Results From Head-on Crash On Armour Road.

A light car belonging to Harold Telford crashed into a coach type car belonging to T. C. Ephgrave, contractor in Peterborough, on the Chemong road yesterday. Mr. Ephgrave's car was being driven by his son Maurice, who with a party of friends were returning from Peterborough to Chemong and had reached the fifth line when the accident occurred.

Mr. Telford was coming east and according to witnesses appeared as if he wished to continue east, but swung into Ephgrave's car. Other witnesses say that it appeared to be a case of the driver becoming rattled and losing his head.

At the time of the crash Ephgrave's car was two feet off the side of the road on the right side in the grass and was 20 feet from the crossing.

All in the crash had to have medical attention and Frank Ephgrave was thrown through the windshield, miraculously escaping with a severe gash in his neck. Mrs. Telford, occupant of the other car, was so badly injured that it was necessary to remove her to the hospital.

Mr. Telford's car suffered severe damages about the front and sides, while Mr. Ephgrave's car was very badly damaged. The whole frame was shifted, as well as the fender on the right side smashed in. The windshield is shattered while Frank was thrown through, and the bumper broken.

Thrown Through Shield

An occupant of a Toronto car was thrown through the windshield on Saturday night, on Armour road, when the car in which he was riding collided with a car driven by Elmer Liddel, of this city. Liddel was turning into his driveway at the time the accident occurred and hit the Toronto car in a semi head-on collision. Two men were in the visiting car and the impact threw one of them through the windshield, cutting him badly in the face.

Liddel appeared in police court this morning charged with operating a car while intoxicated, it being his second offence. On the plea of his lawyer, J. A. O'Brien, he pleaded not guilty, and as the defence was not ready to go on with the case the prisoner was remanded until Friday morning with bail being set at $500 with the stipulation that he cannot drive a car in the meantime.

The visitors had their car repaired yesterday and were able to go on with their journey last night.

Car Badly Smashed.

A very badly damaged car rests in the garage of the Chevrolet Sales and Service on Water street to-day. A light touring car that appears to have turned a complete somersault is in the back yard. The radiator is completely stove in and fenders and bumpers in the front are badly damaged, while not a piece of glass remains in the windshield, the frame of which is bent back. The steering wheel is broken off, but in spite of all these outward damages the car was towed behind another car to the garage, and mechanics say that it will still run as they have moved it under its own power.

The car belongs to Elmer Davis of Otonabee, who turned it over in that part of the country over the week-end. There were no casualties in the upset.

Cyclist Killed.

HAMILTON, Ont., July 30 (Canadian Press).—Herbert Ambridge, of Hamilton, was fatally crushed by a truck driven by Hyde Renouff this morning. He was riding a bicycle when the accident occurred.

Eight Injured.

HAMILTON, Ont., July 30 (Canadian Press).—Eight people were seriously injured this morning when a cut-in truck driver forced an automobile from the roadway into the ditch and then speeded away, while the passenger car swerved back onto the highway, and collided with another auto coming from the opposite direction.

The accident occurred at Inglewood, two miles east of Burlington.

Ben Axler, Toronto, was driving the car which was ditched, and with him were Mrs. Margaret Sockin, Hamilton, and her daughter. Axler is in a very critical condition, and Mrs. Sockin is seriously ill, while her daughter received painful head lacerations.

Charles Beckett, Strathroy, driver of the second passenger car, received injuries to his chest and right leg, and four other people in his car all were painfully injured.

MUCH DAMAGE DONE BY HEAVY STORMS SOUTH OF OTTAWA.

OTTAWA, Ont., July 30 (Canadian Press).—A hail and windstorm which cut a swath two miles wide and about 40 miles long through farming country south of the Capital Saturday did damage which it is estimated will run into hundreds of thousands of dollars. More than 100 fodder silos were flattened by the blast, and the force which with the hail wrought great destruction to root and field crops. The towns of North Gower, Kars, Osgoode Station, Dalmeney, Vernon, Winchester, Chesterfield, Finch, Morewood and Crysler—all agriculture centres—felt the fury of the gale.

Some of the hail stones which fell were the size of a hen-egg, residents in the stricken area assert.

SIX PERMITS DURING WEEK

Building Authorized in City Istimated To Cost $530.

MINOR CHANGES.

A pronounced reversal of form and proportion was shown by totals of building permits issued during the past week at the City Engineer's office as compared with corresponding records of the previous week. During the past week, only six permits were issued, representing an expenditure of approximately $530, as compared with nine permits totalling $8,625 during the week ending July 21.

According to the records, the erection of a verandah at 207 Brock Street by A. A. McIntyre will be responsible for the expenditure of $150 of the $530, while a like sum will be required to install a hot air furnace for James E. Dorgee at 495 Mark Street. Yet another contractor applied for permission to build a garage at 208 Prince Street, which will necessitate expenditure of $30.00 more, while the reshingling of a house at 466 George Street is estimated to cost $50.00.

Alterations at 108 Stewart Street, including a new partition, a door and two windows will be responsible for another $100, while a garage at 607 Armour Road will cost half of that sum.

Two More To-Day.

A drug store is to be opened up in the north-end about November 1st by M. E. Finn. The contract for erecting the new building at the corner of George and Edinburgh Streets has been let to K. Sheehy, the estimated cost being $1,400. The store will be a one-story brick building, 30 feet by 16 feet, finished in pine. A hot-air system will be installed to heat the building. W. H. Gilgour is erecting a house at 860 Water Street at an estimated cost of $2,600. It will be a five-room brick-stucco building, and will be heated by stoves.

BOY IS KILLED IN AUTO WRECK

Fred Barnesley Receives Fatal Injuries When Crash Ends Joy Ride.

NEAR LINDSAY.

LINDSAY, July 30 (Canadian Press).—A youthful automobile party ended in disaster on the House of Refuge Road last night when a car driven by Roy Bools, aged 14, turned turtle twice, fatally injuring one boy and injuring four others.

Fred Barnesley, aged nine, of Lindsay, died in Hospital a few hours after the accident. Teddy Lawson, Jack and Bill Rogers, and Bools also were injured.

Bools is stated to have been driving his brother's car despite the fact that the wiring and other starting apparatus had been hidden to prevent its being taken.

50 PERSONS HURT IN TRAIN COLLISION

Elevated Line in New York Scene of Bad Accident Late on Saturday.

NEW YORK, July 30 (Canadian Press).—Fifty persons were injured, three probably fatally, when a heavily loaded seven-car elevated train crashed into a stalled train on the Sixth Avenue line at Columbus Ave. and 69th Street last night. More than 1,000 passengers on two trains were thrown into a panic. Fire accompanied the collision.

Canadian Youth Wins

Percy Williams, British Columbia School Boy, Beats World's Stars.

IN 100 METRE FINAL.

Canadian Girls Placed First in Three Heats of 100 Metre Race.

OLYMPIC STADIUM, Amsterdam, July 30.—(Canadian Press.)—A Canadian school boy from British Columbia, Percy Williams, sprang from obscurity to fame to-day by beating the world's greatest sprinters in the Olympic 100 metres final in 10 4-5 seconds.

Williams was off to a brilliant start and successfully withstood the closing drive of London, British negro, leaping across the finishe line with a sensational swoop to win by a full yard. London was a step ahead of Georges Lammers.

There was a dispute about fifth and sixth places, the judges tentatively placing Legg of South Africa fifth and McAllister of the United States sixth pending the development of the pictures of the finish.

Two false starts preceded the race. The time was slower than in either of the semi-finals.

Williams' totally unexpected victory astounded the foreign experts, and the British triumph was the worst setback the United States has ever received in the Olympic sprints, since she failed to get any one of the three medals.

The second big upset came when Dr. O'Callaghan of Ireland won the Olympic hammer throwing championship with a toss of 5.39 metres. Skold of Sweden was second, and the Americans, Black, Gwinn and Connor, finished third, fifth and sixth respectively.

Williams broke exceptionally fast, sticking his chest out at the start and not withdrawing it until he had won. He gradually surged ahead of his competitors, who could not quite match the gruelling pace the young Canadian set.

Cheered By Crowd

Afterwards Phil Edwards and D. Little, Canadian 800 meters runners, carried Williams on their shoulders to the dressing room with the crowd breaking out in applause time and again.

In token of victory, Canada's flag was mounted on the Olympic pole at 4:40 p.m., while the band played "The Maple Leaf". To the right of it the Union Jack, celebrating London's second place effort, was raised while the German flag was raised to the left for Lammer's achievement in capturing third place.

The Canadians in the stands sang "The Maple Leaf" more or less in time with the band. If the songsters lacked some harmony, they lacked nothing in vigor or feeling.

British Show Pride

It was noted that after the sensational Canadian victory in the sprint, the edge seemed taken off the remander of the days' program. Most were content to discuss Williams' feat. The British in the field and on the stands were jubilant at the Empire carrying off the honors of the day. Here and there Scotsmen, Englishmen and Irishmen, in company with Australians and South Africans, could be seen arm in arm looking for a Canadian to offer congratulations.

Burghley Wins Hurdles.

Lord David Burghley, famous Cambridge track star, scored Great Britain's first Olympic championship in the 1928 Olympiad, capturing the final of the 400-metre hurdles to-day. The victory of the young Englishman over the American pair of Frank J. Cuhel and P. Morgan Taylor, who finished second and third, furnished a sensational up-set.

Titles to Empire

All three of the championships decided to-day at the Olympic Games went to the British Empire. Percy Williams, of Vancouver, won the 100 metres final; Lord Burghley, England, won the 400 metre hurdles and Dr O'Callaghan won for Ireland in the hammer throw.

The point totals, including yesterday's events, show the United States with 55 points, Britain 19, Finland 17, Sweden 16, and Canada and Ireland each 10.

Phil Edwards, dusky British Guianan, representing Canada, qualified for the 800 metres' final, when he ran second to Lloyd Hahn, of the United States, in one of the three semi-finals.

Three Reach Finals

(By W. H. Ingram, Staff Correspondent of the Canadian Press)

AMSTERDAM, July 30 (Canadian Press).—Three of the four Canadian girl sprinters qualified for the final of the 100 metres semi-finals to-day. Fanny Rosenfeld, of Toronto, showed the best performance in winning over Ethel Smith, also of Toronto, in 12 2-5 seconds. Besides these two, Myrtle Cook, Toronto, qualified by running second to Fanny Robinson of the United States.

Jane Bell, Toronto, came up against...

MILLBROOK UNITED CHURCH SUNDAY SCHOOL MEMBERS PICNIC AT NICHOLLS' OVAL

Good Program Provided by Officials in Charge.

PRIZES GIVEN

Softball Game Follows Bountiful Supper Catered by Ladies.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MILLBROOK, July 30.—The usual annual picnic outing of the United Church Sunday school was held on Thursday afternoon at Nicholls Oval, Peterborough, providing a very happy occasion for the boys and girls, and for the older folk as well.

By truck-load and cars the picnicers arrived, the drive being a pleasant feature in connection with the outing.

Fortunately the rain kept off until evening, giving ample opportunity for games for the children of the primary department, soft ball contests for the 'teen age groups and the older men of the party, and for running off the sports program.

Among those assisting with games on the green award for the little folk, whose bright dresses, summer suits and smiling faces, gave the impression of a flower garden, in contrast with the green grass, were: Mrs. Jas. Might, Mrs. J. McKnight, Mrs. G. E. Burnham, Mrs. O. Williamson and Mrs. M. McDowell.

The superintendent of the school, W. Fred Fallis, was assisted by Messrs. W. O'Brian, O. Williamson, F. McMahon, C. C. Garside, Rev. Joseph Wilks and other in running off the program of races.

Prize Winners.

Boys and girls, 3-5—1 Betty Darling, 2 Donald Williamson, 3 Teddy McDowell.

Boys' race, 4-6—1 Orval Guthrie, 2 Donald Williamson 3 Max Fallis.

Girls' race 6-8—1 Dorothy Raper, 2 Audrey Garside.

Boys race, 6-8—1 Gordon Jones, 2 Lloyd McMahon ,3 Gordon Might.

Girls' race, 8-10—1 Lois Dawson, 2 Norma Williamson, 3 Myrtle Nattress.

Boys' race, 8-10—1 Leon Raper, 2 Reg. Edmunds, 3 Orris Garside.

Girls' race, 10-12—1 Janet Dawson, 2 Margaret Smith, 3 Norma Williamson.

Boys' race, 10-12—1 Donald Lang, 2 Jack Stinson.

Girls' race, 12-14—1 Martha Earle, 2 Helen Mitchell.

Boys' race (under 16)—1 Raymond Rowland, 2 Gordon Muspratt.

Girls' race, 16-18—1 Elsie Spence, 2 Annie McMahon.

Single men's race—Aubrey Todd, 2 Arnold Fallis.

Married women's race—1 Mrs. McDowell, 2 Mrs. Sayles.

Married men's race—1 C. C. Garside, 2 M. Challice.

Fat women's race—1 Mrs. Williamson, 2 Mrs. Garside.

Fat men's race—1 G. W. Sayles, 2 W. G. Hetherington.

Slow race (3 minutes)—Mrs. A. J. Henderson, Mrs. J. H. George.

The lack of long tables at the park was realized at the tea hour, but rugs from the cars were utilized and the picnicers were seated in groups on the green, the teachers and officers, assisted by other willing workers, attending to the service of the abundant meal.

Following the supper hour, softball was resumed and some extra races were run off to use up a surplus of prizes on hand.

The rain rather hurried the departure for home, but all felt that a very enjoyable time had been spent.

Personals.

Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Sayles, Miss Marjorie Sayles, Miss Florence Fallis and Messrs. Walter and George Sayles motored from Toronto and attended the United church Sunday school picnic at the Nicholls Oval, Peterborough on Thursday.

Rev. W. W. and Mrs. Jones, the Misses Frances and Beatrice and Master Gordon Jones, returned from their holidays, spent at Kingston and other points, on Wednesday, and are now at their home in the United church parsonage. Mr. Jones will occupy his own pulpit on Sunday for the second time since coming to his new circuit. Rev. Joseph Wilks supplied during his absence.

Mrs. B. Roy Raper and three children, Leon, Dorothy and Maxwell, of Toronto, are holidaying with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Mullen, and also with Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Raper.

The Wide-Awakaes C.G.I.T. group is enjoying a holiday outing at Chemong Park, occupying one of Mrs. M. Pope's cottages.

THE WEATHER

Meteorological Office Toronto, July 29.—Pressure is high over the central portion of the continent and low over the Gulf of St. Lawrence and over Alberta. A few light showers have occurred from the Ottawa Valley east ward, while elsewhere the weather has been fair, warmer in Saskatchewan and Alberta, and comparatively cool from Manitoba eastward.

Lake Superior—Moderate winds, shifting to easterly; fair, with stationary or a little higher temperature; probably showers in west at night.

Western Provinces—Partly fair and warm; thundershowers in some localities.

MISSION BAND HOLDS PICNIC

Roseneath United Church Society Gather at Annual Outing.

GOOD PROGRAM.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

ROSENEATH, July 30.— The annual picnic of the King's Workers' Mission Band of the United Church was held on Wednesday afternoon on the lawn of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Blodgett, when about fifty or more members and friends spent a delightful afternoon. From the tiny wee tots to the grown-ups took part in making fun and a jolly time. The program for the afternoon included running races, sack race, three-legged race, relay race, wheelbarrow race, boot and shoe race. These were all duly patronized. Then the contests which caused considerable amusement. The pie-eating contest, Bessie Turner winning, with Archie Blodgett second. The banana eating contest, Pauline Curtis, Fern Blodgett, Willis Timlin.

After the sports a bountiful lunch was served, with everyone doing full justice to the numerous good things to eat. Ice cream, gum, chocolate bars and popcorn were sold during the afternoon, when a nice little sum was to their credit. This picnic was not to make money, but to gather the children, parents and friends into a real social gathering.

Personals.

Mrs. O. Curtis and children, of Montreal, are holidaying with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. Brisbin.

Miss Hershey, Toronto, is visiting with her brother, Dr. H. Hershey.

HAULTAIN GIRL IS SEVERELY SCALDED

Small Daughter of Patrick O'Brien Receives Injuries While Playing Near Stove.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HAULTAIN, July 30. — Word has lately been received of a painful accident which occurred at the home of Patrick O'Brien, cheesemaker at the Burleigh Cheese Factory, Haultain, when his eleven-year-old daughter Geraldine scalded herself very badly. She was playing in front of the stove, stand on a round roller, when she lost her balance, and to save herself, grasped the kettle on the stove which was full of boiling water. Miss Bessie Thompson, R.N., of Mount Julian, was called in, and the scald was dressed. Geraldine is now feeling much better, and will soon be able to get around again.

Mrs. Cluxton and son, of Toronto, who have been staying at Mount Julian, returned to their home on Saturday.

SPECTATOR SHARES ARE SAFEGUARDED

Committee Formed To Prevent London Weekly Losing Its Independence.

LONDON, July 28 (Canadian Press). — The Spectator announces a scheme based largely on that adopted by The Times in 1924, whereby its future control will be so safeguarded that the journal will "never fall into the possession of unworthy hands or of a great newspaper combine, whereby its independence would be sacrificed."

For this purpose a committee has been established for the special purpose of safeguarding future transfers of 51 per cent. of the ordinary shares, now held by Evelyn Wrench.

The committee will consist of those for the time being holding the offices of Lord Mayor of London, and the Presidents of the Royal Society, the Royal Historical Society, Law Society, and Institute of Chartered Accountants, and the Chairman of the Committee of the Headmasters' Conference.

Family Reunion Held At Madoc

CLOCK TELLS TIME FOR WORLD

The "Time Controlled Globe," invented by Luigi Ciano, young Toronto inventor, is a clock that tells the time in any part of the world. It is composed of an ordinary clock with a globe suspended on a circular frame work below it and is so adjusted that the globe will revolve at the exact speed that the earth is revolving, and, at the same time, dipping its poles with the seasons. Above is shown a photograph of Mr. Ciano with his invention. "It is simply an ordinary globe run by a specially built clock making one rotation every 24 hours," Mr. Ciano explained. "This globe is fitted with a stationary dial which is divided into 24 divisions, each division representing an hour, twelve divisions for the morning and twelve for the afternoon. The numbers run anti-clockwise, so that as the globe revolves around the dial the accurate "solar" time is given for every part of the world at the same time. By means of added mechanism the impression of the earth's rotation around the sun is given."

GARDEN PARTY IN EAST EMILY

Large Attendance at Social Held By St. James' Church Members.

HARVEST ADVANCING.

(Examiner Correspondence)

EAST EMILY, July 30.—The members of St. James' Anglican church held a garden party at the church on Wednesday evening, July 25th.

The tables were in the new shed, which hasn't been completed. The shed was very prettily decorated with different shades of tissue paper and Chinese lanterns.

The tables were laden with an abundance of ham, salads, cakes, and pies, of almost all varieties. There was a great many cakes left over which had never been cut. These were sold at the conclusion of the evening.

The program consisted of singing by a group from Peterborough. The booth was well patronized by all present.

The proceeds amounted to about $100.

Harvest in Full Swing

The order of the day in this community is haying and the harvesting of fall wheat and alsike. Despite the frequent showers the best part of the hay is being put in the barn. The fall wheat promises an abundant yield.

All the fruit also promises a good yield. The raspberry bushes, both wild and tame seem to be splendid. The cherries are also very good.

Personals

Miss Agnes Clink of Stouffville, is visiting with her aunt, Mrs. Milton Clark.

Mrs. A. Franks has returned home after visiting with her daughter, Mrs. J. L. Brooks in Omemee.

Mr. and Mrs. Syers, Mrs. Matchett and Mrs Hunter, of Cavan, spent Wednesday visiting the latter's daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Fee.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilbert Clark and son Altan, spent Sunday visiting with relatives in Peterborough

Mr. George Moncrief of Peterborough spent Thursday evening at his home in East Emily.

Miss Gladys Smith has returned home after visiting friends in Peterborough.

Mr. and Mrs. R. James and family spent Sunday with friends in Sonya.

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Harrison and little daughter, Audrey and Mr. and Mrs. Everett Harrison spent last Sunday with friends at Indian River.

Messrs. Roy Howden, Bert Smith and Alber Hoyland were picking huckleberries at Gull Lake on Thursday.

Miss Gwendoline Lough, nurse in training in Oshawa hospital, is spending her vacation with her mother in East Emily.

UNITED SUNDAY SCHOOLS HOLD ANNUAL PICNIC

Regent St., Knox and Baptist Church Members Take Part in Outing.

MANY ATTEND.

Close Contest Seen in Softball Game Between Girls and Boys.

(Examiner Correspondence)

LAKEFIELD, July 30. — The annual excursion of the Regent Street and Knox United Sunday Schools and the Baptist Sunday School took place to Wallace's Point on Thursday, the trip being made by water and over the Lift Lock, and down the Otonabee. There was a large crowd, and a pleasant spirit prevailed, and everyone had a delightful time. The weather was ideal, a warm summer day with a gentle breeze and lots of sunshine. The races, which were a feature of the day's outing, were closely contested. Following are the results of the races:

Boys' race, eight years and under—1, —. Abrams; 2, George Tanner; 3, W.. Cox.

Girls' race, eight years and under—1, Jean Knox; 2, Dorothy Pearson.

Boys' race, eight to twelve years—1, —. Crapp; 2, Douglas Dench; 3, Charles Tanner.

Girls, eight to twelve — 1, Bella Hamblin; 2, Muriel Dunford; 3. Jean Cox.

Boys, twelve to fourteen — 1, —. Crapp; 2, Percy Payne; 3, Charles Tanner.

Girls, twelve to fifteen — 1, Jean Crawford; 2, Eva Hendren; 3. Annie Crawford.

Young ladies' race—1, Ethel Blakeley; 2 Helen Porter; 3, Beatrice Edwards.

Young men's race — 1, George Wannamaker; 2, Percy Payne.

Boys' three-legged race — 1, Douglas Smith and Gray Kemp; 2, Charles Tanner and Douglas Dench.

Girls' three-legged race — 1, Helen Porter and Ethel Blakeley; 2, F. Edwards and E. Watson.

Boys' wheelbarrow race — 1, George Wannamaker and Douglas Dench.; 2, Percy Payne and Alex. Sutton.

Softball Game.

A softball game followed the races, and consisted of two teams, in which both boys and girls participated, and everyone, spectators and players alike, had a good time, and errors were not noted. Rev. J. B. McCormack and Reeve C. S. Tanner captained the teams, which might be said to represent church and state, with a close victory for the clergy's team of 8-7. Misses F. Edwards and E. Watson were the batteries for the winning

MEMBERS OF ROLLINS FAMILY GATHER AT 3RD ANNUAL PICNIC

Two Hundred People Take Part in Festival at Agricultural Grounds.

SPORTS PROGRAM.

MADOC, July 30 (Examiner Correspondence).—In the Spring of 1848, after a six weeks' voyage in a sailing vessel, there came from Ireland to Ivanhoe, George Rollins and his wife, Jane, to make a home in a new country and on Wednesday, July 18th, the third re-union of their descendants was held at Madoc, on the Agricultural grounds. Of their children, descendants of nine were present to the number of about two hundred. Friends came from St. Thomas, Orillia, Newburgh, Coe Hill, Belleville, as well as from the neighboring district.

The day, with its threatening weather, failed to dampen the enthusiasm of the Rollins' men and women for they were determined that this their third reunion should be no means rank third in order of success. Tables were laid for over two hundred in the Exhibition Hall and when all was in readiness for the dinner these tables fairly groaned with the weight of good things that had been placed upon them.

Sports Program

After dinner a program of sports was arranged by Harper Rollins, Stirling, and Borden Rollins, Tweed, assisted by Elgie Joblin of Cordova, who had come to the picnic to bring some of his people who belonged to the Rollin clan.

These sports were carried out by the chairman of the gathering, Sam Rollins, Madoc, assisted by T. B. Rollins, Tweed, Warden of the county, and C. S. Rollins, Coe Hill, ex-Warden of the county.

Many Take Part

Old and young entered heartily into the sport which made the afternoon a very enjoyable one. So heartily did they enter that when Hulsey Rollins, Ivanhoe, offered a treat of ice cream to any lady who would enter the stout ladies' walking contest, he found himself somewhat embarrassed at the large number of contestants who were more than eager to enter.

A tug-of-war was then staged, in which the men of Madoc township proved themselves more than worthy of the title "Stalwarts of the North."

The meeting was called to order by S. B. Rollins, and it was decided to hold the next reunion in Stirling next year about the second week in July. The people dispersed feeling very grateful to the committee in charge, namely Sam Rollins, Madoc; Mrs. George Hill, and Mrs. W. Whytock, also of Madoc, who had done so much to make the day a success. They felt also that such gatherings do much to strengthen the bond of fellowship that should exist and that the present generation might do well to preserve.

Canada Geese Make Journey By Express

The migratory movements of the Canada goose are famous, but it is not generally known that civilization has so far effected their habits as to cause a few of them to travel about the country by railway. A pair of Canada geese passed through the Windsor Street Station, Montreal, yesterday under the proverbial wing of the Canadian Pacific Express, en route to a point in the United States. Bird sancuaries are in existence in many places throughout Canada and the States, and pair of Pinioned wild geese are generally kept for breeding purposes and to reassure their wild friends that all is safe within the refuge.

CAR KILLS BOY.

TORONTO, July 30.—Roy Edward Jones, 3-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. William Jones, 456 Lauder Street, was struck down and killed by a motor truck while crossing the road in front of his home Saturday afternoon, at about two o'clock. The young lad apparently ran on to the roadway from between a parked automobile and an ice delivery wagon, directly into the path of the approaching car, driven by Fred Maker, of 57 Nairn Avenue. Maker was arrested.

MANY PRIZES AWARDED FOR HOME GARDENS

J. B. Nelson Busy Last Two Weeks Judging the Gardens.

CASH PRIZES.

John Barrie and Alma Bulmer Take First Prizes in This County.

Home Gardens have been the chief item of interest at the Peterborough Agricultural office during the past two weeks. J. B. Nelson, the local representative has been busy judging these gardens throughout this section of the county. He says that they are all very good and in fine condition.

The Ontario Department of Agriculture, through the Agricultural Representatives, promoted this Home Garden Contest to stimulate interest among boys and girls between the ages of 12 and 15, who have left the Public school and have returned to the farm. Many of these boys and girls have been engaged in School Fair work for some time and are now ready for growing crops on a larger scale. With considerable care, even on such a small area as this, a vast amount of fresh vegetables can be grown for use in the home.

The garden should be located as close to the dwelling house as possible, so that it may be tended to in spare moments which otherwise might be wasted. The land should fall to the south if possible and should preferably have a slight slope in this direction although this is not absolutely necessary. It is also advisable that garden should not be near large trees or bushes, because vegetables require abundant light and do not thrive in shade. The soil of the plot should preferably be of a sandy loam nature, although this is not imperative. Gravelly or stoney land, or even very heavy clay land, should be avoided. Almost any other soil than these can be made into garden soil by cultivation and by the application of manure. The soil should be well drained, if possible, either naturally or by its slope or artificially by some method of ditch or tile drainage.

The gardens were judged on the following points and the winners were selected whose gardens came closest to the standards set by the department.

	Possible Score
General appearance: Straight, even, well filled rows	10
Correct size of plot and arrangement of crops	10
Freedom from weeds, disease and insects	20
Cultivation and care of plants	20
Quality of vegetables, uniform in size and shape	10
Yield (approximate)	30
Total	100

BUREAUCRACY IS AGAIN ASSAILED

Lord Chief Justice of England Makes Attack in Book This Time.

LONDON, July 30 (Canadian Press)—A striking book, which is likely to cause a considerable stir, is being written by the Lord Chief Justice (Lord Hewart). It will deal with the encroachment of bureaucracy on modern life, and the title provisionally selected for it is "Power and the People," says The Daily News. The publishers will be Ernest Benn, Ltd.

Lord Hewart will direct attention to a growing problem to which he has already referred in legal judgments and in public speeches. The standpoint from which he approaches his task may be indicated by recalling a speech which he delivered at the annual dinner of the Law Society at Sheffield in September.

Discussing on that occasion what he described as "The restless encroachment of that arrogant pretensions of bureaucracy in our midst," he said: "The name of self-government would be an irritating mockery if it became a vast army of anonymous officials hidden from view placed above the law and administering a topsy-turvy system whereby the servants of the public would be its masters. That is a proposition upon which I do not propose to hold my tongue, so long as I have a tongue to use."

In a memorable address to the American Bar Association at Buffalo last year he argued that the rule of law involved the absence of arbitary power on the part of the government, and equality before the law.

Was there not, he asked, an increasing development of bureaucratic pretensions, the aim of which was to withdraw more and more matters from the jurisdiction of the courts and to set them apart for purely official determination?

In the last few months the Lord Chief Justice has reiterated the warning he gave at Buffalo. At the Manchester Reform Club in December last he argued that it was certain that if there were superfluous or swollen departments the evils which they involved would not be limited to waste of money.

INTER-EMPIRE FILM PREFERENCES URGED

Australia Would Have "Empire Quota" of Motion Pictures Established.

LONDON, July 30 (Canadian Press). — The Times correspondent at Canberra, Australia, says: Probably no more searching investigation has ever been made in the Commonwealth than that recently conducted by a Royal Commission appointed by the Federal Ministry to inquire into conditions in the moving picture industry of Australia. The report of this Commission, presented to the House of Representatives, recently, shows that no phase of the film industry as it concerns Australia has been left untouched, and in the opinion of the Ministry the decisions of the Commission were so commendable that, subject to constitutional limitations and discussion with the State Governments, they have been adopted at least in principle in their entirety.

During the enquiry much mention was made of the "stranglehold" which the United States film industry has acquired on the Commonwealth market. These allegations, the Commission finds, were not substantiated but the latest available figures show that the imports of American film last year amounted to 24,000,000 ft. while exports from Australia amounted to only 64,795 ft. The quantity of film imported from Britain was 1,904,190 ft. The Commission expresses regret that the exhibition of British films in Australia has not met with general success.

Recently-screened British films, however, have shown a decided improvement in quality and technique; such improvement, if maintained, will overcome any antagonism on the part of Australian audiences.

Statements that British films are boycotted by the trade have been definitely refuted and are without any justification says the report.

Of the pictures screened in Australia 93 percent are from foreign countries and at least 90 percent, from America. These films are of a high standard, and the Australian public will continue to demand the same high standard. For this reason and because of the limited offering of Australian films, an Australian quota could not be recommended. The Commission considers that an Empire quota would most readily meet the demand. There would have to be a standard of quality.

The Commission recommends that, in the first place, the Commonwealth authorities should endeavor to make reciprocal tariff and quota arrangements with other parts of the Empire. It suggests a quota of 5 percent of Empire films for the first year, 10 percent for the second year, and 15 percent for the third. As a further incentive to create a strong Empire industry, the Commission recommends that the tariff on foreign films should be increased from 1½d. a foot to 2d., the British Tariff remaining unchanged at "free." An amendment to the tariff schedule in this sense has been submitted to the House of Representatives.

Remarkable anomalies in the existing censorship provisions were discovered. The creation of a board of three censors including a woman, is suggested and has been adopted by the Ministry. Its headquarters will be in Sydney. An Appeals Board to deal with appeals from decisions by the censors will be established.

AN ALL-CANADIAN MOTOR ROUTE

Motorists to the Rocky Mountains national park, Alberta, may now enjoy an all-Canadian tour that will take them through 600 miles of mountain scenery, at no time during the journey taking them out of sight of the snow peaks. This route is from Banff, Alberta, over the Banff-Windermere Highway to Firlands, British Columbia, and then down the Columbia valley, returning east over the Crowsnest Pass route.

'MASTER MIND' SOLVED CRIME

Famous Viennese Scientist Given Credit For Finding Booher's Rifle.

HAS MANY SUCCESSES.

EDMONTON, Alta., July 30—(Canadian Press.)—The most remarkable part of the four Manville, Alta., murders to which Vernon Booher confessed, according to the police, was the work done by Dr. Adolph Maximilian Langser, Viennese expert, in assisting to solve the mystery surrounding the crimes.

Since July 9, when young Booher ran to a neighbor's home and announced that he had just found his mother, brother and two hired hands lying dead around the farm home, the police have slowly woven a web of circumstantial evidence. But one link was missing— the rifle used, which would bear finger prints, could not be found.

Knowing that Dr. Langser, internationally known criminologist, was passing through Canada, Commissioner W. Bryan, of the Alberta provincial police, long an admirer of Langser's system, invited him to stop off here and assist in finding the gun.

Going to the scene of the murder the famous criminologist from the school of applied psychology at Nancy France, applied methods he had developed through years of experimenting in his laboratories.

Dr. Langser and many other leaders in advanced psychology believe that thoughts are concrete things which continue to exist after the thinker has left the place.

In other words, the act of thinking sets up thought waves which greatly resemble radio waves. Some people are particularly sensitive to these waves, and can "ture in" on them, to use a radio phrase.

Exceptionally Gifted.

Dr. Langser is exceptionally gifted in this way, and putting himself in rapporte, or in plain words, in a receptive mood, within 15 minutes after reaching the Booher house he had a distinct feeling that the gun would be found in a certain spot about 235 yards from the house in the long grass and srub brush.

Search at this point revealed the weapon which searchers have almost stepped on.

Dr. Langser has been responsible for the solution of some of the world's most baffling crimes. In 1921, when several Cabinet Ministers were bombed in Bucharest, Dr. Langser succeeded in bringing the men responsible to punishment after the police had confessed themselves absolutely beaten.

Eighteen months ago Dr. Langser was called to China to assist the British military authorities to run down a gang of pirates which were raiding along the southern coasts. In order to gain itimate contact with them he allowed himself to be taken prisoner. Although the doctor came within an ace of being beheaded, he managed to make his escape and on evidence furnished by him, 18 of the ringleaders of the gang were shot. Dr. Langser declined to give the details of his escape, beyond saying that it was carried out chiefly by the use of mental powers.

FORESTS PUBLICLY OWNED

Ninety-two per cent of the forest land of Canada is owned by the people through the Dominion or Provincial Governments, and only 8 per cent is privately owned. Licenses to cut have been granted on 12 per cent of the total forest area; on 80 per cent the timber is unalienated. The licensed and private forests, however, contain relatively much greater quantities of timber than unalienated forests.

Madoc

MADOC, July 30 (Examiner Correspondence).—Mrs. J. F. Pelley and two children, Betty and Eugene of Flint, Michigan, are spending their holidays at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Bassett.

Miss Lamoine West and Miss Hazel Carswell, delegates from St. Peter's Presbyterian Y.P.S., to the Summer School held at Knox College, Toronto, have returned home greatly enthused and full of praise for the school and the staff.

They report the largest and the best school in the history of the Church's Summer schools.

Miss Marion Robertson was also a member of the motor party. Rev. T. G. Marshall, with Mrs Marshal and three children, motored to Toronto, and were accompanied by the three young ladies.

Mr. Marshall is a member of the Summer School committee.

Miss Annie Armstrong, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Armstrong of Madoc is doing well after an operation for appendicitis in Belleville General Hospital.

Mrs. James Travis and children of Toronto have been spending the past month with friends and relatives in town.

Nelson Delyea of Queenshoro and Volney Reid of Hamilton have returned from a motor trip to Niagara, Detroit and Pontiac, returning by way of Port Huron.

Dr. Arthur Whytock of Niagara Falls, Ontario, spent the week-end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Whytock.

Mr. and Mrs. Seeley and three children of Toronto have been visiting at the home of Mr. Thomas Bailey.

Mrs. Blair of Aneroid, Sask., has been visiting Mrs. A. Thompson and other relatives in town.

Miss Francis Glover of Centennary is spending her vacation with relatives in Madoc.

Mr. Walter Rupert of Montreal is spending his vacation at his home here.

Misses Clarice Dafoe, Thornton Love, and Marjorie Ellis have returned home after spending an enjoyable two weeks at Camp La Nid, Moira Lake.

Miss Isabel Bailey, Madoc, and Miss Alice Knox, Napanee, are spending their holidays at Smith's Falls.

Mrs. P. Dafoe and Miss Eleanor Dafoe are spending a few weeks at Scugog Camp with relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Brow nof Chicago were visitors at the home of their cousin, Mrs. B. Richmond on Saturday last. On Sunday they accompanied Mr. and Mrs. R. Wellman to Peterborough to visit relatives.

Misses Isabel and Marion Norton, who are camping at Crowe Lake, Marmora, spent a couple of days in town with their grandmother, Mrs. A. Thompson.

Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Brown and daughters, Mary and Jean of Moosejaw are visiting at the home of his mother, Mrs. W. T. Brown.

Rev. Father O'Riordon leaves this week for his new parish of Tweed. He received many tokens and testimonials expressing the sentiments of parishioners of Madoc and Queensboro.

MADOC, July 30. — Miss Jean W. Nickle entertained a few of her little friends at her home here on the occasion of her tenth birthday.

The Sunday School of Trinity United Church held their annual picnic at Ozone Park, Moira ake, on Wednesday afternoon. There was an exceptionally large attendance on account of the splendid weather. Many availed themselves of the swimming and bathing beaches. Baseball games were played and swings provided for the smaller ones. The classes had their races, and the winners were rewarded by first and second prizes, and a treat for all of ice-cream. The smaller ones of the Primary Class each received a shiny big nickel. Cars were provided by the kindness of the members of the church, and all were conveyed from church to the picnic grounds and back again at night.

NEWS IN BRIEF

BUS HIT BY ENGINE.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., July 30.—When a Mount Hamilton bus was struck by a C.N.R. engine late Saturday night twelve persons were injured, three of them seriously. The collision occurred at the Wabash crossing over the Provincial Highway in Stamford Township. The bus was struck exactly in the centre.

All the injured are from Hamilton and were members of a picnic party from the Wagstaffe Preserve works, Hamilton, to Queen Victoria Park.

The most seriously injured are: Otto Sanderling, 39, 454 Burlington Avenue, compound fracture left ankle and severe lacerations. Miss Anna Granaski, 23, compound fracture left leg, bad lacerations of the right (amputation may be necessary in both cases); Mrs. Watson, 48, 1913 Province Street, bad scalp wounds.

TWO IN HOSPITAL.

TORONTO, July 30.—Contrasted from the reports of numerous accidents without serious injuries earlier in the month, this week-end produced comparatively few accidents, but all of serious natures. Harry Banks, of Langstaff, lies in a critical condition in Toronto General Hospital due to being struck on North Yonge Street, and on the Lake Shore Road Mrs. William Broughton received very severe injuries when the coupe she was riding in with her husband and son was hurled off the road. In both cases the motorist responsible for the accident is lodged in the nearest jail.

FIRES AT EVERYBODY.

PORT COLBORNE, July 30.—Crazed with drink and shooting at anything and anybody within sight, William Morgan was captured at a late hour Saturday night after he had terrorized residents of eight blocks. Police of Port Colborne, Welland and Crowland with provincial officers joined in his arrest.

Only one man, William J. Logan, sailor, was wounded by the hail of bullets. Morgan is said to have fired at a number of men in the "jungle," a spot along the Welland Canal between Humberstone and Port Colborne where sailors waiting for boats live. In addition, it is claimed, he tried his marksmanship on a number of boys in bathing further along the canal. They saved themselves by diving.

KILLED IN BOUT.

WELLAND, July 30.—Boxing bouts have claimed two lives in the Niagara Peninsula since Gene Tunney triumphed over Heeney Thursday night. Saturday Richard Isaac Farr, 18, sparring with Clifford Pasmore, 21, farm hand on his father's farm, suddenly threw up his hand and fell back dead. Earl Friday morning Charles Stevens, 29, was killed in St. Catharines when he and Patrick Sweeney undertook to demonstrate the championship battle.

Pasmore is being detained pending an investigation into Farr's death. According to his story the two were having a playful boxing bout in the barn. No hard blows had been struck. They were only playing, he said. In the middle of a round, the lad suddenly threw up his hands and collapsed to the floor.

CATS WORRY WINDSOR.

WINDSOR, July 30. — With more than two cases of cats biting humans reported since the death of a small girl took place from hydrophobia having its source in a feline affected with rabies, health authorities here find themselves almost powerless to deal with the cats in the same way that dogs are handled in a rabies epidemic.

There are thousands of homeless cats in Windsor and the other border cities, in fact, those which live half-wild lives in the alleys far outnumber those who are cherished as pets. Cats are not licensed under local by-laws, nor has the dog catcher any authority to go out and round up the strays. The pound regulations mention dogs, horses, cows, sheep and many other animals, but they fail to make any mention of cats. It is believed that for a feline clean-up of the district, it would be necessary to enact new regulations.

PICKEREL DEMANDED.

The Dominion Government is to be petitioned to restock Lake Scugog with bass and pickerel, the people of the district realizing that unless something is done to improve fishing conditions there the tourist traffic will seriously fall off, with a neat loss of revenue.

Any arguments advanced in favor of Lake Scugog apply with equal force to the lakes closer to Peterborough.

Especially in regard to pickerel, there seems to be a feeling among Stoney Lake regulars and visitors alike that the stocking of that lake with this fish, now so plentiful in Rice Lake and in the Otonabee below Peterborough, would be welcome.

Most of our tourist friends are satisfied to catch pickerel, and as they rank among the best of our pan fish, our own people who spend the summer at Stoney Lake would welcome the opportunity to add pickerel to the menu.

Any movement that will increase the fishing facilities in neighboring waters deserves general support, and there are many who favor a campaign for large supplies of pickerel for the Kawarthas.

LIMITING THE SALE.

Government liquor stores in Ontario, according to an order from Sir Henry Drayton, are to be closed on whatever date Civic Holiday falls in the centres in which they are located.

This policy of eliminating sales on holidays may be an inconvenience to some of our tourist friends, but will be commended by the majority of people as in the general interest.

It was never intended that the Government sale of liquor should be conducted upon a high pressure basis with revenue as the chief consideration.

The system was established in the belief that the evils of intemperance might be minimized by having the sale of intoxicants under the control of the Government, and it has been recognized by the Liquor Control Board that the policy most likely to have the best results was one that provided the public with reasonable opportunities to secure what it desired without having liquor on sale at all hours, holidays and otherwise.

The board was wise in that decision, and its plan of closing on all holidays, including Civic Holiday, will be approved as in line with the general policy that has been followed.

MORE TRAFFIC OFFICIALS.

Within the past two weeks several of Ontario's motorcycle traffic officers have been badly hurt in accidents.

The position is not a sinecure, and there is some reason to believe that these officers whose presence on the road is for the protection of the public have too much territory to cover.

In fact, many people believe that the traffic force should be considerably augmented at this season of the year when traffic is at its peak.

When an official has scores of miles to cover the man who takes his work seriously has a big job on his hands, and the danger to himself is increased by his anxiety to patrol his whole beat efficiently.

These officers are needed on the highways, not as an annoyance to law-abiding motorists, but to compel speed fiends and other reckless drivers to respect the law and the lives of others on the road.

It might be money well spent to cut down the size of the patrols and increase the traffic force so that the highways may be covered thoroughly and effectively without compelling the officials to travel so far as they have to do under present conditions.

A CHILDISH OUTBREAK.

The tempest in the tea-pot that somewhat spoiled the start of the Olympic Games shows that men may hold high positions and still give way to childish exhibitions of temper.

The French Olympic team refused to participate in the opening parade because they claimed that an officer of their organization had been insulted by a Dutch citizen, one of the minor officials at the Amsterdam stadium.

The reason for the French withdrawal will strike most Canadians as a slight cause for such an unusual incident as a refusal to take part in the opening ceremonies.

The affair illustrates the fact that at these international competitions there is so much rivalry that nerves are almost at the breaking point, and, incidentally, it provides one more link in the case against the Olympic Games as a breeder of international ill-feeling and rancor.

No benefit that is derived from these contests every four years can possibly make up for the amount of dissension they create, and the bickering and squabbling over trifling points that seem to be an unavoidable feature of the Olympiad.

The games have gone back a long way from the old Greek standard.

CANADA AND THE BRITISH UNEMPLOYED.

British people have been awaiting with anxious interest the report of a Government commission, "The Industrial Transference Board," appointed to study the problem of finding work for an army of unemployed, mainly coal miners. Some action was made compulsory by the tragic condition of the coal industry, which, because of the decline in the export business, cannot provide in the near future for the mining population. In the poorer coal districts there is a state of appalling stagnation and privation.

The report of the board, published this week, confirms the least hopeful anticipations. Coming at a time when the volume of unemployment is rising, it will have a profoundly disquieting effect. The board reports that the number of men out of work is 300,000. Counting women and children, the number of unemployed on July 2, according to official statistics, was 1,217,500. The board sees no prospect of 300,000 men being absorbed in the heavy industries of the country—mining, shipbuilding, cotton, engineering, etc. It advocates a policy of permanent removal from distressed areas to those which are in a better state, but it seems to think that the principal outlet must be in the Dominions. Following the report comes the announcement by the Chancellor of the Exchequer of a plan for the assisted emigration to Canada annually of 2,500 boys, 7,000 single men, 2,000 families and 2,000 single women from the British mining districts. The board apparently thinks the obstacles to their removal to this country are purely financial. It directs attention to the emigration of 82,000 continental Europeans to this country last year. Is it aware that all belonged to the agricultural classes and came here pledged to go on the land? Canadians wish these settlers had been Britons, but our Immigration Department cannot get nearly as many farm-trained immigrants from the Mother Country, although it makes special efforts to reach that class and offers them special inducements.

Canada's capacity for absorbing a large number of miners and their families, and people raised in non-agricultural occupations, is not unlimited. No impediments are put in the way of immigration from Great Britain—good health and character being the only tests. No new barriers will be erected, and British immigrants will get a sympathetic welcome, but there should be some assurance that those who are non-agriculturists shall not find themselves in this country without work and without resources.—London Advertiser.

GAINING FRIENDS.

That the press all over Ontario and an increasing number of people in the Province are awakening to the possibilities in connection with the Trent Waterway, if completed, is the contention of the Peterborough Chamber of Commerce and Trent Waterway Association.

The following article, reprinted from the Mail and Empire of July 16, is a case in point:

"Twenty representatives of the municipalities of Peterborough, Lindsay, Bobcaygeon, Campbellford, Beaverton, Hastings, Lakefield, Fenelon Falls and Orillia visited the unfinished section of the Trent Waterway the other day. They traversed that section between Sparrow Lake and Georgian Bay, where two locks were planned and one was under construction at the outbreak of the European war, and where two marine railways now furnish facilities for the passage of small boats and motor craft. As a result of their inspection, the representatives of the municipalities recorded their conviction that this part of the canal should be completed as speedily as possible.

"Though the Trent Waterway remains uncompleted, it is an old undertaking. It was proposed fully a century ago, and work was begun on it in 1937, the year that Queen Victoria ascended the throne of Great Britain, and the year of rebellion in Upper and Lower Canada. Both before and since Confederation, Governments in Canada have spent money to carry out the plan to provide a system of navigation extending from Trenton on the Bay of Quinte to the Georgian Bay. The route of the canal follows the Trent River to Rice Lake, thence by the Otonabee River to Peterborough, where a hydraulic liftlock, capable of lifting an 800-ton vessel a vertical distance of 65 feet, has been constructed. From Peterborough the canal route proceeds, by a series of rivers, lakes and artificial canals, to Lake Simcoe, passes into Lake Couchiching and Sparrow Lake, whence it follows the Severn River to Georgian Bay at Honey Harbor. The canal has been opened to navigation as far west as Sparrow Lake, and, by the use of marine railways at two rapids, the passage between Sparrow Lake and Georgian Bay has been made possible for small boats and motor boats of limited size. Had the Great War not led the Government then in power to stop construction, the locks in the Severn section of the canal might have been completed and the whole waterway might have been open to navigation to-day. Of course, the importance of the canal from the viewpoint of trade and commerce has declined since it was first projected. If it were completed it would be navigable only by small vessels or barges of light draught and it has been pushed into the background as a trade route by the construction of railways and the deepening of the Great Lakes and the St. Lawrence River waterways.

"At least twenty million dollars has been spent on the Trent Canal. The present Government has been urged to expend the sum required to bring this old project to completion. Hon. Charles Dunning, Minister of Railways and Canals, told the House of Commons in 1927 that an expenditure of about three million dollars would be required to finish the waterway, and that the Government did not then intend to finish it. In that connection, it has been pointed out that he Government derives a revenue of some $95,000 a year from rentals of water powers along the canal route, and that a considerable number of tourists, some of them from the United States, use the canal between Lake Ontario and summer resorts in the interior of the Province. It is with the object, largely, of increasing this tourist traffic that many persons in the section of Ontario traversed by the canal route desire the completion of the waterway."

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Let us hope the League of Nations will not have to settle any international entanglements as a result of the Olympic Games.

Ramsay Macdonald can't have heard of Ontario farmers praying for dry weather. On sailing for Canada he told newspapermen that he was going to have "a holiday full of sun and leisure."

The nineteenth hole did not seem to bother many of the American golf stars who visited Toronto last week.

There is still time for a fine holiday for your boy at Camp Skookum. Ask the boy who has had one.

The Trent Canal is coming into its own. It will be a long time before anybody else advances a suggestion in the House of Commons that the waterway be converted into a motor road.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, July 20 (Canadian Press). — Increasing popularity of higher prices for corn became an outstanding feature in the corn market Saturday. More than half a million bushels of corn to fill Chicago July contracts were handed over Saturday by previous speculative sellers, but notwithstanding this and despite chances of further heavy deliveries to-day and to-morrow the corn market gathered strength right from the opening and finished at the topmost point which has been reached in a long while.

Closing quotations on corn were firm, ⅞c to 1⅛c a bushel net higher, with wheat unchanged to ½c up; oats ¼ to 1¼c off, and provisions varying from 2c decline to a rise of 5c.

It was quickly apparent that Saturday's receipts of corn in Chicago were being applied either on old sales or an July contracts, and thus although the arrivals totalled 532 cars no interference could be noticed to upward trend of the market. This upward tendency was due in part to the fact that liberal amounts of No. 2 and No. 3 yellow corn were being loaded out of Chicago elevators Saturday to be shipped elsewhere. While much corn is attracted to Chicago on account of premiums being paid here for July and September deliveries an unusually large proportion of the grain is from other terminal markets and not from the country.

Special attention by corn traders Saturday was given to assertions that the bulk of the whole visible supply of corn being concentrated in Chicago, and with only light stocks in Eastern positions, consumers everywhere will have to come into the market more freely in this connection, leading authorities were quoted to the effect that the usual August and September corn movement from rural sources has already taken place. Under such circumstances, new speculative offerings Saturday were scarce, and previous sellers of September especially were active as buyers. A late development to which particular significance was attached in some quarters was chartering of vessel-room here for 250,000 bushels of corn to load to-day destined to Buffalo.

Wheat news was about all bearish, and the market averages lower most of the time Saturday, but the close was an advance owing to the strength displayed by corn. Receipts of wheat in Chicago are enlarging and Saturday totalled 120 cars. European purchase of North American wheat Saturday were said to lack volume.

Oats arrivals here as well as wheat were larger Saturday, the oats receipts aggregating 119 cars. The oats market as a consequence ran into heavy selling at times.

Provision prices were easier for lard, but firmer meats.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., July 30 (Canadian Press).—A moderate amount of business was worked with the United Kingdom and the Continent in Canadian grain here Saturday. In the local market there was some demand from exporters for wheat and sales of a few odd loads of number 3 northern were made at 2¼ cents per bushel above the Winnipeg July option c.i.f. Montreal. The car lot trade was quiet, but the undertone to the market was steady.

The trade in spring and winter wheat grades of flour continued good and prices were firmly maintained.

An active trade was done in all lines of millfeed and values were firm. The condition of the market for standard grades of rolled oats was unchanged.

Prices for all grades of eggs were firm under a good demand from local buyers. The receipts Saturday were 1,823 cases.

The bean market was active and firm. Car lots of choice white hand-picked sold at $3.90 per bushel and odd lots at $4.10 per bushel.

The inquiry for butter was good and the undertone to the market was firm. The receipts were 2,357 packages.

A fair trade was done in cheese and values were steady. The receipts were 7,830 boxes.

The Question Box

W. P. Q.—You spoke some time ago of carrying on a column daily about the "Universal Language." I am in favour of it. But how about French, Spanish or Italian? German is a good hard language to learn and all these are "living." How about it?

A.—I don't understand your reference to German in the same connection as a universal language. Certainly German can never become that. Esperanto is a universal language, simple to learn and easy to remember. Not enough interest has been shown, however, to warrant our running the lessons.

Q.—(1) How far away can a crystal radio receiver pick up a concert broadcast by a radio station?

(2) An American company contends a crystal set manufactured by them has a receiving radius of some 500 miles. Is this possible? Could concerts be picked up by this at that distance?

A.—(1) The range of a crystal set is about 50 miles. (2) In the States broadcasting conditions are different than they are here. High power stations are more numerous, and if a set is located at the hub of a number of these high power broadcasters it might be possible to receive stations up to the range of 500 miles.

GOD'S MINUTE.

The Lord upholdeth all that fall, and raiseth up all those that be bowed down. The eyes of all wait upon Thee; and Thou givest them their meat in due season. Thou openest Thine hand, and satisfieth the desire of every living thing. The Lord is nigh unto all them that call upon Him, to all that call upon Him in truth.—Ps. 145:14-16, 18.

O Lord, Heavenly Father, Who knowest our proneness to forget Thee in the busy rush of life, and while health and success attend us, but Who art our ever prompt refuge and defence in times of illness, bitter grief and failure, we ask Thy forgiveness for our want of gratitude, and selfish lack of filial affection. We are of the earth, earthy, unworthy of our Heavenly parentage, and yet we are Thy children. We do not mean to be disobedient or unmindful of Thy mercies. It is only because Thy care and oversight has been constant from our earliest childhood that we sometimes presume on it, and fail to remember Thy tenderness. We recall the past, make us braver for the future. May we trust even when we cannot trace the reason of Thy Providence. Give us godliness with contentment, and in all the chances and changes of mortal life make us patient and prayerful, and may the peace of God which passeth human understanding be ours in such measure as we can receive it. We ask it all for the sake of Jesus Christ, our Lord. Amen.

A Thought

TWO PATHS

There is probably no man who has not at one time or another been called on to chose between two paths, one leading to immediate victory in politics or business through means which he ought—and knows he ought—to scorn to use, and the other to possible defeat through his unwillingness to employ such means. The choice is often difficult—so weak is human nature. It is natural for men to desire to win, and we fear it is natural for most men to resort to sharp practice in their struggle for victory. The latter is a human weakness, though the former is not.

Success in any honorable undertaking is not a crime, and there certainly is nothing wrong in it. But success may be, as it often is, bought at too high a price. A sullied and tarnished victory ought to be thought of as disgraceful—as it is. It is disgraceful whether or not it brings with it its penalty, which it sometimes does not do.

There is a glory in failure, in the willingness to fail, which, in these days of the glorification of success, is, we fear, slightly appreciated. Macbeth, to whom justice has perhaps not been done, had the root of the matter in him. Of him his wife said:

"—thou wouldst be great:
Art not without ambition but without
The illness should attend it; what that wouldst highly,
Thou wouldst holily; wouldst not play false, false,
And yet wouldst wrongly win."

He chose the path to success by abhorrent means—in his case murder—and he lost—lost "honor, love, obedience, troops of friends," and found life to be only "—a tale

Told by an idiot, full of sound and fury,
Signifying nothing."

It is a terrible picture of the life of every man who wins by foul means, who puts victory as his object above everything else. Human life is largely an affair of these two paths. Either may lead to success, in the one case base and in the other honorable, or one may lead to base success and the other to noble failure. The latter is the choice almost every day offered to every man. Success won by foul means almost invariably exacts its price. But whether it does or not, it is itself a foul thing, known to be so in the inmost heart of him who wins it.

Poems on Westwood

WESTWOOD, July 30.— The following poems on "Westwood" were composed by scholars of the school. The teacher for the past year was Mr. E. Fairman:

We call our village Westwood,
It is pretty to behold,
With trees and flowers everywhere
And houses new and old.

The Ouse river cut the village
Into two unequal parts,
And falling swiftly o'er the dam,
Two mills it starts.

On the east side of the river,
A grist mill stands sublime,
And it's only when the water's low
That it is run by steam.

On the west side of the river
There stands a saw mill old,
Where logs are cut into lumber,
Ready to be sold.

East of our dear Ouse river,
There is a general store,
And if it can't supply your needs,
Just across the bridge once more.

And there you'll find another one,
With an ice-cream parlor combined,
And going in at any time
Whatever you want you'll find.

You'd think to count the churches
That a pious town you'd find,
But when you know us better
Maybe you'll change your mind.

Just around the corner
Is a little white brick school,
Where children seeking knowledge
Are taught the golden rule.

On the west side of the river
You find a blacksmith shop,
Where horses needing shoe repairs
Keeps the blacksmith on the hop.

There is a lovely monument
At the west side of the hall,
To commemorate the soldiers
Who answered to the call.

And this is dear old Westwood,
Tho' it is very small,
To my way of thinking
It's the best town of all.

—Della Drummond.

Westwood is my home town
Of which I'm very proud,
I'll tell you some facts about it,
And sing its praises loud.

The river in this small town
Bears the English name of Ouse,
Where the young folk have so much fun
Hunting suckers out in slews.

We've a grist mill and saw mill
Doing business all the year,
Where logs are sawed and chop is ground,
As smooth as silk on ear.

There's a town hall too, in Westwood,
Where the merry-makers go,
And if you're out for a good time
Just come to one of our shows.

We've a blacksmith and garage man
Who renders service on the dot,
Whether shoeing 'old Dobin all'
round,
Or making cars go—"that will not."

You'll find two good stores in our town,
And the old post office, too,
And a host or real old fashioned folk
To greet you as you pass through.

There's the old white brick schoolhouse,
Really modern for its age,
Where the pupils learn the thee R's
From a teacher, wise as a sage.

A fine monument stands erected,
In loving memory of our boys,
Who through love of home and country
Gave up friends, and lives, and joys.

And no matter what your creed is,
You will find an open door,
For we have here three churches,
Standing on our corners four.

We've some real fine homes in Westwood,
Lots of fine young children, too,
And we think for a place to live in,
It can't be beat, the country through.

—Mary Breckenridge.

DANISH SKIN M.D. HAS BEAUTY HINT

Dr. Evard Ehlers Makes Diet Suggestion For Clearing Complexion.

COPENHAGEN, July 30.—Dr. Evard Ehlers, one of the great European pioneers in medicine, internationally known for his work in the treatment of skin diseases, has recently given some beauty hints.

Dr. Ehlers' life for many years has been devoted to the study of the skin. In learning how to cure grave diseases, he has also learned, as few other men have learned, what healthy, beautiful skin should be.

In the few remarks which he has made recently on the way to have a lovely skin, he has emphasized the importance of proper diet and of a healthy digestion.

Dr. Ehlers' reputation rests partly on his pioneering work, carried on in most of the tropical countries of Europe, the Near East and in America, which he has done on leprosy. He is also honored, particularly in Denmark, for his work in saving hundreds of children from a hereditary social disease. Among other things he has founded three hospitals where such children are cared for and cured.

Among his many professional honors, Dr. Ehlers is a member of the Academy of Medicine of Paris, before which he annually lectures on Dermatology.

In straightening out the diet of patients to give them a clear, healthy skin, Dr. Ehlers says he lays great importance on yeast, the results of which are "incontestable."

"It is many years since my teacher and friend, Dr. L. Broq, of St. Louis Hospital, Paris, taught me to use yeast for all staphylococcic infections of the skin," Dr. Ehlers said recently. "Since then I have always used yeast in all cases of furunculosis (the medical term for boils) which I had had under my observation, as well as in rebellious cases of acne. The yeast treatment must be continued over several months, until the elimination of staphylococci is completed."

CHASES VIOLIN AROUND WORLD

Zimbalist Finally Gets His Rare Fiddle Stolen Year Ago.

A GUADAGNINI

NEW HARTFORD, Conn., July 30. Efrem Zimbalist's pet fiddle, stolen more than a year ago, has been returned to the famous violinist at his summer home in the hills near New Hartford, having traveled forty thousand miles.

The violin is a Guadagnini, one of the rarest of the eighteenth century Cremonas. Similar ones have fetched $25,000 from collectors.

Zimbalist's Guadagnini was taken from his dressing room in a Los Angeles concert hall more than a year ago. Shortly after, a musician offered it for sale to the Chicago representative of Rudolph Wurlitzer, the collector of old violins from whom Zimbalist bought his pet one. The police were called.

Wife Misses Violin.

The glad news was cabled to Zimbalist. He was then in Australia on tour. He asked his wife, Alma Gluck, who was about to leave New York to join him, to pick up his violin at Chicago. But the Los Angeles authorities wanted it for evidence, and when Alma Gluck reached Chicago, the violin was on its way west again.

Mrs. Zimbalist sailed for Australia, leaving instructions to forward the fiddle when the law was through with it. This was done in due course.

It was thought that it would reach Zimbalist in Sydney, Australia. But the guess was wrong. Zimbalist had left by the time his violin arrived. It was shipped on—after cable consultation and customs house red tape—to Tokyo. Missed again. On to Singapore. Again it missed. And so it continued on its journey—to Shanghai, Hongkong, Manila, Calcutta, Bombay, Madras.

Always Misses Owner.

They always missed connections. At last word was received that Zimbalist was returning to Australia for a few more concerts. Surely they would make connections there. The violin was slipped post haste to Sydney again. But the Australian return concerts did not include one at Sydney. Thus Zimbalist continued to Europe—and, fearing the possible loss of the violin if it did any more independent traveling, it was ordered back to the United States.

So back from Australia the violin was shipped, then to Chicago and then to New York. Its owner beat it back by some weeks.

Today the violin, in a case covered with more labels than a Cook's tourist's trunk, was delivered to its delighted owner by F. L. Doring, a representative of Rudolph Wurlitzer.

PLANE PATROLS FOREST

TRENTON, N.J. July 26.—Use of airplanes in locating and mapping eastern forest fires has saved thousands of acres of woodland from burning, according to Col. Leonidas Cole, state fire marshal. Flying over the burning sectors, observers chart the extent of the blaze on a map and drop it at the nearest lookout station. This saves hours of time that would have been consumed by men scouting on foot.

Five thousand tons of fuel oil are required to carry some of the big liners on one trip across the Atlantic.

RUTH ELDER WANTS TO REPEAT STUNT.

Ruth Elder, the Alabama aviatrix, who tried to fly the Atlantic last September in company with George Haldeman, would like to repeat the attempt. On last year's flight her plane, the American Girl, set a record for an overseas flight of 35 hours 26 minutes before it was forced to land in the ocean near the Azores. Both Ruth Elder and Haldeman have drawn big financial rewards from the trip. Meanwhile Miss Elder is going to co-star with Richard Dix in a movie. The illustration shows: (1) Lyle Womack, Ruth Elder's second husband; (2) George Haldeman, her co-pilot; (3) the aviatrix herself, and (4) the monoplane American Girl.

CANADIAN STAR

Percy Williams, Vancouver schoolboy sprint flash, all dolled up in his Olympic jersey. Williams, who was the sensation of the Canadian trials, clicked off the hundred metres in 10 3-5, which is world's record time for the distance, though it was equalled by Frank Wykoff, another school-boy wonder of the United States. The best time recorded in other countries is 10 9-10.

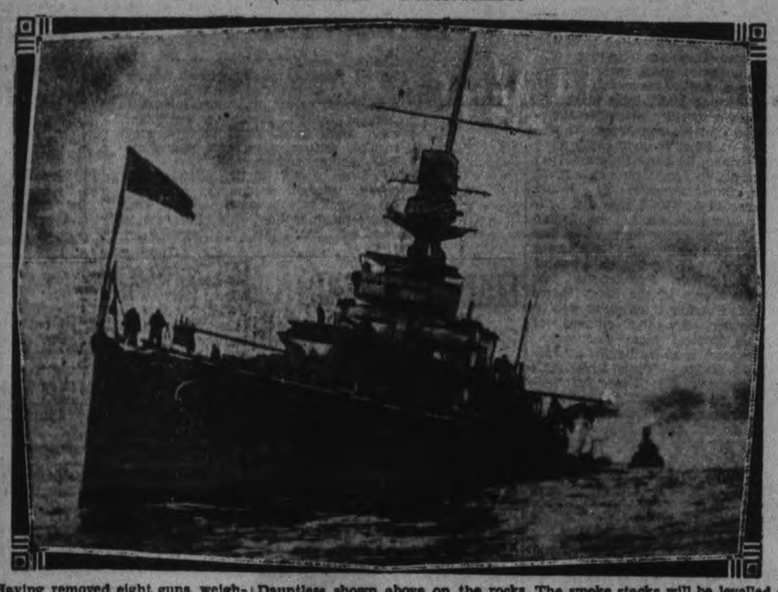
COMMANDER BIRD AND PARTY

Commander Richard E. Byrd, the first man to fly to the North Pole, and also victor in a trans-Atlantic flight a year ago, is now ready to start soon on his voyage to the South Pole. Picture No. 1 shows the three-masted barkentine Samson in which Byrd will make the greater part of his journey. The last 1,000 miles he will cover by plane. No. 2 shows three members of the crew; left to right, Thomas Mulroy, Bernt Balchen, a noted airman, and Capt. David Deurick, his uncle, who is skipper of the Samson. No. 3 is Commander Byrd himself. No. 4 is Otto Deurick, 15, son of the skipper, who will be the youngest member of the expedition. He is holding his dog, the ship's mascot. No. 5 is another group of the crew, front row, left to right: James T. Kennedy, Lieut. Thomas Mulroy, chief engineer; Esmonde M. O'Brien, assistant engineer, and E. R. Mulroy. Top, Randolph Steen and John Larson.

600-MILE RAILWAY.

A railway undertaking of great interest to Canada and the Empire is being projected across Persia from the southeast corner of the Caspian Sea to the head of the Persian Gulf. The British and Persian governments are cooperating and are giving the work to British, American, French and German contractors. The men who will handle the United States' part of the contract is Major General Jack Stewart of Vancouver, who served with distinction as the head of railway construction work in France. On the accompanying map the 600 mile route is roughly indicated. The relation of the line to Mesopotamia, Syria, Kurdistan and Soviet Russia is also shown. The British now have a railway running from the Persian gulf beyond Bagdad and Mosul with a branch line to the frontier from Bagdad.

FOUNDERED DAUNTLESS.



Having removed eight guns, weighing 20 tons each, four torpedo tubes and 800 tons of fuel oil, marine workers on Saturday expressed the hope that they would be able to free H.M.S. Dauntless shown above on the rocks inside the harbor entrance at Halifax, where she grounded on Dominion day. A crew of 150 men is working night and day to refloat the vessel. The smoke stacks will be levelled and the openings sealed up and in a few days it is expected that all the water in the holds will be pumped out. The British man-o'-war will be taken to Halifax dry docks for repairs.

PROMOTES MIGRATION.

James Smyth, D.D., LL.D., of Montreal, president of the British Immigration and Colonization Association and the chairma nof the Protestant school board of Montreal, left aboard the Anchor-Donaldson liner Athenia to promote the suggested scheme of making 19 years the age limit for boys coming to Canada free for land settlement. The present limit is 17 years. "Ninety-seven per cent. are successful," declared the doctor, speaking of boys who had come out to Canada.

Nobile, who was stranded on the ice north of Spitzbergen. A group headed by Senator Morello awarded the prize. Major Maddalena is still in the northland.

HISTORICAL SIGHT

On the site where Joseph Brant, famous Indian warrior of the Canadian frontier, entered into covenant wwith the white man forever to bury the hatchet, his descendants met last week in solemn conclave and with all the dignity of their race proclaimed themselves as an independent nation within a nation. Also they formed a new government to carry on the business of their people. Picturesque chieftains in native dress assembled under the speakership of the "fire-keepers" in the Onondaga Long House and here pledged themselves to loyalty and support of the government of the Six Nations. Here are two chiefs of the six tribes as they gathered at the meeting place: Elijah Danford Warrior, sporting tucks on head dress; Onondaga Long House, where Joseph Brant met with Indians years ago, and where the historic council assembled to declare their independence. A group of Indians is shown in front waiting for the meeting to open; right, Norman Deskiaha, warrior, son of the late Chief Deskiaha, who spent three years in England fighting for Indian freedom.

Prince and Princes Erik of Denmark, and daughter, Alexandria, who have been living in Los Angeles, are shown above as they arrived at Copenhagen. The princess was formerly Miss Lois Booth of Ottawa, daughter of the lumber king, J. R. Booth. She and her husband went to California to run a chicken ranch.

General Sir Philip Chewode, member of the British army council, has been appointed chief of the general staff in India. He succeeds Lieutenant-General Sir A. Skeen, who had served under the commander-in-chief, Field Marshal Cir W. R. Birdwood, since 1924. General Chetwode was the author of the military plan by which Field Marshal Sir Edmund Allenby pursued the offensive in Palestine during the war.

Miss Margaret Halliday, who has been designated for service under the Women's Missionary Society in the Angola Mission (Portuguese West Africa) of the United Church of Canada. Miss Halliday, whose parents live at Toronto, has been successively a school teacher and a church deaconess.

After the riding had been represented in the Ontario legislature since 1919 by either a Liberal or a U.F.O.-Progressive, the Conservatives, with the co-operation of hundreds of Liberals, won South Bruce in the recent by-election. Their candidate, Foster G. Moffatt (above) former of Kinloss township, defeated M. A. McCallum, ex-M.L.A. by a majority exceeding 1,500.

Dr. E. F. Tisdall, reputed authority on rickets, who told the 11th annual Dominion Chemical convention at London, Ont., that if the shorter ultra violet rays were withdrawn animal life would cease to exist on the earth. He stated that there was a well-defined relationship between the altitude of the sun and the existence of rickets, as a result of which science is able to forecast the appearance of rickets in any part of the world. Sunshine was the most valuable factor in the treatment of rickets, he said.

Miss Edith M. Trent, who has spent the past 34 years as a missionary in Tokio, Japan, under the auspices of the women's auxiliary of the Church of England in Canada, is enjoying a year's furlough in Canada. Miss Trent went to Japan in 1894. She is shown at the lower left of the above group photograph taken at her mission station in Tokio. Seated next to her is Mrs. Hirose Cho Ko San, a Japanese missionary worker who was one of Miss Trent's first converts, and has been associated in mission work with her for 30 years.

SPOILT MUSIC

A Splendid New Serial by Ruby M. Ayres

THE STORY THUS FAR:

JENNIFER FRY is saved from drowning by NICHOLAS GAUNT, wealthy young man-about-town. Later he takes her to tea and asks to call, but she refuses because she is ashamed of her humble surroundings. They continue their friendship and Jennifer comes to love Nicholas, but he is suddenly called abroad by his mother's illness. During his absence Jennifer's father dies. She reads of his engagement in the paper, and stands in the crowd to see him and his bride come from the church after the wedding. Her mother dies. Five years later she meets Nicholas again. He decides to divorce his wife, Lady Edith. But just then Lady Edith becomes ill. The doctors promise her only a year of life and she makes Gaunt promise not to see Jennifer for that year. Jennifer is angry and decides to be as gay as she can on a legacy of eight thousand pounds left her by an uncle. She gives up her job and goes to work to have a good time. She meets DOLORES and BUDDY, two women who live in the flat above her new dwelling place. Through them she meets CHESNEY, who quarrels about her with Buddy and proposes to Jennifer. Jennifer asks him to wait for her answer. They meet Gaunt and his wife at a night club. Jennifer, tired and unhappy, promises to marry Chesney. Buddy, when she hears of the engagement, tries to kill herself.

CHAPTER VVXIII

A Red Rose-petal.

In the sane light of day it all seemed like a bad dream.

Dolores came down while Jennifer was at breakfast. The pallor of her face was accentuated by her extravagant make-up, and she avoided Jennifer's eyes.

"I'm sane now," she announced calmly. "I've had a bath and a brandy-and-soda, and Richard is himself again."

"I don't wonder you were unnerved," Jennifer said. "I was terrified myself."

"Buddy's much better. She's sleeping quietly. The doctor's been again. He's a sport, that man."

"Yes."

There was a little silence; both women were conscious of a feeling of constraint.

Suddenly Dolores said abruptly: "Of course, it wasn't really an accident."

"No."

"As soon as she's well enough I'm going to take her away. I shall keep her away for a long time. We shall go to Cornwall."

"Cornwall!"

"Yes; do you know it?"

"I used to stay there years ago."

Years ago! A lifetime ago, surely, since Gaunt had followed her down to the little white cottage at Porth.

Dolores walked over to the mantelshelf and stared at a photograph of Chesney which stood there.

"When are you going to be married?" she asked abruptly.

"Malcolm wants it to be at once." Dolores nodded.

"If you're to be married soon I shall keep Buddy out of the way till it's all over."

Jennifer flushed.

"But I can't be married unless you are there!" she cried.

"That's sweet of you, but Buddy comes first. I brought her to live in London, and I made her mix up with the people I know. I owe her something for that."

"I think you've been wonderfully good to her; much better than she deserves."

Dolores turned away.

"Oh well," she said, non-committally.

There was a little pause; then she said more briskly: "I must go back. I just ran down to show you that I'm no longer an hysterical fool."

She disappeared with a wave of her hand.

Jennifer had told Chesney not to come until after lunch; but she was not at all surprised when, less than an hour later, he was announced.

"I know what you said," he began hurriedly when she frowned at him. "But I couldn't stay away. It was a physical impossibility. But what is the matter with you?" he asked in concern. "You don't look well.

She hesitated, then told him.

"We had rather a scare last night. Buddy was taken very ill."

"Buddy!" He frowned. "What was the matter? Too much to drink, I suppose, and too many late nights."

"No." His arm was round her, but she looked away from his ardent eyes. "She tried to take her life, Malcolm."

"Buddy!"

"Yes. You see . . . she had heard about us—that we are engaged to be married."

He said nothing, and with an effort she raised her eyes to his face. "Oh! I'm sorry for her—sorry!—sorry!" she said passionately. "It's all my fault for coming between you."

"You never came between us. If I had not met you I should not have married Buddy; and now I have met you. . . ." He took her face between his hands, looking earnestly into her eyes. "I wonder if you know half what you mean to me? Buddy could never make me feel one-tenth part that you do; she's only a child."

"It's a woman's love she feels for you," Jennifer said.

"And what sort of love do you feel for me?" he asked.

She turned her face away and made no answer.

He waited a moment, then moved away with a half sigh.

"Well, I must be patient, I suppose," he said, trying to speak cheerily. "Tell me: is Buddy all right now?"

"Yes. We sent for a doctor. I thought she was dead. Dolores thought so too She was half mad with fright."

"She would be! Poor Dolores."

Jennifer looked surprised.

"I never thought she cared for Buddy very much," she protested.

Chesney laughed.

"Didn't you? That's what she intends everyone to think; but I know better. It's just her way to pretend that she has no feeling for the person she most adores."

The telephone bell rang sharply, and Jennifer crossed the room to answer it.

"Yes . . . Who is it?"

Chesney, watching, saw the subtle change in her face and heard a different note in her voice.

". . . Oh, thank you. It is very kind of you. . . ." A little pause; then Jennifer laughed—a reckless laugh it sounded.

". . . Thank you; we shall both be delighted. . . Tomorrow at eight, then.'

She hung up the receiver and stood quite still for a moment before turning to him.

"Who was it?" Chesney asked.

"Lady Edith Gaunt." Jennifer was still looking away from him. "She has heard of our engagement. She wants us to dine at her house tomorrow evening. She says she is asking Dolores as well, and another man."

Chesney frowned.

"I would rather dine somewhere alone with you. Why did you say we would go?"

She smiled faintly.

"Because I wasn't clever enough to think of an excuse on the spur of the moment; and also because . . I should rather like to go."

It was the truth; she felt that it would be another weapon in her hand if she could force herself to sit at Gaunt's table as Malcolm Chesney's affianced wife.

"Would you rather I rang up and made an excuse?" she asked with an effort.

"I would rather you pleased yourself," Chesney answered.

"Then we will go," Jennifer said.

The Gaunts' house was beautiful.

Jennifer was conscious of a sudden pang as, on Gaunt's arm, she crossed the wide hall with its polished floor and panelled walls.

Dolores had not come. Lady Edith explained carelessly that Buddy was ill and could not be left.

"I detest Buddy," she said with a little frown. "I suppose there is nothing wrong with her except ill-temper or cocktails."

"I think she is over-tired," Jennifer said gently. "Dolores says she has been very nervous and hysterical for some time."

"Oh, of course you know all about them. I forgot your flat is just below theirs," Edith Gaunt said. "So as Dolores would not come," she went on, "I put William Winter off, too. I hate odd numbers. I hope you don't mind being just tete-a-tete with me and Nicky. We can go on somewhere after dinner, if you're bored."

She kept looking at her husband in a furtive, nervous fashion, as if she were anxious for his approval and afraid of incurring his displeasure.

"What would you like to do, Nicky?" she asked him. "You shall do the choosing."

"I think a few 'early-to-bed' nights would be the wisest choice for you," he answered. He sounded weary and indifferent, and he did not look at his wife as he spoke.

Gaunt had only heard that evening of Jennifer's engagement. Edith had sent a message to his room while he was dressing, reminding him that she had guests for dinner.

"Need I stay in?" he asked later, meeting her on the landing. "Who is coming?"

And Edith had told him casually, "Dolores' friend, Jennifer Fry and Malcolm Chesney. They're engaged, you know."

"Engaged?"

A red rose-petal had been lying on the stair-carpet at his feet, and Gaunt remained staring down at it as if he had never before seen such a thing. A red rose-petal!

There had been a bowl of red roses on the table in Jennifer's room the night of his return from Italy. He had never looked at a red rose since without remembering the tragic silence of that room, the tragedy of Jennifer's eyes and taunting words.

"And supposing I do not choose to be lonely while you are making up your mind? Supposing I find another lover? Why shouldn't I? Why should I be lonely till you choose to come back, if you ever do? I will not, I tell you! I will not! I'll find happiness somewhere. You shall not be the only man in my life. . ."

He had not forgotten one passionate word—the last words she had ever spoken to him. And now her threat had come true. There was another man in her life, in his place, and Fate had tossed him a red rose-petal on the wings of passionate remembrance.

"What are you staring at, Nicky?" Edith had asked, sharply. She came and peered over his shoulder. "A rose-petal! Does it remind you of some past romance?"

Her voice broke in a bitter sneer. She knew that Gaunt had no feeling for her, and, by some strange perversity, the knowledge was fuel adding to the fire of passion which she felt for him.

Gaunt went on downstairs without answering, and she called after him anxiously: "You'll stay in to dinner; won't you? They'll think it so queer if you are out. They've never dined here before."

"I'll stay in, if you wish," Nicholas said.

He would have stayed in even had she begged of him to go out. Although Jennifer's presence was a torment to him, it would have been worse to deliberately walk out of the house when he knew she was expected.

CELEBRATE ANNIVERSARY OF MASS

Five hundred pilgrims from all over Ontario recently observed the feast of Our Lady of Mount Carmel by visiting Our Lady of Peace Church at Falls View, near Niagara Falls, on the spot where the first mass was celebrated on the Niagara frontier 250 years ago. At the LEFT, the historic statue of Our Lady of Mount Carmel is shown, being borne aloft in the annual procession; at the RIGHT are three of the vested altar boys with crucifix and candles, who preceded the procession.

UNCLE WIGGILY

Today's Bedtime Story

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

UNCLE WIGGILY'S JAM TARTS

Nurse Jane Fuzzy Wuzzy, with Mrs. Longears and all the little bunny children, including Baby Bunty, had gone on a picnic to the woods. They had asked Uncle Wiggily to go along, but the rabbit gentleman said:

"Thank you, kindly, but I am going to make a book with a lot of puzzles in it and I haven't time to go on a picnic."

"Are you going to put in your puzzle book the answer to the wrong picture you made at the party last night?" asked Tingle.

"Of course, I am," answered Mr. Longears. "The mistake in the picture I made last night was that there was no reflection of the animal lady's face in the looking glass, in front of which she stood. There should have been an image seen in the glass."

"Oh, why didn't I guess thzat?" said Tangle, who loved to do puzzles.

So then all the family, except Uncle Wiggily, hopped off to the picnic in the woods, leaving the rabbit gentleman behind. Not that he minded.

"For," he said, "when I get hungry I shall eat some jam tarts."

He had seen his wife making jam tarts to take along on the picnic. And some of the tarts must be left over, Mr. Longears thought. They would be in the pantry, he was sure.

So he worked on his new puzzle book for a while after all the others had hopped away and then, feeling hungry, he went into the kitchen of the hollow stump bungalow.

Uncle Wiggily looked in the ice-box, in the bread-box, in the cake pantry and behind the piano for jam tarts, but found none.

"Those hungry bunnies must have taken to the picnic every jam tart my wife baked!" chuckled Mr. Longears. "Well," he said, with another laugh, "I'll have to make some jam tarts of my own."

It was well that Uncle Wiggily could laugh, and it was well he was jolly enough to make his own tarts. Some rabbits would just have sat down and cried if they found all the jam tarts gone, wouldn't they?

Uncle Wiggily had often watched Nurse Jane and his wife bake, so he knew something about it. He now began to mix up some flour, lard, cranberries and lollypops—you know, whatever goes into the dough of jam tarts. And when the dough was rolled out flat Uncle Wiggily began to look for something with which to cut out the round bottom pieces of the tarts to bake in the oven before spreading jam between the upper and lower crusts.

With the metal rim of a glass preserve jar top Uncle Wiggily cut out the round bottom pieces for his tarts—the part that holds the jam, you know.

But when he started to cut three holes in the pieces of top crust why, that wasn't so easy. There was nothing small enough to cut the three little holes. Nurse Jane or Mrs. Longears would have used a thimble, but Uncle Wiggily had no thimble.

He didn't know what to do until all of a sudden he heard a knocking at the bungalow door.

"Maybe that is somebody with a thimble," thought Mr. Longears.

But it was the woodpecker bird with his big beak, knocking holes in an old tree outside to get grubs and worms.

"Why do you look so sad, Uncle Wiggily?" asked the woodpecker.

"Because I can't make holes in the top crust of my jam tarts," answered the rabbit. "I have no thimble."

"I'll drill the holes in the dough for you with my beak," said the woodpecker, and he did so. Soon the tarts were made. When the crust had been baked in the oven and jam spread between the two parts, oh! how good they were. Mr. Longears gave the woodpecker some. Not only that, but the bunny made a black twin riddle picture for the bird. So here are the Inkblot brothers asking a question.

LYRICS OF LIFE

AT HALF PAST TWELXE

The letters that I write to you
At half past twelve, or one, or two,
When through the window stars are winking,
And I just lie there, lie there thinking,
Are the most wonderful of all—
The words I never can recall,
The words I never can indite you
When I sit down to really write you.

How I shall have to beg and borrow
The words I write to you tomorrow!—
I am a pauper with a pen,
But night shall make me rich again.
The hands can't write, the heart won't let them,
And yet I hope you somehow get them,

At half past twelve, or one, or two.

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

TUESDAY, JULY 31, 1928

This is a day in which the planetary government is stimulating and helpful, according to astrology,—benefic aspects dominate.

Whatever is constructive and productive should benefit by this sway which makes for ambitious enterprises.

Great engineering and building projects are forecast and there will be developed marvelously the new architecture which distinguishes America.

Bridges as well as buildings of tremendous size will be built and great stretches of water will be spanned, astrologers foretell.

Under this sway health is to become a national concern and public organizations to protect the nation will expand, it is predicted.

Spiritual as well as physical development is to be sought and super men and super women produced, if the stars are rightly read.

Mexico again is subject to a planetary influence that bodes ill for early autumn. There may be uprising among the people but there is a forecast of near progress and prosperity.

Again a substitute for gasoline is foretold and it will serve as a practical fuel, it is predicted.

Mars elevated in the autumn quarter is held to presage for Europe many new war dangers, plots and intrigues.

Neptune is to have a strong influence over the western and southern states in the coming Presidential election, the seers prophesy.

Party schisms again are indicated strongly by the stars which presage much contradictory agitation and consequent instability.

New dances and new ideas in entertaining will be introduced in the autumn, the seers prognosticate, as a preliminary for a social season of unexcelled magnificence.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of journeys and letters of moment in the coming year.

Children born on this day probably will be daring and self reliant. The subjects of this sign usually made a success of living.

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY WE FALL FOR FLATTERY

By Mehran K. Thomson, Ph.D.
(Author, The Springs of Human Action)

The story of the fox and the crow is one of the best known of Aesops fables. A crow, having stolen a bit of meat, and spoke to the crow thus: "How handsome you are! and I have heard that the beauty of your voice is equal to that of your form and feathers Will you not sing for me, so that I may judge whether this is true." The crow was so pleased that she opened her mouth to sing and dropped the meat, which the fox immediately ate.

From ancient times it was known how human beings fall for flattery. This trait has been the subject of much satire. Now and then we find a person who flatters himself into the belief that he is not subject to flattery. It is very doubtful in any normal human being is entirely immune to flattery. It is all in the way the dish is served.

Flattery coming from a superior or from one whose opinion or affections we cherish will be that much more effective for the simple reason that we like to believe the statement as true even when we know that it is false and mere flattery.

We like flattery for the same reason that we hate to be scolded or have our faults spread abroad. It is quite significant that we speak of a conceited person as having a swelled head or of "swelling with pride." Pride and flattery are expansive. They "blow up" the individual just as the opposite "takes the wind out of one's sails" and the ego collapses like a toy balloon with a hole in it.

We fall for flattery because of innate conceit, because we like to hear nice things about ourselves, because we are only too eager to believe good things concerning our own personality, because we are self-centered, and being social animals we like to get the praise of our fellows.

CANADA CLAIMS MILLIONAIRES

Ontario Leads With a Total of 138—Toronto Has 87.

TORONTO, July 30. — (Canadian Press).—There are 272 millionaires in Canada and more than half of them reside in the Province of Ontario, it is stated in a circular by Boyd's City Despatch of New York, an advertising and listing firm, to various financial houses in this city.

The circular, giving compilations for 1928 and showing Canadians classified by wealth, states that there are 138 millionaires in Ontario, 87 of whom are in Toronto, which also leads the cities for millionaires.

The Province of Quebec is listed second with a total of 91 millionaires, 76 residing in Montreal and 10 in Quebec City. Manitoba has 21, all of whom are Winnipeg residents.

British Columbia comes next with five, Alberta and Nova Scotia have four each, while Saskatchewan and Prince Edward Island are not credited with having among their population anyone with more than $1,000,000.

Next to Winnipeg, which is third in the Boyd listing, London, Ont., is placed fourth in the classification by cities with a total of 14. Ottawa, Ont., and Quebec City have 10 each, Vancouver, B. C., 6, and Hamilton, Ont., 4.

The circular also details the wealth of Canadians by Provinces and large cities in various other grades, starting at $5,000.

ENJOY HOLIDAY IN JASPER PARK

Governor General and Lady Willingdon Rest After Strenuous Trip.

PLAY GOLF AND RIDE.

JASPER, Alta., July 30 (Special to The Examiner).—Ideal weather is co-operating with Their Excellencies the Governor General and Lady Willingdon in Jasper Park, to see Punch Bowl Falls, Roche Lodge, and they are finding this mountain resort most restful after their strenuous Western trip. Golf, never to be resisted, they played 18 holes in the morning with Sir Henry Thornton and his son James Thornton, and no other foursome enjoyed a better game. In the afternoon they motored out to Pocahontas with R. H. Knight, Superintendent of Jasper were greeted by His Honor Dr. Willmette, Roche de Smet, the Indian Head and the other features of the district. The road from Jasper Lodge to Pocohontas is famous as a "game trail," and their Excellencies saw numerous sheep in the rocky ledges above the Sulphur Springs, as well as deer, beaver, and other citizens of Canada's greatest game sanctuary.

The season is at its height at Jasper Park Lodge. Their Excellencie were greeted by His Honor Do. William Egbert, Lieutenant Governor of Alberta, who arrived this morning for several days' golf. Hon. Charles Stewart, Minister of the Interior, is among the guests. Mrs. T. A. Burrows of Winnipeg and her daughter, Miss Kathleen, have been here nearly a week, and the Lieutenant Governor of Manitoba will be here himself in a day or two for an indefinite stay.

BRINGS JAPANESE THEATRE TROUPE

Noted Producer Will Tour Canada With Chorus of 57 Girls.

MONTREAL, Que., July 30.—Foretelling a production that would keep theatre-goers on the edge of their seats throughout its presentation and bring in a startling fashion before the public of Canada and the United States, the delicate type of feminne beauty to be found in Japan, Ray Comstock, the internationally known theatrical producer of New York, arrived in Montreal on board the Trans-Canada Limited, on his return from Japan which he visited for the express purpose of judging the appeal of Japanese pantomime for the taste of the public on this continent. He was accompanied by Frank McCoy and his secretary, and left for New York last night.

Fifty-seven pretty Japanese chorines, picked from over two hundred girls who are being trained at a dancing school at Takarazuka, near Kobe, will be brought over in 1929 for a twenty-weeks' tour of Canada and the United States, explained Ray Comstock in an interview at the Windsor station. The Japanese girls, none of whom are over twenty years of age in the show have striking and charming talent, and act vivaciously and with distinctive character in their performance. The proposed production will be patterned after the style of Bailiff's Russian ballet, but will be almost entirely pantomime, the clever little actresses being able to demonstrate clearly by gesture and dancing alone the development of the plot.

HERE'S HOW TO REDUCE

INSTRUCTIONS TO BE FOLLOWED ON TUESDAY

After your morning exercises, take your shower bath, and then the following breakfast:

Breakfast: Choice of one of the following acid fruits: apples, apricots, peaches, nectarines, grapes, pears, oranges, grapefruit, lemons, plums, loquats, cherries, berries, melons, pineapple or tomatoes. One glassful of water.

You had eggs, toast, and stewed fruit for today's breakfast, so I am suggesting another kind of breakfast which you may use occasionally in place of the egg breakfast.

I think it is a good plan for you to use fruit as one meal of the day, so you can use it in place of Breakfast, Lunch, or Dinner, whichever you prefe. Those of you who are still over-weight may not be very hungry in the morning, and will be satisfied with a fruit breakfast. Fruit may also be used for lunch.

You can try the plan of using fruit for breakfast and lunch, thus using only one meal of cooked food during the day. This is an excellent plan for those who have a tendency to be over-weight, as their assimilation is so good that it is often necessary to eat only one full meal a day.

Remember! Only one kind of fruit should be used at a time. Fruit mixtures are particularly bad from a stand-point of physiological chemistry. Never eat a fruit salad with your meals, as this combination will upset even the best meal, and will make your stomach a battle-ground of incompatible mixtures.

During the morning, take your usual morning walk.

Lunch: Choice of one or more of the following uncooked non-starchy vegetables. Celery, spinach, asparagus, cucumbers, parsley, small beets, small carrots, small parsnips, small turnips, lettuce, oyster plant (salsify) nasturtium flowers and leaves, mallow, endive, alligator pear, ripe olives, or tomatoes.

These salad vegetables may be combined together in any manner, and you will find an entire raw food lunch will be an agreeable change for you.

All of the vegetables are not always in season, but use whatever is available, mixing any number together you desire. These salad vegetables may be chopped up and mixed together, or shredded, but I believe the best way is to select two or three of the ones you desire, wash each one carefully with a vegetable brush and serve on separate plates. You can then select the ones which your appetite calls for at that particular time. It is all right to use only one kind of the vegetables, and in fact, you will digest your salad more easily if you do not combine too many together at the same time. It is better to use no seasoning of any kind with these delicious raw foods.

In the afternoon you are to take your long walk of the day, followed by the calisthenic exercises which I have given you in previous articles.

Take your cold shower bath, after exercises are completed, and rest for half an hour before dinner.

If the mineral oil is not sufficient to give you the proper elimination every day, I suggest that you return to your daily enems, for a certain length of time. You may then discontinue the daily enema again, and after waiting three or four days, your bowels will move in a normal manner.

Dinner: Choice of one of the following protein foods: beef, mutton, turkey, chicken, rabbit, or fresh fish (except salmon).

Choice of one or more of the following cooked non-starchy vegetables: celery, asparagus, spinach, small string beans, summer squash, cucumber, egg plant, pumpkin, beet tops, small beets, small carrots, small parsnips, small turnips, lettuce, okra, chayotes, oyster plant (salsify), kale, mallow, and zucchini.

Choice of one or more of the following raw salad vegetables: celery, spinach, asparagus, cucumber, parsley, small beets, small carrots, small parsnips, small turnips, lettuce, oyster plant, mallow, ripe olives, and alligator pear.

Choice of Jello, Fruit Whip, or Stewed Fruit, for dessert.

LINER DAMAGED IN ST. LAWRENCE

MONTREAL, Que., July 27 (Canadian Press).—Her steam piece twisted and buckled, the plates on her port bow torn, and her port bow anchor missing, the Canadian Pacific steamer Montrose, tied up in harbor here to-day, after colliding with the Dominion Coal Company's S.S. Rose Castle, a large collier on the way down river to Sydney, N.S.

The Montrose left Quebec last night with a large number of cabin passengers after crossing the Atlantic. She collided with the collier near Three Rivers. The passengers were awakened by the impact and rushed on deck, but no panic ensued.

The Rose Castle was beached and is badly damaged.

In Silver Springs Creek, Florida possesses the only river in the world navigable to its source.

THE EGG MARKET.

TORONTO, July 30.—Canadian egg markets are practically unchanged with considerable strength in evidence. This market is unchanged. Dealers are quoting country shippers for ungraded eggs, delivered, cases returned: Extras, 34 to 35c; firsts, 31 to 32c; seconds, 24 to 26c.

The Montreal egg market is strong for the best quality of fresh eggs and advancing under light receipts of this class.

At St. John there is no change in prices, but the undertone is firm following an improved demand from the local trade and outside points. The poultry market is more active with a good demand for heavy fowl. The newest development there has been the introduction of split broilers by several leading retailers.

The bulk of the demand is largely running to extras and this grade remains fairly firm. The easiness is in the lower grades. Since the Government warehouse report was published the feeling in the trade is not as confident as to the future as it was. The outlook for a movement in export is not very promising at present, and as the stocks in storage are now heavier than they were at this time last year the situation is somewhat uncertain.

WISCONSIN MAN TOBACCO EXPERT

Heads Division of Experimental Farms, Succeeding C. M. Slagg at Ottawa.

Nels T. Nelson, B.S.A., M.S., Ph.D., has been appointed to the position of chief of the tobacco division, Experimental Farms Branch. This became vacant upon the appointment of C. M. Slagg to an important position in Australia.

Dr. Nelson comes to Canada from Windsor, Conn., where he has been tobacco expert for the past four years. After graduating from the University of Wisconsin, Dr. Nelson was appointed to the staff of the university, and in 1919-20 worked on tobacco diseases under Dr. Johnson, America's leading tobacco expert. From 1921 to 1923 he was assistant in agronomy at the university, and for the past four years has given special attention to tobacco fertilizer, curing, improvement of varieties, etc. Dr. Nelson has had fifteen years' experience on the tobacco farms of Wisconsin and comes to Ottawa with the best of recommendations.

He will take up his duties on August 15th.

team and Messrs. C. S. Tanner and P. Spence for the losers, who probably believe in the old maxim of "Ladies first." The game was closely contested and full of thrills, stolen bases and the usual line of comment from the fans. The party arrived home early in the evening, tired but very happy, the committee patting themselves on the back because of the large measure of success which attended their efforts.

Personals.

Mrs. Cameron and Miss Shanly took the round trip to Stoney Lake on Thursday.

Mr. Solan Nixon, of Peterborough, is visiting friends in the village.

Mrs. Peter Baptie and Miss Dorothy Sutton are visiting friends in Toronto and will attend the marriage of Mrs. Baptie's grandson, Mr. Barrie Stevenson.

Mrs. Crawford, of Medicine Hat, is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Edwards.

Mrs. Nivin and Mrs. Lampman and daughters spent Thursday at Stoney Lake.

Mrs. Stewart Payne and daughter Marie, of Cartwright, and Mrs. Geo. Payne, of Warsaw, have returned home after spending the past week with Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Payne.

Mrs. Nivin, of Toronto, is the guest of Rev. and Mrs. A. W. Mackenzie at The Grove.

Mrs. Cephas Lemay and daughters, of Toronto, have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Joe Lemay.

The Misses Daly, of Kingston, have spent the past fortnight in the village.

Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Stark, of Toronto, spent the week-end with the latter's uncle, Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Payne.

Mrs. James Hendren and her son Wallace have returned from a delightful week's motor trip, which included Port Dover, Scotland, Brantford, Niagara Falls, Hamilton, and Toronto.

Mrs. H. J. Sutton, Miss Isabel and Master Alex. are in Toronto to attend the marriage of Mrs. Sutton's nephew, Mr. Barrie Stevenson.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Creasor left this week for Ottawa, where they expect to reside. Mr. Creasor has been a resident of the village for some years as the construction engineer of the Canada Cement Company, and his departure is a matter of sincere regret to many friends. Mr. and Mrs. Creasor were very popular with the younger set and also in the older circles.

heats. Johnny Gibson and Bob Maxwell, however, were unplaced in the 400 metre hurdles in the heat won by Livingston Learnmouth.

Great Britain Takes Part

Great Britain broke into the point winning column in the 10,000 metres final, in which A. T. Muggridge finished fifth.

In the shot put the United States took three of the first four places, only the Teuton star, Emil Hirschfeld, was able to break into the charmed circle.

In giving the United States its second Olympic championship by winning the high jump, King failed to break the Olympic record but leaped six feet 4⅝ inches to take first place. In winning the title, King displaced the veteran Hal Osborne who holds the Olympic record of six feet six inches, made in Paris in 1924.

Alex Munro, of Toronto, was seventh in one of the previous trial jumps, which was won by Kimura of Japan.

Record Twice Equalled.

AMSTERDAM, July 30 (Canadian Press).—Bob McAllister, of the United States, equalled the Olympic record of 10.35 seconds in the first heat of the 100 metres semi-final to-day, closing in a great burst of speed for a victory over P. Williams, of Vancouver, Canada. The American flying cop beat the Canadian by a bare foot. Legg of South Africa was third.

The second heat was won by Jack London, Great Britain, in the same record time as McAllister. Second came Lammers, of Germany. Johnny Fitzpatrick, of Hamilton, Canada, was fourth.

CROP REPORT

Below will be found a brief synopsis of telegraphic reports received at the Head Office of the Bank of Montreal from its branches. The branch managers have complete and intimate knowledge of each local situation and are in close touch with crop conditions in all sections of the districts mentioned:

General.

Crop prospects throughout the Prairie Provinces continue to be satisfactory. Wheat in the various districts is reported as headed out, in bloom, or starting to fill, and other grains are making equally rapid progress. There has been little damage from hail during the past week, and conditions have not been conducive to rust development. In Quebec crops are progressing favorably. In Ontario heavy rains during the past week have delayed haying operations, and have caused some lodging of wheat and oats. Fall wheat has ripened fast; cutting has commenced in Western Ontario, and will be general in a week. Ideal growing conditions have prevailed in the Maritime Provinces. Throughout British Columbia the weather has been hot and dry, and harvesting of grain crops is now general.

Prairie Provinces.

Alberta, Western and North-Eastern Areas: Conditions are ideal. Alberta, South-eastern area: Situation continues very favorable, and late sown wheat is catching up and now heading out. Saskatchewan, northern area: Prospects generally are very favorable, with crops coming along well in showery weather. Wheat is in healthy condition and beginning to fill. Saskatchewan, southern area: Growth of all grains is advancing under satisfactory conditions. Wheat is well headed out. Hail damage previously reported, while severe in districts affected, was fairly scattered and not generally extensive. Manitoba: Conditions continue favorable except on low-lying land. Wheat is well headed and coarse grains are making good progress. There are no reports of rust developments. Hail damage is negligible. Dry weather with light winds is needed.

Province of Quebec.

Haying is becoming general, but in some districts has been delayed by rains; the crop is a good average. Grain crops show continued good growth. Potatoes and other root crops are doing well. Small fruits are plentiful. Pastures are in very good condition. Tobacco shows strong growth although retarded in some districts by recent rains.

Province of Ontario.

Fall wheat is a good average. Oats and barley have made excellent growth and very heavy crops are assured. Corn is promising, but needs dry weather. Haying operations are delayed by frequent rains and wheat and barley will be ready before all the crop can be stored. Root crops are doing well, but in South-Western Ontario many fields are flooded, and sugar beets have been damaged considerably. Tobacco has made good progress but some fields show evidence of too much rain. Pastures are excellent. A spell of two or three weeks of warm dry weather is now needed.

Maritime Provinces.

Haying is well under way and an above the average yield seems assured. Potatoes blossomed well and continue to make excellent growth. The apple crop is now estimated at 80 per cent. of the five-year average, or about 900,000 barrels. The fruit on the whole is clean. Pasturage is very good.

British Columbia.

Grain crops are in good condition and harvesting is general. The estimated yield is 130 per cent. of average, while for root crops the estimate is 110 per cent. Pasturage is excellent. In the Okanagan district some McIntosh apples will have scab; all other fruits are comparatively clean. The estimated yield of apples is 110 per cent. of average; late cherries, 110 per cent.; plums, 70 per cent.; pears, 70 per cent.; hops, 60 per cent.; potatoes, 80 per cent.; tomatoes, 130 per cent.; small fruits, 100 per cent. Pests have caused a substantial damage to hops.

RUSSIANS STUDY PAPER INDUSTRY

Engineers and Workmen Leave for Home to Work in Volga Mill.

BIG, MODERN PLANT

NEW YORK, N.Y., July 30 — (Canadian Press).—Two Russian engineers and six workers have sailed for home after a five months' study of the Canadian and United States paper industries. Upon return to the Soviet Union all of these men will be employed in the $16,00,000 Volga paper mill, to be completed this year, which is the largest in the U.S.S.R. and one of the most modern in Europe.

Another engineer will remain here for some time in connection with additional orders to be placed for North American paper mill equipment. This is the third group of Soviet workers and technicians sent here to acquire first hand knowledge of North American production methods. A group of 20 workers studied the California oil industry in 1925, while in 1926 fifty mechanics worked for several months in Ford factories.

The members of the delegation were particularly impressed with the systems of factory organization employed in the mills studied by them.

"The Volga paper mill, where we shall work after returning to the Soviet Union," said a representative of the delegation, "is being equipped with the most modern paper-making machinery and equipment for handling logs and other materials. In particular, the wood yard equipment has been purchased in the United States by the Amtorg Trading Corporation and is the only American equipment of its kind in the country at present. We must say that the paper companies showed us the utmost courtesy during the entire period of our stay in Canada and assisted us in every way in making our visit a profitable one."

The Volga paper mill, which will start partial operation this summer, is designed to produce annually 50,000 metric tons of newsprint and 25,000 tons of other paper. The new factory will supply a large part of the requirements of the U.S.S.R. for newsprint which heretofore has been mainly imported from abroad.

The engineers in the group are V. M. Klopov, B. V. Lopatin and E. A. Khjatz. The workers are V. Novikov, G. Veresov, P. Grigoriev, A. Price, A. Vasiliev and I. Tumanov.

TILDEN LOSES DECIDING GAME

French Hold Davis Cup For Another Year, Defeating U. S. A.

COCHET WINS.

AUTEUIL, France, July 30.—(Canadian Press).—America's campaign to recapture the Davis Cup from the French failed to-day when Henri Cochet defeated William T. Tilden in the deciding match of the series in straight sets by scores of 9-7, 6-3, 6-4.

This gave the French three of the four matches played. Big Bill put up a gallant fight against his brilliant little French opponent but showed the effects of losing the five set doubles match in which he participated yesterday.

ESPINOSA WINS WESTERN OPEN

Spanish Professional From California is New Golf Champion.

HAS LOW SCORE

NORTH SHORE CLUB, Chicago, Ills, July 30.—(Canadian Press). — The Latins beat the Scots at their own game again Saturday when Abelard Espinosa, a Spanish professional from California, but now a Chicagoan, won the western golf championship with a score of 291.

The feat duplicated that of Gene Sarusen in winning the National open a few years ago, the first victory of the Latins over the Scots.

Not even the national open champion, Johnny Farrell of New York, could overhaul the grim determination of Espinosa, who took the lead at the end of the second round with a record of 69 for the 6,800 yard North Shore links. Neither could Abe's brother, Al Espinosa, overtake the eldest of five brothers and a sister, all golf professionals.

Farrell with two par rounds of 72 yesterday could do no better than duplicate the score with which he tied Bobby Jones for the national open and finished second with 294, three strokes to the bad, while Al Espinosa missed a 30 inch putt on the final green for a tie with Farrell after being in second place one stroke behind the leader at the half way mark.

Densmore Shute, of Columbus, Ohio, and Horton Smith of Joplin, Mo., shared fourth prize with 297, while Harry Hampton and Jim Foulis of Chicago tied for sixth at 298. Only these seven players managed to score under 300.

The winning score was ten strokes higher than that with which Walter Hagen won the title last year at Olympic Fields, when Al Espinosa finished in a tie for second place with Bill Mehlhorn at 285, while Farrell shared ninth position with 293.

NINE WELL-PLANNED ROOMS
(Catto & Catto, Architects.)

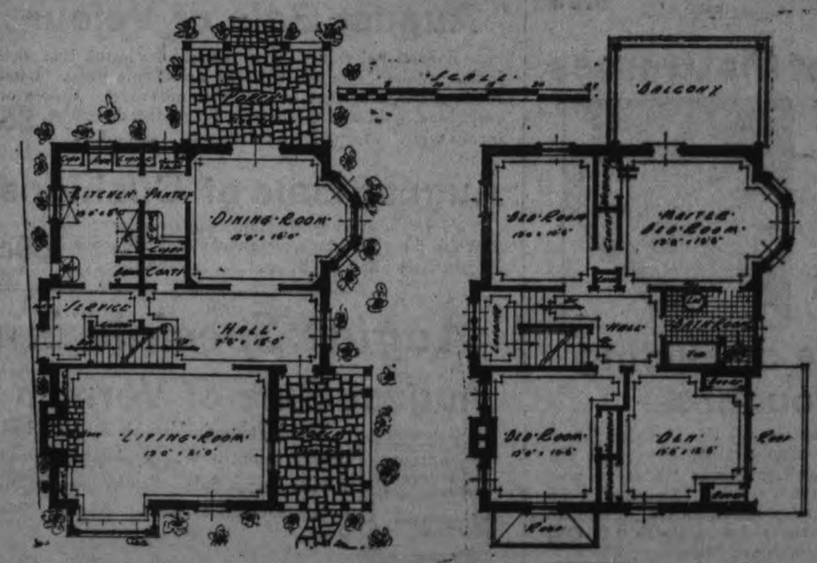
There are two bedrooms and a bathroom in the attic besides the accommodation shown by the floor plans for the first and second floors. You will also notice that every room is well planned and has very desirable dimensions—there is not the slightest trace of "robbing Peter to pay Paul," and this becomes all the more significant when one considers the outside measurements of the house, 28 ft. x 36 ft.

It was built on a lot 40 ft. x 130 ft. The living-room is 13 ft. x 21 ft. and has a charming fireplace with built-in bookcases at either side and a delightful bay window. The dining-room is 13 ft. x 16 ft., the bay window being included in the latter measurement. French doors provide direct access to the large back porch and one need only mention the word "garden" for you to fully appreciate the vista awaiting your creation.

On the next floor are a den, three bedrooms, a large tiled bathroom and a large balcony. Two bedrooms are 13 ft. x 10 ft. 6 ins. and the master bedroom is 13 ft. x 16 ft. 6 ins.

An approximate estimate of the cost of this house is $11,000, subject to variation depending on the materials and fixtures used and your proximity to the source of their supply.

Readers desiring further information regarding a house of this design should communicate with Home Building Information Service, 345 Adelaide Street, West, Toronto, Ontario, who will see that it is supplied. When writing please mention Design No. 133. Copyright 1928.



PLENTY OF PEP TONIGHT'S GAME

Crescents Cannot Afford To Drop Important Game With Raybestos.

LOCKWORKS LOSE 9-0.

Lock Works dropped their game at Hastings on Saturday afternoon, by the score of 9 to 0, the local team failing to continue the contest, when, after a shower of rain, the mpire-in-chief ordered the game resumed.

Crescents will make their last stand in an effort to get in the play-offs when they meet Raybestos at Exhibition Park this evening. The contest promises an interesting time for the fans.

To Hear Protest

A lot of things may happen at the Executive meeting of the E.P.B.L. tonight. Crescents have protested Friday's game won by the Coks. Lock orks will be asked to explain their failure to continue the game at Hastings on Saturday.

Umpire—Killy. Base—Geo. Evans.

The result was even more deplorable for the opponents to Royal Arthur. The figures as disclosed by the timekeeper, (W. L. Ferguson), were 22 to 0. Royal Arthur team and supporters made a triumphal parade around the premises and invited further opposition. None was forthcoming.

While the matches were going on the temperature was falling and it looked like snow. Everybody clamored for the balance of the program, in order to get warmed up. The results are given below, Royal Arthur holding up its end in fine shape.

Mor. Master's Race — 1st E. C. Heideman, (Corinthian) 2nd, J. Wells Fraser, (Royal Arthur).

Fat Man's Race— 1st J. F. Reed (Peterborough), 2nd C. A. Sollitt, (Corinthian), 3rd D. A. Loucks (Corinthian).

Single Men's Race—1st Stan Lowe, (Peterborough), 2nd T. H. Holyman, (Royal Arthur).

Married Men's Race—1st G. C. Carruthers, (Royal Arthur), 2nd Charles Tedford (Peterborough).

Lodge Officer's Race—1st J. F. Reed, (Peterborough), 2nd Geo. Evans (Peterborough).

Bald Headed Men's Race—1st W. D. Campbell, (Peterborough).

In justice to the Brothers present, others who had lost somewhat of hair in their several youths, pleaded non-entry, on the ground of being especially hungry, and not fitted for violent exertion. They offered to compete after supper, which was a safe protest, seeing that supper would be served on the steamer.

Tug of War

For grand challenge shield. Best two draws out of three. Remembering that disaster followed on using a feeble rope on a similar contest three years ago, Ross Dobbin provided a cable that would hold the elephants in Forepaugh's circus and stand any pull. Corinthian Lodge brought to scratch a team of heavies, all with large and formidable feet, thus getting a fine foot-hold. Peterborough collected such a team as it could and the first draw resulted in a win for Corinthian. The team stood its ground and awaited Royal Arthur to come forward. On inspection it was discerned that Royal Arthur, having covered itself with glory, decided not to take any risks, and the match was awarded to Corinthian by default.

The Saw Race

This was a new feature, specially introduced for this occasion. Three teams were lined up, eight men from each lodge. Three hand-saws were provided, with three pieces of 6 x 8 timber on which to lay three pieces of 2 x 4 scantling. Each man of the three teams was to run 50 feet, saw off a piece of the scantling, and return to line, bringing the saw and piece of wood. The man next in line performed a similar feat. All this was amidst loud applause and much vocal encouragement. Royal Arthur proved to be the fastest sawyers, and won out by a narrow margin. There was a dark rumor that the saw used by this team had been specially and carefully sharpened, in anticipation of the event. Those who sawed so speedily were Bros. Fraser, Lacheur, Hardwicke, Lewis, Carruthers, Sloan, Cummer and Holyman. It was remarked that the two bankers (Fraser and Cummer) should display such agility and dexterity in this avocation.

Hammer and Nail Race

It was regretted that several local contractors were not present to note the excellent dexterity and thoroughness with which these hammers were wielded. Men who have professed (to their wives) that they could not hammer a nail straight, rolled up their sleeves and pounded with the most admirable success. Good big, stout nails, too. Really six-inch spikes. At the finish of this agreeable exercise, the log, with twenty-four spikes sticking in it was left as a souvenir for the Hiawatha reservation council to view and ponder on. The winning team was from Corinthian ladge, and the feat added fresh renown to the muscular records of that lodge, if any such records exist. That several households may know of what was accomplished, and call on home performance, the names are supplied: Bros. Hall, Telford, Loucks, Boxall, boat where supper had been unligan, all efficient and willing amateurs.

As the last nail was driven, ropes, spades, hammers and other fixings were picked up and all hurried to the boats were supper had been uncorked and plated by Bro. Thomas Hooper and assistants. Ninety plates, of a size not used in any lunch parlor, were heaped with a fine assortment of viands, with hot coffee at hand. There was little, if any, conversation for the next twenty minutes, but as the last piece of pie, crowned with ice cream, and topped with a doughnut, disappeared, all hands agreed that the caterer had a fine taste in providing and that every hungry man had opportunity to fill up without protest. While supper was on the boat started, and on the way up the river the several awards were distributed to the winners, the city being reached about ten o'clock.

Has Played Soccer Twenty-two Years

In any active sport, it is not very often fans will find players continue long at the game, but McCall, who was playing at centre half for Davenport (Toronto) on Saturday afternoon against local team, has been playing soccer in Canada now for twenty-two years and is considered as good as ever. He has had a world of experience—he was a participant in the Canadian Connaught Cup championship in 1921 and holds a medal for his prowess on the field, in fact, he said, that he had a drawer full of them but he treasured the one he had attached to his watch most.

As a Scotsman likes to tell a story on himself, he related this one: A fellow-countryman of his was willing to give any person a thousand dollars if they would make him a millionaire.

HOW TOURISTS ARE ATTRACTED TO KAWARTHAS

Frank Stinson Tells of Work of Trent Waterway Development Association.

CASE FOR CANAL.

Urges Support For Those Endeavoring To Have Waterway Completed.

The case on behalf of the Trent Canal was presented before the Peterborough Rotary Club at its weekly luncheon to-day by Frank G. Stinson, Secreary of the Chamber of Commerce and of the Trent Waterway Development Association, who gave a most interesting address in regard to the work of the Association and to the desirability of completing the canal.

Rev. W. Harold Young of Toronto, former member of the local club, was present to-day and in a brief address, expressed his pleasure at renewing old acquaintances and announced that R. A. Browne, another former member of the Peterborough club, would shortly pay a visit here.

In beginning, Mr. Stinson said that To appreciate our waterway fully it is necessary to know its history. Volumes have been written, but perhaps the most interesting account is given by Francis Parkman in his work, "Pioneers of France in the New World." He refers to the expedition led by the heroic explorer Champlain, who led the Huron Indians over the waterway in the year 1615, in a warlike expedition against the Iroquois.

"Over three hundred years ago," said the speaker, "we find the waterday described by the white people of that day in such terms as "Nature's Playground." To-day we simply say, to meet the needs of the moment, "Playground of North America." And let me assure you, that the term is used advisedly, as well travelled people have assured us that the attractiveness, appeal and utility of the waterway, is not equalled anywhere on the American continent.

Mr. Stinson explained the methods used by the Association to attract tourists, mentioning the exhibits at the National Motor Boat Show in New York and the Sportsmen's Show at Cleveland. In addition, bureaux were operated in New York, Pittsburg and Cleveland, two being located in the Ohio city.

The Chamber of Commerce and its allied associations, the speaker said, had replied by letter enclosing literature to something in excess of 3,800 tourist enquiries by letter, phone, wire, etc. Literature distributed through the above offices last year, in the form of booklets, maps and so forth, published in some cases by the aforementioned organizations and in some cases by the Canadian railways, the Department of Public Highways, Toronto; the National Resource Intelligence Service, Ottawa, or the Ontario Motor League, Toronto, exceeded 65,000 pieces, distribution being made through the mails, exhibits, and information bureaux.

"The necessity for all this advertising," said Mr. Stinson, seems to lie in the fact that most of the people of the United States think of Montreal, Quebec and Toronto, when they think of Canada. Toronto sends them to Muskoka Lakes, and of course unless we place before the tourist the fact that the Kawarthas and the waterway have more fish by far than the Muskokas, and that our section is closer to their country than the Province of Quebec, why we are lost. The history of Canada seems to centre around Quebec. Consequently, all tourists have some information about that province. Our greatest work then is to spread information with reference to our part of Ontario, as it is what tourists seem to lack, most decidedly.

Mr. Stinson referred to the importance of the Iroquois trail from a tourist viewpoint and concluded by a strong plea for support in urging the completion of the Trent Canal, reviewing the arguments in favor of this work being done.

17 EXECUTED.

Canton Government Says They Plotted New Communist Uprising.

CANTON, China, July 30.—(Canadian Press).—Seventeen persons have been executed in what the Government describes as a new and extensive Communist plot for an uprising. One hundred and forty nine Communists, including nine girls were arrested.

SHARP CORNERS ARE ELIMINATED

City Workmen Make Wider Curves at Hunter and Park.

The sharp turns at street corners in the west end of the city are being eliminated. At the corner of Park and Hunter streets the corners have been cut back six feet and instead of a sharp turn there is now a more gradual curve, making it easier to turn on to either street. Work has also commenced on the corner of Charlotte and Park street to take away the sharp corner on the west side of Park street at the north corner of Charlotte street.

The Vancouver Daily Province of a recent date contained the following report of a luncheon given in honor of Miss M. E. Thornton, of Winnipeg, and formerly of Peterborough. Among those present was Miss Helen E. Howson, principal of the Sprott-Shaw Schools of Commerce, Vancouver, also formerly of Peterborough on the staff of the Peterborough Business College: In honor of Miss M. E. Thornton, a member of the directorate of the Winnipeg sister club, members of the Vancouver Business and Professional Women's Club gave a luncheon on Wednesday in the York Room of the Hotel Georgia, which had been beautifully decorated for the occasion with great baskets of roses from the garden of the president, Miss A. Josephine Douphinee. Sweet peas in pastel coloring had been selected for the tables, where places for twenty-five guests were marked with floral favors. Miss Thornton is making a short visit to the city accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Thornton, also of Winnipeg. The guest of honor, who holds the unique position of secretary-treasurer of the Norwood School Board, spoke of her work, and also gave a short resume of the history of the Winnipeg organization. Although the Winnipeg branch is one of the most recently former, according to Miss Thornton, it has already sponsored the forming of a Canadian Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs. The luncheon was arranged by the social committee, Miss Mima Brown, and her committee, and Mrs. T. A. Willcocks gave vocal solos accompanied by Miss Hazel Fremlin. Mrs. Thornton, Miss Thornton and Miss Dauphinee were presented with flowers.—Vancouver Daily Province.

THE WHATNOT

A Place for Little Bits of Everything of Local Interest

WHEN you go holidaying this summer, it is well to remember if you go to the sea, that sea water quickly rots stitches in shoes. A few cents spent on oak copal varnish which should be painted in between the soles and the upper part, prevents water rotting the stitches, and this would be money well spent.

• • • •

Often it is difficult at the last minute when you are packing, to substitute something for a tag, if your old one is worn out. Old linen collars are very good for this as they are stronger than any you can buy, and you can make them the size you require.

• • • •

Flowers feel the heat badly once they have been picked, and if you do not treat them kindly their sad heads will droop, for they are very human. The best time to gather them in the hot weather in the early morning as soon as the dew has left them, and before the sun gets too hot. Opening buds should be selected as they soon open indoors. If you must gather them later, one lady has recommended laying them flat in a bath of luke warm water for a few hours, allowing the water to become cool before arranging them.

• • • •

Actual sunshine does not help them once they are out, so it is well to place them in a shady place away from draughts. A little cold tea in the water makes them last twice as long, too. One must remember, too, not to mix the different varieties. Roses, for instance, will not flourish if they have to share the water with any other kind of flower, no matter how beautiful.

• • • •

Flowers that have been cut and out of water for a long time, or have wilted after a journey, can easily be revived by splitting the stems a little, then plunging them into a tall jar containing an inch or two of boiling water. Place them in a dark cupboard for a few hours. When the water is cold you will find the flowers are beautifully fresh again, and all you have to do is to cut off the dead piece of stem.

• • • •

Massaging, as well as keeping the face and limbs in better condition, will also hep to keep cut flowers in perfect condition. Hold the stems firmly and massage downwards with the fingers and thumb.

• • • •

Lovely red, juicy cherries are here once again, but isn't it a miserable job pitting them in preparation for preserving? A steel pen stuck first in the holder is excellent for this purpose, and also protects the fingers to a certain extent.

• • • • •

Watermelons too! When buying them it is well too remember that half a large melon is generally more satisfactory than an entire small one. Half a watermelon that weighs 30 to 40 pounds is generally better buying than a small one weighing 16 to 24 pounds.

A glittering decoration seen not long ago on a certain dressing table is a set of accessories—three cut glass bottles on a triangular tray of clear black and silver. The bottles are of two sizes, to contain perfumes and toilet water.

• • • •

When your white satin slippers and all white silk garments are not in use, it is well to wrap them in blue tissue paper or in a cloth that has been blued in strong bluing water, to prevent discoloration. The lime in white paper turns them yellow. Slippers of silver or gold are wrapped in black tissue paper to prevent tarnishing.

• • • •

It won't be long now, until we see corn cobs flying around, making our mouths water for just a taste of the good old corn—even if it is on the cob, we don't care. For removing the silk from it when preparing it for the table or for canning purposes a small hand brush is better and quicker than the fingers.

Keeping cool mentally gets harder as the temperature goes up. Hot weather is likely to affect dispositions as well as comfort, and the more that can be done towards keeping cool physically the greater is the probability of keeping cool mentally. Loose, lightweight clothing, hung from the shoulders as much as possible, low comfortable shoes, and broad brimmed hats help to keep the body from getting too hot. Windows close, with the shades drawn when the sun is shining directly on them, will keep the extreme heat out of the house. Open the windows as soon as the sun goes down, creating as many cross drafts as possible, and let in the evening air to cool the house. Rest when possible during the hot part of the day; simplified housework, and meals that are easy to get as well as to eat, add their bit in making the dog days bearable.

The use of hard water in the laundry is often the cause of faded colors. A form of lime called lime soap is formed by the contact of hard water and soap, and this substance is insoluble. The lime soap is deposited in the goods, particularly during the rinsing period, when there are not enough suds to keep it in suspension. Ironing incorporates it yet deeper into the material and the process of discoloration continues. There are various methods of softening the water you are using. Your dealer will tell you what he carries.

To take the color entirely out of a cotton dress after it has become somewhat faded, boil the dress in cream of tartar water. A perfectly white dress results.

To give soups a good color and flavor add a large tablespoon of flour mixed perfectly smooth in a cup of cold water. Stir gradually into the soup and let boil a few minutes.

To keep yolks of eggs fresh for several days if not wanted for immediate use, drop them in cold water; keep in a cool, dark place—the cooler the better.

Soiled white and silver broche shoes need not be discarded, as a coat of colored ink, applied with a soft camel-hair brush, will renovate them wonderfully. The white accepts the color and throws the silver into relief. There is such a wide range of colored inks upon the market now that it is possible to match almost any dress.

TRAVEL-LOG.

"THE LAND OF A THOUSAND LAKES"

Finland is often called "The land of a thousand lakes," but that is only because no one has ever counted them. To call it the land of ten or twenty thousand lakes would probably describe it more accurately. In scores of regions in Finland, the lakes are the roads. If you wish to go to market, you go by boat. If you wish to attend church, you step into a row boat in your Sunday best and strong rowers take you there. Similarly, Finland might be called the land of a hundred thousand islands. No one has ever counted them. I asked one man at Savonlinna how many were in the lake there and he answered, "As many as there are days in the year." I asked another at Sortavala on Lake Ladoga and he answered, "A hundred that have names, a hundred with no names, and a hundred that only come above water a few weeks a year." All of this makes Finland an ideal tourist land if you want a romantic water holiday. I saw the land first from an aeroplane, and it looked as though the Creator had bespangled the velvet fir lands with silver. No other land in Europe has beauty of this kind so lavishly displayed. It is the Lake District of the continent.

The Art of Attraction

THE ART OF ATTRACTION
No. 10.

It is rather interesting to remember that men admire one type of woman and women admire another type. There are rare creatures who are liked by both sexes in about the same degree, but these are few and far between. Women know well that there are many members of their own sex who never light up at all with other women. They are bored to extinction by their own kind. During an evening party, they will have a sleepy appearance when talking to other women and then come to life in the most remarkable fashion when men come around. This is the woman, usually, who is catty with her own sex. She will comment unfavorably on anything in another woman that does not happen to suit her particular fancy but she will never criticize a man. She will be unkind and unpleasant to a more amiable woman, but she will be endearing and sweet to any male creature who happens along. She is the sort who saves up all her ammunition for her masculine friends. But she is not as prominent as she used to be, principally because men are changing their viewpoint slightly where women are concerned.

THE MIRROR OF THE MODE

By Mary Marshall.

Known as a "cocktail coat," the short transparent jacket is becoming a popular accessory for sleeveless evening gowns. This example is of black chiffon and is worn with a black and white chiffon frock.

The old time-chart for dressing is rapidly giving way to one that is decidedly different, and under the circumstances the habit of speaking of clothes for morning, afternoon and evening is rather out of date. The idea once was that a woman of fashion dressed three times a day. In the morning she wore clothes appropriate for the street, for shopping or for sports, which if she lunched informally she left on until mid afternoon. Then she put on a more elaborate afternoon dress, for bridge, garden parties, receptions or other afternoon affairs and after that—any time after six o'clock she appeared in evening dress.

I suppose most women do try to get shopping and errands done before luncheon and so usually the street costume is worn in the morning, but many women carry their sports activities on through the day and sports frocks real or of the semi-sports sort are really just as much afternoon frocks as they are morning.

And dressing for afternoon in the old fashioned way is no more. If you have worn sports clothes until three or four and then intend to drop in at the country club or a friend's house for the tea hour at five the chances are that you will wear something that you may keep on during dinner time—probably until you retire. Certainly you won't bother to don an afternoon frock only to have to change for an evening dress shortly after six. Hence the importance of these light attractive frocks that one may wear in the late afternoon and for daylight dining. Besides these frocks there are the formal evening gowns—gowns to be worn after nine, gowns which women don't bother to wear at all unless there is some quite important late evening engagement.

For the usual less formal wear there are frocks of the sleeveless sort, cut without extremely low neck, in colors that are becoming both in daylight and under artificial light. To make these appropriate for afternoon and for restaurant wear there are jaquettes or cocktail coats made ofchiffon and usually quite simple. An evening frock of yellow chiffon has a straight little jacket of the yellow chiffon studded with diamante. Another jaquette costume has a flaring skirt of black chiffon worn with a figured silk bodice embellished with silver embroidery and with it a simple transparent black jacket opening at the front to show the colorful bodice.

TWO RIVALS.

By Frank Gray.

"Frank," said Elihu Goodwin, corporation lawyer, to his confidential clerk, "I have a mission of a rather private nature which I want you to undertake—just to oblige me; it's hardly business. Years ago, when naturally I was younger than I am now and a trifle more foolish, I had a rather intimate acquaintance named Reginald Fontain. We belonged to a speedy set, I am afraid."

"Reggy had plenty of money in those days," he continued, "and went the pace. I saw little of him after I married, for I put away childish things, and now—well I am fairly prosperous and a sober citizen. But Reggy, although he married, kept stepping on the gas. I have heard he went through his own fortune and his wife's too. Some say she died of a broken heart. However, for years I had heard nothing of Reginald Fontain until today I got a letter from him.

"It's a barely disguised begging letter. Now, I want you to investigate and see just how the land lies. I wouldn't mind helping him a little if it would do him any good—if he really needed help."

Frank made the visit as requested by his employer and found the shattered wreck of the gay and reckless Reginald Fontain reclining in an easy chair in a cheap flat.

Fontain at once launched forth into a rambling tale of woe, the only salient facts of which appeared to be that both Reginald's finances and Reginald's liver were in a sadly demoralized condition. While he was rambling on, a door opened and a light footstep was heard. "Ah," said Fontain, "my daughter! Bertha, come here." In response to the summons there appeared a slender young woman of about twenty-five, of a Madonna-like beauty.

When, next morning, Frank made his report to his employer he said nothing about Bertha except that she was her father's sole support.

"Well," said the lawyer, "I suppose I really ought to go and see Fontain."

He made the call and results followed rapidly. Fontain moved into another and more expensive flat and little evidences of luxury and ready money began to appear about him. Goodwin, who had been a widower for six years and had two married daughters and numerous grandchildren, began to spruce up and indulge in outrageously—youthful cravats. He was a constant caller at the Fontain flat. It was as plain as the nose on the face of a Roman senator—the lawyer had picked out Bertha for Mrs. Goodwin number two and father was prepared to hand her over for a pecuniary remuneration.

Frank was frequently an ambassador for his employer to the Fontain establishment, and in one way or another he and Bertha managed to see a good deal of each other.

The law clerk saw that he must sue out two processes in the court of love—a permanent injunction to restrain his employer and a writ of habeas corpus for the possession of Bertha.

There were the two married daughters whom someone had informed of their father's folly—not Frank; he was above anonymous letters—and who were on their way, the one from Portland, Maine, and the other from Chicago, with all their children, to protest. But in the efficacy of the protestations of married daughters Frank had little confidence.

There remained the Mrs. Gallen, widow of Gallen, the butter king, fair, fat and forty-five and with a million in her own right. About two years before Elihu, in one of his marrying spells, had fixed his affection upon the widow—and her money! He had been quite broken up and cross as a bear for two months when she suddenly [illegible] off to Europe. Frank picked up [illegible] paper and saw the widow's [illegible] of arrivals by steamsh[illegible]one! Goodwin was her at[illegible]n her husband's. She was [illegible] office.

Perhaps, thou[illegible]nk, Elihu would have on the one hand a girl, young and beautiful, to be sure, but penniless and encumbered with a grasping, disreputable old father whose demands for money had already been outrageous; and on the other an attractive woman of suitable age—and a million of money! And Elihu worshiped money.

The next day the widow called and was shown into the lawyer's private office. She was there a long, long time; Frank in the outer office was on pins and needles with anxiety, but with the lapse of every half hour his hopes increased.

While he hoped the married daughters arrived, each accompanied by an assorted lot of children and insistently demanding to see their erring parent. Elihu heard their voices, opened the door and said, "Come in, Elvira, come in, Cynthia—and the dear children. My dears, allow me to present to you Mrs. Gallen, who has consented to become a loving stepmother to you. I am getting old and need a companion in my age."

In the end he did the sane and sensible thing and everybody was satisfied. Reginald Fontain, it is true, threatened to make trouble, but knowing he would not live long to draw it, Goodwin calmed him with a liberal pension. For the year which he survived the receipt of his pension Bertha devoted herself entirely to her father, but as soon after his death as propriety permitted she married Frank.

A Tip or Two

Try baking apples in a double roaster with one cup of water for a half dozen peeled apples. They are much more juicy than when baked in a pan without a cover.

Beef suet will keep fresh for some time if finely chopped, dredged well with flour and kept in a glass jar in a cool place.

Always soak raisins before putting them into breads so they will not absorb the water from the bread, making it dry.

ISHBEL MACDONALD PREDICTS BUSY TIME FOR HER FATHER

Daughters of Former Prime Minister of Britain Have Varying Tastes.

COMING TO CANADA.

We Don't Quarrel or Borrow Clothes, She Says of Sisters.

(By Dorothy Russell, Associated Press.)

London, July 14.—On July 28, Rt. Hon. James Ramsay Macdonald, former labor prime minister, sails with his three daughters for a five weeks' visit to the Dominion of Canada. The three girls: Ishbel, Joan and Sheila, are particularly enthusiastic over the journey. They intend to cover as much ground as possible in the time at their disposal, and Montreal, Quebec and Winnipeg will be visited, although most of the time will be spent holidaying at Lake of the Woods, on the Ontario-Manitoba boundary.

Miss Ishbel explained that the Macdonalds were a busy family. "Joan is studying for a medical degree at Edinburgh University. Sheila is in school here working for a scholarship to one of the universities, and I have my work on the London County Council all of which will call us back in seven weeks time. And, of course, father has his work in Parliament, too. But even a flying trip will be a wonderful experience. Father says that schools are important, of course, but that travel is the best education of all and my recent American trip made me realize how true that is. Travel prevents one from becoming stodgy.

"We three girls have such different interests, however, and I'm afraid father will have a hard time of it, showing us all we want to see. Joan will want to visit some of the hospitals and clinics. I shall want to see the schools and parks, in connection with my work on the education and open spaces committee of the London County Council, and Sheila will want just to have a good time."

Miss Macdonald smiled at the thought of the labor leader's forthcoming predicament. It was a quiet smile; for she is a reserved and serious young woman, but her twinkling brown eyes and the pretty pink flush that tinged her cheeks revealed a very live sense of humor. Father is evidently a great pal of his girls, and knows how to handle a family, as well as labor politics.

"Who is liable to win out?" I asked.

"Oh, all of us," Miss Macdonald assured me. "We three are fast friends and never quarrel, like many sisters do. We don't even borrow each other's clothes!"

The Macdonald girls, in spite of their marked intellectual attainments, are out-of-door types, and have the freshness and bloom of their native Scottish moors about them. The two younger are athletes. Joan is a star member of the women's rowing crew and secretary of the rowing club at Edinburgh University. Sheila plays golf well, as becomes a Scotch lass, but she hasn't any records yet. Still, she is only 17.

Her sister Ishbel shows an almost maternal pride in the "baby" of the trio. The former premier's children were left motherless at an early age, and Ishbel has since "mothered" the family. She is sure that Sheila, laughing, roguish and clever, will do something fine when she decides upon a career, but just what that is to be, Sheila isn't telling.

Independence is apparently a characteristic of the Macdonald clan. Miss Ishbel has a good deal of it herself, as I soon discovered when we started talking about her own career, which, by the way, is not that of her father's secretary, as has been so often said.

"I've never had time to be his secretary, or his housekeeper either," she told me. "I have too many other things to do. But I can keep house, of course, and do when our housekeeper is on holidays." Miss Macdonald's job, indeed, is much more far-reaching. She is carrying out a brilliant career on the London County Council and is looked upon as one of the hopes of the Labor party when women's political importance become more potent.

In recent municipal elections in which Miss Macdonald won her constituency, South Poplar, she fought side by side with her brother, Malcolm, the Labor candidate for the neighboring constituency, Limehouse. Both Macdonalds were victorious, and are the first brother and sister to sit on the London County Council together.

Miss Macdonald's political faith is not inherited from her father.

"I am not a member of the Labor party because my father is," she declares. "Of course, his work always interested me, but when I was old enough to do my own thinking, I threshed out the whole subject of politics for myself until I was sure I was drawing my own conclusions, uninfluenced by my father's views. I wouldn't allow myself to be pushed into any party."

"Why, then, did you finally choose the Labor party?"

"Because it is out to give everyone a good chance, and to establish a scientific system of running the country," she replied.

More than 200 cities in the United States now employ women in their police departments.

SENIORS WIN DOUBLEHEADER ON HOME FIELD

PETES WIN TWO GAMES FROM DELORO AND ARE NOW BACK IN RUNNING FOR PLAY-OFF PLACE

Steady Pitching by Heckman and Harrison and Effective Hitting Turn the Trick.

FIRST A WALKOVER

And Petes Have Plenty to Spare in Second Battle of the Afternoon.

(By F. D. C.)

Although the Petes had only nine men in uniform on Saturday they battled so effectively without reserves that they took both ends of the double-header at James Stevenson Park from Deloro, winning the first hands down 14 to 4 and the second in commanding style by 6 to 3.

The double win puts the home talent right back in the running for a place in the play offs as it leaves them only a game behind Kingston and two and one half in the rear of Oshawa. The Motorists have a tough schedule ahead of them with six of their eight games on the road and the Petes, in spite of their bad slump in the first three weeks in July, can still fight their way into the final series with Belleville, who cannot be beaten out of first place.

Steady pitching by the two veterans, Al. Heckman and Hap Harrison, and effective hitting accounted for Saturday's two victories.

Heckman, with perfect control, simply coasted along in the first game keeping Deloro's eleven hits well scattered and refusing to pass a man while the Smelters' heavers were hit hard and also suffered from defective control, issuing six passes. Ralph, a left-hander, started the first game for Deloro but was shelled off the hilltop in the third while Shea, who went to the rescue, got along fairly well until the eighth when the Petes started a fusilade that did not terminate until eight runs had crossed the plate. Shea, of course, had disappeared before the end of this bombardment and "Murphy" Jack had to be called upon to quell the disturbance.

Heckman held the invaders well in hand all the way. They got an unearned run in the second, a clean one in the sixth on a combination of three singles and a couple in the ninth when nothing short of twelve would have been of any use to them.

Weather conditions were against good ball. The field was heavy and a drizzling rain made it miserable for the players but in spite of the slippery ball and treacherous footing some excellent fielding was done by both teams.

The Petes did some lusty clouting. Hap Wilgar cashed in with a double to centre and a long triple to right while Harrison's terrific drive which hit the score board on the fly was one of the hardest wallops of the season, although it only earned him a double. Shiner Johnston also doubled with the bases full and Bert Hall had a double and a single that figured in the run making. Every member of the team scored at least one run while all but Heckman figured in the hit column.

Deloro took the lead for a moment in the second inning. Boudreau was safe on Mein's low throw and Ralph singled past first. Hughes popped to Rose. Collins hit to Heckman and Boudreau scored on the pitcher's low throw to second. Boyd sacrificed Ralph to third but Brown struck out.

The Petes went ahead in their half. Swanston singled to left. Heckman filed to Quinn. Wilgar doubled to centre. Mein was walked, filling the bases. Hall singled to right, scoring Swanston but Mein was out trying to go to third. Jack made a great stop of Rose's hard hit grounder but threw low, Wilgar scoring. Johnston rolled to Quinn.

Two more in the third for the Petes. Ash wasted a hit when he was caught off first after singling. Harrison rattled a double off the score board, the long drive striking the board on the fly. Swanston was out, Hughes to Quinn. Quinn dropped Heckman's fly, Harrison scoring and Heckman came home on Wilgar's long triple to right field. Shea replaced Ralph on the rubber and struck out Mein.

In the fourth Hall walked, went to second on Rose's sacrifice, to Johnston's infield out, and scored when Ash beat out a single to short. Harrison fanned.

Swanston and Heckman walked to start the fifth and when Regan threw high to second on Wilgar's roller Swanston scored. The next three were easy.

Deloro got their second run in the sixth. With one away Hughes singled to left. Collins filed to Wilgar but Burgess and Brown singled in succession to score Hughes. Jack popped to Mein.

That was all until the eighth when the Petes broke loose in their biggest scoring inning of the season. Mein started it with a single to right and Hall doubled past first. Rose walked filling the bases. Johnston doubled over Brown's head scoring Mein and Hall. Ash hit to Jack and Rose slid under the throw to the plate. Ash stole second. Harrison walked, again filling the bases. Swanston single to centre, scoring Johnston and Ash. Jack replaced Shea on the rubber for Deloro. Scott going to short. Swanston stole second. Heckman rolled to Jack. Wilgar was safe on Jack's error, scoring Harrison. Mein rolled to Regan, Swanston scoring on the out. Wilgar came home when Scott mussed up Hall's roller. Rose forced Hall.

Deloro got two in the ninth. With one out Regan singled past third, stole second and scored on Quinn's double to left. Boudreau rolled to Johnston. Scott singled to right, scoring Quinn but was forced by Hughes.

THE SECOND GAME.

Carl Wood, hero of Deloro's nice win over Kingston on Wednesday, was sent to the mound for the visitors in the second game but after a nice start, faded in the third and fourth frames and the Petes crashed with seven hits to score six runs, aided by a number of defensive lapses and a couple of complimentaries.

Lambert Collins, the other end of the Peterboro battery working for Deloro might have saved his fellow-townsman in the third when with a double play in his hands he got all tangled up. The bases were full with none out when Ash tapped a little roller down the first base line. Collins should have touched the plate after fielding the ball and a throw to any of the bases afterward would have meant a double killing. Instead he tagged Ash, removing the force on the base runners and in the confusion Hall scored from third and the other runners advanced. Three hits followed, and the ball game went "blooie."

Hap Harrison won his second game in a week, the big fellow pitching steady effective ball that held Deloro to one earned run. Harrison worked an underhand ball to good effect and although he was weakening a bit on end had enough left to prevent the Smelters from piling up the big inning that was necessary to overcome the Petes' substantial margin.

He was given fine support, Heckman and Wilgar had nice running catches in the outfield and Johnston speared a low liner and doubled Hughes off first with a quick shot to Ash.

The Petes did not monopolize all the fielding gems. Art Quinn, Deloro's smart second baseman, had the feature play of the day when he ran deep into right field and took Mein's fly near the foul line. It looked like a sure hit until Quinn came from nowhere to make the catch. He got a big hand from the crowd and deserved it.

The Petes again swung their bats to good purpose. Hall kept up his hitting streak, started in the first game, by banging out a single and a double, these hits opening the Petes' two big innings. Swanston came through with a timely double that drove in two runs and Harrison and Ash also cracked Wood's delivery for two base hits. The Smelter gang got nothing but singles off Harrison.

Deloro, as in the first game, opened the scoring in the second fixture. Jack led off with a single to left. He was caught off first but reached second on Ash's slow throw. Regan struck out. Jack went to third on a passed ball and scored on Quinn's sacrifice fly to Bert Hall.

The Petes did nothing with Wood for the first two innings but broke through in the third. Hall started with a double to left. Rose was walked and Johnston hit, filling the bases. Then came a funny one. Ash hit a little roller down the first base line and was tagged out by Collins. That, of course, "killed" the force and when Collins threw down to first Hall scored in the confusion and Johnston was safe at second when Quinn threw to the plate. Harrison struck out but Swanston put the Petes in front by a double to right scoring Rose and Johnston. Heckman singled to left, Swanston stopping at third. He came in a moment later when Wilgar singled down the first base line. Quinn made a great catch of Mein's fly back of first.

The Petes added a couple in the fourth. Hall singled over third and Rose got a single on a high one back of third, the runners going to second and third on Regan's high throw to second. Johnston squeezed Hall home with a perfect bunt and Ash's sacrifice fly to Brown provided transportation for Rose. Harrison doubled to centre. Collins camped under Swanston's foul.

The last runs of the game came in the sixth. Jack opened with a single to left. Regan filed to Hall. Quinn singled to left and pulled off a double steal with Jack. The latter scored on Scott's sacrifice fly which Rose took back of second. Quinn came home on Rose's bad toss on Wood's grounder. Hughes singled over third. Collins grounded to Ash.

Deloro got two hits but no runs in the seventh. After Burgess had fanned Brown singled to right and Jack to left. Regan sacrificed but Quinn's liner was right at Johnston and the game was over.

Riley & Hickey vs. Grafton's will meet to-night in Bantam play-offs at 6 o'clock sharp.

The Royals and the Kiwanis are scheduled to clash in the second game of the Junior City League play-offs to-morrow night at the Exhibition Park. These two teams have been going at it nip and tuck all through the season, and a tight contest can be expected by the fans. Defeated in the first game, a win for the Kiwanis will make a third game necessary, while a victory for the Royals will give them the championship.

GIANTS SPLIT DOUBLE BILL

Mack Wilson's 24th Homer Helps Chicago Beat New Yorkers 3-1.

REDS WIN 6-5

NEW YORK, July 30.—(Canadian Press).—The Giants and the Cubs split even in yesterday's double bill, the Giants winning the first game, 4 to 3, in ten innings, and the Cubs the second 3 to 1. Guy Bush bested Vic Aldridge in the nightcap. Hack Wilson's 24th homer helped defeat the Giants. Wilson also drove in another Chicago run, and Hartnett sent Grimm home with a sacrifice fly after the first baseman had tripled in the fifth.

Cohen's single sent Terry in with the only Giant run in the second.

The first game saw Benton get credit for his 17th victory of the year, and it was the second successive extra inning game between the two clubs. Bill Terry's hit sent Reese in with the winning run in the tenth.

Bill Zeitzmann's fourth hit of the game with the score tied in the ninth inning at Brooklyn drove Jake May across the plate with the run that gave Cincinnati a six to five decision. Zitsmann drove in three runs and scored two of the remaining three. McWeeney and Lucas, the starting pitchers were both knocked out of the box. After the Robins had evened the score in the eighth, Elliott failed to hold the Reds in the ninth. May singled with one out, reached second when Crit walked and scored on Zitzmann's hit.

Toronto Sprinter Is Laid Up With Blister

AMSTERDAM, July 30 (By W. H. Ingram, Staff Correspondent of the Canadian Press). — Percy Wyer, diminutive marathoner from Toronto, accumulated a large blister on the second toe of his right foot while training over the cobblestones of the Olympic Marathon course last week, and was startled when it became suddenly inflamed on Saturday night. Dr. A. S. Lamb, president of the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada, treated the infection last night, and placed it in a moist hot dressing. It is expected Wyer will be running again by Wednesday. The Marathon is set for August 5.

DELORO WINS BY 2-1 SCORE

Defeats Belleville Canadian Legion Team in Football Fixture.

CLOSE CONTEST

(Examiner Correspondence).

MARMORA, July 30.—Deloro association football team journeyed to Belleville on Friday to play another game with the Canadian Legion team of that city, and ran out winners by two goals to one. Early in the game, Hart was decidedly unlucky with a hot shot which struck the upright. After fifteen minutes of play which throughout the game was of an even character, Knott, the Belleville captain, opened the scoring. Hart equalized five minutes later. Half-time arrived with the score 1-1.

In the second half Brooks put his side ahead with a beautiful goal, Gorman having no chance to clear. This ended the scoring. Both goalkeepers showed up good, the Belleville man having more shots to contend with than his rival. Another meeting of these teams is arranged for this week at Deloro.

The teams:

Deloro—R. Murray; W. Savage and C. Nicholson; A. Smith, D. Caldoo and W. Burridge; T. Cousins, E. Brown, J. Hart, G. Brooks and W. Brown.

Belleville—J. Gorman; S. Taylor and J. Hatfield, Sr.; F. Cross, W. Colclough and H. Williams; F. Howard, E. Nowidge, A. Knott, A. Kennedy, and J. Hatfield, Jr.

Referee—J. Birtwhistle.

INDIANS HIT YANK HURLERS

Hammer Gotham Moundsmen to Win 24-6 Decision From Cleveland.

SOX BREAK EVEN

NEW YORK, July 30.—(Canadian Press).—The Cleveland Indians and the New York Yankees got their identities confused yesterday and the Tribe overpowered the champions 24 to 6 at Cleveland.

Led by Johnny Hodapp and Luke Sewell with five hits each, the Indians in the first inning drove George Pipgras from the mound with five runs. They continued the assault against Wiley Moore in the second and hung up nine more.

Thomas, who followed Moore, had barely got settled when he was yanked for Johnson who held the Redmen until the sixth when another bombardment netted six runs. Archie Campbell kept them from scoring further.

The Yankees hit Joe Shaute freely enough but the Cleveland southpaw held them safe with men on bases. Babe Ruth pounded out four straight hits. Lou Gehrig went hitless in five times at bat.

Sox Break Even

The Chicago White Sox and Washington Senators broke even in yesterday's double header, the Senators taking the opener 8 to 3 and the Sox the nightcap 3 to 1, at Chicago.

Victory in the last game broke the Sox' losing streak, which had reached seven since the team returned from its most successful road trip in recent years on Wednesday. Adkins held the visitors to seven hits in the second while Hadley and Brown were found for nine hits.

Pounding Lil Stoner from the box in the second inning, the Red Sox made enough runs to defeat the Tigers in the third game of the series here yesterday. The score was 5 to 2. After Stoner's removal, Haskell Billings and Jack Russell staged a close pitchers' battle but the issue already had been settled. Sumner's double with the bases filled was the chief factor in the Red Sox attack.

Philadelphia swarmed all over the Browns to win the second game of the series 8 to 3, at St. Louis.

Wiltse and Strelecki succeeded Ogden on the monud but couldn't stop the visitors.

Fox and Maas hit home runs.

ROYALS WIN DOUBLE BILL

Defeat Rochester 3-0 and 4-3 to Close Present Home Series.

EVEN WITH BIRDS

MONTREAL, Que., July 30.—(Canadian Press).—Montreal closed their home stay here yesterday afternoon by taking a double bill from Rochester, 3-0 and 4-3, the second in eight innings. The twin victory gave Montreal a 4-3 break on the series and an even division of the games played with Rochester this season, seven wins apiece.

Herb. Thomahlen turned in his fourth straight victory since joining the Royals by shutting out the Red Wings in the first contest. The Royals gave him fine support and Tom Gulley, the local home run hero obliged a crowd of over 15,000 by smacking out his 18th of the season.

A circuit blow won the second game for Montreal when Stapleton poled the ball over the scoreboard with none on and none out in the eighth inning. The game went into extra innings when Montreal rallied in the seventh to tie the score after Red Wings had jumped to the front in that frame. The Royals used three pitchers, but Herman Bell went the route for the Red Wings.

Injuries took a terrific toll of the Red Wing's staff yesterday afternoon. Pitcher Bell and catcher Morrow were badly cut by flying glass in a taxi-cab smash on the way to the game but with great courage played through the second game without relief, when manager Bill Southworth had no more men available. Lyne, Rochester outfielder, fell and broke his collar bone after making a sensational shoe-string catch in the first game, and Bill Southworth himself was carried from the field with a wrenched knee when he was blocked at the plate, attempting to slide home in the second game. Catcher Cowdy suffered a sprained finger in the first game.

Leafs Win

BUFFALO, N.Y., July 30.—(Canadian Press).—The Toronto Maple Leafs overcame a seven run lead rolled up by the Buffalo Bisons and won a valiant victory by a score of 9 to 7 in the final game of the series here yesterday. For the second straight day a long home run blow by Rabbitt was the vital factor in victory for the Leafs.

The diminutive Toronto outfielder blasted a homer over the left field fence with two on for the final blow of a six run rally which won the game for the leaders in the seventh inning. The Bisons knocked Fisher from the mound in the first inning featured by Moore's homer, but Satterfield checked them off for the rest of the afternoon.

Keys Defeated

NEWARK, N.J., July 30.—(Canadian Press).—Newark defeated the Reading Keys here yesterday afternoon by a score of 3 to 2. The Bruins won by timely hitting. Pitcher Mavaux making his first appearance on the mound since June 17th, drove in the Bears' first run while Malone drove in the other two. With the bases loaded in the seventh, Mamaux did his best work by fanning Carter who pinch hitted for Harrison. The latter during his stay on the rubber allowed but three hits. Mamaux weakened in the ninth and was yanked for McQuillan after a single had been made. A double play killed the Keys' rally.

VISITING TEAM LEAVES FIELD DURING STORM

Lockworks Players Fail To Return, Having Misunderstood Order.

GAME FORFEITED.

Hastings, Leading 9-1 at End of Third Inning, is Awarded Game 9-0.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence).

HASTINGS, July 30.—Scheduled to begin at three o'clock on Saturday afternoon, the game between the Peterborough Lockworks and Hastings in the East Peterborough League did not begin till almost four. Before three innings had been played, rain was falling so heavily that it was impossible to continue the game. Jack McCarney of Peterborough, who was handling the game, called a temporary halt in hopes that the downpour would cease, and ordered the teams not to leave the field. The Lockworks players apparently failed to understand the ruling and returned to their hotel to dress. When the rain stopped, they were unable to return to the diamond and the referee gave the game to Hastings with a score of nine to nothing.

When the game was stopped the score stood nine to one for the home team, with Peterborough in the field. There were two men down and Stevenson was on third base. The game was the second one of a series of five which are to be played between these two teams to decide who shall oppose the winner of the city section of the League in the finals. The first fixture resulted in a tie, and Saturday's victory for the home team gives them an edge on the play.

There was some delay occasioned in the beginning when Hastings players did not appear at the appointed time. They, for the home team, looked good for the whole game had it been played. The wet ball made his delivery a little wild but he managed to hold up his end of the game. Lockworks used three twirlers in as many innings but failed to keep the local team from hitting. They has all the ear marks of one of those rare persons, a pitcher who can hit. He was twice at bat and hit both times. His second clout was a complete circuit and the only homer of the game. Smith was on the mound.

Green from centre field relieved Connors when the second batter came up in the second innings. In the third, they struck out Black after he had walked two men and the bases were full, retiring the side. In the last inning he was the second man up and knocked a long fly to left field which amounted to his home run. Smith relieved Green in his pitcher's box at the beginning of the innings. Forbit, Hastings, who had just arrived and had not yet had a turn at bat, was struck by a foul when Cowell was batting and laid out for a few minutes. He was sitting with his team mates just off the first base line.

At 4.57 p.m. the referee decided that the rain was falling too heavily to continue the game and called a halt for fifteen minutes. The Peterborough players were of the opinion that the game had been cancelled for the day and returned to their dressing rooms at the hotel. They failed to appear when the play was ordered resumed and the referee allowed the local team to take the field, pitch the customary three balls and then gave the game to Hastings with a score of nine to nothing.

Score by innings:

Lockworks	0 1 0—1
Hastings	3 4 2—9

Referees — J. McCarney, Peterborough, ball; Darney Scriver, Hastings, bases.

BANQUET ENDS VISIT TO CITY OF C. G. E. MEN

Football and Softball Teams Are Entertained at Legion Hall.

PLEASANT EVENING.

Songs, Stories and Short Addresses Comprise Brief Program.

Peterborough and Davenport football and baseball teams met in the Canadan Legion Hall on Saturday night at seven thirty when they were entertained at a banquet by the joint football and baseball athletic associations. There were 100 guests and players present.

There were two long white tables trimmed with red, white and blue streamers at which the hungry players sat down. The Toronto men thought they had been on a hunger strike, as they had nothing to eat since noon and as it was now eight-thirty their time they felt it was about time to start to eat.

After the dinner a very informal program was held with H. Foster in the chair. Joe Grierson's fame had spread before him and the gathering clamoured for a song. Reluctantly he consented to entertain them but could not find a pianist. However, he began to sing and in the twinkling of an eye one could hear a pin drop as he sang "Marguerite" in a clear robust tenor voice. The applause was deafening and he responded with "Mary of Argyle" which tickled the hearts of the Scotchmen. Still they would not let him go and he had to sing "O Little Mother of Mine," and when he finished the listeners sat in silence a minute before they broke out in a roar of appreciation. Mr. Grierson has a remarkable voice, one of the best robust tenor voices that has been heard in Peterborough.

The no smoking signs in the room did not mean a thing and soon the air was blue with tobacco, but all the boys were having a good time and that was the main thing.

H Foster welcomed the Davenport team and spoke a few words of appreciation to the committee in charge who had carried out the work of the banquet Then he proposed a toast to the King.

E. Hardy, president of the Peterborough Athletic Cub of the C.G.E., also welcomed the Davenport team and spoke of the fine athletic organization, giving credit to Mr. Foster as a great help to the organization. He said that it was a great pleasure to have outsiders and a pleasure especially to have Davenport visit Peterborough and to play them at any game they wished. He welcomed them as co-workers of the C. G.E.

The Melleville P. White cup for football, which is played for annually between the Davenport and Peterborough teams and which was held last year by the Toronto boys and won again this year by them, was then presented by E. Barber, who thanked the Peterborough boys for their reception and as this cup was for the 1927 season they would be willing to play the Peterborough team any time in the fall for the 1928 cup game. R. Kerr received the cup and in a few words thanked Mr. Barber.

E. Oke presented the softball cup, the Mallett trophy, by saying that the honor had been thrust upon him and told briefly that softball had grown from a bundle of rags in the army whe.. they had nothing better to play with for a ball, to indoor baseball, then to softball, which is now one of the foremost games in amateur sport.

W. Bennett received the cup on behalf of the Peterborough Softball Club and thanked the Davenport team for trying hard to give them a game. He said that the diamond might not be as good as the one in Toronto but the Petes needed a faster field to play their real game.

This brought to a close the program, but Mr. Foster said the Legion rooms were at their disposal and to use them as their own. Some made good use of the pool and billiard tables downstairs.

The committee in charge were: H. Foster, chairman, E. Hardie, N. E. Crowe, O. Hurrle, B. Bennett, E. Baldry, J. Clark, D. Batley, B. Weese, E. Barrie, J. McCarney.

The supper was provided by the ladies' auxiliary of the Canadian Legion, with Mrs. Joseph Mills, president of the ladies' auxiliary in charge. The committee was Mrs. A. Clark, convenor, and Mrs. J. W. Devall, Mrs. E. Patterson, Mrs. E. Houghton, Mrs. E. McKinstry, Mrs. E. Porter, Mrs. M. Pearce, Mrs. F. Millard, Mrs. E. Delong and Mrs. A. Gash.

TUNNEY WAS PAID $266 A SECOND

NEW YORK, July 28.—Gene Tunney was well paid for the 32 minutes and 52 seconds he worked in retaining his heavyweight championship against the onslaught of Tom Heeney. He drew $266.22 for each second's work. The champion's purse was $525,000 and he occupied 1,972 active seconds in making the title safe for another year.

SPORT CHATTER

Peterborough' double win on Saturday materially improved their position and the battle for second place promises to be a red hot one down the stretch. Here is the standing:

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Belleville	15	5	.750
Oshawa	9	7	.563
Kingston	8	9	.471
Peterboro	8	11	.421
Deloro	4	13	.235

Games Wednesday—Kingston at Belleville! Oshawa at Deloro.
Friday—Deloro at Kingston.
Saturday—Oshawa at Peterboro.

In the past ten days the Petes have gained two and one half games on Oshawa and Kingston and are now in a position to challenge the Ponies and Motorists in the drive down the stretch.

Saturday's game here with Oshawa promises to be one of the most important of the season and it will be a real battle.

THEATRES

AT THE CAPITOL.

"THE RACKET."

Best Crook Story in Years, at the Capitol To-Night. It's 'The Racket' Which is Packing Theatre Everywhere. Thomas Meighan and Marie Prevost Are the Leading Players.

If you like a good crook story, that will hold your interest from start to finish, see "The Racket" at the Capitol. This feature is said to be one of the best melo-dramas in years, and should be greeted by a capacity house.

"The Racket" is one of the most powerful stories ever filmed which has to do with the modern underworld that manifests itself in the larger cities. The story, or rather the play, was written by a newspaperman, Bartlett Cormack, who used material gained from his own observations and experiences. The picture version of the play of the same name, adheres strictly to the original plot, only elaborating in places where the picturization could be best served, such as the mob scene.

The supporting cast could almost be termed all star. Marie Prevost, herself a movie stellar light of no dim proportions, has the leading feminine role; Louis Wolhiem, he of the broken nose; Lee Moran, Skeets Gallagher, John Darrow and many other well known character actors all add to the brilliant performance.

There have been many underworld movies made recently, some of which were outstanding, but "The Racket" will always stand out as one of the best pictures made of this character. It should be seen by all means. The main plot is centred around the feud of Captain McQuigg and Nick Scarsi, portrayed by Mr. Meighan and Mr. Wolheim respectively. Wolheim continually escapes prosecution due to his connections with political forces, despite the energy expended by Thomas Meighan to land him behind the bars. How he finally wins out over the underworld crowd, is enacted in the most interesting manner, in which Mr. Meighan's performance, along with the others, will be remembered for some time to come.

TORONTO FIVE, PETERBORO FOUR; IN SOCCER WORK CHAMPIONSHIP

Galvin Opened Scoring— Roy Equalized—Rain Spoiled Play and Ball Was Slippy.

A LARGE CROWD PRESENT.

Kerr Got the Hat Trick, While Westwood Scored Twice and Hutton Reduced the Lead.

A large crowd of soccer fans faced the elements on Saturday afternoon to witness the Davenport (Toronto) and Canadian General team battle for the Director White trophy that is emblematic of the C.G.E. work, soccer championship in Canada. The visitors won the well contested game by the score of five goals to four. Bolton, the local custodian, met with an accident with his hand that spoiled his usual effective goal-keeping but he did exceptionally well in spite of the injury. The visitors were presented with the trophy at the banquet in the Canadian Legion Hall. Captain Kerr accepted the cup in an appropriate speech and said they were willing at any time to give the Petes another chance this fall in Toronto.

Goal in Five Minutes.

There was no advantage in winning the toss and the game started in a drizzling rain. The Petes were the first to make ground and Galvin tested Vernall with two rapid shots. No sooner had the ball been cleared when the local inside left dribbled his way through to beat the visiting custodian with a long drive that he failed to hold. After this set-back the Toronto boys replied with a well planned movement on the left wing that kept the local boys in a quandary.

Roy Got a Beautiful Goal.

They kept the play confined to the Petes territory for the next five minutes until Crossan made an opening for his forwards when he slipped the ball forward to Roy who dribbled his way inside the defence. He was checked closely but he tapped the sphere back to his half-back when hard pressed and the latter passed back to him quickly to divert the ball pass Bolton with the gentle tap of the foot for the equaliser. Exchanges continued on an even basis thereafter with the players endeavouring to control a slippery ball. Play run from end to end at a fast pace with the half-backs intercepting well planned combination tactics that failed to materialise in the proximity of the goals. A foul kick taken by McCall caused some excitement when he drove hard for the desired area when two players misjudged the ball in transit.

Ball Became Very Heavy.

Time and again the forwards introduced combination that was spoiled through the ball becoming very heavy. It prevented the players from showing their best on the field of play because the ground was slippery and when the contestants made an attempt to get away their movements were spoiled by the poor footing.

Drizzling Rain Slows up Pace.

The pace was fast and furious, with the Toronto team in the ascendency, and it would have caused no surprise if the visitors had increased their lead. Ogillvie and Rodgers on the right wing combination was a thorn to the Peterborough defence. They manouvered their play and position nicely and quickly while in possession of the sphere. When anyone of them saw an opening to transfer their position they immediately occupied the alloted place to perfection, thereby giving the local halves twice as much work as usual, in fact, Blowers never gave them any latitude near goal and always cleared without any hesitation. At this period, the local boys fell away and indulged in tackling instead of making progress while the other team relieved the monotony through close dribbling in mid-field that was backed up by a well-balanced half-back line that went down with their forwards to assist them if the occasion would arise. Both goals were paid visits just before half-time, with the visitors being more conspicuous. Half-time, Peterborough 1; Toronto 1.

HALF TIME

The second moiety continued in a drizzling rain and stopped for a while a few minutes later. Play was mostly in mid-field, but, Burgess broke away on the wing to centre on the run with Westwood harassing the defence right near the goal-posts that gave the fans a thrill. Hutton coming up on the play shot for the corner of the upright where Vernall made a poor clearance. All the players were in a heap with the visiting custodian being the main performer, but McWhinnie came to his assistance by illegally handling the ball and the referee awarded a spot-kick that Westwood bulged the net with a rising shot in below the bar.

Bowan Evens up the Count.

From the centre kick the visitors made for the local's goal to get inside the defence and bombard the citadel from all angles. Wade tackling at every opportunity to offset the onslaught. Eventually the forwards opened up their style of tactics by swinging the ball from wing to wing. Roy dribbled his way past three men but deceived his opposition when he slipped the ball back to Bowan who let drive from twenty-yard range to bulge the net and give Bolton no chance to save. Encouraged by their success they came back again to get another tally, when Mann conceded a foul kick that McCall rapped for goal. Bolton saved it but Kerr was right on top of him to tap the sphere into the net for number three.

Bolton's Injury Causes Inconvenience.

The local custodian had no chance to stop the shots that beat him because he had only one hand in use owing to his other hand being injured. For the next period few minutes the Petes dominated the play, while the Toronto boys seemed to be contented with the lead. After confining the ball to Toronto's goal area. McCall broke up the dangerous raids time and again that was cleared up field. Rodgers trapped the ball from mid-air and sent Ogillvie away on the wing. He beat his man on the run to centre across the pitch where Wade made a poor clearance that left his partner upset who could not meet the oncoming centre forward that finally connected before he reached the goal-keeper.

Kerr Got the Hat Trick.

The home men kept the visitors confined to their own ground and Vernall had a busy time. Quick as lightning Grierson broke away fast on the left wing to travel into goal where Kerr diverted the ball into the net by his head.

Petes Came into the Picture.

With a score of four goals to two the local boys opened up a seige that brought them success. Mitchell on the right gained possession on the run and beat his man nicely to centre into goal where Westwood connected with his right foot to the goal-keeper's surprise. Continuing their combination play Hutton worked hardto get a goal but was unlucky in not getting a real try because he was watched very closely. At last he accepted the opportunity to get the fourth goal for Peterborough

Toronto's Defence Clever.

It was noticeable after the locals' fourth tally that the visitors concentrated on defensive movements to frustrate the eager Peterborough boys who tried hard to pull the game out of the fire but had to be contented with the five to four count after ninety minutes hard play. Full time—Toronto 5, Peterborough 4.

Goal scorers—Peterborough: Galvin, Hutton and Westwood (2). Toronto—Kerr (3), Roy and Bowan.

Davenport (Toronto)—Vernall, goal; McWhinnie and Gilmour backs; Crossan, McCall and Bowan, halves; Ogillvie, Rodgers, Kerr, Roy and Grierson, forwards.

Canadian General (Peterborough)—Bolton, goal; Wade and Blowers, backs; Mann, Dawson and Laidler, halves; Ogillvie, Rodgers, Kerr, Roy and Grierson, forwards.

Referee—Alex. McKinley.

TUNNEY PLANS TO STUDY PHILOSOPHY IN EUROPE.

NEW YORK, July 30 (Canadian Press)—The New York World to-day says that Gene Tunney, according to one of his closest friends, plans to spend a year abroad studying philosophy, after which he will take up a career of banking or industrial business.

His philosophy studies, it is said, will take him to such universities as King's College, London, and perhaps the University of Heidelberg. He may even enrol in as many as four universities before he returns to this country and casts his lot in a business venture.

Madame Lapointe, shown here, wife of Canada's Minister of Justice, in the presence of a large company of Canadians and others, launched the steamer Lady Nelson, the first of five steamers being built at Cammell, Laird's, Birkenhead, for the Canadian National West Indies service.

THE TERRIBLE ELEVENTH.

The terrible eleventh round of the Tunney-Heeney battle at Yankee Stadium, New York, saw Heeney staggering blindly hardly able to defend himself. This telephoto picture shows Heeney sagging badly (right) as the referee stepped in and stopped the fight to spare the game New Zealander further punishment. Heeney had been knocked out in the tenth round, but was saved by the bell and after the one-minute rest he came from his corner for the eleventh round only to run into a terrific barrage of blows. With two minutes and fifty-two seconds to go the New Zealander was rocking on his feet and ready to collapse when Referee Forbes stepped between the battlers, as shown in this picture, and led Heeney staggering to his corner. In this photo Tunney is behind the referee.

United States Leads Olympic Standings.

Summarized and tabulated, the points were scored as follows:

CANADIAN ENTRANTS MAKE GOOD SHOWING IN CONTESTS

Acquit Themselves Well In First Day's Competitions at Amsterdam.

GIRLS BEGIN TUESDAY

AMSTERDAM, July 30 (CP) (By W. H. Ingram, staff correspondent of the Canadian Press).—The Canadians acquitted themselves well in the first day's competition of the 1928 Olympic track and field events yesterday. The 100 metres and 800 metres runners; Munro of Toronto, the high jumper, and Montabone of Montreal, the lone hurdler, were in action against the cream of the athletic world. Perhaps the outstanding Canadian performance was the equalling of the world's record for 100 metres, 10 3-5 seconds, by Percy Williams of Vancouver. Phil Edwards, dusky 800-metre runner from British Guiana, representing the Hamilton Olympic club, was impressive in his victory in one of the heats at 800 metres.

Williams and John Fitzpatrick, of Hamilton, qualified for the finals of the 100 metres flat, while B. Little of Winnipeg, Edwards, and A. W. Wilson of Montreal qualified for the 800 metres semi-finals, so that five out of eight Canadian runners progress onward. The three eliminated were George Hester, Hamilton, Ralph Adams, Hamilton, and Pete Walter, Toronto, the first two being 100-metre men and Walters an 800-metre runner.

There was a dramatic touch to the race of Little of Winnipeg, who was beaten in an 800-metres heat only by Peltzer, German star. Little, running a great race, collapsed on the track as he finished second.

Compete on Tuesday.

The Canadian girl athletes get into competition on Tuesday with the running of the preliminaries of the women's 100 metres. Myrtle Cook, Florence Bell, Fanny Rosenfeld and Ethel Smith of Toronto are entered.

Williams in his 100-metre preliminary got away to an advantageous start compared with his four competitors. He got away two yards in front and held the lead to the finish, Vykoupil of Czecho-Slovakia being second. Williams' time was 11 seconds.

Fitzpatrick's time in his 100-metre preliminary was also eleven seconds, the Hamilton man winning easily over Corts of Germany.

London, the British sprinter, won the 100-metre preliminary in which George Hester of Hamilton was placed second, in 10 4-5 seconds. Hester got away to a good start but London was too fast for him. The rest of the runners were not in the race.

Made Slow Start.

Adams of Hamilton got a slow start in his 100-metre preliminary and though he put forward a magnificent burst of speed, overhauling all but one of his competitors, he could not pass Pina of the Argentine, whose time was eleven seconds.

When it came to the semi-finals of the 100-metres all the times were speeded up a bit. Williams, as noted, equalled the world's record of 10 3-5 seconds to defeat London by a good margin. The Vancouver man started with a great burst of speed and sprinted consistently throughout.

Fitzpatrick in his 100-metre semi-final was beaten by Legg of South Africa, whose time was 10 4-5 seconds. The Canadian got away strongly but fell back at the finish.

In a third 100-metre semi-final, Hester of Hamilton found himself in too speedy company, Russell of the United States winning in 10 4-5 seconds. After a false start the Canadian put forth his utmost efforts but was unplaced at the finish.

Adams, of Hamilton, was also unplaced in his 100-metre semi-final, won by Bracy of the United States in 10 4-5 seconds. There was a false start in this event, too, but Adams hung on grimly in the actual race.

Faced Five Rivals.

Phil Edwards faced five rivals in his 800-metre preliminary. He took the lead at the start and held it by three yards at the halfway mark. The runners closed up at the end of the next lap, with Phil going easily until the final lap was half-covered. Starr of Britain then spurted but Edwards held a safe lead to the finish, his time being 1.59 2-5. McEachern of Ireland was third. The crowd applauded vigorously at Edwards' victory.

In a second preliminary of the 800 metres, Wilson won from Bylehn of Sweden and Sittig, United States, in 1.59 1-5. There were seven runners and all took it easy on the first round, running in a bunch. Wilson drew away from the field in the second lap after overhauling Bylehn.

Peltzer of Germany easily won his 800-metre preliminary, with Little of Winnipeg going all out to get second place and falling on the track at the finish. The Canadian was fourth in an Indian file around the first lap. He drew in front at the beginning of the second, but shortly afterwards fell back. He recovered stoutly however and hung on grimly. Tatham of Britain was third. Peltzer's time was 1.57 2-5.

The fourth 800-metre Canadian, Pete Walters of Toronto, was unplaced. There were six runners in his heat including himself, and after two false starts the Canadian got away badly. He was fifth at end of the first lap when the contestants were running in Indian file. He came up strongly at the finish but was unable to gain a place, the winner being the redoubtable Hahn of the United States, whose time was 1.56 4-5. Engelhard, Germany, was second and Sindler, Czecho-Slovakia third.

Montabone of Montreal got a good start in his 400-metre hurdles preliminary, competing with five others. Lundgren of Denmark and Hamld of India were leading until half way around, when Cuhel and Facelli went in front, maintaining their advantage to the finish, Cuhel nosing out Facelli to win in the time of 54 3-5 seconds. Montabone passed the others to finish a good third.

Munro of Toronto faced formidable opposition in his running high jump preliminary, and placed seventh. Kimura of Japan won, Huhn of Germany was second, Menard, France, third; and McGinnes of the United States fourth.

There was much comment on the plucky showing of Watson, the Australian star, in the 400 metre hurdles, in a preliminary won by Learmouth of Britain. Watson strained the arch of his foot in training, but ran a wonderful race and was leading half-way, obviously suffering extreme pain. He carried on, finishing fourth. Captain Cornelius of Hamilton, coach of the Canadian athletes, attended Watson since his injury, and yesterday morning placed Watson's foot in a cast, which largely enabled the Australian to make his gallant effort.

FRENCH TEAM ARE VICTORS

Make It Almost a Certainty Davis Cup Remains in France.

PLAY GOOD TENNIS

(By Thomas T. Topping—Associated Press Sports Writer).

ROLAND GARROS STADIUM, Auteuil, France, July 30.—With a display of brilliant individual tennis, Henri Cochet and Jean Borotra made it almost a certainty that the Davis Cup will remain in France for another year by defeating the United States team of William T. Tilden and Francis T. Hunter in the doubles matches, 6-4, 6-3, 7-5, 4-6, 6-2.

With only one victory in the first three matches the United States must win both of to-day's singles matches to bring the cup back from France. Big Bill Tilden, who scored America's one win on Friday over France's ace, Rene Lacoste, will meet Cochet to-day while John Hennessey comes up against an almost insuperable obstacle in the redoubtable Lacoste.

Taking up the doubles match yesterday where it was left off Saturday, when rain made further play impossible late in the afternoon with the Frenchmen leading three games to two in the first set, Cochet and Borotra played great individual tennis to overcome the fine doubles play of Tilden and Hunter. The United States pair played the greatest doubles game they have ever displayed in France, but the individual superiority of the Frenchmen turned the balance in their favor.

The match was remarkably interesting because of its variety and of the sudden changes from the finest kind of tennis to the most flagrant errors. At times the players successfully got off strokes which appeared utterly beyond their power, only to commit faults a few moments later.

The perfect overhead game of the two French players turned the tide in their favor more than any other one thing. Ground strokes had no part in this match.

Cochet was the best player on the court yesterday, with Tilden a close second, while the superiority of Borotra over Hunter told the tale of victory for France. The two better solo players conquered two lesser men playing as a team. The American attack, on the other hand, was better co-ordinated and was carried out with courage and strategy. But against such tennis as the French pair played yesterday is was of no avail.

Never before has a match played in France aroused so much interest or anxiety. The French believed, as did the Americans, that the winner of the doubles probably would win the cup, and the enthusiasm of the 10,000 spectators reflected this excitement.

"ELBOWING" CHARGED AGAINST PELTZER.

AMSTERDAM, July 30 (by W. H. Ingram, Staff Correspondent of the Canadian Press).—As a result of yesterday's opening day activities, the Canadian Olympic team officials charge Dr. Otto Peltzer, German star, with elbowing B. Little, of Winnipeg, in the heat of the 800 metres in which the Canadian finished second to Peltzer.

PETERBOROUGH WINS SOFTBALL FROM DANFORTH

C.G.E. Factory Boys From Toronto Get Short End of 9-6 Score.

FOR MALLETT TROPHY.

Winners Play Better Game All The Way Through, Showing More Pep.

Peterborough took the Mallett cup from the Danforth boys on Saturday evening at Confederation Park when the local C.G.E. team defeated their much talked of rivals to the tune of 9-6 before a large crowd which turned out in spite of the threatening weather.

In the first frame neither team scored, while in the second Danforth started out with Dickson getting a single and advancing on Mackie's single, then scoring on Powell's error for the first tally of the game.

Peterborough in their half also broke into the scoring column when Routley walked, advanced on Dyer's single and scoring on Weese's single, while Dyer romped around the bases home on wild throws to second base and home for the second score. This put the Petes ahead with a lead of one run that Toronto never overcame.

There was no further score until the fifth, when the Petes again broke loose. It happened this way. Weese walked, F. Jones walked, Crary doubled to bring them in, and Playford singled, bringing Crary in, while he came in on wild pitches over the catcher's head, scoring four runs in that innings.

Bell walloped a beautiful homer in the sixth for Toronto's only score. In Peterborough's half, Dyer walked, stole second, stole third and came home on another wild throw over the catcher's head. Freddie Jones walked and made second on Crary's single, coming home on another wild throw by Dickson, giving the Petes two more.

Toronto showed a little more snap in the seventh and staged a dying rally. Taylor and Angelo reached first and second on errors when Bell appeared again to knock a homer and scored the three runs. The Toronto men then died. The Petes scored their last in the eighth when Weese knocked a triple and came home on another wild toss by the pitcher. Angelo for Toronto arrived safe on first by errors and came in on Bell's double for Toronto's last tally.

Dickson, for Toronto, was inclined to be wild, giving the Petes six complimentaries as well as letting four runs in by trying to throw high skies over the new Collegiate when there was a man on third. He struck out eight men. Powell, for Peterborough, struck out one and walked one.

Reggie Dyer nipped off the foul tips behind the bat, while the Jones brothers in the field gave the visitors a real exhibition of fielding. J. Jones stopping four by the aerial route.

Course, the visitors' catcher, turned in a nice game, but the snap and dash they showed in practice was lost in the game and at times they played liked dazed men.

The teams lined up as follows:

Davenport Works—Course, c; Dargie, r.f.; Bell, s.s.; Burns, 3b.; Dickson, p.; Mackie, l.f.; Barnes, c.f.; Taylor, 1b.; Angelo, 2b. Subs, Stewart, Hanesworth.

Peterborough — J. Jones, c.f.; F. Jones, u.f.; Crary, r.f.; Playford, s.s.; Powell, p.; Barry, 1st; Routley, 2b.; Dyer, c.; Weese, 3b.

Score by innings:

Toronto.. .. ..010001301—6
Peterborough.. .. ..02004201x—9

Home runs—Bell 2. Struck out—By Dickson 6, by Powell 1.

Umpires—E. A. Richie at the plate, W. Ranger on the bases.

Bell was the heaviest hitter on the field, getting two homers and a triple in four trips to the plate.

ANCIENT SCIENTISTS CALCULATED WELL

Ancient Indian Priests Only 57 Minutes Out on Meridian.

LA PAZ, Bolivia, July 26.—(A.P.)—Professor Artruro Posnansky, scientist and founder of the Tiahuanacu mueum, and Dr. Rolf Muller, subdirector of the astronomical observatory of Potsdam, have just returned from an investigation carried out in the prehistoric ruins on the banks of Lake Titicaca.

At the Temple of the Sun, situated in these ruins, Posnansky and Muller observed the stars, sun and moon from the same post at which the ancient Tiahuanican priests took observations thousands of years ago.

The scientists made their observations from June 20 to 23, the time of the Solstice being June 21. The difference between the Tiahuanacan meridian as figured by the ancient priests, and the meridian of today is only 57 minutes, thus demonstrating the exactitude with which the ancient astronomers carried out their studies.

According to Muller and Posnansky the ancients probably used the polar stars to determine the meridian, etsablishing with very fine metals the culmination of some of them thus determining a line exactly south which they marked with a great white sign painted on the side of a mountain of rock, 15 kilometers from Tiahuanacu. This could be distinguished from the observatory in the Temple of the Sun, appearing about the size of an egg.

Years ago Professor Posnansky announced his theory that the ancient Tiahuanacans knew mathematically the angle of ecliptic obliquity. He sets the age of the temple as 13,000 years, the oldest granite Temple of the Sun in the world

The origin of the name "Stonewall," as applied to Stonewall Jackson, dates from the battle of Bull Run, when a Confederate general restored confidence in his men by shouting "There stands Jackson like a stone wall."

WORK OF ILLUSTRATION STATIONS

There are 195 illustration stations in Canada. A separate division of the Experimental Farms Branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture has charge of direction of the work of these stations. The illustration stations are not experimental farms but just ordinary farms, chosen in districts where example will do good, preferably located on a highway. The owners of the farms chosen continue to operate but they do so under supervision. Ecah station becomes a centre for the growth and distribution of high-grade seed of new and improved varieties, of pure bred livestock, and serves as a medium for conveying to the farmers in the vicinity, in a practical way, the results of the experimental and research work carried on at the experimental farms.

PROPER ATTENTION IN SUMMER WILL IMPROVE WINTER LAYING

WELL NOURISHED HENS LAY LONGER

Egg Production in Winter Depends on Feeding During Summer.

The problem of producing winter eggs may be greatly simplified by giving the pullets proper attention during the summer months. Rapid, sound, even growth should be the foremost object in the mind of every poultry raiser. Well developed pullets are much less susceptible to colds, roup, and other poultry diseases, and are able to stand up under heavy, continuous winter production when egg prices are good.

As the pullets develop it is important to watch out that they do not outgrow their quarters. While the effects of over - crowding may not make their immediate appearance, they are bound to show up sooner or later. Teaching the chicks to roost early will help prevent crowding and smothering at night. Separating the cockerels from the pullets when the pullets are moved to the developing range will greatly lessen the problem of supply adequate roost space and the pullets will also do much better. Plenty of room on the roost with air circulating freely about the pullets is a great help in producing good growth.

Shade and Water Important

Pullets that have good range almost always make better growth, and are usually more resistant to diseases. An alfalfa or clover field with natural shade or strips of corn that were put in in the spring to furnish shade work out especially well as a range. Shade is very important to growing stock during the hot summer months.

Growing pullets need plenty of water, for their bodies are composed of a large percentage of water. Drinking pans should be located at different points on the range and when you can, put them in the shade. Except for a short time in the morning and in the evening the birds spend most of the time in the shade during the hot weather.

The proper feed and plenty of it unquestionably is the principal factor which determines growth. Undernourished birds are bound to result in uneven, slow maturing, stunted pullets, incapable of heavy winter production. A growing ration must not only grow the pullets rapidly, so that they are heavy for their age, but it must produce strong bones, large frames, good plumage, and keep the birds vigorous and healthy. A large number of pullets die or are permanently injured each year because of faulty nutrition. At no time in poultry feeding is it so important to watch out that they do not outgrow their quarters. A large number of pullets die or are permanently injured each year because of faulty nutrition. At no time in poultry feeding is it so important to have, not only the or, proteins, carbohydrates, fats, minerals, and vitamins.

Feed the Best

The reason that many poultrymen are not getting the results they would like to get with their growing stock is because they have attempted to mix their own ration and have overlooked some one essential or essentials in the balancing of the ration. The best and surest way is to feed a good commercial mash. The larger feed manufacturers have experimental farms where their feeds are continually being tested. The fact that thousands of poultrymen are successfully using them is sufficient proof that they will produce equally good results for others.

A good commercial mash may cost slightly more to start with than a home mixture, but is worth the difference. You will find it actually is cheaper in the long run, because it does more. The birds eat less of it as a result of its completeness and digestibility; the mortality is lower, and growth is more uniform. When fall comes the pullets are fully matured and in good flesh. In other words, all set to come into production and lay through the winter months.

Toronto Market Dull With Price Steady

TORONTO, July 30 (Canadian Press).—The morning session of the Toronto Stock Exchange was rather dull and inactive, and with the exception of a few issues, the prices were mostly firm. International Nickel, which has been the only real active issue on the list for the last two weeks, opened at 97½, sank to 95 5-8, and with rather slow trading closed with a gain of ⅝, to sell at 96¼. Abitibi slackened 4 3-8 at 47 5-8, Bell Telephone one at 161, and Consumers Gas one at 199. Cockshutt Plough made a gain of ¼ at 24, Orange Crush B ¾ at 42, and Massey Harris advanced ½ at 40¼. British American Oil was off ¼ at 3-8, and Canada Dry Rights dropped 10 at 1.15, while Hiram Walker was up ¼ at 55.

Losses In Majority On Standard Exchange

TORONTO, July 30 (Canadian Press).—Losses predominated over gains at the morning session of the Standard Mining Exchange this morning, as compared with closing prices on Friday. Amulet was off twenty-six at 4.14, and Sherritt Gordon sank 25 at 6.75. Hollinger slackened 1.03 at 10.50, while Sudbury Basin, selling at 7.75, suffered a loss of 1.27. Noranda opened at 55.50 and reached 55.75, only to close with a loss of 1.85 at 55.65. Howey, with a small turnover, advanced 1¼ at 93¼, and McIntyre gained 30 at 22.30. The Western issues were mostly included in the downward trend.

Weakness Of Wheat Causes Fall In Corn

CHICAGO, Ill., July 30 (Canadian Press).—Big receipts at Chicago today, together with favorable crop reports, led to a set-back in corn prices, after upturns at the start. A contributing bearish factor was the weakness of the wheat market here, ascribed to unexpected downtourns at Liverpool. Corn opened unchanged to 1⅝ cents higher, but subsequently receded all around to below Saturday's finish. Wheat started ⅛ to ¾ cent off and later underwent a material further decline. Oats were easy.

Opening prices were:

Wheat, July 120; September 122⅜. Corn, July 113½; September, 98⅝. Oats, July 45½; September, 39½.

Higher Call Money Checks Brisk Rally

NEW YORK, July 30 (Canadian Press).—Higher call money rates checked a brisk rally in to - day's stock market. Under the stimulus of pool operations and expanding public participation, prices were marked up one to nearly eight points during the morning, but many of the gains were cut down or cancelled by early afternoon.

Call money renewed unchanged at 5½ per cent but advanced to six when the banks called about $30,000,000 in loans in preparation for heavy month-end settlements. Trading turned dull on the decline, indicating the absence of any extensive forced liquidation.

Except for the publication of a few favorable semi-annual earnings report there was little in the day's business news to influence the price movements.

National Tea, American Machine and Foundry, and Midland Steel Products Preferred, all up seven points or more, were in the vanguard of the early advance. Montgomery-Ward crossed 180 to a new peak on a prediction of record-breaking July sales. Eastman Kodak moved into new high ground on buying influenced by the successful demonstrations.

On the reaction, Wright fell from 183½ to 158 and Radio from 179 to 175. American International, American Smelting and Woolworth yielded two points or more below Saturday's final quotation. A better demand was apparent for investment rails, Delaware and Hudson climbing six points andd Chesapeake and Ohio four and a half.

Market Opinion On Various Issues

MONTREAL, July 28—International Nickel by far over-shadowed the trading on the local board yesterday, the stock scoring a substantial advance on a large turnover. The issue reached a high of 97. The strength in Nickel, however, did not carry over into the balance of the market, and in fact, losses outnumbered gains. Twin City, Abitibi, Canadian Car and Price Bros. were the largest sufferers.

The move up in International Nickel did not elicit much surprise the stock acting in accordance with the majority of expectations. It would appear as if a strong fight is going on between interests in Wall Street and a number of prominent Canadians. The bearish views of our American friends have been "aired" a number of times on recent occasions but any selling that accompanied these advices were readily absorbed by people on this side who have expressed utmost faith in the future of this great enterprise.

The selling in New York—short selling—has been one of the most important factors in the depression of the price the past month or so. In fact one day recently, Wall Street found itself under an avalanche of selling in the security, about 70,000 shares changing hands, a large portion of which was for short account. The stock was forced down to below 88 but when the bears discovered that their offerings were being rapidly absorbed and the market was asking for more stock, a covering movement developed which quickly saw the price back to above the ninety mark.

At the present time a number of rumours are prevalent. One is to the effect that shareholders will be offered "rights" to subscribe to new stock. This rumour has been cropping up from time to time but it is not thought likely that this will transpire due to the fact that International Nickel is very strong from a financial viewpoint having a large amount of surplus cash; this could easily take care of developments at the Frood for at least a year. The advance therefore must be due to other reasons.

W. C. Durant, the eminent Wall Street trader? is understood to be greatly interested on the long side of the stock. This, coupled with the perpetual demand from investors who are steadily adding to the strong-box holdings has made the Wall Street bears rather nervous as the floating supply is steadly diminishing. The result is that advantage is taken of any setback to repurchase short commitments. Reactions therefore are short-lived. The situation, to be summed up briefly, is:—"Can the shorts be made to cover on an advancing sale?" Our guess is that they can and only time will work out the result.

While the market has not made sufficient correction of former speculative excesses to be safe, the big break and thorough-going readjustment which many observers have been expecting may be postponed until after the influence of the anticipated Fall boom in trade has worn off. The stock market is a perverse institution and seldom performs as the multitude expect it to do. Conservative quarters are advising the pursuance of a cautious policy buying only into special situations which are particularly favored by expanding earnings. The general advice is to confine holdings to high grade stocks worth staying within the event of a resumption of the June selling movement.

Mining Briefs.

Towagmac Shaft at 1150 feet depth. Station being cut at 1125 feet.

Towagmac Exploration Company has its shaft down to a depth of 1150 feet, which is the present objective. A station is being built at 1125 feet depth and crosscutting will commence next week.

The shaft was carried to depth for the purpose of opening up a body of high grade ore indicated by diamond drilling at below the 1100 feet horizon. It may be several weeks before the ore body can be opened up sufficiently to determine its importance.

A report from the west states that Dome Mines are maintaining some 50 field men in northern Manitoba and Saskatchewan and it is understood that a considerable acreage of likely looking ground has been acquired. Production at the Porcupine property is back to normal, the June output being $320,000.

An experienced mining man who has just arrived from the north for a week here states that the eastern section of Kirkland Lake is humming with activity. A review of operations of the more important properties was given. Farthest west in this section is the Conroyal. This property, which is down deeper than any other in the district, is marking time while waiting for the visit of E. W. Todd, former government geologist who is now operating as consulting geologist. The situation here appears to be that Conroyal has a good body of low-grade ore, which may be milled. The company is looking for some high grade patches to use as a sweetener. This will insure profits from milling operations. After Mr. Todd's visit a campaign for the future will be maped out. The geologist will be on the property in a few days.

Next is the Lebel-Oro, which Nipissing holds under option. Drilling is going on from the 200-foot level. When worked by Lebel-Oro a vein was drifted upon at this horizon for several hundred feet, with values running from nil to $20, with occasional higher assays in spots. Manager Hugh Park of Nipissin states the drilling results to date have been negative. Drilling will continue.

Cambro Kirkland next in line, is sinking a shaft with all speed to the 650-foot horizon. Not until this is completed will lateral work commence. Good surface showings were uncovered at this property. The new vein found on the 400-foot level of the adjoining Bidgood, W. B. McPherson an official of the latter company stated to the Financial News Bureau should mean something to Cambro. Cambro is directly in the line of strike and the vein, if it extends on to the property, should be in the vicinity of the present shaft. The shaft is now down past 135 feet.

Then comes the Bidgood, the most advanced property of the district. Drilling is being carried out toward the eastern extremity of the property, where the Moffatt Hall are working their main vein. It is expected that this vein cuts right across Bidgood and into the Gordon Lebel. Bidgood are also drifting and cutting at the 600-foot level, at the other end of the ground near Mud Lake.

Moffatt Hall is next. Recent reports are to the effect that McIntyre are negotiating for control of this property on a basis which will net the younger company's treasury $1,000,000. An official announcement of a director's meeting to complete the details will be made in a few days. Drilling on this property has cut ore which yielded good values. A shaft will be sunk in the near future at a point close to the Bidgood line. Two veins have been proven here, the one on which they are now drilling (close to the Ridgeot line) and the Tobico, some 600 feet to the south.

Then the Gordon-Lebel. Drilling has been temporarily discontinued here owing to the fact that the machine and crew were previously contracted for at this time. Drilling will continue as soon as a new machine can be procured.

The Pawnee Kirkland is a little to the south. At present all work is being centred on the crescent north of the No. 4 vein. Pres. O. B. Earle informs this office that results are satisfactory. This week's issue of the Financial Times carries a completed report of recent activities at this property.

Important Events Foreshadowed by Visit of International Nickel Directors to Properties This Week

Great interest attaches to the visit this week of directors of International Nickel Company to the properties of the company in Sudbury, where new history is in the making. The question is raised as to whether the company will dispose of its unissued capital stock, which at $25 par value amounts to $9,234,600. If such action were taken, undoubtedly, shareholders would be given rights to the stock at a figure that would bring them a handsome return.

Granted new stock were issued on the basis of one new share for each four held, at say, $50 a share. This would yield the treasury nearly $30,000,000 cash and would make the rights to shareholders worth nearly $12.00 each.

As of March 31st last the company had net current assets of $22,000,000 and this has been increased since. The question is whether the management would deplete cash resources so drastically in using present liquid assets on expenditures that will cost about $15,500,000, as sell the unissued stock. Sale of stock would bring an immediate handsome return to shareholders, but would add to the capital burden.

Abana Penetrates Ore East of Dyke at 600-Foot Level—Four Ore Bodies Proven, Three of Them Below 500 Feet

Charles Spearman, consulting engineer of Abana Mines, Limited, reports that the diamond drill being sunk to the east of the diabase dyke had penetrated ore at a depth of 600 feet and that the drill was still in ore. The new development is regarded as of great importance, as proving the downward extension of the ore zone below 300 feet east of the dyke as well as to the west of the dyke.

Development work by means of drives and crosscuts have opened up the main ore zone, known as No. 1 at the 300 ft. level west of the dyke for 450 feet. On the east of the dyke a corresponding ore zone, known as No. 3 has been opened up for 200 feet, at the 300 foot level, while the drills have cut through the same ore body 450 feet east of the dyke.

A crosscut was driven north from No. 2 ore zone and entered a new ore body, known as No. 3 and the company is driving along this ore body now. It is parallel to No. 2 ore zone and on the same horizon.

On the west side of the dyke a drill was put down, which penetrated two wide ore zones, one at about 500 foot depth and the other at 600 feet. One of these is new ore and is known as No. 4. It is 30 feet wide averaging $26 in value. The ore penetrated at 600 feet depth is the downward extension of No. 1 ore zone.

As soon as the north and south dyke was located cutting through the centre of the property, the management accepted the theory that the dyke was the main trunk of the formation, from which the ore bodies would be found, just as happened at Noranda, where similar conditions prevail. This theory has already been confirmed in part by the location of No. 3 and No. 4 ore bodies, one on each side of the dyke and within easy reach of Nos. 1 and 2 ore bodies, respectively.

While proceeding with development of the ore bodies along the 300 ft. level, the management are working out a broader exploration scheme.

First, diamond drilling will be carried down to 1,000 feet to test the downward extension of ore bodies found. Second, diamond drilling will be carried north and south parallel to the dyke with the view of discovering other ore bodies branching off from this central formation.

The company has proven the No. 1 and No. 2 ore bodies combined to extend over a length of almost 1,000 feet. Added to these are the two new ore bodies. It was estimated at the close of 1927 that the No. 1 and No. 2 ore bodies for a length of 650 feet, combined, contained down to 300 feet $12,000,000. There are reasonable hopes that all four ore bodies down to 600 feet will develop three or four times that amount.

Parks Wife and Car; Can't Locate Either

DETROIT, July 30.—It's going to be too bad if Edward Kahrs, 63 years old, Tillsonburg, Ont., doesn't find his wife, parked, according to police, somewhere in the immediate vicinity of Broadway. She has been waiting a long time.

Kahrs came to Detroit yesterday to secure delivery on a new car. Leaving the sales room, he drove to Broadway to buy accessories. Parking his car and his wife with it, he went shopping. When he had made his purchases he couldn't remember where he left the machine except that it was on a narrow street with a car track.

After a four-hour search, during which officers suspect Mrs. Kahrs may have become impatient, Kahrs presented himself at Central precinct station and asked police aid. The official dragnet was unfolded and patrolmen went to help Kahrs search.

MR. DEVEY'S PUPIL

In the list of successful pupils of Peterborough Conservatory of Music published on Saturday appears the name of William T. Boddy having passed with first class honors at the Toronto Conservatory of Music examinations held last June.

The result is correct, but this student is a pupil of Mr. R. J. Devey, not of the Peterborough Conservatory of Music.

Around the City

A grass fire in a field adjacent to the Bonner-Worth mills of the Canadian Woollens was responsible for an alarm reaching the Fire Department on Sunday afternoon at about 4.30, while at 6.30 a unit of the Department was called to the corner of Park and Sherbrooke Streets, where an automobile had taken fire. The damage was not extensive.

C.N.R. SCHEME NOT REVEALED

Plan For New Financial Structure To Be Given First To Parliament.

WOULD LIFT BURDEN.

TORONTO, July 30 (Special to The Examiner).—The Canadian National Railways have developed a scheme for reorganizing their financial structure, but as to the exact nature of this no public announcement will be made until the matter comes before the Dominion parliament. This was the effect of a statement made to The Examiner to-day by Sir Henry Thornton, President of the National lines on his return from his annual inspection trip to the coast.

Sir Henry denied that he had made during his tour in the West any suggestion of debt cancellation. "I said," he continued, "that we had been examining our financial position and that we had developed a plan which would be sumbitted to the Government and Parliament at the next session which would relieve the government of any future guarantees and the railways from being a burden on the public treasury, and that our financial showing is improving to such an extent that we felt reasonably safe in making that prediction."

Wedding Bells

COOKE—CLARE

A quiet wedding was solemnized at St. James' Parsonage this morning, Rev. Dudgeon officiating, when Bertha Eileen, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Clare, became the bride of Francis Gordon Cooke, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. Cooke, Dalhousie street. Attendants were Miss Mae Johnston and Mr. Harry Wright. The young couple left on the noon train for Ottawa and points east. On their return they will reside in this city.

COLE—DOSSETT.

A pretty wedding took place at half past one o'clock on Saturday at All Saints' church, when Margaret Winnifred, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Dossett, became the bride of Robert Leonard Cole, only son of Mr. George Cole, both of Peterborough. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. J. D. Paterson.

The bride wore a lovely gown of white georgette with knife pleated skirt, cape of pleated georgette edged with silk lace, and large white flower on her shoulder. She wore a white veil caught by a wreath of orange blossoms, white kid slippers and white silk hose and carried a bouquet of Madam Butterly roses. Her only ornament was a string of pearls.

The bridesmaid, Miss Jean Chapman, of Toronto, was in pink crepe de chine with wide girdle of French blue. Her hat was a large leghorn shape trimmed with blue and she wore blonde shoes and hose. Her bouquet was of Columbia roses.

Little Miss Doris Dossett, sister of the bride, was a charming flower girl in a dainty yellow frock with Columbia roses.

Mr. Vernon Lowes acted as best man.

After the ceremony, Mr. Cole and his bride left for a honey moon trip to Toronto and Detroit.

The gift of the bridegroom to the bridesmaid was a silver mesh bag, to the flower girl a gold birthday ring and to the best man a pair of gold cuff links.

BRITTON—MIDDLETON.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at St. John's church at one o'clock this afternoon, when Viva Jane Middleton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Middleton was united in marriage to Mr. Gooding Britton, Phm.B., son of Mr. and Mrs. L. Britton, of Toronto.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. G. J. Bousfield in the presence of the immediate friends of the family. F. G. Mann presided at the organ and played very sweetly during the signing of the register.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, looked lovely in a gown of white georgette and radium lace, made in period style. She more a large white mohair picture hat, long white gloves and white kid shoes with white hose and carried a bouquet of Ophelia roses and lily of the valley.

The bridesmaid, Miss Inez MacKay, B.A., of Toronto, was in a period gown of peach georgette with large black picture hat, black satin shoes and stockings to match her dress. She carried a bouquet of Ophelia roses. Mr. 'Len" Collins, of Lindsay, acted as best man. After the ceremony they left on a honeymoon trip. The bride travelled in a maize crepe dress, brown travelling coat with brown fox collar, a maize felt hat and blond shoes and stockings.

On their return from their honeymoon they will take up residence in Toronto. Out of town guests were Mrs. A. D. King, Toronto, Mrs. H. W. Felkin, Aurora and Miss Inez MacKay, Toronto.

JUNIOR FINAL GAME TO-MORROW NIGHT

Royals and Kiwanis Meet in Second Game of Play-off Series.

The Royals and the Kiwanis are scheduled to clash to-morrow night in James Stevenson Park in the second game of the Junior City play-offs. The Royals won the first game by the close score of 4 runs to 2 and Jack Deannard's team must win to-morrow night's fixture to stay in the running. Both teams are capable of giving an excellent exhibition of baseball.

FIVE BANDITS GET $25,000

Hold Up Two Messengers of Bank of Commerce on Winnipeg Street.

CLEAN GET AWAY.

WINNIPEG, July 30.—(Canadian Press).—Five armed bandits armed with revolvers and sawed off shot guns, held up two messengers of the Canadian Bank of Commerce here today. The robbers escaped in an automobile bearing a United States license plate with two money satchels believed to have contained $25,000 and $30,000.

The messengers, Robert Jones and Kenneth Nicholson, were on their way with a supply of currency for the Provincial Savings Bank on Donald street when they were suddenly surrounded by bandits. While unmasked, the hold-up men faced the messengers with their guns and threatened to "shoot to kill" if they offered resistance.

They seized the satchels and all four jumped into an automobile and vanished down a side street. The hold up was staged on one of the city's busiest thoroughfares, with hundreds of citizens passing by, but the four men carried off their coup with such speed that eye witnesses had no chance to sound the alarm.

DELORO TROOP

MARMORAA, July 30 (Examiner Correspondence).—The Deloro troop for the past six months has not had much chance to show their stuff, what with epidemics in the Spring and the school examinations, but they are now again in full stride with a full Summer program to work on A week-end camp will be held sometime in August or September and in the meantime the boys are on the look-out for a pair of front buggy wheels to build a trek-cart for their week-end outings. Anyone having a pair not in use can soon dispose of them by letting any of the scouts know about them. The most recent recruit to the troop is Manley Emmorey, and as he is the only recruit for some time, his progress will be a challenge to some of the Scouts of longer standing who may be resting on their laurels. Time will tell.

At the meeting held last Tuesday at the headquarters, all tests from Tenderfoot up to some of the First Class ones were run over, and following a few games outside the meeting closed with some good rousing songs.

OBITUARY

ALBERT WILLIAM BAKER

At St. Joseph's Hospital on Sunday, July 29, at 11 a.m. a well known resident of Dartford in the person of Albert William Baker passed away in his 60th year. Illness preceding death had been of brief duration. The late Mr. Baker had been a lifelong resident of Dartford, where he was born, the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Christopher Baker. He was a farmer, highly esteemed for possession of many sterling qualities, and as a member of the Holy Name Society. Mrs. Baker predeceased him some five years ago, but left to mourn are one daughter and three sons, namely Mary, at home, Thomas of Windsor, John of Rochester, and Hugh at Dartford.

The funeral will take place on Tuesday, July 31, 1928, from the family residence, Dartford, at 8:30 a.m. to St. Jerome's Church, Warkworth and the Roman Catholic Cemetery, Hastings.

MARGARET ANN RUSSELL.

A life-time of more than 87 years terminated quite suddenly in Millbrook on Sunday, July 29, when Margaret Ann Russell, widow of the late W. G. Russell, passed away at the family residence, leaving to mourn three sons: Dr. A. L. Russell of Bailleboro and Herbert and William, of Millbrook.

The late Mrs. Russell was born in Glengarry, and had lived in Ontario all of her life. She was a member of Millbrook Anglican Church, of which the ministers, the Rev. Canon Allen and Rev. P. C. Howard, will conduct the funeral services on Tuesday, July 31, at the family residence, Millbrook, at 2 p.m., and later at the graveside in Gardiner's Cemetery, Cavan.

WOMAN DIES; TWO MEN HELD

Illegal Operation Causes Death of Young Married Woman.

HUSBAND ARRESTED.

TORONTO, July 30 (Canadian Press).—Mrs. Agnes Atwood, aged 19, died in hospital here to-day from the effects of an illegal operation. The woman was taken seriously ill this morning and was rushed to hospital, but died a few hours after her admittance.

Knowing she would not recover, the young woman expressed her desire to make an ante mortem statement, in which she declared her husband, Robert, and a man named Harry Lavery, were responsible for her condition. Both men were arrested on a charge of performing an illegal operation, but with the death of the woman, it will probably be amended to a more serious charge.

STOVE EXPLODES; TWO WOMEN HURT

Accident Occurs While Campers Near Sandy Lake Cook Meal.

HALL'S BRIDGE, July 30. — Two women, Mrs. Joseph Finnie, and Mrs. Stewart Finnie, both of Peterborough, were taken to hospital in Peterborough on Sunday afternoon, suffering from severe burns sustained when a gasoline stove over which they were doing some cooking, exploded.

It appears that the unfortunate women had accompanied their husbands on a holiday outing in the vicinity of Sandy Lake during the latter part of the week. After the accident, they were attended dby Dr. E. E. Willis, of Buckhorn, who rendered first aid treatment and placed them in charge of Dr. H. M. Yelland of Peterborough.

company too good for her and was eliminated, the winner of her heat being Fraulein Schmidt, of Germany, whose time was 12 4-5 seconds.

Girls Win Easily.

Four Canadian girls raced in four different preliminaries of the women's 100 metres in the Olympic games to-day and three of them won, while the fourth was second.

Fanny Rosenfeld and Ethel Smith of Toronto showed the best performance, both running their heats in 12 3-5 seconds. Both were under wraps.

Myrtle Cook, Toronto, won her heat in 12 4-5 seconds, but her opposition was not of the same calibre as that faced by Misses Rosenfeld and Smith.

Jane Bell, Toronto, deserved great credit for running a good second to Miss Hitomi of Japan, who was favorite for 100 metres title.

IN POLICE COURT

Thomas Buck pleaded guilty in County Police Court to operating a car without license plates and was fined $5.00 and $4.75 costs. Provincial Constable Thompson made the arrest.

James DiNoble pleaded not guilty to operating a car while intoxicated. His case was heard but as he declared another man was driving the car at the time, His Worship gave him until to-morrow to produce the man or some witness that would confirm his statement. DiNoble was arrested last night on Park Street in an intoxicated condition by Constable Wheeler. When the constable arrived his car was stalled in the centre of the street and the prisoner was the only man near it.

A local man pleaded guilty to being intoxicated in a public place and was fined $15.00 and costs.

Elmer Liddel pleaded not guilty to driving a car while intoxicated. It being his second offence and was remanded until Friday.

A local man pleaded guilty to drinking in other than a residence and was fined $35 and $6.50 costs.

NASHUA STAFF ENJOYS PICNIC

Annual Outing Held On Saturday, By Motor To South Beach.

FULL DAY'S SPORT.

The Canadian Nashua Paper Company held its annual picnic this year on Saturday to South Beach. Over one hundred persons attended, representing office and plant staffs. The party traveller by bus and motor to the beach, leaving the factory around nine thirty in the morning.

The time was spent in various sports which were keenly contested and afforded much amusement to the spectators, especially the balloon blowing race for the ladies. Some preferred to go in swamming, others danced in the pavilion, while the rest displayed their athletic prowess and baseball experience.

Basket lunches were taken along, and dinner and supper were partaken of in true picnic style. The party broke up shortly after six thirty, the weather spoiling a longer evening. Every one had a good time in spite of the threatening day and are already looking forward to the next Nashua picnic next year.

SPACE FILLING AT ARMOURIES

Produced-in-Canada Fair Booth Nearly All Contracted For.

BETTER THAN EVER.

Dr. J. J. Craig, who is managing the Produced in Canada Exhibition for Kiwanis Club, reports that the exhibitors' space in the Armouries is rapidly being taken up.

Although the Exhibition will not be held until October, space contract forms were sent out in May in order that the best exhibits might be obtained. "The variety and attractiveness of this year's exhibits will put the Exhibition far ahead of any we have yet had," Dr. Craig told the Examiner to-day. "We are endeavoring to make every booth individual and interesting. With this accomplished and with a far bigger entertainment program than before, we believe that we have something really worth while to offer the people of this district."

HORSE SHOE PITCH OPENING TO-NIGHT

Official Ceremony at King Edward Park Course at Seven.

The Barnyard Golf Course in King Edward Park is now complete. This new athletic feature wass ponsored by the Kiwanis Club and Art. Moffatt and his committee worked like Trojans to have everything ready on time. No time or expense has been spared to make this a real worthwhile game instead of a makeshift affair. Real pits with boxes have been built at the regulation distance, and proper shoes have been secured. Anyone who has never tried this sport and does not believe that there is real exercise resulting from a few games of horseshoes, should drop down to-nihgt at seven o'clock when the grounds are officially opened, and everyone who is interested is expected to be on hand.

Art. Moffatt and his committee will be there to welcome all comers, and many Kiwanians are planning to turn out. They have played on some of the finished courts before, and it is a common thing at their luncheons to hear one brother kiwanian challenging another to this new but old game.

Junk Men in New York Organize under Trade 'Czar' Developed into Big Business Men as Result of War

New York, July 30.—The scrap iron industry has decided to have a "czar," so it recently organized as the Eastern Scrap Iron Association and elected Benjamin Schwartz, Baltimore lawyer, as its director general.

"The 'junk' man developedinto a big business man as a result of the war," says the announcement of the newly appointed "dictator" of junk, which was made public here yesterday by J. Zimmerman, managing editor of The Waste Trade Journal. "The 'junk shop' has given way to yards of great acreage, where tons of thousands of tons of scrap are broken up into proper sizes by special machinery and classified according to specifications of the mills.

"With the tremendous growth of the scrap business, however, has come a multiplication of problems of modern competition. The evils existing in the scrap iron trade, the lack of co-operation, the losses and waste of cut-throat competition, the failure to secure a fair profit, have been discussed by leaders of the industry during the last year, with the result that the Scrap Iron and Steel Association has been organized."

SEVERAL HURT IN COLLISIONS

Car Hits Tree

A car driven by Bert Howden ran into a tree near the corner of Aylmer and Romaine streets yesterday morning, throwing the occupants out and severely shaking up a little boy. Howden had been parked in front of his home on Romaine street, and when driving away he thought he heard someone calling to him. He turned around and when he looked in front again a car was coming down Aylmer street. In the attempt to miss the car he struck the tree.

REGATTA CALLED OFF.

Local Boys Unable To Show Skill In Montreal Outboard Motor Race.

The Beauharnois Regatta that was to have been held in Montreal on July 28 has been postponed indefinitely because of the unfavorable weather. The postponement of this regatta came as a blow of disappointment to the sea-fies fans of Peterborough, who were ready to watch with interest the efforts of Don. Woods and Bill Coursey who were going from here to race in the event with the famous giant twin motor that is rapidly spreading in fame. These boys were going as representatives of the Johnson Motor Company, and incidentally representing Peterborough in the big event.

The bishop, who has published a book containing reminiscences of his Canadian tour, relates an anecdote of a game he had with Sir Robert. One of Sir Robert's intimate friends whispredе. "Don't be surprised if he says three times before he plays, "Keep your —— head down." "I said to Borden, "I know what you are saying, but I cannot take notice, as you don't say it out loud," the bishop writes.

TRAIN CREWS TO TELL TALE

Coroner Has At Present No Intention of Calling Other Witnesses.

ON TROOP TRAIN WRECK.

OTTAWA, July 30. — (Canadian Press).—The inquest into the death of Corporal Cullinan and Trooper Gordon of the Royal Canadian Dragoons, who were killed in a train wreck, takes place at Sand Point. The principal witnesses will be the crews of the two trains involved in the head on collision. In fact at present, the coroner has no intention of calling others, though the dispatcher at Arnprior may be called to give evidence about the clearance of the troop train from Arnprior.

It has been definitely established that the troop train was ahead of time. The engineer is said to have asserted that the dispatcher at Arnprior gave him a high-ball to go ahead. The clearance from Arnprior is said to have been on schedule and in the ordinary course of events the freight coming eastward from Renfrew would have reached Sand Point and taking the siding there to let the troop train pass.

The troop train, however, made too fast time to Sand Point and arrived there twelve minutes ahead of schedule. Sand Point is just a flag station and it being six o'clock in the morning the station agent was in bed and did not see the troop train pass. A few seconds later the freight train came around the curve east of Sand Point to meet the troop train head-on.

Both Used Brakes

The engineer of the troop train jammed on his emergency brakes and brought his train to a stop. The freight was long and heavy and coming down a slight grade so that although the brakes were applied the wheels slid along and the crash followed. Two cars carrying cavalry chargers were splintered and before their grooms could be rescued two had been kicked to death and three injured.

The inquest will seek to place the responsibility for the deaths which ensued. The engineer and conductor of the troop train will be the chief witness, for they must explain why they ran on past Arnprior and then past Sand Point. That the train crew will be held comparatively blameless is indicated by the fact that while the engineer and conductor of the troop train have been off duty since the accident, the freight train crew took out a train from the divisional point at Smith's Falls the next morning and have been on duty since then.

Just what instructions were in the train orders will also be revealed at the inquest. It is alleged that the troop train orders had been annulled and new ones substituted several times and that this confused the crew. The contents of the final order, however, will be the real evidence, for on these the train crew had to act under railway regulations. The inquest takes place in a hall at Sandpoint within a few hundred yards of where the wreck actually occurred.

The first match was made by John Walker, a druggist at Stockton-on-Tees, England, in 1827; safety matches were invented by Lundstrom of Sweden in 1855.

Action on Troop Train Wreck Deferred

Minister Absent Now

Department of National Defence May Make Claim Against Railway.

BLAME IN DOUBT.

Old Cars Held Responsible For Casualties Were Owned By C.N.R.

OTTAWA, Ont., July 31 (Special to The Examiner). — The Department of National Defence will take no action for the present with reference to the verdict of the coroner's jury in the Sand Point train wreck, the Minister and Deputy Minister both being absent from the Capital.

There is some conjecture among military and railway authorities in the Capital as to what will be done in the matter of compensation and damages. All the witnesses at the inquest yesterday were C.P.R. employees, and it was claimed repeatedly that there would have been no casualties but for the old box cars containing the horses, which were old cars belonging to the Canadian National.

The verdict of the jury is to the same effect, and the legal question arises as to whether the Canadian Pacific can put the responsibility and damage claim on the Canadian National.

The C.P.R. men claimed the troop train was stopped and the freight train was only going four miles an hour when the impact came. Yet the first horse car was knocked clear off the track and on to the highway alongside the second box car being telescoped. Some of the independent railway men claim that such damage could not have resulted with a four mile an hour crash.

The Canadian National was not represented by counsel, but when the damage claims are made a legal battle may ensue. It is taken for granted here that the Department of National Defence will issue damage claims in as much as there will be pensions to be paid on account of the two men who were killed. The C.P.R. paid the hospital bills of the troopers taken to the hospital.

IDA MAN WINS CROP CONTEST

Robert Armstrong's Fall Wheat Wins Standing Crop Award.

FOR PETERBOROUGH FAIR

Robert Armstrong of Ida won first place in the Fall Wheat Competition conducted by the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition. John E. Manley of Otonabee was second and A. Armstrong of Smith third. Others who qualified to compete in the competitions put on by Canadian National Exhibition and Central Canada Exhibition in Ottawa are R. C. Hanbridge, Ida; T. Brown, Douro; C. E. Moore, Smith, and R. Garbutt, Smith. Three other farmers, J. Gordon Mann of Smith, D. McIntyre of Otonabee, and R. E. Drummond of Otonabee were specially mentioned by Judge L. H. Winslow as receiving 85 points or over.

The competition was limited to paid up members of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition and fields entered are supposed to be not more than 15 miles from its headquarters. The Peterborough Board of Directors is conducting two competitions, one in fall wheat and the other in oats.

Everything from handling luggage to cleaning and cooking will be done by electricity on a new ship being built in Belfast.

REDSKIN BRIDE CAN'T RECALL HUSBAND'S LONG NAME

SACRAMENTO, July 31.—Mary, an Indian bride who had lost her husband and couldn't remember his name, provided a problem for the Sacramento Travellers' Aid Society.

Miss Ruth M. Elmer, secretary of the society, reports aiding the Indian girl on her way to Reno, Nevada, after she had been put of a train here for lack of fare. She candidly admitted that her missing husband's name was too long to recall.

"It's such a long, funny name," explained the redskin bride, "that I never could remember it."

SECOND DANCE OF 120 HOURS IS UNDER WAY

Barred From Buffalo, Promoters Hold Marathon Event at Crystal Beach.

TWO HOUR SESSION.

Fifteen Minute Rests Allowed—Well Known Dancers Take Part.

CRYSTAL BEACH, Ont., July 31 (Special to The Examiner).—They are off! Fifteen couples in the Canadian-American marathon dance championship, continuous day and night, 120 hours, the second epidemic of the "dance of the morons" to strike Ontario within the last month, and incidentally the most gruelling contest ever organized in America; a contest which was banned from the United States by Mayor Frank Schwabb of Buffalo and which Ontario allowed within her borders. The dance is organized and directed by "Cash and Carry" Pyle of "Red" Grange fame, and Milton D. Crandall, "Rajah of Rackateers," manager for Theda Bara, Clara Kimball Young, Lew Cody, Louise Fazenda and a host of other notables. Crandall is the man who gained notoriety when a similar competiton was held in Madison Square Gardens last year and the affair was brought to an untimely end by the health authorities and police of New York City.

Last night at 8.59 o'clock daylight saving time, saxophones sobbed, trombones moaned, and the contestants, eager eyed and drawn by the magnet of the $2,000 offered to the successful competitors, gaily entered the contest. They go a two hours' dance period with a rest of fifteen minutes until Saturday night. Ontario permitted this dance marathon when the leading medical authorities in the United States refused to countenance a continuous effort of more than one hour, the longest period hitherto required, which even then resulted in broken bodies, neurosis, spinal meningitis and heart failure. Here were no unemployed or needy seeking the boon of the prize. Indeed the pulchritude of Keith's circuit predominated. Miss Pittsburgh, the fashion Queen of America; Miss Niagara Falls; Bill Downing, the winner of C. C. Pyle's "bunion derby," and Miss Betty Richards, daughter of Bobby Leach, the first conqueror of Niagara Falls, were but a few of the contestants, led by Johnnie Marino and "Bobby Bruss" of Broadway fame.

Fifteen minutes after the first note sounded, frenzy broke loose when it was announced that awards would be made on the basis of points for "sprints" for which special prizes of $25 would be donated, one point to be marked up to the credit of the winner. At this point in the proceedings the spectators joined in the excitement.

"I offer $10 to the girl who has the nicest smile for three minutes," shouted one matron. No sooner announced than faces were set in a grimace, little short of ghastly, in the endeavor to finish the lap round the hall—thirteen laps to the mile—and reach the judges with a "smile." Frank Gardner and Betty Richards of Buffalo were the "successful" protagonists.

Then the long stretch of hours until the rest period. Bernice and

Monster Terrifies Sault Fishermen

Burglar Blows Safe; Encounters Tear Gas

RIPON, Wis., July 31. — Gas masks must be standard equipment of modern burglars if they hope to cope with scientific methods, as safeblowers learned one night recently at the Ripon post office, where they were routed by tear gas.

When the post office janitor opened up next morning and tried to enter the inner office where the safe is kept, he barely opened the door and got a whiff which brought tears to his eyes. He slammed the door, went outside and opened a window to ventilate the room.

Chief of Police F. W. Allen obtained a gas mask from the Fire Department and went into the room to examine the safe. The safe blowers had drilled through the door too high to strike the gas chamber which was built into it but the blast which blew off the door also shattered the gas container.

The burglars evidently had gathered up what tools they could in their blinded condition and fled. They left a chisel on the floor and the heavy canvas used to deaden the explosion was still hanging over the front.

The tear gas saved the safe blowers a sad disappointment, for had they had time to delve into the safe they would have found nothing of value. Stamps and money are taken nightly to the safety deposit vault of a Ripon bank.

INQUEST TO-NIGHT

The inquest into the death of W. H. Donnelly who was killed on Saturday, July 14th on George street when a large piece of metal cornice dropped on his head will be held to-night in the Council Chamber. Inquests are usually held in the police court but as the painters and decorators are busy in that building Dr. Young has decided to hold it in the city council chambers.

THOSE WHO SAW STRANGE FISH SAY IT WAS LIKE SMALL WHALE

Boats Are Moved As Black Creature Rushes Under Floating Dock.

VETERAN ASTONISHED.

James Perry, 71, Resident of Locality For Years, Startled When Thing Passes.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., July 31 (Special to the Examiner). The quiet little camping settlement in the Pine Island area of the Canadian Neebish has been stirred by the appearance of a strange fish-like monster which is believed by those who saw it to be a baby fresh water whale.

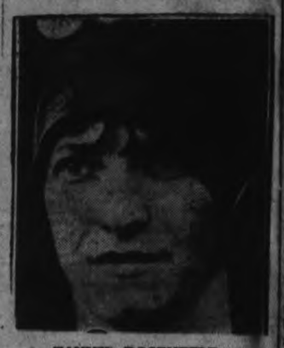
An overturned punt, a twisted dock, uprooted weeds, and a shifted sail boat remain as evidence of its passage. Witnesses on land stood motionless, watching it zig-zag in the small marshy bay with a swiftness that was baffling to the eyes.

To say that the cottagers were frightened would be putting it mildly. Two little boys in a boat near the shore splashed to the beach hand in hand and ran screaming, panic-stricken, to the arms of their mother.

Even the hardened veteran of the marshes and lakes got the biggest fright of his life. He is James Perry, aged 71 years. "This thing has got me," he said.

"I have been around swamps all my life and never saw anything like it." Perry was the only one who got a fairly good look at the thing. He watched it for five minutes. "It came in on the left side of the 100-foot board dock and then passed under it in four feet of water, the black blubbery body twisting water and travelling like a submarine," said Perry. "It threw a stream of water fifty feet high, I guess, and hissed continuously, like a safety valve blowing off steam. It could be heard easily a hundred feet away.

SECOND IN DASH FINAL.



FANNY ROSENFELD

Toronto runner who finished second to Elisabeth Robinson of the United States in the final heat of the women's hundred metre race at the Olympic games at Amsterdam to-day. Canadian officials claim that she actually beat Miss Robinson to the finishing line.

COLORED MOVIES MADE BY EASTMANS

ROCHESTER, N.Y., July 30.—(Canadian Press).—Amateur motion pictures reproducing scenes in full natural colors were shown here for the first time to-day by George Eastman, to a group of scientists and other public men.

The new process, utilizing a three-color "light filter" and a new film with minute cylindrical lenses, is the fruit of years of experimentation.

Disappearing Island Visited By Scientists

BERKELEY, Cal. — Scientists representing several institutions of higher learning have succeeded in reaching Falcon Island in the South Pacific near the Tonga Archipelago.

Several times in the past the island has been known to disappear, only to be raised again above the level of the sea after an interval, and the present expedition was the first to visit it since it made its appearance the last occasion.

Professor Edward Hoffmeister, University of Rochester, Professor Harry S. Ladd, University of Virginia, both geologists, and Hon. William Tugi, premier and prince consort of the Kingdom of Tonga, led the expedition.

Falcon Island was found to be two miles long and 360 feet high. In 1926, the island was only a reef over which the sea broke with great violence, according to Dr. Setchell, who visited nearby islands then to study plant life.

The island was first sighted in 1865 by a British warship, Dr. Setchell said. After disappearing about 1871, it again was seen in 1885. It disappeared again about 1890, only to be again located recently.

The Prince of Tonga formally planted the flag of his kingdom on the island.

THE WEATHER

Although this is the last day of July—supposed to be Ontario's warmest month—there was white frost to be seen this morning. The temperature, according to my standard thermometer, was down to 43 degrees. While no damage was likely done, it shows what our climate is capable of doing. Parties whose work requires them to rise at any unreasonable hour, have told me there was evidence of frost on Saturday and Sunday morning as well.—W.P.

RAT WEARS A CORSET OF BONE; CRAWLED INTO IT WHEN YOUNG

HASTINGS, Neb., July 31—During a rat catching campaign a rat trapper caught a rat which appeared to be wearing a corset of bone.

Examination showed the animal had, while small, crawled into a marrow bone and had been unable to shake it off or crawl entirely through. The hole was only an inch in diameter and as the rat grew the bone held its waist line down, giving it the appearance of an ant or wasp when matured.

PREMIER MUST CURTAIL HIS WESTERN TOUR

Necessary To Be Present in Paris For Signing of Multilateral Peace Treaty.

ON AUGUST 27TH.

Pact Will Be Signed By Foreign Ministers of European Governments.

OTTAWA, Ont., July 31 (Canadian Press).—Further curtailment of the Western tour of the Prime Minister will be necessary if he is to be present in Paris on August 27 for the signing of the multilateral peace treaty. The Premier declared last evening that the latest date on which he could sail from Canada would be August 10. This would mean that, since another Cabinet council has to be held prior to his departure, he would require to be back in Ottawa from the West by August 17. The final arrangements for the trip to his constituency at Prince Albert, Sask., have not been made, a great deal depending upon how his Western visit can be accommodated to the necessities of attending the international meeting.

Signed by Ministers

The multilateral treaty will be signed by the Foreign ministers of the European governments. Aristide Briand will in all probability endorse the proposal for France; Gustav Stresseman for Germany, and Sir Austen Chamberlain for Great Britain. The British Foreign Secretary of the various high commissioners residing in London will sign for those self-governing Dominions who are unable to be represented by Ministers of their own cabinets.

With regard to the report that when at Geneva the Prime Minister would throw out an invitation for the next session of the League Council to sit in Ottawa, the Prime Minister said that such a report was "unauthorized." No such thing had at all been contemplated by the Canadian Government.

As matters stand, the Premier will probably sail from Canada on August 18, reaching Paris on August 25 or the morning of August 27, the day on which the signatures are to be appended to the treaty.

HAIL AND WIND DAMAGE CROPS

Lay Grain Low For Miles Around Kincaid, Sask., Yesterday.

WORST IN HISTORY.

KINCAID, Sask., July 31 (Canadian Press).—The worst hail and windstorm experienced in the history of the district swept over Kincaid last evening, leaving behind a trail of desolation. Promising crops for miles around were laid low as though a mowing machine had gone over them.

Canadian Sprinter Fourth

Douglas Lowe Breaks Record Set in 1912—Swedish Runner Next.

AMERICAN FIFTH.

Canadian Girls Finish Second and Third in 100 Metre Dash.

AMSTERDAM, July 31 (Canadian Press).—Douglas Lowe, of Great Britain, to-day won the 800 metres final in the Olympic games, retaining his championship won in 1924. Lowe won by ten yards from Bylehn of Sweden in the record-breaking time of one minute 51.4-5 seconds. The former record was 1-10 second more. Herman Engelhard, Germany, was third. Phil Edwards of Canada fourth, Lloyd Hahn of the United States fifth, and Seraphin Martin of France sixth.

There were nine starters. Hahn darted to the front at the first turn, closely pursued by Lowe and Edwards. They kept in that order with Earl Fuller and Ray Watson bringing up the rear, until the home stretch, when Lowe opened up and made the others look as if they were standing still.

The record broken by Lowe had stood since the Olympic games at Stockholm in 1912, when it was set at 1.51 3-10 by Ted Meredith.

Toronto Girls Run Well.

Elisabeth Robinson, United States, won the 100 metre final for women at the Olympic games to-day. Her time was 12 1-5 seconds. Fanny Rosenfeld, Toronto, and Ethel Smith, Toronto, both ran splendidly to finish second and third respectively. Myrtle Cook, Toronto, and Fraulein Schmidt, Germany, were disqualified for false starting. E. Steinberg, Germany, finished fourth and last.

The women's discus throwing final was won by Hilena Konopacka, Poland.

Ed. Hamm, United States, won the broad jump, setting a new Olympic record.

Both Miss Robinson's 12 1-5 for the 100 metres and Miss Konopacka's remarkable discus throw of 39.62 metres were announced as new world's records.

Protest Entered

Manager M. M. Robinson of the Canadian Olympic team protested the victory of Elisabeth Robinson of the United States, in the 100 metre final for women to-day, claiming that reliable witnesses at the finish line

'MAKE THE WOMAN PAY' IS CRY IN TRIANGLE SHOOTING CASE

Adage Reversed When Husband Slays Youth Found With Wife.

TRAP WAS SET

Police Chief and Attorney Wish for Law That Would Touch Woman.

DENVER, July 31.—The latest sensational shooting in Denver involving the age-old triangle, with a beautiful woman at the apex and a 19-year-old grocery boy dead at the hands of the woman's husband, has resulted in an equally sensational demand from public officials here that new laws be enacted to force the woman to "pay."

Mrs. Zella Stull Dickson, formerly of Ames, Iowa, unusually attractive, started an "innocent flirtation," according to her own story, with Herbert Hadley Powell, 19, from Carruthersville, Mo., who delivered groceries at her bungalow in a fashionable Denver residential district. Her husband, Alpheus E. Dickson, 31, official in a million dollar movie corporation, lavished luxury upon her, but was so busy making money he was away from home much of the time.

Husband Sets Trap.

The flirtation with Powell continued over a period of several months, until, finally, Powell's semi-invalid sister, learning of the affair, "tipped" Dickson off. The latter laid a trap, having his wife drive him to the depot in her expensive sedan on the pretext he was leaving town on business.

Instead, he returned to his home and found Powell with his wife.

In a scuffle that ensued Powell was shot dead.

Dickson is charged with first degree murder.

The wife, after being held in jail for two days as a witness, was released—free—resulting in this statement from Police Chief Reed:

"A married woman who forgets her marriage vows and deliberately lures a young man into an illicit relation with herself which may or does result in a slaying should be held equally responsible with the one who pulls the trigger."

Foster Cline, Denver district attorney, who will prosecute Dickson, said:

"There should be a law to prevent vampires from preying upon young men. If there were any kind of statute that would apply to Mrs. Dickson, I would certainly file against her. She is as guilty as the man."

DOCTOR ASKS DEATH BY GAS FOR IMBECILE GIRL IN HOME

Says Her Confinement for Seventeen Years Has Been Barbarous.

"MERCY MURDER"

Case Cited of Hopelessly Deformed Infant "Allowed to Die."

ASHEVILLE, N.C., July 31.—An idiot girl imprisoned for seventeen years in the Buncombe County Home, should be killed, Dr. A. G. Berry, penologist, recommended to authorities after inspecting the home.

Dr. Berry says he is an instructor in Summer courses at the North Carolina State Normal School, and that he is a sociologist at the University of Wisconsin.

Death by lethal gas would be a mercy and continued imprisonment is barbarism, the penologist said.

Stony silence on the part of the authorities has met Dr. Berry's report and no physician has volunteered to carry out his recommended "mercy murder."

The girl, a hopeless imbecile, is the daughter of well-known residents of the county. She has been kept in a cell, alone, since early girlhood, authorities said, because she is incapable of associating with other human beings and her condition necessitates individual handling of her case.

Physician's Report

In his report, Dr. Berry said:

"At the county home there is an idiot girl who has been confined in a cell for most of the seventeen years she has been there.

"May I suggest to the officials of Buncombe County that as a remedy for this bit of barbarism that one would not expect to find outside the Dark Ages that the idiot girl be turned over to a physician instructed to give her a hypodermic of lethal gas and release her from the misery the county has subjected her to for the past seventeen years."

Dr. Berry's recommendation has recalled several instances in which physicians have braved the storms of reformers' objections by aiding or permitting deaths as acts of mercy.

Baby Bollinger Case

The first case to startle the public into animated interest was that of "Baby Bollinger," born in Chicago in 1915. The son of Mrs. Anna Bollinger, the baby boy was born with a body that was characterized as one of nature's blunders.

Hopelessly deformed, the child was

Belgian Girls Advertise For Young Men to Marry

BRUSSELS, July 31.—Since the days are gone when kings married shepherdesses or when Prince Charming fetched the blushing Cinderella from her work, the young girls of marriageable age at Ecaussinnes, near Brussels, decided to emancipate themselves from the silly prejudice which decrees that a maiden can't ask a man to marry her, and announced to the amazed world that the girls of Ecaussinnes, who were looking for husbands, invited young and even older men to come from anywhere and pick their bride at Ecaussinnes.

"Welcome, you bachelors," posters hailed the 2,000 or more young men of all descriptions who turned up at Ecaussinnes. "Marriage is happiness." "A brave heart fears nothing." "The daring man will get the prize," "Brief, but good," "Gay gay, let's marry," and other such posters encouraged even the most timid guests.

A summary luncheon party got the would-be brides and their candidate bridegrooms acquainted with each other. Everybody drank from a blue enamel cup with the traditional white inscription "To be happy, you've got to marry." Then the president of the Young Girls' Matrimonial association of Ecaussinnes made a speech on the "joys of married life." Those of the men who were not yet convinced were asked to dance the "kiss pola" the "sentimental fox trot," or the "love at first sight waltz" with pretty, bob haired flappers.

When it grew dark, illuminated letters on the night sky ordered once more: "To be happy, you've got to marry," while a discreet, but continuous noise of engagement kisses came from underneath the big trees in the park.

ITALY GREETS ITALIA'S CREW

Premier Mussolini Sends Prefect of Brenner Pass to Welcome Men

PEOPLE ENTHUSIASTIC

ROME, July 31 (Canadian Press). —General Umberto Nobile and the surviving members of the dirigible Italia's crew came back to Italy today to be greeted enthusiastically by their countrymen seeking to show unbounded confidence in them, despite criticism in many parts of Europe.

Premier Mussolini symbolized the feelings of the Italian people in the matter by being first to extend greetings to the returning men at the threshold of the country, purposely sending the Prefect of Bolano to the Brenner Pass to welcome them.

AGREE TO SIGN PACT IN PARIS

Chamberlain and Kellogg Accept Invitation From Government of France.

DOMINIONS INVITED.

PARIS, July 31 (Canadian Press). —United States Secretary of State Kellogg has sent word here that he will come to Paris to sign the multilateral treaty renouncing war, sailing from New York on the liner Ile De France on August 18.

LONDON, July 31 (Canadian Press) —Sir Austen Chamberlain, Foreign Secretary, has accepted the invitation from the French Government for the signing of the Kellogg outlawry of war pact in Paris on August 27. An invitation has been forwarded to the Dominion Governments.

MORE PERMITS ISSUED IN 1928

Only One Per Cent. of Liquor Cards Cancelled So Far.

FEW ERRORS MADE

There is no decline in the number of liquor permits issued to date and in fact there have been more issued in the first six months of 1928 than in 1927. The latest figures are 344,778 resident permits and 35,172 tourists' permits which adds up to the grand total of 378,950 while little over one percent of the permits have been cancelled, the number being 4,093.

There are no rebates made in the system employed by the Ontario Liquor Control Board when a mistake is made by a member of the staff. The system calls for the O.K. of the clerk who checks the permit, and the order. In a mistake in price to the customer's benefit the cashier is charged up with half and the counterman with half of the mistake.

Commission officials say that mistakes are few and the men handling as also does the cashier.

Woman Gives Bandit $5 To Escape Being Kissed

LOS ANGELES, July 31.—It cost Mrs. Ruth Earl $5 to avoid being kissed by a highwayman.

Mrs. Earl was walking near her home at No. 4011 West Seventeenth street when a car drove alongside and a man got out.

"I need a dollar," he said. "Let me have it, will you?"

Mrs. Earl demurred, but complied with the request when a gun in the bandit's hand made it a command. Then she ran. But the bandit ordered her to halt, on pain of shooting.

"I want a kiss, too," he told her.

She objected. An argument followed, which ended with the highwayman's acceptance of the young woman's remaining cash, $5, in lieu of the kiss. Then the man got into the car and fled.

Never too Late to Learn He Says at 80 After Deal

CHICAGO, Ills., July 31.—Fred De Jong, 80, coined a maxim recently.

It is never too late "to learn."

Mr. De Jong, appeared before Judge Curran in court to complaint about his neighbor, Mrs. M. A. McCabe.

"She offered me $25,000 for some real estate," he said, "and I gave her a deed for it and she gave me the key to her safe deposit box with the authority to open it and take out the money All I found in the box was stage money."

Mrs. McCabe had a different version.

"I handed him the money in his own house," she said. I gave him a paper bag full."

Judge Curran, distracted by these opposing tales, held Mrs. McCabe in $25,000 bail and will let the grand jury struggle with the problem.

Armed Bandits Stage Daring Daylight Robbery

Shoot Way Across Line

Winnipeg Police Squads Take Up Hunt For Daring Hold-ups.

ROBBER WELL PLANNED.

Believed May Be in Whereabouts of Landon, North Dakota.

WINNIPEG, July 31 (Canadian Press). — Shooting their way past border patrol officers at Maidi, North Dakota, five men, believed to be the bandits who held up two bank messengers here yesterday morning, escaping with $25,000 in cash, entered the United States late yesterday afternoon and headed south through Langdon, N.D.

This information was contained in a message from Grand Forks, N.D., ceived in Winnipeg at 7 p.m.

Driving a large automobile, equipped with machine guns, the men drove through Langdon and were encountered by William Henneberry, senior patrol inspector of the U.S. border unit in North Dakota. The men immediately opened fire on the inspector's car, riddling it with bullets. Henneberry escaped injury and opened fire, but the men eluded him and continued southward toward Lakota, N.D., but no further trace of the gunmen has been found.

Throughout North Dakota officers are on the alert; roads are guarded, and highways leading into the towns are being patrolled.

WINNIPEG, Man., July 31 (Canadian Press).—Swooping down on two Bank of Commerce messengers, carrying a consignment of currency to the Provincial Saving Bank, five armed bandits staged one of the most daring daylight holdups in the annals of local police history yesterday and are still at large with their loot, estimated at $25,000.

The robbery, well timed and apparently planned with care, was staged as scores of citizens were proceeding to work yesterday morning, but the raiders worked with such speed that they had successfully carried out their coup and vanished before many realized what had happened.

When less than a block from the Provincial Bank, the two messengers, Robert H. Jones and Kenneth Nicholson, were taken unaware by the four of the bandits, who rushed at them from an automobile which drew up to the curb. Brandishing their guns, the hold-up men threatened to drill the messengers full of holes if they offered any resistance. One of the thugs tried to seize the satchel containing the money but discovered that it was strapped to the messenger's body. He produced a pair of pinchers and speedily severed the leather strap. Once in possession of the loot the bandits jumped back into the car and raced off at great speed down a side street.

Police Take Up Hunt.

Squads of motorcycle policemen and detectives in motor cars were quickly out on the chase. They learned that the hold-up men had been using a large touring car, bearing an Illinois license plate. It was believed, how-

RAIN DELAYS GRAIN HARVEST

Cavan Farmers Unable To Cut Wheat and Alsike.

DISTRICT NEWS.

CAVAN, July 31 (Examiner Correspondence).—The rain of last week interfered with the cutting of alsike and wheat. Both are ready for cutting and if the weather continues fine this week, the bulk of these two crops will be cut.

Berries are ripening quickly and are a good crop.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Howe, Janetville, visited the latter's brother, Mr. F. Staples, and Mrs. Staples on Sunday.

Miss L. Syer spent a few days of this week, the guest of her cousin, Miss Jean Syer, Millbrook.

Mrs. Kerr, Toronto, was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. R. Matchett, recently.

Messrs. T. Staples and G. Staples and Miss Norma Staples, Toronto, spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Staples.

Mrs. Cross and Mrs. Rorke, Port Hope, called on Cavan friends last week.

Miss Muriel Matchett has returned from visiting in Napanee.

Miss Audrey Scott, Toronto, has spent the past week visiting Miss Audrey Keene, at Mrs. Lloyd Sutton's home.

The Misses Irene and Muriel Howson returned to Toronto on Saturday after spending a two weeks' vacation visiting Cavan friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Sutton, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Lowes, Mount Pleasant, with Audrey Keene and Audrey Scott, motored to Havelock on Sunday and visited friends.

Mr. H. Bell returned to Toronto on Sunday after spending his vacation with his aunt, Mrs. David White, and Mr. White.

Mr. Gerald Staples has accepted a position in Toronto, as ledger keeper in the Canadian Packing Company.

The domestic science class, with Miss Hopkins as instructor, had their first session in Cavan Community Hall on Monday afternoon.

MISSING MAN FOUND NEAR BLAIRTON

RICHARD NEILL TELLS MEN HE WAS SEARCHING FOR COW

Picked Up On Blairton Road By Clifford Scott, Who Passes On Way To Deloro To Work — Still Has Pail of Berries.

AGED MAN'S CLOTHING DAMP WHEN FOUND; FAILS TO RECOGNIZE HOME ON ARRIVAL

MARMORA, July 31.—(Examiner Correspondence).—Declaring that he was in search of his cow, Richard Neill, 80, was found wandering along the Havelock Road near Blairton early this morning, nearly twenty-four hours after he left his home in Marmora to take his cow to pasture and to go berry picking. Clifford Scott, who was on his way to Deloro to work, found the old man and with great difficulty persuaded him to get into his car and come home.

The aged man's clothing was quite damp when he was found. He said it was "Late, late," when he lay down last night. He was still carrying his pail, partly full of berries. When the car halted at the gate of his home he did not seem to realize where he was, asking those riding to work with Mr. Scott where he was.

HOUSE BURNS AT GLENALDA

Charles Rusaw and Family Return to Find Fire Well Advanced.

NOTHING SAVED

(Examiner Correspondence)

APSLEY, July 31.—Charles Rusaw, of Glenalda, had the misfortune last Tuesday to lose his house and all the contents by fire. It is not know how the fire started. The family were away, and returned just in time to see the roof falling in, and not a single article was saved. This is the second time this year the same calamity has occurred in this family.

Steps are being taken to raise funds to rebuild their home, subscriptions being solicited by Dave Wease, Township Clerk, and the neighbors are responding splendidly. The family, consisting of father and mother and two girls, aged 7 and 9, are at present living in a tent. The Rev. C. A. G. Spence and W. H. Taylor have been asked to appeal for funds and clothing. Articles or money may be sent direct to Dave Wease, Glenalda, P.O., who lives near and will undertake to deliver the same to the family.

Received Prize.

Miss Helen Lean, fourteen year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wellington Lean, is to be congratulated for her literary achievement, in having been awarded first prize for the best essay in a contest conducted by the magazine of the Canadian Forestry Association, "Forest and Outdoors." She has been notified that her essay will appear in the September issue of the magazine.

Personals.

Mr. and Mrs. Freese arrived last week at their island on Loon Lake, and intend to stay for a couple of months.

Mrs. Carnegie of Pittsburgh, and party are also at her island for a few weeks.

Fraser Watson, of Peterborough, is spending a few days at Fraser Lodge, Loon Lake.

Mrs. Niven and sister, with their families, from Toronto, are spending a few weeks at their cottage on Loon Lake.

Mr. Rex Spence, Miss M. Adams, the Rev. R. T. C. and Mrs. Dwelly and daughter are at Fairy Glen Falls, Loon Lake for a week.

Mrs. Irwin and family from Saskatchewan, have arrived for a three months' visit with her sister, Mrs. Hubert James.

Mrs. A. Airriess, of Togo, Saskachewan, has returned home after a six weeks' visit with her father, Mrs. T. Tanner.

Mrs. Glen Nichols, of Chatham, with her children, is spending a vacation with her father, Mrs. T. Tanner.

Miss Betty Nichols, of Chatham, is the guest of Mr. T. Tanner.

The Misses Ethel and Katie Couch were in Keene attending the Coward-Crawford wedding, recently.

Although there are estimated to be more than half a million different insects, only sixty species are definitely known to be disease carriers.

PAPER HEARD AT MEETING OF INSTITUTE

"The Wonder of a Day" Subject of Address Given at July Meeting.

AT HAVELOCK.

Many Attend Children's Day Outing Held By Belmont W. I.

(Examiner Correspondence).

HAVELOCK, July 31.—"The Wonder of a Day" was the subject of a paper given by Mrs. A. Anderson at the July meeting of the Havelock Women's Institute held on Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Wesley Johnston, Trent River Road.

"On a June day," she said, "it ought to be easy to believe in great and splendid things. Life is all about us, life springing up, glorious, beautiful; and where life is, life in such fullness, is there anything that cannot be hoped for?" A June day is what the poet called "a lavish day," a day in which with life and heart we may indeed have time and chance enough "to find a world."

But some of us do not seem to find many world, no matter how fine and lavish the day or how wonderful are the opportunities which it opens up before us. It seems too bad that great days should come, days crowded with possibilities and chances of all sorts, days breathing the very breath of God Himself and we should make comparatively nothing out of them and fill them with no great thought, aspiration, or achievement. The question is how are we to make days count for the best and highest things and not miss the wonder and the greatness that they open up to us. Not an easy question to answer in detail but the answer lies with each individual and an excellent beginning is made when we realize that. There are high hopes, great dreams, noble ambitions and there are thoughts that soar—how much of these we put into the day will make its quality; if there be a generous amount it may be "God's' day" in very truth.

It is an old, old truth stated so often perhaps that we may have got weary of it, yet one so true and fruitful that we must learn it even at the cost of iteration and reiteration—that the day is always as we make it. It comes to us always and ever big with possibilities because it comes from the hand of the Divine, but what happens to it rests altogether with us.

Still mounts the dream on shining pinion,

Still broods the dull distrust.

Which shall have ultimate dominion, dream or dust?

It is the glory and the greatness and sometimes the tragedy of life, that we have the answering of that question and no one else in all the world can answer it for us. To-day the sun may break through a cloud that has darkened your life for months, and perhaps years, and some new joy may come, some added courage, some fresh visions of truth and reality, that shall make life different for all the days and years that are to come. It is God's' day and God's great sun that brought it into being, intended it for some great new purpose in our lives. If we could be Christian just for to-day, Christian in our hope and expectation and belief in what God can do for us, what a wonderful difference it would make! If the wonder of a God-given day could fill our souls, life would take on a meaning and greatness and a sense of opportunity that it has never known before.

A discussion took place with regard

DOCTOR LOCATES AT HALL'S BRIDGE

Dr. Edwin E. Willis, English Practitioner, Begins Practice in North.

(Examiner Correspondence)

HALL'S BRIDGE, July 31.—Dr. Edwin E. Willis has purchased the home of Harry Shearer. It is a great convenience to the settlers of the district in and around Buckhorn to have a medical practitioner make his home there. Dr. Willis is of English birth and received his education at London, Edinburgh, Cambridge and Brussels. He served in the navy and overseas with the R.A.M.C. during the war.

The public to which he ministers at Buckhorn is a large one and the area to be covered is extensive. Dr. Willis is ably assisted by his wife who is a highly qualified English nurse.

Receives Severe Injury.

Robert Fawcett, of Lakehurst, met with a serious accident at Jack Conn's garage when his sleeve caught in a cog-wheel of a grinding stone. The wrist was severely cut, and all the tendons of the hand were severed. Dr. Willis, of Buckhorn, administered first aid treatment, and Mr. Fawcett was taken to Peterborough where he was attended by Dr. Yelland. The patient has now returned to his home and is making favorable progress for recovery.

Personals.

Mrs. Dave Irwin is now completely convalescent after her recent operation.

Messrs. Leonard and Aubrey Wilson, of Young's Point, were visiting friends at the Kawartha on Sunday.

Mr. John J. Elliott, who has been suffering from a very severe attack of influenza, is now convalescing at the home of his sister, Mrs. Shearer, of Peterborough.

Mr. Clayton Montgomery, who has lately received the appointment as lockmaster at the Lovesick Locks has now taken up permanent residence there.

Miss Dorothy Wilson, of Toronto, was visiting her aunt, Mrs. George Wilson, of Hall's Bridge on Thursday.

The Rev. R. T. C. and Mrs. Dwelly and daughter, Marion, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin E. Willis for the week-end.

Mr. Archie Fulton, who lately met with a severe accident at Mr. Wallace Shearer's saw mill, has completely recovered the use of his hand and has now resumed work.

Mr. Murray Burr, who is employed at Taylor's Coal Yard, Peterborough, spent the week-end at his home at Hall's Bridge.

Troop Train Runs Ahead Of Schedule

SANDPOINT, Ont., July 31.—(By the Canadian Press).—It was indicated by evidence given at the inquest here yesterday afternoon into the deaths of Corporal Vincent J. Cullinan and trooper Thomas Gordon of the Royal Canadian Dragoons, that the head-on collision of trains at Sandpoint on July 25 which ended fatally to the soldiers, was due to the troop train having run ahead of schedule. A freight train and the one carrying tthe dragoons and members of the 22nd Regiment of Quebec to summer training quarters figured in the crash.

James Carmichael, train despatcher at Smiths Falls testified that the troop train was 12 minues ahead of is amended schedule when it passed through Arnprior. It it had been on schedule, he said, the freight train would have had time to back onto the siding at Sandpoint before the troop train arrived.

Trade Winds

Breasting the trade winds, hulls deep with rich cargoes of Peruvian crude oil, Imperial tankers ply the two western oceans that Canadian motorists may have a better oil made from a better crude.

Out of the golden sand of far Peru comes the one crude that seems to have been stored by nature in anticipation of the demand for a better oil. Imperial enterprise discovered the superiority of this pure, sulphur-free and carbon-free crude—Imperial enterprise developed the Peruvian oil fields—Imperial enterprise transports this better crude to Canada—and Imperial enterprise makes it into a better oil—Marvelube.

Back of Marvelube are resources and facilities built up by Imperial Oil, Limited, during 47 years of service to the petroleum consuming public.

Mr. and Mrs. Rodden of Toronto are spending their holidays at Chemong Park.

THE MIRROR OF THE MODE

By Mary Marshall.

This printed chiffon negligee may be worn at dinner hour over a crepe de chine slip.

Jot this down in the note book where you keep a list of suggestions for future additions to your wardrobe.

"Printed chiffon negligee with long sleeves—also slip to harmonize."

And make a mental note of the fact that a negligee of this sort may be bought quite reasonably, or made at home and that it is appropriate for the tea hour or informal dinner gown. The advantage to you is that it may be slipped on in a trice and ties into secure position by means of a pair of strings at the side.

The model shown in the sketch was bought ready made at one of the shops, where with a number of other models in different colored prints, it hung between rows of gorgeous negligees with trains and flowing drapery of the sort that really wouldn't be half so wearable, and highly appropriate for wear to tea or dinner at all. The rather short skirt and the close fitting sleeves of this model give it a trim appearance that keeps it from looking too "boudoiry"—if you know what I mean.

Another negligee of recent importation that would do for the same purpose was of two thicknesses of violet colored chiffon. It was made with sleeves fairly close to below the elbows and then finished with a circular flare of the material. There was a deep circular arrangement of the material forming a collar fr ng over the shoulders and a circular skirt portion. It fastened at the front with a garland of artificial flowers to hide the fastening.

For warm weather these chiffon negligees have a decided advantage but I have seen some charming models made of brocade satin that will be more tempting when autumn comes.

THE WHATNOT

A Place for Little Bits of Everything of Local Interest

SOME maids, they say, acquire a taste for making frequent changes. They would really rather not remain with one employer for more than two or three months.

• • • •

The fault does not lie wholly with the maid. I am convinced some housewives acquire a taste for discharging maids and getting new ones.

• • • •

They seem to be haunted, somehow, with the impression that somewhere may be found the ideal maid. And until that ideal maid is found, they will still hire and discharge. By frequent changes they rather hope some time to find her.

• • • •

In the meantime they rather like to have a change of persons. In the meantime, also, their households are in a state of more or less upheaval and considerably less work is done for the amount of wages spent than would be if they managed to hold their workers.

• • • •

I read the other day some interesting suggestions for the housewife who wanted to keep her help.

• • • •

Some of these are: A week's vacation with pay, for every six months of continuous service; legal holidays, extra pay for extra work; and a chance for promotion.

• • • •

Some of these inducements at least, would be considered more or less as a matter of course with the office worker, yet these are seldom found in the field of housework.

• • • •

At any rate, some privileges are necessary, and often those that cost the employer practically nothing are those that are most highly esteemed by the employer.

• • • • • •

Did it ever occur to you to use curtain stretchers or the old-fashioned quilting frame for drying blankets? I am assured that it is a labor-saving device.

• • • •

The next time you come down town to buy a broom, be sure to take home a good one, testing it in the following way. Press it down slightly on the floor. If the straws spread out and bend do not buy the broom, because the broom is not made of first quality bristles. If the straw remains firm, then you may be assured that it is a good broom.

• • • •

If your navy blue skirt needs renovating, try sponging it well with cold tea; leave for a day, then press it with a fairly hot iron.

• • • •

Keeping oneself supremely daintily and attractive at all times, is but a matter of giving attention to small detail. For instance, one's nails will always appear well cared for if each evening before retiring just a bit of cream is rubbed into the cuticle and then gently massaged with an orange stick.

• • • •

A very pretty frock was seen at Chemong over the week-end. It was of yellow crepe de chine with a pleated skirt and a tunic with a surplice fastening. White silk collar and cuffs added to the trim appearance of the model.

• • • •

To make your sun parlor or living porch look cool, you must not have too much furniture in it and the pieces should be light in weight. Heavy upholstering or deep soft rugs are not appropriate in such a place.

• • • •

Wicker chairs and settee, linoleum or tiling with light, fleecy draperies at the windows to subdue the light and all of the cool shades of green grass or stone gray, with only touches of warmer colors to liven it up—this is the ideal summer room. Desirable color schemes might be gray with red touches or blue with yellow touches.

• • • •

A tea-kettle may be made to shine by rubbing it with kerosene and polishing with a dry cloth. To prevent rust in the tea-kettle, put a clean oyster shell in it, replacing it when necessary.

• • • •

When cooking vegetables drain them as soon as they are tender. If this is not done they will become soggy if allowed to stand undrained after cooking. I know some women who save the water drained from certain vegetables for making soup stock, and this is very good, too.

• • • •

Most vegetables should be cooked in a small amount of water because part of the mineral salts dissolve in the water and are lost if the water is thrown away. Cook vegetables whole when possible.

• • • •

Few children nowadays are obliged to wear shoes that are too small for them, and consequently most girls grow up with well-shaped feet. But did it ever occur to you that just as much harm may be done by stockings that are too small as by shoes that constrict the feet?

• • • •

Stockings frequently shrink and mothers may overlook this fact and the fact that children's feet have grown too large for the stockings. And yet it has been demonstrated that corns and other foot discomforts arise from stockings worn too tight.

• • • •

The next time you are cooking carrots or peas, add a little sugar to the water and the flavor of them will be greatly improved. The sugar is said to bring out this hidden flavor.

to say before she can say it. And, unless a woman has had much experience, she never should speak extemporaneously. If she puts a little time and attention into it, she will find she really can talk.

"Women fail to realize that through their own careless habits of address much of their force what they have to say is lost.

"If women get worried when talking, their light, naturally high-pitch voices become stridant and discordant. But when they are sure of what they want to say they can have an easy delivery. In time they will realize that a speech should be prepared just the same as a dinner."

OLYMPIC GIRLS ALL MARRIED NOW

All Members of Famous Basketball Team have Deserted Game.

1928 GIRLS YOUNG.

Edmonton, Alta., July 31 (CP).—That carrying off Olympic honors does not take a girl's mind off home-making and matrimony is proven by the fact that every girl who formed the Edmonton Grads Basketball team at the Olympics, four years ago has now married and retired from the floor and the baskets, leaving the 1928 honors to the younger girls.

The players who form the team going to the Olympics this year are very young, from 17 to 22 years of age. Five of them are employed as stenographers in offices, and the sixth, Gladys Fry, is a third year student at the University of Alberta, studying household science. Mae Brown is the shortest girl on the team, and she is the utility "sub."

Plaits and Yokes are Modish This Season

Exceedingly smart is this chic frock for the Junior Miss. There are two plaits at each side of the front and back, a yoke closing at the left side and having a square neck, short kimono sleeves, or long sleeves gathered to narrow wristbands. NO. 1619 is in sizes 8, 10, 12 and 14 years. Size 10 requires 2¾ yards 39-inch, or 1¾ yards 54-inch material; ¾ yard 39-inch material for short sleeves; ⅛ yard additional 39-inch contrasting for View A.

Our new Fashion Book contains many styles showing how to dress boys and girls. Simplicity is the rule for well-dressed children. Clothes of character and individuality for the junior folks are hard to buy, but easy to make with our patterns. A small amount of money spent on good materials, cut on simple lines, will give children the privilege of wearing adorable things. Price of the book 10 cents the copy.

HERE'S HOW TO REDUCE

FINAL INSTRUCTIONS TO BE USED FROM "NOW ON."

This will be the last of the Daily Reducing Articles, which I have prepared for The Examiner readers.

If you have followed these instructions up to the present time, you have lost a large amount of weight. Some who were not very much over-weight will have lost only about fifteen pounds, but many have lost as much as thirty or thirty-five pounds. If you are still over-weight, you will continue to lose until your weight becomes normal.

Do not be upset by any report you have read in other newspapers. All of the people who have had trouble develop from reducing their weight have been those who have taken thyroid extract, or who, while very fat, have tried to take their weight off in a few days by gymnasium exercises.

Many thousands of people, in various parts of North America, have reduced their weight through instructions similar to those I have given you, and there has not been a single case where anything but good results have been received. I have thousands of letters in my files telling me of the wonderful results received by following instructions I have given to "Fat Folks" at different times, on the platform or through magazines or newspapers.

No matter what ailment you may have been suffering from, if you were also over-weight, you will find you have received a great deal of benefit from following these rules which I have laid down for you.

If you have not strictly followed this Reducing Course, I advise you to start TODAY on the general regime which I am outlining for you.

Space does not permit a repetition of all the exercises and instructions I have given you, but if you have not made a scrap-book of these articles, I am sure you will be able to secure back numbers of the paper for the past three weeks so you can get complete instructions.

All those who have been reducing up to the present time, or those who wish to start reducing now, should use the following daily regime:

Upon arising, take a complete system of calisthenic exercises, such as I have given you previously in these articles; follow these exercises with a cold shower bath.

Breakfast: One egg (Prepared in any manner except by frying.) Choice of Melba Toast, Shredded Wheat or Triscuit. Choice of one of the following stewed dried fruits: Prunes, raisins, apricots, figs, pears, or baked apples or stewed apple sauce.

Between breakfast and lunch, you should take a walk of a mile or two each day.

Lunch: Choice of one kind of the following acid fruits: Apples, apricots, pears, peaches, nectarines, grapes, oranges, grapefruit, lemons, plums, loquats, cherries, berries, pineapple, melons, or tomatoes. One glassful of water.

Or—you may use this lunch.

Choice of one or more of the following cooked non-starchy vegetables: Celery, spinach, small string beans, asparagus, summer squash, cucumber, egg plant, pumpkin, beet tops, turnip tops, small beets, small carrots, small parsnips, small turnips, lettuce, okra, chayotes, mallow, oyster plant (salsify), kale, or zucchini. Choice of one or more of the following raw salad vegetables: Celery, spinach, asparagus, cucumber, parsley, small beets, small carrots, small parsnips, small turnips, lettuce, oyster plant (salsify), mallow, nasturtium flowers and leaves, endive, ripe olives, and alligator pear.

During the afternoon or evening, you should take a long walk, walking from three to five miles each day. After returning from your walk, take a complete system of calisthenic exercises, such as I have given you in previous articles. Do these vigorously, and try to induce a copious perspiration, after which you are to take a cold shower bath.

Take an enema every day, in the knee-chest position, using two quarts of plain warm water. Instructions for this enema have been given in previous articles. After a time, you may discontinue the enema, and if you will wait for three or four days, the bowels will move of their own accord.

If possible, try to arrange to have a half hour's rest in the afternoon, before having your dinner.

Dinner: Choice of one of the following protein foods: Beef, mutton, turkey, chicken, rabbit or fresh fish, (except salmon). Eat lean meats only. Do not use more than one-quarter of a pound of meat, or an equal quantity of the other protein foods, at each meal. Do not fry these foods—broil, boil, or bake. Choice of one or more of the following cooked non-starchy vegetables: Celery, asparagus, spinach, small string beans, summer squash, cucumber, egg plant, beet tops, small beets, small carrots, small parsnips, small turnips, pumpkin, lettuce, okra, chayotes, oyster plant (salsify), mallow, zucchini, or kale. These vegetables must be prepared according to recipes already given, or cooked in plain water and seasoned with butter and a very little salt when ready to serve. Choice of one or more of the following raw salad vegetables: Celery, spinach, asparagus, cucumber, parsley, small beets, small carrots, small parsnips, small turnips, lettuce, oyster plant, mallow nasturtium leaves and flowers, endive, alligator pear, or ripe olives. These vegetables should be served plain, without salt or dressing. Choice of Jello, Fruit Whip, or Stewed Fruit, for dessert.

It is not necessary that you change your selection of foods from day to day, if you are especially fond of any one kind of food in the list. Eat very sparingly of whatever you do select, and remember that you do not require a very large quantity of food in any one day. If your weight is not going down fast enough, you have only to reduce the amount you are eating, even though it seems only enough to feed a canary. If your assimilation is good, you will find that only a very small amount is necessary, and as you are using only foods which are the most vital of all the foods known to man, you may rest assured that your body is receiving just those elements which are necessary to build good nerves, good bones, and good muscular tissue.

After the dieting you have gone through, a blood test will show a remarkable increase in red blood cells, and in all the essential parts conductive to good health.

REMEMBER!—THAT OF ALL THE ILLS THAT FLESH IS HEIR TO—THE GREATEST OF THESE—IS FLESH ITSELF.

The Art of Attraction

THE ART OF ATTRACTION No. 11.

To the average man, the woman who attracts him most is the one who caters most to him. This is a sensible trait, in a way, because, after all, life is short, and we gravitate naturally to those things which are pleasant. And a man likes to feel superior. The "bluestocking" sort of female who is always able to cap a story with one just a little bit more clever, who is likely, at a moment's notice, to knock the wind out of a masculine narrator by putting him kindly, but firmly, in the right, about something he is not quite sure of, is likely to be much acclaimed for her cleverness—and left severely alone as far as admirers are concerned. Again, this is natural. Man has always considered himself the superior of woman and so he is, in many ways. For one of the lesser sex to suddenly assert herself uncomfortably, then, and prove beyond doubt that she has more brains than he has—well, put yourself in his place. How would you like it? Wouldn't it make you uncomfortable to realize that you were in danger of tying yourself for life to a person who had more brains than you have. Moral: If you have brains and want to get married, conceal them.

A Tip or Two

To Get Rid of Mice—Mice do not like the smell of oil of peppermint and a little placed about their haunts on cotton wads soon forces them to look for other quarters. Cayenne pepper is also excellent.

To remove shine from black cloth rub it well with a piece of flannel dipped in spirits of turpentine; dry in the open air.

For shiny coat collar, sponge with a cloth moistened in ammonia or vinegar. Clean a soiled coat collar by rubbing briskly with an old tooth brush dipped in naptha or any good cleaning solution.

For shiny serge suit, lay it on a folded blanket and place on shiny parts a clean cloth wrung from clean water (must be quite wet); iron across lightly, with very hot iron, twice.

LYRICS OF LIFE

YEAR AFTER YEAR

"Year after year you go on grieving.
What of your faith, and your believing?"
The critic cries. "If he's in heaven,
Whether the years are one or seven,
Why weep?—for surely heaven is better
Than human hurts and labor's fetter.
If he is now in heaven's keeping,
Safe from the world, why go on weeping?"

We know this, brother, this is certain:
That we who wait this side the curtain
In loving find love's consolation.
Love has no death and no cessation.
If still we love, if still we cherish,
Shall love live on, the loved one perish?
Year after year the tears of sorrow
Water the roses of tomorrow.

WOMEN SHOULD BECOME ORATORS

No Reason why they Should not be as Good as Men.

MUST PREPARE.

Ottawa, Ont., July 31 (CP).—There is no reason why women should not be just as eloquent public speakers as men, according to Miss Helen Zachos, instructor in the English department of Cooper Union since 1899, and mentor of many famous orators, who says, "Women are failures as speakers in the majority of cases largely because they do not realize the vital importance of proper preparations for thinking while on their feet.

FINISH THE CANAL.

In his address to the Rotary Club yesterday Frank Stinson, secretary of the Trent Waterway Development Association, pointed out that the same argument so successfully used by the people of the Western Provinces in campaigning for the completion of the Hudson Bay Railway is justified in connection with the Trent Canal.

The Westerners stressed the fact that millions had been spent on the railway to Hudson Bay, and that unless the line was completed the earlier expenditure would be thrown away.

Some $19,000,000 has been expended on the Trent Waterway, and it still remains unfinished.

Until it is completed from Lake Ontario to Georgian Bay its full possibilities cannot be demonstrated, nor its full value to this country appreciated.

There is a strong case in favor of the finishing of this work, and the time has come for a vigorous and united effort from the whole people of this district to impress upon Parliament the desirability of an early completion of an enterprise that has been under way for nearly a century.

THE C.N.R. GOING STRONG.

The returns from Canada's National Railways continue to supply every reason for gratification.

The most recent figures show that the net earnings of the Government-owned railway system for the first six months of the present calendar year totalled $19,870,375, which was an increase of almost four million dollars over the total for the first six months of last year.

And 1927 was one of the Canadian National's most prosperous years, which makes the present increase all the more remarkable.

Indications are that the West will have a banner crop, and as a result of the heavy grain movement that will ensue, the Canadian National's earnings for the balance of the year should continue to increase, and the people's own system should wind up 1928 with a net operating surplus of something like $50,000,000.

Contrast that condition with the figures six or seven years ago and the improvement is positively startling.

To convert an annual operating deficit into a surplus of $50,000,000 seems almost like magic, and while it may not be possible for some time for the Canadian National Railways to take care of all its fixed charges that happy day may be closer than up to a few years ago we had any reason to hope.

THE MAPLE LEAF IN FRONT.

The Maple Leaf of Canada was before the world's eyes yesterday when Percy Williams, of Vancouver, the British Columbia school boy, beat a field of the greatest sprinters ever assembled to win the 100 metres event for the Dominion.

When it is realised that after the sixteen preliminary heats had been run there still remained thirty-two crack runners, some idea of the greatness of the performance of the young Canadian may be obtained.

In his triumph Williams outspeeded and outlasted the crack American sprint team—confidently counted upon across the border to win the event for Uncle Sam—as well as the cream of European short-distance men, and won for Canada the first major points in Olympic running events since Bobby Kerr's victory years ago.

His win will be an inspiration not only to the members of the present Canadian Olympic team, but to young Canadians in general.

The small contingent representing the Dominion at Amsterdam is made of the right stuff.

Williams' victory yesterday, the good showing of Edwards in the 800-metre event and the splendid start made by Canada's girl athletes has already given this country enough world-wide publicity to justify the sending of a team to the Olympiad.

And the Canadians are not yet through.

TUNNEY'S RETIREMENT.

The retirement of Gene Tunney from the prize ring will occasion no surprise.

The heavyweight champion has never been a great lover of the fight game, and the fact that he has not been a popular title-holder has undoubtedly helped to convince him that he should announce that he is through with the squared circle.

A very much misunderstood man is Mister Tunney, who has been belittled by many of his fellow-countrymen for qualities that should have raised him to a high place in popular esteem.

Probably this condition is brought about, as an American paper puts it, "because we are not yet up to the level to which he has raised the sport of boxing. Tunney is on the plane of science and sportsmanship, and those who sneer at him and yell acclaim of Jack Dempsey are still the advocates of the gorilla type of fighter."

It has been difficult for the public to realize that a man could be interested in literature and still be a champion fighter, that he could be attracted by such movements as the Y.M.C.A. and Boy Scout work and still be able to take care of himself in the prize ring.

Tunney has been a new kind of a man in the fighting game, has done the sport some good, and in his decision to retire now instead of waiting until age secures a knockout over him he is confirming the opinion that few prize fighters have possessed as much brains as the "Fighting Marine."

And for those who seem to find something lacking in his style in the ring it might be pointed out in conclusion that there was no running away on Tunney's part when real fighting was to be done back in the days of the World War.

CANADIAN AIR MAIL.

(Ottawa Citizen)

The postoffice department is showing commendable interest in the question of extending the air mail service across Canada. While the postal airways must of necessity be established gradually, the capable officers in charge of the work at postal headquartrs are developing a progressive policy along sound lines. Beginning with mail deliveries to mining camps and other places remote from railways, to the Magdalen Islands and settlements along the north shore of the Gulf of St. Lawrence in winter, the department has gone ahead this summer with the weekly service between Montreal and the liners at Father Point. This service has been extended to Ottawa and Toronto. Experience thus gained in preliminary work has demonstrated the feasibility of building up the Canadian air mail as comprehensively as it has been established in the United States. One next step should be to bring the Canadian mail into more general communication with the air mail network across the United States. The first move in this direction is being made between Montreal and New York. A daily service out of Montreal will allow Canadian business firms to participate in the benefits of an improved delivery of mail throughout the United States. When similar daily contacts are made between Toronto, Hamilton and Buffalo, and the Ontario air mail service is extended to Windsor on a daily basis, Eastern Canada's postal service will be well on the way to equality with the standard of service established in the United States. The possibility of establishing a daily service between Montreal and Winnipeg has been mooted. The direct air line from Montreal and Ottawa to Winnipeg, connecting with Toronto at North Bay, is bound to come before many years. A considerable amount of preparatory work in the form of emergency landing fields and aids to aerial navigation will have to be undertaken by the gap between Eastern and Western Canada is satisfactorily bridged by air. It should be another great boon to Canada when it is done. In the meanwhile, development of the air mail service across the Prairie Provinces, covering the triangle between Winnipeg, Edmonton and Calgary, might profitably be initiated next spring. It is a most favorable country for flying. With an air mail service regularly established along the Pacific coast of the United States, it is obvious that British Columbia cannot afford to remain outside. Nor would it be conducive to Canadian unity to allow gaps in the Canadian air service to remain unbridged. Like the air line between Ottawa and Winnipeg, however, the link between the prairies and Vancouver will call for a substantial outlay in aids to navigation before it can be declared open for daily service. While other business will undoubtedly develop with the coming of the Canadian airways, the air mail service is evidently going to form the nucleus of the commercial aviation system across the Dominion. Instead of subsidizing the building of airways, as the Dominion has done for railways, the policy of encouraging private enterprise through the postoffice department has much to commend it. One immediate next step should be the extension of air mail lines in Eastern Canada to Buffalo and Windsor.

TOMMY ATKINS TO-DAY.

Even civilians who have had little to do with the British army—except pay for it—will agree with the Duke of Connaught that there is a tremendous difference between the British soldier of sixty years ago and to-day.

It is sixty years ago since the Duke joined the army, but one does not need to go further back than shortly before the war to mark the improvement.

Time was when parents who were cursed with a drinking son put him into the army. They did so for two reasons. One was that he was out of the way, but would not be continually losing his job, and the other was that he would be housed and clothed and under a certain amount of discipline. In these days it was easy for recruiting sergeants to pick up good soldier material lounging outside the doors of public houses, or they nailed their men coming out of a "pub" in a more or less maudlin condition. The "pub" and its environs were indeed fertile grounds for man-power for the army, and also for the navy.

The British army of old, so far as the ordinary private was concerned, comprised the idlers and "bad actors" of the cities, leavened with a small percentage of young men physically and mentally sound who joined the services for the sake of adventure and to see the world. It was from the latter that the army and navy developed the non-commissioned officers and petty-officers who were the finest of their kind in the world.

But in the public mind, the average soldier and sailor belonged to the lowest social order. He was a man who joined for the sake of food and shelter, lived on wretched pay in wretched barracks, and spent what little he got on drink, and when he came out of the service was of little use for anything but his old habit of "pub" crawling or for doing odd jobs.

But immediately after the war there came nothing less than a revolution. The type of man who is attracted to the army to-day is the clean-cut, athletic youth, keenly interested in the mechanical side of soldiering, who may fly in the air or sail under the sea, handle fearful and wonderful machines and scientific instruments. In short, he is a skilled craftsman, and is paid a wage which, with his keep, compares favorably with a trade outside.

Drinking in the army is at a very low figure. The canteens which formerly were no place except for drinkers, now have their soft drink fountains; there are splendid libraries and recreation rooms; night classes where the soldier learns useful and profitable occupations which will not only help him to advance in the army but make him a useful citizen when his time is expired, and in many other ways he lives a clean, intelligent, self-respecting existence.

The modern British Tommy stands on the same social plane as any artizan. Gone for ever are the days when to be seen walking with a soldier was to be rated as low as he was, and when people looked askance at any man in a uniform.

To-day, Tommy Atkins wears a uniform that will never disgrace him so long as he never disgraces it.—St. Thomas Times-Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Yesterday was not a good day for Uncle Sam. The French Davis Cup team eliminated Bill Tilden and his associates and in the three events decided at the Olympic Games there was no American winner.

Canada's Olympic team may be small in numbers, but it is evidently not lacking in quality.

The owner of an American cruiser here the other day ordered 300 gallons of gasoline on arrival in Peterborough. Just a sample of what boosting the Trent Waterway means to this city and district.

The employment situation in Canada at the present time is more favorable than for eight years. Another sign of the Dominion's great prosperity.

If you have been worried about it you may be interested in knowing that Czechoslavakia is leading the Olympic chess tournament.

Voice of the People

Letters to be printed in the Voice of the People column must be received at The Examiner Office on the day before it is desired to have them published.

Dear sir:

Just a word of appreciation for the bus drivers for meeting the train after a very enjoyable day's outing with the textile excursion, and I for one give them a very big thank you.

From a South End Resident.

The Question Box

M.S. Q.—Is there a public stenographer in Peterborough? What is the address?

A.—Yes. The Remington Typewriter Co., Charlotte street. Arrangements may also be made with J. A. McKone, Peterborough Business College.

A.C.M. Q.—Why is thirteen considered to be an unlucky number?

A.—Thirteen is said to be an unlucky number, especially in the case of thirteen persons sitting at the same table, for superstition declares that one of the diners will surely die within the year. This superstition is very old and widely prevalent. In some of our cities, hotels and business buildings skip 13 in the floor and room numbers. In Paris and other French cities there are houses numbered 12 bis, 112 bis, etc., in lieu of 13 or 113. Dr. William S. Walsh is authority for the statement that the Turks have almost expunged the number 13 from their vocabulary. The Italians never use it in making up the number for their lotteries, and in one of their games the thirteenth card bears the figure of death. In almost all civilized countries may be found educated men and women who would rather die than sit down thirteen at table. The Parisian "piquesassiette," who lives by dining in other people's houses, is often known as the "quatorzieme," it being the chief part of his business to make the fourteenth to the chance unlucky number. In New York a club called the Thirteenth Club was started in 1834 for the express purpose of downing this superstition. The number of members always consists of some multiple of thirteen, they dine together on the thirteenth of every month, thirteen at a table, their dues are thirteen cents a month, and everything connected with the club is arranged as far as possible by thirteens. From year to year they publish reports to show that individually and collectively they are as healthy, prosperous and longlived as the members of any other club. The superstition probably grew out of the fact that Christ and his apostles made a total of thirteen at the Last Supper, and gained additional strength and currency through the Norse story of Loki's banquet with the gods in Valhalla. Baldur was the thirteenth at the table, and had to die.

GOD'S MINUTE.

God hath dealt to every man the measure of faith.—Rom. 12:3.

Our Father, we thank Thee that Christ hath led us to Thee, and now in His name we pray for Thy perfect blessing.

Refresh us with Thy joyous strength. We humbly await Thy Spirit's work in us and through us. Cleanse our hearts and free our lives from every defiling and hindering thing. Fashion us into the Master's mind and habit. Lift our thoughts from self to the needs of others. Give us to see the fields of humanity white to harvest. Lay heavy burdens of toil upon us, and give us the joy of the reaper in the sure wages of the Kingdom.

May we give in running-over measures, so that those who receive shall become generous also. May we so rebuke ourselves without mercy—and others in love—that we and they shall be glad to correct our ways. Provide for all our real needs out of Thy unwasted fulness. Keep us so near to Thee that we may know the joyful sound, and walk in the light of Thy countenance. And whenever we are allowed to choose our topic, may we triumphantly present Jesus to those with whom we walk and talk. And now as we go forth or stay in, may we have the grace of God from the God of peace, through Jesus Christ our Lord and Saviour. Amen.

CATTLE, GRAIN AND PRODUCE

TORONTO LIVE STOCK.

TORONTO, July 31. — With a moderately heavy run of 4,300 cattle for the market, 2,100 western cattle billed through, offerings included 1,000 western stockers and feeders, trade opened a little slow. As the cattle moved out to the scales prices were found to be steady on the choice butcher steers and heifers, but easier on cows and the common heifers.

Small meats steady. The $2.00 discount on buck lambs, as previously announced to go into effect yesterday, has been postponed until Wednesday, August 1.

Choice butcher steers and heifers, all weights, in good demand. Choice baby beeves in strong market and wanted. Good market for stockers and feeders.

Milkers and springers in very slow market, and not wanted, unless of fancy quality.

Lambs steady at 12c to 15c tops. Buck lambs, 11c to 13c.

Calves steady for choice quality, but easy for heavy roughs and grassers.

Hogs firm at $12.50 f.o.b. selects.

Choice butcher steers and heifers, all weights, in good demand at $10.75 to $11.75; fancy, $12.00; medium, $8.50 to $9.50.

Cows weak. Buyers bidding 25c to 50c lower.

Choice butcher bulls steady, $8.00 to $8.50.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., July 31 (Canadian Press). — The foreign demand for Canadian grain here yesterday was fair, and local exporters worked a few loads of wheat and oats for August-September shipment. The only business of importance in the local market for export account was a sale of a few loads of No. 3 Northern wheat at 2¼c per bushel over the Winnipeg July option, c.i.f. Montreal.

A feature of the domestic trade was the stronger feeling in the market for Argentine corn, and prices were advanced 3c per bushel, which was attributed to the very limited supplies on spot and the increasing demand for car lots. Sales were made at $1.12 per bushel, while American corn was steady at $1.09 to $1.10 per bushel, ex-store. Owing to the further weakness in the Winnipeg future oat market spot cash prices were reduced 2c per bushel.

There were no further developments in the local flour situation, prices for spring and winter wheat grades being steady, but the volume of new business for both export and domestic account was of a limited character.

A fair amount of business was done in most lines of millfeed for local and country account, but the demand from buyers in the United States was slow and at prices which were far too low to accept.

The tone of the market was steady and prices were unchanged. Standard grades of rolled oats were steady at the late decline, but trade was quiet.

An active business was transacted in all grades of eggs and the undertone to the market was firm. The receipts were 2,641 cases.

The demand for imported beans continued good and prices were steady. Car lots of choice white hand-picked were sold at $3.90 per bushel, and odd lots at $4.10 per bushel. New crop October and November imported beans were quoted at $2.40 to $2.50 per bushel for car lots to arrive.

The trade in butter was a little more active, but the demand was purely of local character and principally for broken lots and in consequence the volume of business was not large. The undertone to the market was stronger and prices were fully ¼c per pound higher. The receipts were 1,115 packages.

There was no improvement in the demand from English importers for cheese and the volume of business in this respect was small. The trade on spot between houses was also inactive and the market on the whole was very quiet. The receipts were 4,218 boxes.

BUTTER AND EGGS.

TORONTO, July 31. — Butter trading was quiet on the local wholesale produce market yesterday. A fair demand was reported and supplies were plentiful. In the cheese division of the market prices were steady. No change in the poultry situation was reported.

There is a general firm situation on Canadian egg markets.

The local egg market is firm. Dealers are quoting country shippers for ungraded eggs delivered, cases returned: Extras, 36c to 37c; firsts, 33c; seconds, 29c to 30c.

At Montreal the egg market is firm and active. Eggs are jobbing on spot at: Extras, 39c to 40c; firsts, 35c to 36c; seconds, 30c. Dealers are buying graded eggs from Ontario at: Extras, 36c to 37c; firsts, 33c; seconds, 27c f.o.b. British Columbia is offering eggs at: Extras, 35c; firsts, 33c f.o.b.

Sheep, 20,000; choice rangers at $18.00, with late sales upward to $18.15; sheep steady; feeding lambs 25c or more lower; lambs, good and choice, 92 pounds down, $13.75 to $15.25; cull and common, $9.50 to $12.50; ewes, medium to choice, 150 pounds down $4.25 to $7.25; cull and common, $1.75 to $5.50; feeder lambs, good and choice $13.25 to $13.75.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, July 31 (Canadian Press). — All grain underwent a decided setback in price yesterday, largely as a result of big receipts of wheat and also of corn. The United States wheat visible supply showed nearly 9,000,000 bushels increase for the week, and the corn visible supply an increase of 1,032,000 bushels.

Closing quotations on wheat were unsettled, one cent to 1¼c net lower, with corn ¾c to 2¼c off, oats 1c to 1¼c down, and provisions varying from a shade decline to 20c advance.

Favorable crop reports for wheat and corn alike supplemented the bearish effect yesterday of increased supplies. Meanwhile Kansas City, St.

CHRYSLER
Plymouth

Plymouth 4-Door Sedan, $915

CANADA ACCEPTS AND ACCLAIMS THE NEW PLYMOUTH

The sales record of the new Plymouth, established in two weeks' time, is without parallel or precedent for a car in this field—not in a few retail centers but all over the whole country.

Hundreds of thousands—eager to see the new Plymouth, built by Chrysler to compete in the lowest-priced field—are thronging Chrysler salesrooms everywhere.

They compare it with the three or four other cars catering to the same great market.

They see contrast in size, style, performance and safety so sharply in favor of Plymouth that curiosity bursts into enthusiasm, enthusiasm is transformed into sales.

These hosts of motorists find in the new Plymouth, with its "Silver-Dome" high-compression engine using any gasoline, characteristic Chrysler performance linked with smoothness, comfort of riding and an ease of handling typical of much more expensive cars.

They recognize that no other car under $1500 is equipped with internal expanding hydraulic four-wheel brakes, efficient in any weather.

In short, hundreds of thousands seeking a low first cost now discover in the new Plymouth the one car in the lowest-priced field which is and does everything that they have long hoped a low-priced car would be and do.

You, too, owe it to yourself to see it, ride in it, drive it. All doubt as to the highest dollar-for-dollar value in the lowest-priced field ends right there.

WILLIAMS VISITS BORDER ON QUIET

Provincial Police Head Passes As Ordinary Roadhouse Patron.

TORONTO, July 31. — Although they may not have been aware of it, all the roadhouses on the Detroit River front, from Sandwich to Tecumseh, had General Victor Williams, Provincial Police Commissioner, as an interested visitor on Friday last.

General Williams officially went to Windsor to make a routine inspection of the Provincial post there. Officially he was not due until Saturday morning. But during the 24 hours preceding, working quietly and unaccompanied, he saw the inside of every roadhouse operating along the Border, and, for good measure, paid a surprise visit to one of the liquor and beer export docks.

The Commissioner drove up to each resort alone. He may have had American markers on his big car, and again he may not have had them. But, in any event, while he was still supposed to be in Toronto, he was acting the regular roadhouse patron to perfection, and getting away with it.

What the General saw, and what, if any, action he proposes taking in that regard, cannot be determined. He declines to talk on the matter.

HALIFAX DOCTOR MISSING AT GUELPH

Sanitarium Patient's Clothing Found On Edge Of Speed River.

GUELPH, July 31.—Mystery surrounds the disappearance of Dr. J. Stanley Chisholm of Halifax, N.S., aged 32, a patient at the Homewood Sanitarium, whose clothing was found on the bank of the Speed River just below the institution on Monday, some hours after he had left the institution to go for a swim. Dragging operations were carried on all day yesterday, but up until last night have met with no success. The river at the point where is supposed to have gone in bathing, is, in places, from 20 to 30 feet deep.

Dr. Chisholm, who was a powerful swimmer, was in the habit of taking a daily dip. He was a nervous patient, but was almost completely recovered and ready to leave the institution. Dr. Chisholm was a married man, but there are no details with regard to his family available. He is a medical doctor, and until the illness which made it necessary for him to come to the Homewood, about three months ago, he practiced in Halifax.

Hertzog Says South Africa Has Right To Appoint Own Governor General.

LONDON, July 31 (Canadian Press Cable).—The Johannesburg correspondent of The Daily Mail says that Premier J. B. Hertog of South Africa stated in an interview that the Union possessed the right to appoint its own Governor-General, though he doubted whether the time was ripe for such action. Asked if the country was bound to accept the King's successor as its sovereign ruler, the Premier replied: "We don't accept the King of England, but the Crown."

Remarking he had nothing to say as to who would be King, the Premier added: "We could do away with all kings to-morrow and introduce a measure to abolish the kingship, but the English in South Africa would protest, and probably many of the Dutch would support them. The former might take to weapons and rebel. They might force South Africa to remain under a King.

"I do not think Britain and the other Dominions would resort to force but a danger is present in public opinion in this land. When all the South Africans are one people, we could decide to not recognize the kingship."

CATCHACOMA.

CATCHACOMA, July 30.—No complaints are heard at this point about lack of patronage by tourists, although there is no great rush.

Bookings for August are being made by Mrs. Lehner at the Westlake Inn. Peterborough people are arranging to spend their holidays.

Some excitement has been caused here by the reports of tests showing valuable mineral springs, one of which is supposed to belong to the inn itself. It is understood that the government is being asked to investigate.

A number of Americans are staying at The Mississauga Lodge, Mr. Rushworth's beautiful resort.

The Catchacoma Hotel (Cochrane's) has been doing a good business.

Fishing is excellent and the fine sand bathing beaches are in general requisition.

FARM CROPS DAMAGED DURING HAIL STORM

CALGARY, Alta., July 31.—(Canadian Press).—Sweeping a narrow strip about two to three miles wide from Black Diamond, in Turner Valley to north of MacLeod in the southern part of the province, Saturday night a heavy hail storm completely wiped out crops on a number of farms and damaged others from ten percent. to seventy five percent. Heavy wind accompanied the hail and flattened some grain, but the intensity of the hail varied in certain districts.

While wires are down in several of the farming communities and only partial reports have been received, losses of 100 percent. have been claimed from some of the hail insurance communities. orts from High River, Vulcan and Parkland indicate storm was heaviest at these points. Poultry was killed in farm yards; one calf is reported killed and window panes were broken by the hail stones.

SOYBEAN HAY GOOD

Makes Heavy Forage Like Clover, Which Farm Stock Relishes.

The soy bean, a crop well known in some parts of the United States and commencing to get a foothold in Canada, makes a very good class of hay. Officers of the Experimental Farms Division of the Department of Agriculture have written a pamphlet on Soybeans in Canada that gives one a very good idea of the usefulness of the crop. The soybean like clover makes a heavy hay that is relished by livestock. It is ready for harvesting any time after the pods have developed until the leaves begin to turn yellow. Mr. G. P. McRostie, the head of the Forage Crops Division, says that the best time to cut is when the pods are well filled for at this stage the highest yield and best quality is obtained. After being cut with the ordinary hay mower it is left in the swath for about a day or until the leaves are thoroughly wilted. The practice in this respect is about the same as with clover. When wilted it is raked into windrows where it is allowed to cure. After two or three days, if the weather has been favorable, it should be put into small cocks for further curing and drying. Thorough curing is needed to prevent spoiling in the mow. The hauling and handling requires to be carefully done in order to preserve the leaves, which are the most valuable part of the feed, as much as possible.

Williams Wins Heat

Percy Williams, Vancouver, who won the 100 metres final yesterday, easily won his preliminary heat in the Olympic Games 200 metres today. He led from start to finish, winning by six yards from Hambridge, of Britain, in 22 3-5 seconds.

Johnny Fitzpatrick, Hamilton, also won his heat in 200 metres, beating Carlton, Australia, in 22 4-5.

Ralph Adams qualified for the semi-finals, when he was second to Schols, United States, in another preliminary.

George Hester, Hamilton, was disqualified in his heat after running second to W. B. Legg, of South Africa. He was disqualified for running outside his lane.

Two Enter 200 Finals

Four Canadians ran in the preliminaries of two hundred metres and qualified for the semi finals. The fourth, George Hester, of Hamilton, was disqualified for not keeping to his lane. Percy Williams, Vancouver and Johnny Fitzpatrick, Hamilton, won their heats, and Ralph Adams, Hamilton, was second in his.

Three Canadians in the 5,000 metres preliminaries were all out classed. They were V. S. Callard, Toronto, Art. Keay, Toronto, and W. Kibblewhite, Winnipeg.

Williams came right along and qualified for the 700 metre when he was second to Helmut Koenig, Germany, nosing out Charlie Borah, of the United States John Fitzpatrick, Hamilton, won his semi finals, running up the time of 22 seconds flat. The third Canadian in the 200 metres semi finals, Adams, Hamilton, ran third in the first heat and failed to qualify.

Canada thus will have two runners in the final tomorrow.

Vancouver Acclaims Victory

VANCOUVER, B.C., July 31 (Special to The Examiner).—With one of its sons acclaimed a champion of the Olympic games at Amsterdam, virtually the fastest human afoot, Vancouver is proud to-day. Plans are under way already for a public reception when he returns.

Telegraph wires are ringing with congratulations for Percy Williams, 20-year-old high school lad, who outran a formidable field of the world's greatest sprinters in the final 100 metre event.

When he received word of William's achievement, Mayor Louis D. Taylor, from his bed in the Vancouver General Hospital, where he is recovering from a blow from an airplane propeller, declared: "This boy's victory is marvellous beyond words. We must give him the recognition that he has earned."

The following wire has been dispatched to Percy Williams by Ald. F. E. Woodside, acting mayor:

"Vancouver proud of you and your wonderful achievement. Success attained will be of immeasurable value to district and will emphasize to all and sundry that the West is still the best. Continued success to yourself and Canada's representatives."

Emphasizing the value of athletics in conjunction with academic studies at school and university, Dr. R. E. McKechnie, Chancellor of the University of British Columbia, expressed his satisfaction with the success of Williams' venture.

AMSTERDAM, July 31 (Canadian Press Cable).—Miss Fanny Rosenfeld, Toronto, and Miss Hitomi, Japan, withdrew from the Olympic women's discus throwing competition. They are running in the final of the 100 meters dash.

BETTER BUSINESS BUREAU FORMED

Those Already Established Have Raised Standards of Merchandising.

The Better Business Bureau Movement, which is widespread throughout the United States and which is taking hold in Canada, has been influential in raising the standard of merchandising, preventing false advertising and unethical business practices, resulting in greater confidence betwaen buyer and seller as well as in the protection of investors from the activities of those individuals who prey upon the public in the offering of securities of doubtful value and in many cases very little or no value at all. These individuals the very versatile in their method of operation, and in the use of high pressure methods, and have robbed trusting investors of many hundreds of millions of dollars during the past few years. The Better Business Bureaus have been instrumental in curbing to a marked degree the operations of these doubtful individuals, and in sending many of them to jail, while many others have been forced to close their offices and cease operations in the districts where the Better Business Bureaus have been active.

As announced in the press a short time ago by the Attorney-General, he welcomes the formation of a Better Business Bureau in the Province of Ontario—already a Bureau is in active operation in the Province of Quebec, with headquarters in Montreal, and is doing excellent service.

The Better Business Bureau, as at present constituted comprises representatives of the Toronto Board of Trade, Toronto Stock Exchange, Standard Stock Exchange, Investment Bankers' Association, Dominion Mortgage and Investment Association, Toronto Real Estate Board and others. The officers and members of the Executive Committee of the Better Business Bureau are as follows:

Chairman—C. L. Burton, President Toronto Board of Trade.

Vice-Chairmen—C. E. Abbs, President Toronto Stock Exchange, A. M. Macrae, rep. Investment Bankers' Association.

Secretary-Treasurer—J. A. Kingsmill, Room 706, 45 Richmond street West.

Executive Committee—R. P. Baker Dominion Mortgage and Investment Association; F. J. Coombs, Investment Bankers' Association; R. T. Stanley, Retail Merchants' Section, Toronto Board of Trade; F. J. Crawford, Standard Stock Exchange; J. C. Suydam, Toronto Real Estate Board.

SPOILT MUSIC

A Splendid New Serial by Ruby M. Ayres

THE STORY THUS FAR:

JENNIFER FRY is saved from drowning by NICHOLAS GAUNT, wealthy young man-about-town. Later he takes her to tea and asks to call, but she refuses because she is ashamed of her humble surroundings. They continue their friendship and Jennifer comes to love Nicholas, but he is suddenly called abroad by his mother's illness. During his absence Jennifer's father dies. She reads of his engagement in the paper, and stands in the crowd to see him and his bride come from the church after the wedding. Her mother dies. Five years later she meets Nicholas again. He decides to divorce his wife, Lady Edith. But just then Lady Edith becomes ill. The doctors promise her only a year of life and she makes Gaunt promise not to see Jennifer for that year. Jennifer is angry and decides to be as gay as she can on a legacy of eight thousand pounds left her by an uncle. She gives up her job and goes to work to have a good time. She meets DOLORES and BUDDY, two women who live in the flat above her new dwelling place. Through them she meets CHESNEY, who quarrels about her with Buddy and proposes to Jennifer. Jennifer asks him to wait for her answer. They meet Gaunt and his wife at a night club. Jennifer, tired and unhappy, promises to marry Chesney. Buddy, when she hears of the engagement, tries to kill herself. Lady Gaunt invites Chesney and Jennifer to dinner.

CHAPTER XXIX

Gaunt's Threat.

At the table Edith was talking again. She was a restless woman, never still or quiet. She gave one the impression of internal fires which were consuming her.

"And when are you to be married, Miss Fry? I adore weddings. You must let me take you along to the woman who makes my frocks. She's an artist to her finger tips."

"Oh, we shall be married quite soon," Jennifer said calmly, though her heart was beating so quickly she felt as if she must choke. "There's nothing to wait for," she laughed. "It's not as if I am eighteen."

"You're the youngest thing I've met for a long time," Edith Gaunt declared. "There's something about you—isn't there, Nicky?—that seems so young and unspoilt! You always make me feel as if you're having all the fun now—as if you've never had much before, do you understand what I mean?"

"That's very clever of you, Lady Edith," Jennifer said. "And as a matter of fact you are perfectly right. I had all my hard times—when most people usually have their fun. However, it's all behind me now, and the future is going to be quite diff erent.'

"You are very sure!" Lady Edith said.

Jennifer looked across at Chesney and smiled.

"We are both sure," she said quietly. She wanted to be sure. She wanted to care for Chesney so much that she would never once falter on the pathway she had chosen, never once look back to where Nicholas Gaunt stood with the memories of the past in his eyes.

But when she saw the radiant happiness in Chesney's face, her own tears were not far away. It was all such a pretence! Such an empty farce!

"And now, what shall we do?" Lady Edith asked when dinner was over and they went to the drawing-room. "Shall we play bridge, or is it too dull and domestic for you? Nicky, give Miss Fry a cigarette."

Nicholas went over to Jennifer.

She took a cigarette from his case and he struck a match. But Jennifer shook her head.

"I always prefer to light it myself," she said. It was not the truth, but she dared not risk touching Gaunt's hand.

Gaunt put the matches down beside her, and she lit the cigarette with fingers that shook.

"You've got a delightful house here," Chesney was saying. He looked at Jennifer. "How would you like a house like this, dearest?" he asked.

It was the first time he had ever used a term of endearment to Jennifer in public, and she felt her cheeks flaming.

"It is very beautiful," she said with an effort.

"There's a glorious room upstairs," Lady Edith struck in. "It's too big to use unless we have a crowd, but it's splendid for entertaining. Come and see it, Mr. Chesney."

She was at the door before anyone could speak and Chesney followed eagerly. He was so happy that he felt he wanted to give Jennifer the whole world. The very best his money could buy was not good enough for her. His eager imagination pictured her as his wife and as mistress of just such a home as this. The thought of their future together made him almost delirous with happiness.

Jennifer rose quickly to her feet. "Let us go with them," she said.

"No."

Nicholas barred the way when she would have passed him, and for a moment they looked at one another silently. Then Jennifer shrugged her shoulders and went back to her chair.

Nicholas closed the door. His face was quite white, but his eyes were steady and his voice perfectly controlled when he spoke.

"Do you intend to marry that fellow?"

She met his gaze serenely, even smiling a little.

"Of course. Why do you ask?"

"I thought perhaps you were trying to torment me."

She laughed at that.

"Torment you! How perfectly absurd! What do you mean?"

"That as you belong to me, you cannot marry him."

She stared at him with wide eyes, the color fading in her cheeks. She tried to speak, but her lips were dry and she could form no words. Belong to him! Yes, that was true. She did belong to him, soul and body.

Her will seemed to be melting like wax beneath his eyes. If he touched her she felt that she would die. With a desperate effort she took a fresh grip of herself and found her voice.

"You are talking great nonsense! Who do you suppose will prevent me from marrying whom I choose?"

He came a step nearer to her, and now she could hear his quick breathing before he spoke.

"I shall," he said.

There was a moment's breathless silence, then Jennifer laughed.

"I think that is really the funniest thing I have ever heard," she said flippantly. "Are you trying to be amusing, or merely rude?"

"I am stating a plain fact," Nicholas answered quietly. "I do not intend you to marry Chesney, and I shall make it my business to see that you do not."

Jennifer looked at him with hot eyes. Her heart was beating so fast that it seemed to choke her, and her lips felt like ice. Then she said very quietly:

"May I ask if you have told your wife of your very interesting decision?"

"I am willing to tell her this moment, if you wish it. To tell Chesney also."

The blood beat into Jennifer's white cheeks.

"You are no longer afraid that the shock may kill Lady Edith?" she asked with a sneer. She did not give him time to reply. She rose to her feet. "I think this very stupid conversation has gone far enough," she added, more coolly. "Your wife and Malcolm will be back in a moment."

Nicholas ignored her words.

"I mean what I say, Jennifer," he said again. "You belong to me. You have always belonged to me. I have lost you twice through my own fault and quixotic folly, but this time I am not making any more mistakes. You are mine and I mean to keep you."

She faced him with defiant eyes, though every nerve in her body was shaking.

"Without my consent?" she asked, cuttingly.

"With or without. It makes no difference."

He moved close to her, his eyes upon her face.

"I have suffered all I intend to suffer for your sake," he told her ruthlessly. "If we had not met again, I might have let things go, and not have tried to find you, but Fate has thrown us together once more, and I love you better now than I have ever loved you."

"I thought you always loved me so devotedly, so passionately," she mocked him.

His face grew white.

"I know I deserve all the hard things you can say, and my only excuse is that each time I left you I thought, like a fool, that I was acting for the best. Last year I honestly believed that Edith had only a short time to live. I thought you would understand that I was trying to do the right thing by her."

"I understood perfectly. I understood that when it came to the point you did not care for me well enough to sacrifice anything. You wanted it all to be decent and in order." Her voice rose passionately. "No doubt it would have suited your plans very well if your wife had considerately died and left you free to marry me. I am sure you thought it all well out before you came to me that night." She laughed. "Well, it's over and done with. I don't know why you need reopen the question at all. Please let us join the others."

Nicholas stood like a rock between Jennifer and the door.

"You are trying to make me believe that you no longer care for me," he said hoarsely.

"I am trying to tell you that I ceased to care for you more than a year ago," Jennifer answered.

"That is a lie!" He was fast losing his self-control. "You love me as much as I love you, and it's only your pride that keeps you from admitting it."

She laughed in his face.

"And it is only your conceit that makes you say such a thing," she retorted. "Whether you believe it or not, I would not marry you if we were both free tomorrow."

His eyes passionately defied her and he laughed.

"You would come away with me tonight if I wished it," he answered.

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 1, 1928

Astrologers read this as an uncertain day that promises better influences as the hours pass.

The morning is not an encouraging time to begin any new work, for the rule is supposed to make one especially sanguine and likely to take risks.

It is not a fortunate sway for any one who desires to lead and there is a likelihood that authority will be resented.

Under this direction of the stars there may be an inclination to exaggerate one's own importance and to discount the ability of others.

This may not be an auspicious day for aggressive political action, for candidates may be severely analyzed and harshly judged.

Mrs. McNeely Also Greeted by Ladies of Keene United Church.

(Examiner Correspondence)

KEENE, July 31.—The W.M.S. of the United Church has the pleasure of welcoming the Rev. Mr. and Mrs. McNeely at the July meeting. Mr. McNeely made a few remarks, wishing the W.M.S. every success in its various departments.

Mrs. Henry Knox of Victoria, B.C., was also present and spoke for a few moment to old friends and new.

The scriptural lesson was taken by Mrs. Short on "How Women in the New Testament Days Helped." The roll was called by Mrs. Kindred. Miss Bryce had the devotional leaflet and "A Visit to Our Community Centers" was given by Mrs. Howson, Mrs. D. McIntyre and Mrs. Eason. The meeting was closed with prayer by Mrs. Kindred.

MOTOR CIRCUS PROGRAM GOOD

Barnett Brothers Give Two Good Performances at Campbellford.

TRAVEL BY CAR.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence)

CAMPBELLFORD, July 31—Something new to the people of the district was presented yesterday in the form of Barnet Brothers' Motor Circus. This circus is backed by Canadian capital and operated by Canadian business men. It lives, moves, and operates by means of motor vehicles. These, too, are of Canadian manufacture as far as the commercial vehicles are concerned. There are American makes of cars among the privately owned vehicles. The mid-day parade lost some of its attraction for the youngsters and for many of the older friends of the big tops because there were none of the usual dapple gray horses with their plumes and harness mounted with glittering brass. There are no horses in connection with the equipment save those used in the rings. Even the calliope is mounted on a motor truck painted in the gray colours and designs which belong only to the circus world. Nor is it run by steam Compressed air has taken its place

At both afternoon and evening performances there were good audiences and the midway with its score of varied attractions was crowded through every hour that the grounds were open the public. Of the twenty-eight numbers on the bill, few if any, were what might be called weak. The troupe is constituted of actors and acrobats who have considerable experience as a back ground and who were are each masters of their particular parts. Jack and Clara Moore, the English light wire artists, were perhaps the high light of the performance with the three Chevalier Brothers, equilibrists, and the team of Brooks and Soares, contortionists, giving them a close run for favor.

The numerous wild and domestic animal numbers made the program one of exceptional interest. The intelligence displayed by the performing animals was at times, amazing. Jargo, the clown animal, drew a good round of applause, as did the entire troop of clowns whose antics were amusing from beginning to end.

Following the afternoon and evening shows in the big tent, there was an exhibition of wild west rope throwing and numerous tricks of the men of the plains. Coupled with this, a wrestling match open to any one who wished to take a chance on being able to defeat the circus strong man, the program was appreciated by practically the entire audience who stayed to see the fun. Coming as it did when the town streets are in a hopeless state for anything like a circus parade, there were several mix ups in the route, but the long string of travel pretty well over the two before returning for the afternoon performance. In the late afternoon, the calliope drove slowly about town and either delighted or peeved the residents according to their taste for music.

You too will want to retire some day—On what?

EVERY business man expects to retire some day, say at 60 or 65, and take life easy—as he should. But just how this is to be accomplished is rather vague and indefinite in his mind. It is not crystallized into a plan, but there is always a hope that he will strike it rich, or that something will turn up.

If a man spends all his income in the present he cannot spend it again in the future.

Here is the eternal test of character—how much present pleasure is he willing to forego to serve a more lasting future good? If he spends everything he can't expect to retire at 65—unless it be on the charity of his children.

There is a simple, definite method of providing a monthly income for retiring time and that is through an Imperial Life Guaranteed Income Policy. The annual deposits are easy to provide during a man's years of good earnings—and his family is protected at all times against his untimely decease.

to beautifying the grounds around the Town Hall by planting shrubs and perennials this fall. The Council will co-operate with the Institute in this matter by preparing the grounds and fixing a new driveway around the hall. It was also decided to ask Mr. J. B. Nelson of the Department of Agriculture to plan a design for the flower beds.

The roll call was answered by a jam or jelly recipe. It was decided at this meeting that in the future members who do not answer will be asked to pay a cent. A request was made for quilt patches, donations to be left at Mrs. A. Anderson's, where a meeting will be held in the near future to plan a design. It was also decided to purchase greeting cards to send to members shut in through illness.

During the afternoon a recitation was given by Miss Helen Bedford, which was enjoyed by all.

A dainty lunch was served at the close of the meeting by the hostess.

Children's Day.

"Children's Day," which is an annual outing and treat provided by the Belmont Women's Institute for the children of the district, was held on Thursday afternoon at the Belmont Town Hall, with an attendance of eighty. It was a beautiful afternoon and the children enjoyed a splendid program of sports, prizes being given for the contests. Ice cream, peanuts and candies were also provided.

Mrs. W. E. Anderson presided for the following program which was well rendered:

Piano solo—Irene Tinney.
Recitation—"Self Control," Dorothy Thomas of Toronto.
Vocal solo—Celesta Hubble.
Piano solo—Mary Anderson.
Recitation—Dorothy Harnden of Bowmanville.
Trio—'Ramona,' Dorothy and Grace Thomas and Mary Anderson.
Recitation—Ruth McMullen.
Reading—Mrs. Joseph Seabrooks.
Piano solo—Grace Thomas of Toronto.
Recitation—Irene Tinney.
Vocal solo—Grace McMullen.

BOULDEN—FRASER.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., July 31.—Miss Emily Denne, of Peterborough, Ont., attended the marriage of Miss Dorothy Mary Fraser, younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Fraser, of this city, to the Rev. Charles Howard Boulden, M.A., of Trinity College School, Port Hope, Ont., eldest son of Mrs. Boulden and the late Rev. Charles J. Boulden, of Windsor, Nova Scotia, which was solemnized Wednesday afternoon at 3.30 o'clock here in Christ Church, the Rev. Canon Gordon performing the ceremony, assisted by the Rev. R. Brillinger.

The attendants of the bride were Miss Harriet Usher, of Queenston, Ont., as maid of honor, and Miss Mary Mervynne, of Toronto, Ont., and Pasadena, Calif., Miss Marion Battle, of Toronto, and Miss Norah Dwyer, of this city, bridesmaids. Mr. Gordon Fraser, brother of the bride, was best man, and the ushers were Mr. Cecil Liebich, Mr. Reynolds Merry and Mr. Spencer Merry, of Toronto, and Mr. Harold Usher, of Queenston, Ont.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents here. After the reception Mr. and Mrs. Boulden left on a motor trip for Nova Scotia, where they will reside.

OBITUARY

ROLAND N. KIDD

After three weeks' illness there occurred on July 25th, at the Western Hospital, Toronto, the death of Roland N. Kidd, on old Warsaw boy.

Mr. Kidd was born and lived till early manhood on the farm cleared by his grandfather, James Kidd, just two miles south of Warsaw. He attended the Peterborough Business College and held a position in the office of the Cement Work of Lakefield. Later, deceased entered the Civil Service at Ottawa, and from there enlisted for overseas with the 207th Battalion (Ottawa).

Shortly after resuming his work in Ottawa at the conclusion of the war, Mr. Kidd was appointed Dominion government inspector for dairy products for Toronto and district, which position he held at the time of his death.

Deceased was until recently an elder of College Street United (formerly Presbyterian) Church, and latterly a member of Bedford Park United Church.

Left to mourn him are his wife, his father, Walter John Kidd of Warsaw, and two sisters, Mrs. J. R. Hawthorne of Warsaw, and Mrs. W. L. Murray of Belleville.

The funeral was held from his late residence, 37 Borwood avenue, Toronto, on July 27th, and interment was made at Forest Lawn Cemetery. The services were conducted by Rev. Mr. Earchman, minister of Bedford Park Church, who spoke of the high regard and love in which the deceased was held; of his interest in the work of the church, and of his doing all he could to make the world a more lovely place.

The casket was literally banked with floral tributes from business associates, the church and many friends.

The pall-bearers were: three brothers-in-law, J. R. Hawthorne, W. L. Murray, H. Gregory; a cousin, C. W. Williamson; and two fellow inspectors of the Department of Agriculture, Mr. Cameron and Mr. Elliott.

The funeral was largely attended. Many relatives from a distance, relatives both of the deceased and of his wife, were present.

NEWS IN BRIEF

MONTREAL MAN INJURED.

OTTAWA, July 31 (Canadian Press)—David McLaren, of Montreal, was rushed to an Ottawa hospital last night, suffering from severe head injuries and possibly others of an internal nature following an automobile accident on the Montreal highway near here.

McLaren's car and another driven by R. Y. McLean, of St. Francis Street, Montreal, collided on a steep grade known as Carson's Hill. McLean and his passengers escaped injury. The two cars were ditched, both badly damaged.

BEE CAUSES CRASH.

GALT, July 31.—A bee's sting was the cause of an auto accident here yesterday morning. Miss Parmer Von, with her assistant, Miss Lampkey, was driving down the C.P.R. hill when a bee stung her on the arm and momentarily she took her hand from the steering wheel and the car crashed into a standing truck. Both nurses suffered slight injuries, and the car and truck were considerably damaged.

CHILD STRUCK DOWN.

WINDSOR, July 31.—Agnes Bennett, 11 years old, of 1181 Reaume Road, Ford City, is in the Hotel Dieu with a fractured left leg and other injuries, as the result of being struck by an automobile operated by Max Incer, 237 Drouillard Road, Ford City, late yesterday afternoon. Police who investigated the accident, said that the little girl darted out from behind a parked car while trying to cross the street near her home. Nurses at Hotel Dieu say she will recover.

Louis, and Omaha had 3,701 cars of wheat yesterday against 2,708 cars a year ago, and Minneapolis announced that newly harvested spring wheat had begun to arrive from the northwest. Word was also at hand that cutting of spring wheat had progressed upward into North Dakota. Unexpected downturns in wheat quotations at Liverpool ascribed to larger shipments from North America counted as an additional bearish influence.

Lessening likelihood too that either the Canadian wheat crop or domestic spring wheat would be unfavorably affected by black rust was an outstanding feature of yesterday's wheat news. Authoritative advices current said that there had been little or no increase of rust in Canadian fields during the last week. Under such circumstances, foreigners failed to show any special interest in United States wheat, and confined their purchases to 500,000 bushels of Canadian.

Selling of 725,000 bushels of corn into store here yesterday put a heavy handicap on friends of higher prices for that grain.

The corn market showed an upward trend at the outset, but prices soon gave way under selling induced by the fact that yesterday's receipts of corn here aggregated 1,365 cars, and that another huge influx to-day was looked for. Some of the selling was attributed to one of the principal Chicago holders of the July delivery. With prevailing weather continuing to point to likelihood of a large yield of domestic corn this season, reports yesterday of an adverse outlook for European corn were virtually ignored. Oats sympathized with weakness of other grain.

Provisions for the most part held about steady.

STERLING EXCHANGE.

MONTREAL, Que., July 31 (Canadian Press).—Sterling exchange rates were quoted here yesterday as:

Demand—$4.85⅝.
Cables—$4.86⅝.

ever, that this was a bogus license.

At a late hour yesterday afternoon a long distance telephone call was received from Landon, N.D., stating that a car answering the description of the one used by the bandits had passed through there at a high rate of speed. While this clue was being probed, a thorough search was made for the men here in the belief that they abandoned the car and are still hiding.

Practically all of the money was in Canadian bills of small denominations.

Riley and Hickey Are Bantam Champions

CLOTHIERS PLAY SMART BALL TO DEFEAT GRAFTON CREW 8-0

Show Good Team-work to Win the City Championship.

GATFIELD GOOD

Allows But One Hit and Fourteen Strikeouts to His Credit.

By combining remarkable pitching and stirling team-work, Riley & Hickey's ball team copped the city championship in the bantam series last night at James Stevenson Park by defeating the Grafton crew, 8 to 10.

Gatfield, the pitching ace for the winners, delivered the goods in true championship form, exhibiting a brand of ball that will undoubtedly carry him a long way on the road to the Ontario championship. He struck out fourteen of the twenty-six batters that faced him, and allowed but one hit being given air-tight support by his teammates.

Stanger, for the losers, worked hard, but was given poor support. He struck out twelve men and walked four of the thirty-six batters that opposed him.

Started in Third.

Although Riley & Hickey's scored one run in the second innings, the fireworks proper started in the third when Charley Kay stepped into a fast one, lifting it over the first baseman's head for a clean hit. The next three batters each nicked Stanger for a single, which resulted in a total of four runs. The winners showed surprising ability in base-stealing, which was a big factor in piling up the score.

First Inning.

Davern was thrown out by Routley. Asquith's line drive was taken in by Sanderson for the second out, and Levine filed to Routley.

Routley, for Grafton's, hit clean over first for one base. Bailey and Sanderson struck out. Widdess filed to Reynolds.

Second Inning.

Braund's line drive over third base went for a clean hit. Gatfield struck out. Cadd hit through the Grafton shortstop to score Braund, who had stolen second and third. Price struck out, retiring the side.

Stanger singled, stealing second, where he died as the next three batters, Clarke, Pearson and McBain, were struck out in order.

Third Inning.

Kay slammed a hot drive through second base, going to third on Davern's single. Asquith struck out. Levine flied over first to score Kay and Davern. Braund singled, sending Levine home with the fourth run. Gatfield struck out, Reynolds walked, and Braund, who had advanced to third by stealing, came home on a past ball. Cadd was passed and Price struck out.

Morrison whiffed. Routley was an easy out, but Kay missed the throw, the runner going to second. Sanderson struck out, and Routley, who tried to steal, was caught between bases and tagged.

Fourth Inning.

Kay placed a lusty clout over first base and made second. Davern beat out a slow throw to first, to send Kay to third. Asquith walked, loading the bases. Levine flied to Morrison, whose quick return of the ball held the runners on. Kay scored on past ball. Braund slammed a long fly to McBain, who took it nicely, but failed to throw out Davern, who scored. Gatfield struck out.

The Grafton crew went out in order, Widdess and Stanger striking out, while Clarke fouled to Cadd.

Fifth Inning.

Reynolds fouled to Pearson. Cadd walked. Price popped a small fly to Clarke, and Kay struck out.

Pearson was passed, going to second on a balk, but was out when he over-ran third base. McBain and Morrison struck out.

Sixth Inning.

Davern singled an easy one to Clarke, who threw slow to first. Asquith fanned. Grafton's missed a good chance for a double play when Levine sent a grounder to Clarke, who threw to second, an empty base. Davern having advanced to third. Braund's single sent Davern in for another counter. Levine was caught between bases and Gatfield struck out.

Routley singled, going to second on an overthrow to first. Bailey was hit, Morrison replacing him as a runner. Sanderson struck out, and Stanger popped to Gatfield.

Seventh Inning.

McCullough, batting for Reynolds, struck out. Cadd was out, Routley to Widdess. Price walked and Kay fanned.

The first two batters for Grafton's were thrown out by Clarke. McBain whiffed to end the game.

TORONTO LOSES TO ROYALS 3-2

Leafs Misjudge Plays and Drop First Game to Montreal.

BISONS WIN 5-2

TORONTO, July 31.—Montreal carried off the first skirmish of the four game set with the leading Leafs yesterday afternoon 3 to 2 after looking all over a beaten team until the last portion of the affray. Phillips presented the Quebeckers with a tally when he dropped a throw to the plate while Easterling gave them the winning tally when the allowed Falk to get a triple on what was an ordinary single in the ninth. It was a tough break for Walter Leverenz who pitched excellently throughout.

BISONS WIN 5-2

BUFFALO, July 31.—(Canadian Press).—Facing a cripled Rochester lineup, the Buffalo Bisons had little difficulty winning the opener of the series here yesterday by a score of 5 to 2. With Manager Southworth out possibly for the rest of the season and also Layne on the crippled list, the visitors were forced to use Pitcher Kaufmann in centre field and Nick Urban, utility infielder, at first base. Mangum pitched good ball for the Bisons while Moore and Fisher starred at bat, the former driving in three runs with two timely bingles and Fisher stinging two doubles and as many singles for a perfect afternoon.

DELORO BEATEN BY MADOC TEAM

Defeated by 22-10 Count in Trent Valley League Fixture.

MARMORA, July 31.—Madoc was victorious over Deloro by a 22-10 count in a Trent Valley League fixture played last night. Both teams played good ball until the fifth inning when the Smelters blew up and allowed the victors nine runs.

Score by innings:

Madoc	0	1	1	3	9	8	—	22
Deloro	1	1	1	5	0	2	—	10

VIEWS ON SPORT

K. of C. and Teco meet to-night in softball league fixture. There will be no game on Wednesday night.

Crary and Holmes will likely be the pitching choices for the Royals and Kiwanis in the deciding game for the junior city league championship at the Exhibition grounds to-night. The game will be called at 6 o'clock and a great crowd is expected to be on hand.

Riley and Hickey are the new city champions of the bantam group. Sponsored by the clothing firm of Riley and Hickey this young team has been playing stellar ball all through the season and put the finishing touches to their work last night by defeating the Grafton crew 8-0 in the final game of the schedule at the James Stevenson Park.

* * * * * *

Much can be said of the performance of young Gatfield in the shutting out of the Grafton crew. Striking out fourteen of the twenty-six batters who opposed him and allowing but one hit was the work chalked up to his credit. Combined with this he was given air-tight support by his team mates.

* * * * * *

Numerous errors in the second and sixth innings seemed to account for the failure of the North Enders to even their tilt with the DeLaval last night. Playing off colour, the Harrison boys went down to a 11-1 defeat before the factory crew. The Separators showed good combination in their team work and aided by some steady hitting they had no trouble in downing their opposition.

GIANTS CLIMB TO THIRD PLACE

Displace Cubs By 4-1 Victory at New York Yesterday.

BROOKLYN WINS.

NEW YORK, July 31.—The Giants displaced the Cubs from third place in the National League standing and took the lead in their six-game series yesterday by winning yesterday's game, 4 to 1.

Jim Faulkner, Giant left-hander, pitched a fine game, holding the Cubs to four hits, one of them a home run by Cuyler. Two of the runs scored by New York off Pat Malone also were due to home runs off the bats of Ott and Hogan.

Jess Petty shaded Eppa Rixey in a duel of left-handers and Brooklyn defeated the Cincinnati Reds in the third of the series by a score of 2 to 1 at Brooklyn. Each team made eight hits.

Zitman's single and steal of second, followed by Stripp's single in the fourth inning, scored the Red's only run.

The Pittsburg Pirates put across two one-run victories over the Boston Braves, winning 2 to 1 in the first game of the double-header and 6 to 5 in ten innings in the second.

The winning run in the first game developed from L. Waner's base on balls in the eighth inning, an infield out and Traynor's single. It was a pitchers' battle between Kremer and Brandt. The decision in the second came in the tenth on triples by P. Waner and Traynor. Grantham drove in four runs in this game. Grimes finished for the Pirates, registering his seventeenth victory of the season.

The tail-end Phillies went 16 innings to defeat the league-leading St. Louis Cardinals 8 to 7 in Philadelphia in a trade this season, delivered a hours to play. Virgil Davis, who went to the Phils from the Cardinals in a trade thsi season, delivered a single in the sixteenth inning that scored Fred Leach with the winning run.

Two home runs, one by Don Hurst and the other by Cy Williams, both with two on base, accounted for six of the Phillies' runs.

Cy Williams' home run in the eighth was followed by passes issued by Johnson. Frankhouse, and Haid, which forced in the tying run.

MANY ERRORS ARE COSTLY FOR HARRISON

North-Enders Go Down to 11-1 Defeat Before De Laval Crew.

SEPARATOR CREW GOOD

Harrisons Had Eight Scoreless Innings, Tallying Once in Seventh.

De Laval's day on and Harrison's day o was the only way to give a reason for the 11-1 score with the Separators on the heavy end of the score in the softball fixture in Confederation Square on Monday night.

The first inning was scoreless but De Laval broke loose in the second when Frick started the fireworks with a long fly that slipped through Montgomery's hand and allowed Frick to make a circuit trip. Cooper the next man up also made the round trip on a long drive in right field. Twe runs scored. K. Miller drove a two bagger. Simmons flied out. Carruthers bunted safely and Miller went to third. B. Miller walked. Hall singled bringing in Miller and Wark knocked a double sending in Carruthers and B. Miller. Fowler, who was the first man up, was out, and the last man up also was out. That is the whole story of the tragic second innings for Harrisons.

No more runs were scored until the sixth when Carruthers popped to Calladine. B. Miller bunted safely. Hall bunted safely advancing Miller and Ward drove a long single over third bringing in Miller. Hall scored on Fowler's single. Fowler was forced at second by Frick. Cooper rolled to Calladine for the third out.

Three more runs were scored for the Separator men. Miller scored fo the next tally in the eighth and Hall dove a clean homer in the ninth to score Carruthers who had again bunted safely for the third time, bringing in two more runs, making a total of eleven.

Harrisons had eight scoreless innings, Dobson scoring the only run for them in the seventh when he singled safely, and was brought in by Dundas and Dorrington.

The game was uninteresting as there were no breaks except in the second and sixth innings when the Harrison men seemed to fall apart and made numerous errors that have already proved so disastrous during the year. The North End team has been hard hit this year as far as players are concerned. Losing their star catcher Ecobichon, and Smith at first, since the league started.

Carruthers as well as pitching a nice game laid down three perfect bunts that caught the Northerners flatfooted, and his whole team gave him air tight support, Jake Hall at third making many assists and Fowler at second stopping them all but one, and Frick on first making a perfect infield. While the outfield was as good and Bob Miller behind the plate was the same. Carruthers was not hit as hard as his rival moundsman, Nicols.

Dundas and Montgomery were the outstanding stars for Harrisons while Dorrington made numerous assists and Calladine on first did not miss many.

The teams lined up as follows:

De Laval—B. Miller, c; Hall, 3b; Ward, ss; Fowler, 2b; Frick. 1b; Cooper, cf; K. Miller, lf; Simmons, rf; Carruthers, p.

Harrisons—Dundas, 3b; Dorrington, 2b; Montgomery, cf; Caladine, 1b; Dalton, ss; Vinette, lf; Dobson, c; Johnson, rf; Nicols, p.

Score by innings:

Harrisons	000000100— 1
De Laval	050003102—11

Home runs—Frick, Cooper, Hall. Struck out—Carruthers 1, Nicols 0. Umpires—T. Holyman at the plate, F. Scates at the bases.

Canadians Take Three Victories In Preliminary Wrestling Bouts

AMSTERDAM, July 31.—(By W. H. Ingram, staff correspondent of the Canadian Press).—The preliminary wrestling bouts held here last night resulted in three wins and two losses for Canadians.

Dan McDonald of Toronto, defeated Angus of Britain in a bout where there was never any doubt of the result from the start. McDonald was on top of his man from the beginning to the ultimate fall.

Ten minutes after the start, Morris Letchford of Montreal was awarded his bout on points from Roosen of Belgium. Towards the close he lifted his man for a fall which his opponent narrowly escaped.

Don Stockton, another Montrealer, put Nasin of Britain on the mat at the end of eight minutes. Before that he just handled him in a fraternal way.

In the heavy weight class George of the United States team defeated E. M. McCready of Regina. McCready's chief fault seemed to be a slowness to take advantage of openings. James Trifinov another Regina heavy weight succumbed to Sparen the Belgian mat man.

FRANCE RETAINS TENNIS TROPHY

Rout U. S. Challengers by Margin of Four Notches to One.

TILDEN FALLS

AUTEUIL, France, July 31.—(Canadian Press).—With the brilliant little Henri Cochet handling Big Bill Tilden the first straight set beating of his Davis Cup career, the famous tennis musketeers of France yesterday retained the famous trophy by routing the United States challengers by a margin of four matches to one.

The defeat was the most decisive suffered by a United States Davis Cup team since the clean sweep of the Australians in New Zealand in 1911.

Even the veteran and mainstay, Tilden, could not stand before the fusillade and the sharp-shooting Cochet riddled him by scores of 9-7, 6-4, 6-4 in the most crushing Davis Cup reverse Big Bill has known in his nine solid years of play. With Cochet's triumph came the end of United States hopes of recapturing the cup this year as it gave France the required three victories out of five, but even then the French did not stop, Rene Lacoste drove home the final blow by polishing off John Hennessey in four set, 4-6, 6-1, 7-5, 6-3.

Just as the challenge round at Germantown a year ago in which the French won the cup for the first time was a personal triumph for Lacoste most of all, the remarkable successful defensive battle waged by the French on these courts for the last four days was largely due to the great work of Cochet. He was in on every victory won by his team, accounting for Hennessey and Tilden single-handed and pairing with Borotra to beat Big Bill and Frank Hunter in the doubles.

By the swift and decisive manner in which the former ball boy from Lyons conquered the great Tilden who proved on Friday that he is by no means through by beating his old rival, Lacoste, in the opening match, Henri made an impressive bid for the unofficial title of world's champion, the crown that belonged to Lacoste in 1924.

ROSENEATH WINS FROM HARWOOD

Take 5-4 Decision in Baseball Game Played in Agricultural Grounds.

ROSENEATH, July 31 (Examiner Correspondence).—One of the best baseball games of the season was played in the agricultural grounds on Saturday afternoon, when Harwood and Roseneath battle to a score of 5 to 4 in favor of Roseneath.

Roseneath scored one run in the first innings and Harwood scored one run in the second innings.

In the third innings, Harwood did not get a chance to score a run. The first two batters were hit out before reaching first base while the third batter gave a high fielder that was neatly caught by Howard Lapp. Thus the third and fourth innings were short, neither teams scoring a run.

Harwood scored two runs in the fifth innings, while Rodey played clever and scored one run for Roseneath. At half time the score was 3 to 2 in favor of Harwood.

The sixth and seventh innings were played with skill, neither teams scoring a run.

The eighth innings was spicy and well played, each team winning one run.

The ninth innings was the most exciting, both teams being keyed to top notch form. Harwood failed in securing a run while luck favored Roseneath, when Jim Eddington, pinch-hitter for Mern Brown, got a double hit, and C. W. Varcoe batted for Howard Lapp, got a single, scoring with a winning run; thus giving Roseneath two runs on the last innings.

Dunnett, the superb pitcher for Roseneath, did good work on the mound.

Score by innings:

Roseneath	100010013—5
Harwood	010020010—4

CLEVELAND WINS FROM CHAMPIONS

Defeats New York 4-2 in Spite of Ruth's 41st Home Run.

NEW YORK, July 31.—The Cleveland Indians made it three out of four in the present series when they defeated the world's champions by 4 to 2 yesterday at Cleveland. Walter Miller, the Ohio State southpaw, pitched effectively in the pinches.

Only Babe Ruth's forty-first home run of the season, which he hit in the sixth inning with Combs on base, saved New York from a shutout.

Miller allowed eleven hits but was stingy with them when the Yanks threatened to score. In the eighth he struck out Ruth and Gehrig in succession with runners on first and second.

Alphonse Thomas chalked up his thirteenth victory of the season as the White Sox blanked Washington 6 to 0. The game was the fastest played on Comiskey Field this year, consuming but one hour and twenty minutes.

Thomas allowed seven hits, but the Senators failed to assemble two in a single inning. The White Sox bagged eight hits, but five of them were for extra bases. Hunnefield derricked a home run into the left field stands in the fifth inning, scoring two men ahead of him.

Failure of the Browns to sufficiently bunch their 15 hits off a pair of Philadelphia hurlers sent Dan Howley's team into the eighth straight defeat handed out by the Athletics, 8 to 4, at St. Louis. In squeezing out a triumph the Athletics crept up to within 5½ games of the Yankees, who lost.

Rommell presented the Browns with 13 hits in six and two-third innings before Walberg took over the burden, while Grey was issuing nine hits to the Athletics.

Harry Rice's home run in the ninth inning gave Detroit a 2 to 1 victory over the Boston Red Sox in the fourth game of the series at Detroit. The circuit clout broke up a pitchers' battle between Ed. Morris, Boston hurler, and Kenneth Holloway of the Tigers. The score had been tied since the sixth inning.

START SURFACE OF PAVEMENT

Paving Company On Last Stage Of Work On Campbellford Streets.

ON GRAND ROAD.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, July 31. — At seven o'clock yesterday morning everything was in readiness for the first of the surface coating to be laid on Campbellford's three miles of paved streets. All day there has been a group of citizens and town officials lining the sidewalk watching the work. Not a little satisfaction has been expressed as the work proceeded and everyone is delighted to realize that after a season of detour, bumps, and unfinishd streets, their cars will soon be singing along over 'marble top' streets with no mud puddles or bumps to dodge.

The first material was laid on Grand road, the connecting link with the Brighton county highway which connects with the provincial highway in that town. The operation consists of laying a first layer of coarse mixture which is rolled in and a finer mixture laid on top of that. Over the two there is a film of sand dust applied with a brush broom which is supposed to keep the pavement from becoming sticky in hot weather. When first finished, it has the appearance of concrete, but will darken in the course of time.

Among the spectators there were numerous humorous remarks concerning the steam roller operators inventive turn of mind. It was generally conceded that operating a steam roller of the type used is a hot job and the sun does not tend to make it any cooler. With an eye to his own comfort, the roller man had attached an umbrella to his machine and continued his work in the comfort which its shade afforded him.

The concrete base on the Stirling connection, Centre street, is now complete and yesterday morning the concrete machinery and men moved to Mill street and began operations there. While the street is under construction in front of the fire hall, the truck has been parked on the open ground close to the band stand where it is immediately available should an alarm be turned in.

Sewering is still one of the main features of the program and the business section of the east side of the river is badly torn up at the present time.

LEBARR STARS ON THE MOUND FOR CRESCENTS

Recruit Pitcher Holds Hard-Hitting Rays to Four Hits.

WIN BY 1-0 COUNT

Victors Play Winning Ball in Infield and the Garden.

Crescents brought about the biggest upset of the season when, with Lew LeBarr on the firing line, they scored the only run of their game with Raybestos last evening. The recruit pitcher from first base held the hard-hitting Rays to four hits, struckout eight batters, and did not issue a pass. And for the most part, the Crescents played winning ball in the field. An exceptionally fine play stopped Rays from tieing the count in the fifth. Oscar Nicholls sent out a long drive to right, one of the longest hits seen at Exhibition Park, and it looked good for a clean homer. Ted LeBarr went after the spalding, shot the ball to Joe Jones who threw accurately to the plate, where Brioux caught the runner by a step.

Art Armstrong started the game for the leaders and pitched himself out of a hole in the second when Ross singled and Williams doubled, neither scoring. A double play helped him in the third to stop Crescents. In the fourth, he passed Ross, who stole second base and scored on Ted LeBarr's long double to middle. Raybestos then sent in Maudsley, their star hurler, to finish the game. Crescents put two runners on but could not tally and they went out in order in the sixth.

Hillier with a double did the only damage for Raybestos in the first, but the second saw LeBarr in a tight corner. Barry had got a single through short, and Williams did not get Corrin's grounder in time to force the runner to second. On Rogers' tap, Brioux threw to first and got Rogers, Barry and Corrin advancing. Moore hit to the box and LeBarr tagged Barry going in. Armstrong finished the frame with a tap to the pitcher

Raybestos put the first batter on in the third and fourth without success and only three batsmen faced the Crescents' hurler in the fifth, Oscar Nichols making his bid for a homer in this frame Raybestos were retired in order in the sixth and seventh, on three strikeouts and three fielding chances.

LARKIN RETAINS POST IN LONDON

Statement Made Before Leaving Refutes Rumors of Transfer to Washington.

NOW ON ATLANTIC.

LONDON, July 31 (Canadian Press Cable). — Some papers here to-day suggested that the Hon. P. C. Larkin, Canadian High Commissioner, now on his way to Canada aboard the steamship Albertic, will not return to London, but will succeed the Hon. Vincent Massey as Canadian Minister to Washington.

The Canadian Press has the best grounds for asserting that there is no truth in the suggestion of the London papers. The day before Mr. Larkin sailed for Canada, he voluntarily told the Canadian Press that he was obliged to return to London quickly because important business awaited him here.

EDITH CAVELL SERVICE HELD

Fourth Annual Memorial Ceremony Conducted on Side of Mountain.

IMPRESSIVE EVENT

JASPER, Alta., July 31.—Far away from the old city of Norwich where she lived as a child, far away from the war and from Brussels where she worked and where she died, in the midst of the Rocky Mountains of Canada Nurse Edith Cavell was honored on Sunday afternoon. The citizens of the town of Jasper and the guests at Jasper Park Lodge held their fourth annual memorial service at the foot of the noble mountain peak which was named after her. On the moraine running down from the angel glacier they gathered, behind them the towering forms of Mount Cavel, snow cloaked and ice girt, and the harsh Mount Sorrow, below them the wide valley, the green lake and the river, and about them the heavy sky.

The chaplain of the park, Rev. H. A. Edwards, who instituted the service, and his white surpliced choir came in procession up the gravel ridge, and the simple ceremony began with the singing of "Rock of Ages." His Excellency the Governor-General, who was present, accompanied by Lady Willingdon, R. H. Knight, superintendent of the park, His Honor T. A. Burrows, Lieutenant-Governor of Manitoba, and Mrs. Burrows and other guests at the lodge read the Twenty-third Psalm. Mr. Edwards then offered prayer, after which the congregation joined in singing "Nearer My God to Thee," led by J. L. Snape and the choir. As Sergeant Paton of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police slowly lowered the flag, the bugler played the last post, and not another sound was heard except the rush of the little stream hurrying down into the valley.

A shower of rain drops urged Mr. Edwards to eliminate his address, and the last words of "God Save the King" had scarcely been sung when a flash of lighting sprang out of the sky over Mount Cavell, followed by a thunder clap. They seemed part of the service.

Bridgenorth

(Examiner Correspondence)

BRIDGENORTH, July 31.—Miss Eunice Hammond of Smith is visiting her cousin, Miss Lillian McGregor.

In the absence of the pastor, Mr. Edgar, of Gilmour Memorial Baptist Church, the service was taken by the deacon. Allan B. Mann led the devotional part of the meeting five of the deacons led in prayer. The lesson was read by Mr. Mann from Gal. 2:1-21.

Mr. Charles Moore read the sermon. Mrs. James Young and Mrs. Joseph R. Mann sang two beautiful solos. The service was closed with prayer by Mr. A. B. Mann.

Miss Jane Grant of Peterborough is visiting Mrs. Harold Archer, 4th Line of Smith.

Mr. and Mrs. Maxwell Archer of Smith spent the week end with friends in Peterborough.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Magee, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Magee and daughter Daisy, Mr. and Mrs. Evans Storey of East Emily were recent guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. Gordon Mann, Pinecrest Farm, Smith.

Mr. Alex Rosborough of Peterborough spent the week end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Rosborough, "Evergreen Farm", Smith.

Mr. William Mann and three grandchildren of Smith spent Sunday with friends in Lakefield.

Mr. and Mrs. Curtis McConkey of Toledo, Ohio, motored home to attend the funeral of the former's father, Mr. J. C. McConkey, who died here suddenly.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Fowler of Best's Station spent Sunday with friends in Bridgenorth.

Mr. and Mrs. Shellard Huffman and three children motored to Rochester to spend a few days with friends and while there will visit friends in Buffalo and Niagara Falls.

Mrs. David Lewis of Smith is visiting her daughter in Toronto.

Mrs. Sarah Armstrong and daughter Evelyn of Peterborough spent the week end with Mr. and Mrs. Wilfrid Jackson, East Emily.

Mr. Frank Deck was a recent guest at the home of his brother, Mr. William Dick, Middle Line, Smith.

Miss Erma Rosborough of Peterborough was a guest of Miss Margaret Mann, Smith.

DOCTOR ASKS DEATH.

doomed to years of invalidism and almost certainly to defective mentality and physique thereafter. Dr. H. J. Haiselden, the attending physician, said.

By an operation, he told the mother, the child's life might be saved, but no medical science could avoid the doom of imbecility and deformity that a prolonged life would bring.

Mrs. Bollinger told the physician to use his judgment, and Dr. Haiselden, as he expressed it, "let nature take her course."

Death Soon Follows

He administered small quantities of food for a few days, enough to keep the child from starvation, and death followed from its natal ailments.

A veritable cyclone of criticism arose and an autopsy was performed on the child. This revealed death from natural causes, but failed to allay the clamor for punishment for the physician.

A coroner's jury of six physicians was impaneled and an inquest held, which exonerated Dr. Haiselden of all blame.

Later, State's Attorney Maclay Hoyne refused to prosecute Dr. Haiselden, despite a strong demand for action from Attorney-General Lucey.

Dr. Haiselden, in speaking of the "mercy death" said:

"I decided the child should not add its weight to the already large burden of defectives. I am answerable only to my own conscience for not preventing death.

"I allowed nature to take its course. We fed the child. It was sensible only to discomfort. There was no brain development to register suffering. Nature now has made blank her mistake.

"I do not call this taking human life. Many say arbitrarily that life is life and should be preserved, no matter what the cost, but I see no argument in the vast debt which would accrue in institution if this argument were followed.

"If, having been given power to decide, I should have allowed the child to live, I would consider myself guilty against the race. As it is, I consider I have done a favor to the race.

Done Many Times

"What I have done has been done many times—but quietly. Many things go on in the medical business which are done solely for good but which might be condemned by so-called moralists and self-named social saviors.

"I have even taken into my own hands the sterilization of defective boys and girls, but always with the consent of their parents. And I know I have done right."

The mother said:

"I gave the doctor permission to do as he thought best with my child. I did not want it to live. I wanted it to die. Dying now is better than living with a crippled brain and body. I wouldn't visit such suffering on myself nor on my husband, and certainly not on my own child."

Another case, only slightly dissimilar, occurred in New York a few weeks after "Baby Bollinger's" death in Chicago.

Dr. Julius Goldsmith, the attending physician, refused to operate when the parents forbade him to do so, and an operation was the only thing, the physician said, that could save the child, a girl, born hopelessly paralyzed from the waist down.

Dr. Goldsmith said:

"For the sake of humanity I would rather let this child die now than live seven or eight years in misery. Its life could be saved now, but it would always be a cripple. It is better dead."

Another case that attracted wide interest was that of an English physician, Dr. A. T. Simpson, who allowed a Sheffield patient to die without taking any steps to try to counteract poison he had taken.

John Robinson, the patient, had been suffering from dropsy and heart disease for some time and took an overdose of a dangerous medicine. Dr. Simpson announced that he believed Robinson better off dead than living a few more years in agony,and did not try to save him.

Dr. Simpson was acquitted by a coroner's jury.

ITALA FIASCO STILL RAMBLES

Countries Loss of Prestige, Men and Money Causes Gloom.

TREATY ABANDONED.

CHIASSO, Switzerland, July 31.—Fascist chiefs, it is plain from this border town, are gloomily pondering the balance sheet of General Umberto Nobile's polar expedition and finding at losst in international prestige with the loss in men and money.

It is this international reaction that mortifies the country's pride, fed upon six years of praise without criticism. The Swedish and Russian statements of $40,000 and $250,000 expenses for rescuing the castaways in the red tent and Mussolini's enforced thanks to foreigners for saving Italians, also rankle.

The average Italian is not satisfied with General Nobile's reasons for being rescued first. Official bulletins are not believed.

The news has leaked out that the Italia's wireless worked for two hours after the disaster, transmitting the news of Vincent Pomella's death to Rome.

The Fascist press' assertion that Gen. Nobile's was the greatest of Polar expeditions, arouses secret mirth. A naval officer interpreted the general opinion by saying the fisaco cost the country more prestige than a big battle lost during war time.

Weighing heaviest upon the dictator's own pride is the wreck of the Italo-French friendship treaty negotiations because of a bitter press war between the two countries over the Polar tragedy. The French Foreign Office sent a sharp message that Fascist press violence against France must cease.

Working with French Ambassador de Beaumarchais since January for a better understanding, Mussolini had almost brought the treaty into port. New Fascist attacks and French retaliation have sent it out to the high seas again.

What hurts most of all are the hard knocks from foreign countries whose press Fascist frowns cannot terrorize. It is a bitter pill to swallow.

DETAILS CABLED TO WASHINGTON

United States To Be Informed of Compromise On Naval Armaments.

ON TWO METHODS.

LONDON, July 31 (Canadian Press).—The details of the Franco-British naval compromise mentioned by Sir Austen Chamberlain, Secretary for Foreign Affairs, in the House of Commons yesterday, are stated to have been cabled to the British Ambassador at Washington, where they are expected to be presented to-day or to-morrow.

A Government spokesman told the Associated Press to-day that the compromise had been reached between the two methods of naval armament reduction on which previous conferences have split, namely, the limitation by total tonnage favored by France, and by categories, favored by Great Britain.

Under the total or global tonnage system no restriction is placed upon the types of vessel to be included under the total tonnage allotted to any country, while under the category system, the total tonnage of various types of war vessels is agreed upon. The question of submarine construction is definitely involved in the compromise, the spokesman said.

In the event that the United States and other nations accept the compromise, another meeting of the preparatory commission on disarmament of the League of Nations will be called to consider the next step.

In the event that the United States and other nations reject the compromise, a meeting will be called to consider modifications of it. The compromise will not become effective until the major powers accede to it.

THEATRES

AT THE CAPITOL.

This is one of the most interesting of the feature pictures of the Capitol Theatre since the three-a-week series was inaugurated. Anyone familiar with the language applied to the underworld of to-day will remember the term "racket," which has to do with the manifold grafting activities of the crooked politicans of the big cities.

Louis Wolheim, with the broken nose and the gorilla-like head, holds just as much, and probably more, of the attention of the audience in "The Racket," in the role of Nicholas Scarsi, leader of a gang which rules over many wards of a big city and which controls the votes of hundreds of cheap grafters. Corcoran is his rival, and one of the thrilling episodes is the killing of the latter by Scarsi in a night club where the two men, like wolves, face each other in a silent duel which ends in the stealthy murder of Scarsi's enemy.

Thomas Meighan is the Captain James McQuigg of the police force, who runs foul of Scarsi and vows to "get" him. Scarsi has him sent to a "stick" precinct, but here the drama shifts and Meighan once more gets control of the situation when he brings in Scarsi's kid brother, as a "hit and run" driver. Scarsi comes alone and shoots the policeman who has made the arrest and then makes a quick getaway. Later, he is arrested, and after his political party has decided that he has made it a little too hot for them, they drop him and he is shot while staging a departure by way of the window.

Thomas Meighan has his usual role, that of a somewhat puzzled good man battling against difficulties, and appears to be younger and lighter in this picture. He does his usual good work also and has a strong supporting cast. It is a very entertaining picture, depicting the underworld crooked politics of big city life in an interesting and graphic way.

There is a funny comedy and some amusing close-ups of movie stars in the short reels.—Jeanette.

"THAT'S MY DADDY"

With Reginald Denny at the Capitol Theatre To-night is a Rollicking Farce—One of the Season's Greatest Mirth Makers.

If you should happen to be one of those persons who tells little lies just to avoid a little explaining "That's My Daddy," starrring Reginald Denny at the Capitol Theatre, was made especially for your joy.

The picture is unparalleled in its supreme humor. It shows just what might happen to a person telling a white lie for somebody else's benefit. It plunges the benign Denny into a Labyrinth of situations which require the adding to the original lie to such an extent that Denny is no longer himself.

Denny wrote the story and it proves that this jolly English comedian is more than just actor. The story is perfect.

Barbara Kent is delightful as the nurse-maid. She is very attractive and deserves all the cinema honors which have been heaped upon her in her year and a half in motion pictures.

Lillian Rich is exceedingly statuesque in her society role and is without doubt one of the most stunning blondes on the screen.

There is a little girl in this picture called Jane La Verne. This, we are told, is her first picture but it looks as though she had been on the screen about fifteen years she is so clever. But that couldn't be so, for she is just four years old.

Mathilde Brundage and Armand Kalis are exceptional as is the entire supporting cast including Wilson Benge, Charles Coleman and Art Currier.

CHILD KILLED.

TORONTO, July 31.—Five-year-old Hugh Wardrope, 220 King Street East, was running across the Esplanade, near George Street, yesterday afternoon, in pursuit of two other boys, aged 7 and 3 years, respectively, to climb upon a passing ice wagon, when he was struck down by a westbound motor truck driven by Louis Frankel, Lakeview AAvenue, Long Branch, and fatally hurt. Death was due to a fracture of the skull and internal injuries. The body was removed to the Morgue, where an inquest will be held.

Frankel was questioned by Detective Skinner. His story seemed fair enough, but when the brakes of his truck were tested they were found, it is claimed, to be defective. In fact, the police say, they had practically no grip at all. Frankel was arrested on a charge of criminal negligence, and later released on $3,000 bail.

The HIGH COMPRESSION Motor is no "new problem" for CASTROL

Castrol solved the lubrication problems of high-speed, high-compression motors over ten years ago

AMERICA has adopted, finally, the principles of motor design that have been so popular in Europe for many, many years.

America must now adopt the principle of lubrication which is part and parcel of the problem of the high-speed, high-compression motor.

That principle is CASTROL.

The speed and stress of the high-compression engine called for a quality of oil that taxed the scientific resources of the engineers of Europe to the utmost. The Research Department of C. C. Wakefield & Co. Limited, however, once more solved a problem when they perfected the grades of Castrol which were already famous throughout Europe.

For that reason a great many leading manufacturers of famous high-compression engines today specifically recommend CASTROL—including such famous names as the British-made Rolls-Royce, Sunbeam, Vauxhall, Bentley; also Bugatti, Hispano Suiza, Isotta Fraschini, Mercedes.

You have used CASTROL in the older model motors. You have observed its astonishing silky durability. You have experienced its marvelous heat resisting qualities.

That was because you were using a super-oil, perfected to meet the exacting demands of the high-compression engine.

With your new car, you cannot risk experiment. The experiments were made for you many years ago. CASTROL has been tested and proved by years of experience and is the frankly specified oil of many of the world's leading manufacturers of high speed motors.

Sold by leading garages and independent service stations everywhere.

WOMEN TO HAVE SPECIAL SECTION

Interests Will be Well Looked After at Produced-in-Canada Fair.

Special attention is being paid this year to women's interests at the Produced-in-Canada Exhibition to be presented by Kiwanis Club in October.

There will be a special women's section, and the speakers will be outstanding in their various fields. The list of prominent speakers which follows indicates the diversity of topics, and the fact that Dr. Craig has succeeded in obtaining so outstanding women and men is an indication not only of his efforts on behalf of the Exhibition, but also of the importance this Kiwanis fair is taking in the eyes of the rest of the Province.

The following are some of the speakers:

Mrs. Jean Muldrew, director of the Soldiers' Settlement Board, Ottawa.

Miss Ethel M. Chapman, editor of the home section of Ontario Farmer.

Mrs. Groves, Toronto Board of Education.

Miss Mary White, editor of women's section, Mail and Empire.

Miss Jean Wilson, special demonstrator, Consumers' Gas Corporation, Toronto.

Mrs. T. L. Crossley, past president of the American Women's Club of Toronto and now president of the Home and School Association of North Toronto Collegiate.

Dr. E. E. King, special medical adviser, Canadian National Exhibition Baby Show.

Augustus Bridle, music and dramatic critic, Toronto Daily Star.

Capt. J. S. Atkinson, Canadian Bureau for the Advancement of Music.

Sir Joseph Flavelle.

Cyrus the Great founded the Persian Empire.

THREE MEN KILLED IN SHIP EXPLOSION

Boiler of Lighter Hurled High in Air in New York Harbor.

NEW YORK, July 31 (Canadian Press).—Three men were believed to have died early this morning in an explosion and fire on the steam lighter Chancellor, tied up at a Staten Island pier. The boiler of the craft was blown high in the air and damaged another lighter and two buildings.

JUST AS GOOD.

UNCLE WIGGILY

By HOWARD R. GARIS

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

UNCLE WIGGILY'S ICE-CREAM

Never had it seemed so hot in Woodland as it did the day after Jackie Bow Wow begged some rags of Uncle Wiggily, making the rabbit gentleman buy them back because the rags happened to be his wife's best red dress. The sun shone down like a ball of fire and the very trees, strong as they were, seemed to wilt in the heat.

As for the grass and tender flowers, they curled up and drooped without any cool wind to cheer them.

"Whew!" squeaked Nurse Jane Fuzzy Wuzzy, as she held her long tail out of the window of the coolest room in the bungalow. "This is the hottest day I ever knew!"

"It is warm," said Uncle Wiggily, who had on his very thinnest fur coat. "But still it might be worse."

"What do you mean—worse?" asked his wife. "Isn't this bad enough? Why, even the children are sitting in the shade, and when it is too hot for them to play games I know it's very warm. What do you mean worse, Wiggy?"

"I mean it would be a lot worse if there wasn't a cool place where we could go and eat ice-cream," said Mr. Longears.

At the mention of ice-cream, the very warmest of the forty 'leven little rabbits resting on the shady side of the bungalow, roused up, and Baby Bunty, the visiting orphan rabbit, who was sort of number forty twelve, asked:

"What about ice-cream, Unkie Wig?"

"I said ice-cream was very cooling on a hot day," answered Mr. Longears, twinkling his pink nose noncommittal like.

"Is that all you have to say?" Nurse Jane wanted to know.

"Indeed it isn't!" answered Mr. Longears with a laugh. But he did not laugh long, for laughing, as you know, makes you fat and the fatter you grow the hotter you are. "What I was going to say," said Mr. Longears, "is that we can all go to the cave of Mr. Whitewash, the Polar Bear, and eat ice-cream. He told me, last night he thought it would be very hot to-day and he invited me to bring you all to his cave."

"We can't get there any too soon," said Nurse Jane. "I'm almost melted."

"Ice-cream melts when it gets inside of you," said Tingle. "And I know the answer to the puzzle Daddicums made last night!"

"Hush, child!" begged her mother. "It is too hot to think of puzzles." But Tingle insisted on singing out the answer to the puzzle of the man, girl and boy walking down a long hall. "The little girl was tallest, though the man looked so because the slanting lines made him seem to," chattered Tingle. "It was a jolly puzzle."

"Well, if we're ready, let's go ice-creaming!" called Uncle Wiggily. "Everybody must carry a parasol and a leaf fan!" Growing on the shady side of the bungalow were some big burdock leaves. Each little rabbit picked one to use as an umbrella to keep off the sun. Smaller leaves from the plaintain weed served as fans. Then the procession of rabbits and Nurse Jane, led by Uncle Wiggily, went off to the Polar Bear's cool ice cave.

"Oh, how lovely it is in here!" sighed Mrs. Longears, as she went inside.

"Has he got ice-cream for all of us!" whispered Baby Bunty.

"Hush, my dear!" begged her mother. But jolly Mr. Whitewash laughed and roared:

"I've got gallons and bushels of ice-cream! Sit down and I'll dish it out!" So they all sat down on seats made of snowballs and soon they were eating strawberry, banana, vanilla and chocolate ice-cream and feeling much cooler.

"It is very kind of you to give us this picnic, Mr. Whitewash," said Uncle Wiggily. "I am much cooler now. I feel just fine."

"Do you feel cool enough to make a puzzle for me to see if I can do it?" asked the Bear.

"Indeed I do," answered the bunny. So he made a mixed-up picture of a queer animal to see if the Bear could guess who it was.

If you put the pieces together you will see for yourself.

T.T.C. EMPLOYEES WANT ARBITRATION

Vote Against Acceptance of Commission's Offer To Rene wAgreement.

TORONTO, July 31.— A renewed demand for arbitration as the means of settling the dispute between the Toronto Transportation Commission and Division 113 of the International Street Railway Employees' Union was the outcome of the vote taken yesterday by circularizing ballots among th men as they reported at the barns.

The number of votes cast totalled 2,310, which represents practically 75 per cent. of the union's membership. It is believed that the Commission will accept as satisfactory and final this vote, which was a repeat canvass taken in consequence of the Commission's insistence that a previous vote did not represent the full sentiment of the union. Officials of the union agreed to ask the men a second time if they wanted to accept the Commission's offer to renew last year's working contract, on the understanding that if the men voted adversely the Commission would proceed promptly with arbitration.

The men voted on one question: "Are you in favor of renewing the present agreement, together with the adjustments referred to" (in a bulletin accompanying the ballot) "until March 31, 1930?" A total of 1,633 men voted "No" on this question, and 677 men were disposed to accept the offer of the Commission.

Appointment of its representative on the Arbitration Board and carrying out of other arrangements to inaugurate the arbitration proceedings at an early date, will be attended to at the regular meeting of the Commission to-day, it was intimated last night. Commission officials, while somewhat disappointed at the result of the vote, accept the figures as a genuine cross section of opinion within the union.

FAIR PUBLICITY ALREADY BEGUN

Big Banner On George Street Calls Attention To Industrial Exhibition.

ADVERTISING WIDESPREAD.

"If what you have to advertise is worth advertising, then it is worth advertising well," is the slogan apparently adopted by those responsible for gaining to the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition, as widespread publicity as is possible. Within the next few weeks, the fame of this city's "Ex." will be communicated to the entire district, and, indeed, in other districts whence people will come by motor, by rail, and by boat. Among the first steps taken in the 1928 publicity campaign has been the placing in a conspicuous position on George Street, immediately north of Charlotte Street, of a wide canvas banner on which are inscribed the words, "Peterborough Exhibition. $12,000.00 in premiums. Hear Cervonne's Band." The above inscription has been most advantageously patterned and will be a valuable medium of advertising.

RACE IS HOT FOR SECOND PLACE

Bethany Can Create Tie By Winning Three Remaining Games.

Crescents' remarkable comeback with a patched-up team against Raybestos last night adds new interest to the league race, and makes second place extremely doubtful. Raybestos cannot be dislodged from the play-off. Three games remain to be played.

Bethany can make it a tie for second place by taking two games from Cogs and one from Crescents, in which case the three teams would have five wins and seven losses.

If Cogs win and lose and Crescents win, these two teams would tie for second place.

If Cogs win two and Crescents one, Cogs would gain second place; the standing being: Cogs, seven wins and five losses; Crescents, six wins and six losses.

If Cogs win and lose and Crescents drop their remaining game, Cogs get second place.

As is indicated, every game will mean a battle, and a big crowd will see Bethany and Cogs play here tomorrow evening. The game will start at six o'clock.

MINING BRIEFS

A Special Service to The Examiner

Encouraging results are being obtained in diamond drilling at the Ritchie Gold Mines, it is reported, and cores drawn from No. 1 and No. 2 veins indicated widths of 10 to 12 feet together with average values of about $6 per ton. Two other veins, one believed to be the continuation of the Murphy vein and the other a continuation of the Perry-Kirkland deposit, have been disclosed on the Ritchie and these zones are to be subjected to considerable exploration at any early date. Meantime, the third diamond drill hole is being driven and plans are to be made involving the installation of a mining plant.

It is rumored that the Premier Gold have practically completed an agreement to take over the Woodbine property. It is further reported that all papers concerned have gone to New York for final approval. This would increase the ore reserve in this vicinity for the Premier Company and allow them to use to advantage their present equipment.

Work has been started on the building for a 50-ton mill at the Silver Cup group, on the Nine Mile Mountain, B.C. The machinery has been ordered and will be shipped to the property as soon as the condition of the roads will allow heavy loads to pass over them. It is expected that the mill will be put into operation early in the fall.

While diamond drilling is being continued on the properties of McVittie-Graham Mines, it is learned that the management are interested right now in pushing ahead with the preliminary work on Group 5, in McLellan Township, known as the "Moose Lake Property." A well-mineralized outcrop is said to occur on this property and some ore was produced from it during the war period. Engineer Fisher, in his report, referred to it as containing "an important deposit of copper-nickel ore which it is claimed has been proven to a depth of 200 feet by diamond drilling." It is intended, as soon as preliminary work is completed, to begin the sinking of a shaft to an immediate objective of around 250 feet, it is claimed, in order to explore the indicated downward extension of the mineralized outcrop.

Officials of Acadia Gold Mines, located in Oldham, Nova Scotia, are in town for a few days. They state that the shaft is now down past 2,300 feet. The lowest station as at that horizon, but new levels will soon be established at greater depths. The Stirling vein they say, is opening up well. Some high assays were taken from this showing which has been traced for several hundred feet on surface. The initial unit of their mill is running 100 tons per day. This will soon be increased by the addition of another unit. The mill can be stepped up to a capacity of 1,000 tons daily. It is understood that the stock of the company will soon be listed on the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange, Toronto.

It is reported that both faces of the drift on the 150-foot level of the Amulet are still in high grade ore. This body is said to be the No. 8.

The annual general meeting of the Emperor Mines, B.C., was held recently. It was announced that a report had been made by George Jamme of Seattle, in which he estimated that 600,000 tons of ore had been blocked out. The property is situated above the Dunwell, in the Bear River district.

Good Indications on Engineers' Holdings

A report on the properties of Engineers' Holding Company, Limited, has been prepared by Douglas S. Baird, geologist, in which he says, in part:

"The property consists of 7,000 acres in the district of Algoma on the northeast extremity of Hawk Lake."

"A vein approximately 30 feet wide, and cross-trenched at 200 foot intervals, strikes about 20 degrees east of north, and has been traced for a length of a mile. The vein is essentially in the greenstone and appears to follow the abbreviated zone. In places, the vein is well mineralized with chalcopyrite, and concentrations of spalherite and galena were noted in two places along the extent of this vein.

"In my opinion this a copper-gold property of unquestioned merit. The connection between the Algoman porphyry and Kewatin greenstone is favorable for mineralization, and the fact that an ore shoot is indicated on the surface, leads one to believe that development work would be fully justified.

"After inspecting this property, one would be led to believe that an electrical survey which would have its beginning on the ore shoot already outlined and traversing along the length of the vein, should disclose information whereby a diamond drill could be set up to advantage.

Progress Report Issued by Rypan Porcupine

R. Holland-Burls, M.E., in a progress report on the Rypan Porcupine Mines property, states:

"Trenching across the porphyry dyke has now given us a width of 75 feet of mineralization, which is now being blasted across its whole width riched zone for the spot to centralise work for the main workings. In sumto ascertain a better idea of the onmarizing the progress made, it is more than satisfactory, and the general outlook is one that is looked on with entire satisfaction at this early stage of development.

"With these developments in hand the fact is clearly evident that the mineralized zones are living up to their reputation in the Porcupine camp, which continues to be the backbone of the gold output of Northern Ontario."

Directors of Moffatt Hall to Meet

Directors of Moffatt Hall Gold Meet in Haileybury on August 1st for the purpose of formally ratifying the sale of the company and also to ratify the calling of the next general meeting, which will be for the purpose of approving the action of the directors.

Losses Predominant In Mine Exchange

TORONTO, July 31. — (Canadian Press.)—There were no issues active enough to arouse undue interest at the morning session of the standard mining exchange to-day. Barry Hollinger, after opening at 40, closed to sell at a loss of four at 37. Hollinger Consolidated slumped 25 at 10.50 and Lake Shore lost 20 at 21.50. Noranda lost 25 and in very light trading sold at 53.50. Sherritt Gordon was also down 25 at 6.50, while Sudbury Basin was down 20 at 7.50. Tough Oakes dropped three points at 20. Treadwell registered a gain of 15 at 18.00 and McIntyre five at 23.25. Most of the western issues were practically unchanged with the exception of Central Manitoba, selling at 89, an advance of one. Big Missouri was up a half at sixty.

Ticker Talk

By H.O.

(Unofficial Opinions on the Markets

MONTREAL, July 31.—Local 'bulls' were disappointed with the action of the Montreal market last week. The exceptional strength prevailing in New York did not carry over into prices here, this being contrary to what transpired on former occasions. For some time past, it was generally agreed that the action of the local market depends largely on what New York will do—but this is another case of where the expected did not happen. It very seldom does—in the market.

Abitibi

The ticker is attempting to tell in no uncertain manner that the dividend on the common stock is in danger. How far would the stock decline if the dividend of $4 a share was passed. This question was the chief topic of conversation on the Street this morning. The general opinion is that without any dividend at all Abitibi common is an excellent purchase on a scale down for any one who is prepared to sit with such a commitment for a period of two or three years. At this particular time it is well to bear in mind that Abitibi controls low cost mills and has a balance sheet with such outstanding strength that it is in a strong position to weather any storm.

A large shareholder of this company said this morning that he had been in touch with a prominent insider last week about the dividend question. He was informed that the Abitibi Company was in such an envious financial position that even if nothing were earned on the common shares for a couple of years there was no reason why the dividend should not be paid.

At this particular time it is interesting to recall that the change effected in the capital set-up recently means a saving of nearly $900,000 annually and reduces the annual charges on Bonds and Preferred stocks from $5,592,953 or 7.35 per cent. to 4,668,524 or 5.45 per cent.

International Nickel, due to its double listing, was the only stock to score a substantial advance, the security reaching 97 5-8 only 5 3-8 points under its record high for all time. The move-up of this issue can be attributed to an over-crowded short interest part of which run to cover from time to time, thereby causing small bulges to ensue. Rumours current in the street, present developments at the company's properties and the fact that a number of directors will visit the property this week, all will tend to keep "Nickel" in the public eye for some time.

The agricultural implement stocks, namely Massey-Harris and Cockshutt Plow, have been steady the past week or so. These companies are approaching the height of their season from a selling standpoint and a record crop has led to a greater demand than ever for implements for use on farms both East and West. That the companies mentioned will be in a position to meet these demands is a foregone conclusion, as the current enquiry for their output follows upon a more than ordinarily active season in a manufacturing sense.

Wall Street brokers are impressing upon their clients that this is a selective market and one of the issues selected is Canadian Pacific. One broker who professes to be well informed on the company's affairs says a special movement can be expected. He makes the statement C.P.R. has sold properties to the extent of $20 a share, and the treasury is in such a strong position that the company is now lending a large amount of money on call in Wall Street. The increase in earnings for June, however, is also an important factor to account for the strength of the stock recently.

Corn Deliveries Small But Prices Go Down

CHICAGO, July 31. —(Canadian Press).—Contrary to expectations, receipts of corn in Chicago to-day proved small. Prices nevertheless, underwent an early set back. Leading holders of July delivery of corn were quoted as saying that there was no desire to rush the market up. Opening at 1¼ cent decline to ⅝ cent advance, corn values soon underwent a general sag. Wheat and oats were also easy, with wheat starting unchanged to 1¼ cent off and later receding all round.

Opening prices were: Wheat, July 118½; September, 121⅝; Corn, July, 111¾; September, 85½; Oats, July 43⅝; September 39¼.

Call Money Goes Up; Rally Is Cut Short

NEW YORK, July 31.—(Canadian Press).—The stock market had another "money scare" to-day when the call rate was marked up to 7½ per cent. and prices broke sharply as a result. The reaction came after an opening display of strength in which many issues were marked up one to five points. These gains were quickly reduced or cancelled and a long line of issues sagged, one to nearly nine points below yesterday's final quotations.

Call money renewed at six per cent and advanced successively to six and a half, seven, and seven and a half as banks called between $50,000,000 and $60,000,000 in loans in preparation for month end settlements.

The credit stringency completely overshadowed the day's business and trade news, most of which was favorable.

Montgomery Ward sold down two points to 179¾ in early trading and then climbed to a new high record at 182¾. Moving against the general trend.

Case Threshing Machine broke 5 ½ points, Eastman Kodak seven, and Wright Aeronautical, Commercial Solvents, Radio, International Harvester, and Dupont, three to four points, American Car and Foundry and Cuba Cane Sugar common and preferred sold at their lowest in years.

Widespread Trading Makes Few Changes

TORONTO, July 31.— (Canadian Press).—The morning session of the Toronto Stock Exchange was rather dull, with prices mostly firm, although a few issues experienced fractional changes. Although trading was very light it was spread out and almost every stock of the curb section demonstrated small activity. International Nickel lost its prominence to-day when with very light trading it suffered a relapse of one point, selling at 95. Brazilian, another former leader, lost ; at 54 and Massey-Harris ½ at 39¾. Abitibi, selling one point less, closed at 48. City Dairy and Hamilton United Theatres each gained ¼ at 55¾ and 17 respectively British American Oil, in the curb section ,remained firm at 37¾, while Imperial Oil was off one at 66.

FARMERS SEEK HARVEST HELP

Other Positions Listed at Employment Bureau For Skilled Men.

FEW WANT TO FARM.

Wanted—A granite letter cutter, diemakers, farm laborers, hotel help, mechanical draftsman, linemen, riveters.

Such a list confronts the visitor to the Peterborough branch of the Provincial Employment Bureau, while all information relative to any of the above positions is to be had for the asking at the desk. In conversation with The Examiner this morning, a member of the staff of the Employment Bureau advanced some interesting sidelights on the employment situation in Peterborough and district, some phases of which have assumed serious proportions.

Farm laborers are in greater demand this year than ever, calls coming in daily to the Bureau for men to help with the harvest. Yet there has not been any appreciable increase in the supply of workers to meet this demand. Many of those seeking employment lay no claim to agricultural knowledge, or if they do, they confess it rather than boast of it. Somehow, a large percentage of the unemployed give the farmer a wide berth.

That job as a mechanical draftsman appeared to be a good one for the right man, as it promised a salary of from $150.00 to $200.00 monthly while the other positions awaiting occupation are worthy of consideration by those who would avoid idleness.

SECOND DANCE IS UNDER WAY

Florence Cames, who had previously danced 364 hours in a non-stop competition, maintained an even pace and smiled superciliously at the more enthusiastic contestant, especially when Marino and "Bobby Brush" who startled the gathering with their operatic sartorial embellishment, dropped out. Superiority had short shrift, however, when it was learned that Messrs. Pyle and Crandall had engaged their services to start the affair, only to "egg" lesser lights on with an exhibition of ballroom dancing. They were the centre of attraction during their stay.

Then dance, dance, dance, until 3 o'clock, when "Miss Pittsburg" and her partner, Gene Terry, dropped by the wayside. "What a chance we have," moaned little Margaret Combe of Bridgeburg, "when a professional like that can't stand the gaff."

"Shut up and dance," bellowed her partner, "you're not here to talk." Now indeed began the "marathon." With the novelty of the undertaking gone, steps were carefully considered. "Slower! slower!" was the cry and cups of coffee were refused. Bundles of carrots were supplied by the waiting nurses. Then came a rest of fifteen short minutes. If rest it might be called, on cots by which waiting trainers sat and attempted to soothe their proteges. Then on, on, on, while the sounds of the night gradually diminished until at last the silence was broken only by the mechanical clatter of the orchestra and the shuffling of tiring feet.

SIX RESCUED FROM YACHT

Chicago Tourists Forced To Take To Water When Vessel Burns.

IN LAKE HURON.

SAULT STE MARIE, Ont., July 31.—(Canadian Press). —Word of the rescue yesterday afternoon of six Chicago residents from the 55 foot yacht Omoo, commanded by William F. Faurot, Chicago, while three miles out in the lake at Blind River, Ontario, 90 miles east of here, was received to-day.

There were three men and three women in the party, Mr. Faurot, Fred Spencer, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Faurot, Jr., Miss B. Richardson, and Miss Frances Richardson They left Miltford Haven yesterday morning for Blind River, intending to proceed from there to McGregor Bay for a few day's fishing. When they were three miles from Blind River a fire starting from a gas stove, broke out in the galley and three women and one of the men were put in the dinghy while the other two men, putting on life preservers, tied themselves to it. The burning yacht was sighted from shore by Leonard Carpenter, whom the party intended visiting, who set out in the tug Waubashene and effected a rescue.

This morning word was received at Blind River of another yacht aground near Sprague and the tug Waubashene has been sent to its assistance.

If a Malay child falls ill after receiving its name, it is temporarily adopted by another family, who give it a different name.

MIXED TOURNEY NEXT.

The Bowling Club is holding a mixed tournament on Wednesday afternoon. The draw will be made at 2 o'clock sharp, and only twenty entries will be accepted.

BOY SEES GIRL BUT RUNS FOUL OF AUTHORITIES

Borrows Car Without Owner's Leave To Finish His Journey.

PADDLES PART WAY.

Toronto Lad Hires Canoe at Lakefield to Paddle to Crowe's Landing.

Love plays queer pranks and often men get into trouble attempting to see their lady friends. On Saturday morning a Toronto boy left Sonya, where he had been spending the summer, to spend the week-end with his girl friend at Crowe's Landing. Arriving in Lakefield late Saturday night, he engaged a canoe from the Lakefield Boat Company and attempted to paddle to the Landing. At Young's Point the wind began to blow hard and the waves became higher and higher, with the result that he, not being an expert paddler, docked his canoe and spent the night in Young's Point.

Early Sunday morning he decided that he would attempt another mode of travel, so he entered a garage where a Packard and a Ford were kept. Not knowing how to drive a shift gear car, he took the Ford and arrived at the home of his friend at breakfast time.

Soon the theft was discovered by the car owner and he sent word to Provincial Constable H. Thompson, who spent most of the day putting together odds and ends of information which lead into a real trail to Crowe's Landing. There he went but could not locate the man or the car.

All day yesterday he kept in close touch with residents at both Young's Point and the Landing, and this morning he was told that a boy resembling the one he was looking for had gotten on the Islanda and was heading for Lakefield. Provincial Constable Thompson was at the boat to get his boy, and in a few moments they were on the way back to Crowe's Landing to get the car, which had been hidden behind a small shack.

The young chap, who is 20 years of age, told of the desire to see his girl friend, who was shortly going to leave this country and who had been sick during the spring. He had very little money and could not afford to hire a taxi, so he took the first impulse and commandeered a car. When it had served its purpose he hid the car near the Landing.

HICKS DENIES DECLARATION

Speech of Saturday Contained No Statement of Policy On Protection.

CONSIDERED INDISCREET.

LONDON, July 31 (Canadian Press Cable). — Sir William Joynson-Hicks, Home Secretary, answering the statements of Liberal newspapers, says that his speech of Saturday contained no declaration of policy at all. The speech led Opposition newspapers to predict and in some cases actually to announce a split in the Cabinet on the question of "safeguarding" home industries.

According to Government supporting newspapers, the Cabinet last week decided against the safeguarding of the iron and steel industries, with Lieut.-Col. L. C. M. S. Amery, Secretary for the Dominions, holding out for some measure of protection. The Government's policy in next year's election, it is stated, will be to advocate helping these industries primarily by relieving them of local taxes.

Nevertheless, Mr. Baldwin, it is asserted by his newspaper supporters, is gravely disturbed over the Home Secretary's speech, which Conservative newspapers openly say is considered indiscreet, and at to-morrow's Cabinet meeting the necessity for collective Cabinet responsibility will be insisted upon in relation to utterances by individual members on such matters as safeguarding.

Wedding Bells

SCOTT—LEAHY.

(Examiner Correspondence).

DOURO, July 31.—St. Joseph's Church, Douro, was the scene of a pretty wedding on Monday, July 30, at 8 o'clock, when the Rev. Father M. J. McGuire united in the holy bonds of matrimony, Anne Catherine, youngest daughter of the late William and Mrs. Leahy, of Douro, to Michael Joseph Scott, son of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Scott, also of Douro.

The bride was prettily attired in a peach georgette gown, with white hat, white silk hose and black pumps, and was assisted by Miss Loretto Scott, sister of the groom, who wore a sand crepe de chine gown, with hat, hose and shoes to match.

The groom was assisted by the bride's twin brother, Mr. William Leahy.

Immediately after the ceremony, a wedding dinner was served at the home of the bride's mother. The young couple received many beautiful gifts from their many friends.

Delegates to Supreme Sanctorum, A.M.O.S., Have Big Sign on Car.

GOING TO PEORIA

Cyricus Sanctorum No. 34, A.M.O.S., will have as representative at the Supreme Sanctorum meeting to be held at Peoria, Ill., August 1, 2, 3 and 4, Sheik Fred Balten, G.M., and with him will be Samaritans Lorne Combe, Jack G. Thompson and Andy Brotherstone, in whose car the trip will be made.

They left on Sunday morning on the long trek and will also take with them Sheik Fred J. Moore, representing Khavi Sanctorum No. 233, Bowmanville.

Their car was decorated with emblematic banneretes, and had on the back of it a large banner showing a painting of the lift-lock, also a canoe, together with the information that the outfit came from Peterborough, Ontario, Canada, and was on the way to the big meet at Peoria, Ill.

On the way home a visit will be made to the Western Clock Co. plant at La Salle, Ill., and also to the Studebaker factories at South Bend, Indiana, where Alex Dick, formerly of Peterborough, is assistant superintendent of body division.

BARNYARD GOLF COURTS OPENED

Large Number of Men Turn Out For Formal Opening of New Sport.

TOURNAMENT HELD.

With twenty men, expert and awkward, pitching horse-shoes, and twice as many more on the side-lines giving advice and waiting a chance to play, the horse-shoe courts arranged at King Edward Park by the Kiwanis Club were in full use last night long after darkness had made accurate played as soon as there were twenty players present, and Earl Kidd came out the winner, followed by Dan Campbell and G. H. Clark, who tied for second place, and J. Marshall.

All this week the courts will be open to all comers. At the beginning of next week a club will be organized, with officers, dues, schedule, and everything, and the game will get down to the same basis as bowling and kindred sports.

There are five courts. Six foot square boxes have been installed, the distance between centres being forty feet. The pegs will not be moved by a succession of ringers because they are not simply driven in the earth. Across each box, underground, there is a timber with an oak block in the centre, and the pegs, which are pieces of half-inch pipe, are fitted in holes bored in the blocks. At present the earth is rather too soft for proper play, but a load of clay is being obtained to improve this. Before the end of the week, suitable lights will be installed, making it possible to play the game to a late hour.

Art Moffatt of the Kiwanis Club heads the committee which arranged the courts, and which will give way to the officers to be elected next week.

TUNNEY QUITS BOXING GAME

Announces Retirement To William Muldoon and Newspapermen.

GIVES FAREWELL PARTY.

NEW YORK, July 31 (Canadian Press). — Gene Tunney, heavyweight champion, announced his retirement from the ring to-day at a luncheon given in honor of William Muldoon, 82-year-old head of the New York State Athletic Commission.

"I have fought my last bout as a professional boxer," his statement said.

Staging a "farewell party" to the Commissioner and more than fifty newspaper guests, Tunney declared definitely that the time had come to step out of game that made him a millionaire. Reports that Tunney was to retire had been circulated since he crushed Tom Heeney in an eleven-round technical knockout last Thursday.

BOY IS ARRESTED AFTER ACCIDENT

Ray Boole, 14, Charged With Manslaughter and Released On Bail.

LINDSAY, Ont., July 31 (Canadian Press). — Ray Boole, aged 14, has been arrested on a charge of manslaughter, and released on $2,000 bail in connection with the motor accident last Sunday, when Fred Barnsley, nine, was killed, and four others, including Boole, were injured. Boole was driving his brother's car, despite the fact that an effort had been made to keep him from using it.

DOCTOR'S EFFORTS FAIL TO SAVE GIRL

Cause of Edna Mayne's Death in Hospital Not Yet Determined.

TORONTO, Ont., July 31 (Canadian Press). — Although doctors in a local hospital had worked in relays for over twelve hours applying artificial respiration, Edna Mayne, 12, died here to-day from causes not yet determined.

The child was brought to the hospital in a serious condition on Sunday, and was believed to have been suffering from meningitis or a possible tumor of the brain. An inquest will be held.

IN POLICE COURT

Frank Vedore of the Township of Cartright pleaded guilty to committing an indecent offence against a girl between the age of 14 and 16 years, and was sentenced to three months in the Ontario Reformatory, with an indeterminate sentence thereafter of two years, less one day.

J. DiNoble was given seven days for being in charge of a car while intoxicated.

A local girl pleaded guilty to a charge of vagrancy and was sentenced to 15 days in the common jail.

CIVIC HOLIDAY AUG. 6

Next Monday Will Be Observed By Most Cities of Province.

Peterborough will celebrate its civic holiday on Monday, August 6th. For many years this city followed a time honored custom of having civic holiday on the second Monday in August, but as the other cities for years have been holding their holiday on the first Monday the city council decided last year that in the future Peterborough would celebrate on the same day as the rest of the towns and cities in Ontario.

BOOM SLIPPED

Death Toll May Be Increased When Rescuers Lift Debris.

ST. CATHARINES, Ont., August 1 (Canadian Press). — The crash of the steel gate of Lock Number Six of the new Welland Canal at Thorold, Ontario, shortly before noon to-day caused the deaths of at least nine workmen, and injuries, some of which may prove serious, to about thirty others.

About forty workmen were in the vicinity of the lock when the disaster occurred and none is believed to have escaped death or injuries. When the debris has been cleared away, it is expected the death-toll will be higher.

The accident was caused by the boom of one of the cranes slipping when an effort was being made to raise the huge 500-ton steel gate into place on the west side of the lock. Two cranes were at work at the time, one handling each end of the heavy gate. The crane nearest the head of the lock held but the boom of the crane at the lower end slipped. The operator is said to have endeavored to save the situation but the slip of the boom resulted in the gate crashing the crane to the bottom of the [illegible] The huge gate crashed into the steel gate tower at the east side of the lock, and, smashing the steel work, fell to the bottom of the lock, crushing the workmen as it fell.

Those who were killed were so badly crushed that identification had not been made up to this afternoon.

They were caught beneath flying steel and the massive gate and killed instantly. It is reported that two men on the crane, which fell with the gate, were killed, but their bodies had not been recovered. It is also feared that several bodies will be found beneath the great gate when the twisted steel is raised so as to permit workmen to walk beneath.

The following injured have been admitted to St. Catharines' General Hospital:

Tom McLillian, Edward Cooper, William McLaren, William Walters, William Merkley, Clarence Callasan, James Johnston, Joseph Lesourick, Alex. Wilson, Harry Watt, Christopher Wilson.

Not only were the men actually working on the task of raising the huge gate into place caught in its fall, but also riveters, helpers and ground men working at the head of the gate.

Word of the disaster spread quickly and a crowd immediately gathered about the locks, looking at the mass of ruins and at the workmen far below as the latter carried out the injured and had them hauled to the top of the lock, from where they were rushed to the General Hospital. Every possible effort was made to rescue the living, but in many cases they were so badly crushed that little hope is held for their lives.

Work of administering first aid was carried on by physicians from Thorold, Merritton and St. Catharines. Doctors were with the rescue crews and administered relief to the sufferers before the trip to hospital. It will probably be late this afternoon before the rescue work is completed and the bodies of the dead recovered. Time will also be necessary for identification of those who have been killed.

The accident is without parallel in the history of construction of the ship canal and appears to have been entirely accidental.

Previous Accidents

Prior to this accident the toll of death during the construction of the canal, which was begun fifteen years ago, had been about ninety. The greatest number killed at any one time was in August, 1926, when a shackle broke, allowing a blaw form, that was being moved, to slide down the runway, killing eight men including the superintendent.

The former catastrophe also occurred at Lock 6, in about the same spot as the one of to-day.

Last December three men lost their lives when a coffer dam broke at Welland.

DONOVAN REMANDED

BROCKVILLE, Aug. 1 (Canadian Press)—William P. Donovan appeared in Police Court here to-day and was remanded to September 10 on bail of $4,000. Donovan was charged with having shot Frederick A. Green in the foot with a shotgun. The victim is now in hospital in a serious condition, it is reported.

Double Crown for Canadian

Canadian Girl Beat World's Record In Winning Heat of 800 Metre Race

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 1.—(By W. H. Ingram, staff correspondent of the Canadian Press).—Jean Thompson, 17-year-old high school girl of Pentang, Ont., and Fanny Rosenfeld, Toronto, will represent Canada in the final of the women's 800 metre race at Olympic Stadium to-morrow.

Miss Thompson beat the world's record in easily winning her heat over Florence MacDonald, United States, her time being 2:23 1-5, compared with the world's record of 2.23 4-5.

Williams Wins 200 Metres

Vancouver Youth Defeats the World's Greatest Sprinters in Two Heats.

COMES FROM BEHIND.

Flashes Ahead of German Ace in Last Fifteen Metres of Final Heat.

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 1.—(Canadian Press).—Percy Williams of Vancouver, won the 200 metre championship at the Olympic games today, performing the remarkable feat of winning both Olympic sprints as he captured the 100 metre crown on Monday.

Again the British Empire triumphed in the astounding victory of the Vancouver sprinter, who has carried away the major glory of the Olympiad so far. Williams preceded his feat of taking the 200 metres final by winning the semi-final of the same event. He defeated the world's greatest sprinters, among others the German ace, Helmut Koernig, and Jackson Scholtz, of the United States. It was the first double sprint victory since 1912.

Williams flashed a spectacular finish to overtake Koernig in the last 15 metres.

Williams was nearly mobbed and was photographed with the Canadian flag draped around him. Time was 21 4-5 seconds, one-fifth of a second slower than the record.

The sensational nineteen-year-old school boy was as uniformly brilliant throughout the 200 metre preliminaries as he had been at the shorter distance. His victory in the final was a crowning, glorious achievement. He won by a good yard from Walter Rangeley of Britain, and Scholtz, United States, and Koernig, Germany, were tied for third. Johnny Fitzpatrick of Hamilton was fifth.

Williams, as in the 100 metres, had tremendous speed left for the final dash after trailing the leaders until near the finish. The curly-haired Canadian boy was unbeatable.

Other Results

Bud Houser, United States, won the discus championship with an Olympic record-breaking toss of 47.32 metres.

Jack Walters of Hamilton and his brother, Pete, were eliminated in heats of 1,500 metres. Jack finished sixth in one preliminary and Pete fourth in another. Dave Griffin, Hamilton, third candidate in 1,500 metres, was also placed fourth in his heat.

Art Keay, Toronto, failed to qualify in the 3,000 metres steeplechase, running last.

Beats Paddock.

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 1. — (Canadian Press.)— Percy Williams, Vancouver, B.C., won the first final heat of the 200 metres at the Olympic games to-day, defeating Charlie Paddock of the United States among others. The young Canadian, who crashed into the limelight with a victory in the 100 metres Monday, looked very weak as he led the field over the soggy track in 22 seconds flat.

Johnny Fitzpatrick, Hamilton, Ont., also qualified when he was second to Helmut Koernig, Germany, in the second heat.

Protest Thrown Out.

The protest of Canada against the awarding of the 100 metres women's event to Elizabeth Robinson of the United States was thrown out by the jury of the International Amateur Athletic Federation. Canada held that Fanny Rosenfeld should have been declared the winner.

South African Wins

The first championship at the Olympic games to-day went to South Africa when Sidney Atkinson won the 110 metre high hurdles in 14.4-5 seconds, equalling the world's record. Atkinson's victory was something of a surprise as his countryman, G. C. Weightman Smith, was the favorite on the basis of his world's record breaking time of yesterday.

OSWEGO, N.Y., Aug. 1 (Canadian Press).—A body, believed to be that of John Lagoe, of this city, missing since Sunday on the small sailing yacht Nymph, was washed ashore today at three mile bay, near Cape St. Vincent. The body had a scar on the chin and was clad in a lifebelt. Lagoe was known to have a scar on his chin. Lagoe, with Leonard Royce and Thompson Dietz, sailed on Sunday from Kingston and Dietz fell overboard that afternoon, being washed ashore alive on Duck Island on Monday after being 13 hours in the water.

Death Caused by Blow

W. H. DONNELLY KILLED BY IRON JURY DECIDES

Witnesses Describe Sudden Death of Local Man On George Street.

SKULL FRACTURED.

Boy of 11 Who Was Walking With Mr. Donnelly at Time Tells Clear Story.

That the late Henry Donnelly came to his death on July 14, 1928, on George street in front of 429 George street from a blow on the head caused by the fall of a cast-iron cornice from a building, was the verdict returned following eighteen minutes deliberation by the jury empanelled last evening, after the hearing of the nine witnesses at the inquest held in the City Council Chamber. The verdict, submitted by Foreman James Skinner, was presented to the coroner, Dr. T. W. H. Young who, in turn, communicated its contents to a fairly large gathering of citizens who had listened with interest to the proceedings.

F. D. Kerr, K.C., watched proceedings for the family and B. D. Hall was present in the interest of the Toronto Savings and Loan Co.

As stated above no less than nine witnesses were heard during the hour that the inquest proper, lasted, and noteable among them were 11-year-old Bruce Patterson, who was walking and talking with Mr. Donnelly at the time of the accident, and Constable Gordon Puffer, whose evidence not only dealt with the salient facts of the accident but also shed considerable light on the nature of tthe object which fell from a building, causing the death. The inquest opened shortly after eight o'clock with the swearing in of the jury, election of its foreman, James Skinner and the calling of the first witness:

Alexander Donnelly, a son of the deceased, had identified the dead man as his father. He had not witnessed the fatal accident.

Roy Cavanagh, a resident of the city, said "I recall the night of the 14th of July. I was at the corner of Brock and George: I saw a crowd and went down. I saw a man on the sidewalk. It was Harry Donnelly. I also saw a big chunk of something (exhibit A.) on the sidewalk. I did not see it fall. It was around 6 o'clock. I was walking."

James McMartin recalled the night of the accident, July 14. "I knew Harry Donnelly to see him. I went up to see the ball score. I was right by Mason's store. I saw the piece of casting hit him. I was about six or eight feet from Mr. Donnelly. He was just starting to fall. When I saw him fall I jumped off my wheel and examined him. Then I went to the Examiner and told them to phone for the ambulance, doctor, and police.

"I saw the piece that hit him. It was a casting and came from the first story. I am not sure, but it fell from the Toronto Trust and Loan building. It was around 6:15 o'clock. The accident happened just south of Mason's store."

Bruce Patterson, aged 11 years. "I was at the scene of the accident. I was walking along side of Mr. Donnelly about a foot away from him. I was talking to him. I felt the wind of it coming down and Mr. Donnelly fell straight back. I called to my father and he told me to get some water. I saw the piece of cornice on the sidewalk. I just looked at him and then called 'Daddy'. The piece of cornice fell from the corner of Mason's store, south of my father's store. Mr. Donnelly did not speak afterward.

"It was that large piece that fell". (He indicated a part which he said broke when it struck the pavement"

Joseph Crowe, of Peterborough, said he had known Mr. Donnelly for a great number of years. "I was on my way on up past the Examiner when I saw what I thought was a box thrown from Mason's store window I kept walking up after a woman screamed. I saw it coming down but did not see it strike the man. I did not examine the man and did not know who it was until others had examined him. I looked at him and saw him bleeding freely about the head It struck

MILK TRUCK PASSES OVER HEAD OF FIFTEEN MONTHS OLD GIRL

Loretto, Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Moher, Is Instantly Killed.

CHILDREN PLAYING.

Emeric Robinson, Not Noticing Child, Backs Truck Over Infant.

Loretto, fifteen-months-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Moher, was instantly killed outside her parents' home, about a mile north of Douro Church at nine o'clock this morning, when the wheel of a milk truck driven by Emeric Robinson, 18, passed over her head.

Robinson was driving the truck, which belonged to Clare Chittick, of Lakefield, collecting milk for the cheese factory. When he had loaded the cans he started to back up, not noticing that the child was behind the truck. The hind wheel passed over her head and she was dead when picked up.

Coroner Dr. J. C. Smith and Constable Webster of Lakefield were called, and it is expected that an inquest will be held on Friday at two p.m.

No one actually saw the accident. The boy was alone on the truck this morning and when he had loaded the cans, had to back up a little way to turn around. Mrs. Moher had gone upstairs for a moment, leaving her two children playing on the verandah. When she came down she saw the little one lying on the ground with its head crushed by the heavy vehicle.

FRANCE IS GREATLY WORRIED ABOUT DROP IN MARRIAGES

PARIS, Aug. 1—French natality statisticians have a new worry. They have discovered that people are marrying less throughout the country, and that the oficial records for 1927 show a decrease for the 90 departments, of 1,576 marriages.

True, the birthrate increased slightly, but it is explained that this has been due to an increase in the proportion of illegitimate children. The blame for the new situation is placed upon the fact that while the United States, England and Germany have greatly increased the construction of dwellings, in France this has been retarded by the devastated regions.

MAIL ROBBERS SCHEDULED TO APPEAR TO-DAY

Preliminary Hearing of Torontoandits This Afternoon.

SEVERAL CHARGES.

Five Men and One Woman Are Being Held By Police.

TORONTO, Aug. 1.—(Special to The Examiner).—The story of the plot and robbery of the Canadian National mail car at the Union Station at midnight, June 20, will be unfolded by the police to-day in the police court before Magistrate Jones when five of the men now held in custody, and one woman, will have a preliminary hearing. Those charged are: Finley McLeod, Sr., Royce Ave., former postal truck driver and civic employee, who is charged with robbery under arms, conspiracy to rob and receiving stolen securities: John Brown, Alias Sullivan, clerk, held on three charges, conspiracy and receiving; Everett McKibbon, age 33, Detroit, barber, three charges, robbery under arms, conspiracy and receiving; Alex McLeod, age 42, taxicab driver, brother of Finley McLeod, Sr., three charges, robbery, conspiracy and receiving; Ray Boven Windsor three charges, robbery, conspiracy and receiving; Finley McLeod, Jr., son of Finley McLeod, receiving; Mrs. Frances Boven, sister-in-law of Ray Boven and wife of one of the men now sought by the police for the robbery and receiving.

It is understood tthat Mrs. Boven will be remanded for a week. Mrs. Ida McKibbon wife of Everett McKibbon, and Mrs. Harriett McPhee held as material witnesses, will likely by called by the Crown to tell what they know about the robbery and the subsequent handling of the money, some of which was recovered in their homes in Toronto and Detroit.

The police said that they have certain witnesses who will establish the identity of the men. It is also reported that no new developments, other than the facts already published following the official announcement of the arrests will be disclosed.

DRINKING WATER UNIFORMLY GOOD

Reports of Daily Tests at Laboratory Are Reassuring.

THREE TESTS.

Those who claim that the city drinking water is not as safe or beneficial to drink as well water will find little to substantiate their arguments in the findings of the Peterborough Branch Provincial Laboratory. Three tests of the city water supply are made daily and, according to the biologist's report, the water is uniformly good.

THE WEATHER

August gets its name from the Emperor Augustus, because it was his "lucky" month. To make it equal to July, which had been called after Julius Caesar a few years before, a day was taken from February, which was then the last month in the Roman year, and added to August. It is thus seen that jealousy is not a fifrailty that afflicts modern civilization alone, but thrived in ancient days and in the highest circles. During July we had rain on 12 days. The total was 3.17. This is somewhat above the average for this section, but not greatly. The heaviest rain was on the 14th with 1.01 inches. The average daily temperature was 2 degrees above the usual figure. The warmest day was the 8th, with 92 degrees; the coolest the 31st, with 43 degrees. While there were a few very warm days during the month, there was little cause of just complaint.—W.P.

MACHINE GUNS WILL BAR WAY OF ATTACKERS

Peterborough Unit Will Defend City in Manoeuvres On Monday.

ANNUAL CAMP.

Number Three Company, Under Major Dodds, To Camp At Ranges.

The Peterborough Machine Gun Unit, No. 3 Company of the fourth Battalion, will go under canvas at the government rifle range, Norwood road, on Friday night for three days training. There are sixty officers and men in this unit, commanded by Major H. Dodds.

Most of the training period will be taken up by machine gun firing, although there is also a musketry course to be fired by every man. The tentative schedule is: Saturday forenoon, machine gun firing practices; Saturday afternoon, musketry and pack saddlery; Sunday, drum-head church service; Monday forenoon, machine gun practices; Monday afternoon, inspection and scheme, commonly called a "sham battle."

The machine gun practices consist of several distinct "shoots" including grouping and traversing. In the former it is the endeavour to place bullets from the quick-firing guns in close groups on the targets and in the latter the gunner endeavours to place shots across the target equally divided along its length. Indirect fire methods are also employed in which the target cannot be seen by the gunner.

In the pack-saddlery drill the guns, tripods, ammunition, and all spare parts and supplies are loaded on horses for traversing rough ground, and later on limbers for road travel.

MILK PASSES TEST IN JULY

Only Two Samples Show Traces of Sediment, Says Sanitary Inspector.

30 SAMPLES TAKEN.

Drink good milk and drink lots of it is common advice, and for Peterborough folk who would heed it, Charles Stapleton, Sanitary Inspector of the city, had a reassuring word when discussing with The Examiner, milk sold by some thirty vendors in the city.

"Sometime during each month, it is my duty to choose a bottle of milk from the daily supply of each milk vendor and to place a seal upon it. The vendor then presents the sealed bottle at the local laboratory to be tested. In July, just past, the tests detected slight signs of sediment in but two samples out of the thirty, and neither was a serious case." All the milk contained a satisfactory percentage of butterfat, according to Mr. Stapleton.

INFLICTED 1-CENT RUM FINE ON NATIVE PORTO RICAN.

NEW YORK, Aug. 1.—Judge William H. Atwell of Dallas, Texas, who is sitting in the United States District Court in Brooklyn temporarily, tempered justice with mercy yesterday when he inflicted Blasz, 24 years old, who pleaded guilty to possession and transportation of two bottles of whisky.

Blasz was arrested on June 16, is a native of Porto Rico, was unable to furnish $1,000 bail demanded by a United States Commissioner and was sent to Raymond Street Jail.

When Blasz entered his plea Judge Atwell told him that in view of his 43 days in jail the Court thought he had already been punished more than enough. "I will impose the smallest penalty that the law will allow," said the Judge. I direct you to pay a fine of one cent."

Blasz paid the fine and left smiling.

COMMISSION REFUNDS TO CITY $4,000

Analysis Reveals Street Lighting System Has Accumulated Surplus of $10,331.03.

DEFIFIT IN POWER.

E. R. Shirley Proposes Having Survey Made of Undeveloped Power in District.

A bouquet of $4,000 was handed to the City Council yesterday by the Utilities Commission as the accumulated surplus in the street lighting system of this city. Recently the Hydro-Electric Power Commission made an analysis of the power system in this city and found that over a number of years there had accumulated a deficit of $5,560.82 on municipal power and an accumulated surplus of $10,331.03 in the street lighting system.

The power commission act provides that any surplus resulting from power supplied for municipal services such as street lighting, waterworks, and the sewage disposal plant may be returned to the municipality. It therefore recommended to the local body that the sum of $4,000 be returned to the city and the balance be set aside as a reserve fund to meet possible losses in future years.

It has been known for some time that the street lighting system was making a profit for the commission but on the other hand the power that has been sold to the city has shown a loss of over $5,000. This loss has been mostly at the sewage disposal plant.

The commission, in forwarding the cheque to the Council, recommended that a closer check up be made at the sewage disposal plant on the power used, and that during the peak hours, 11 to 12 in the morning and 4 to 5 in the afternoon, during the winter as little power as possible be used. This would mean a saving of considerable money to the city.

Suggests Survey.

Mr. Shirley suggested that he believed part of this money would be well spent by the City Council if it would have a survey made of dams 4 and 5 and Burleigh Falls. He also took the stand that if the Governments proposed selling the power rights of these dams, the City of Peterborough should be given the first option. He suggested that a resolution be forwarded to the City Council that such steps should be taken as to get an option on these dams, but it

GEORGE STREET NEARLY BLOCKED

Only Narrow Lane Left For Traffic as Workmen Start Digging Sewer.

With motor cars parked on the east side of George street, there is but a narrow lane for traffic as a result of the customary blockade placed by the city while two workmen cut through the pavement and dig down to a level with the sewer system in order to make a new connection.

The need for a direct new sewer connection from the main system to the basement of Schneider's Jewellery store has been felt for some time past and to-day the men began the work of remedying it. The ditch which they must dig will be fourteen feet and on reaching the main system they will turn pick and shovel to tunnelling beneath the sidewalk on the west side of George street and thence into the store basement.

Married Three Days

Young Toronto Man Stepped Into Steamer Channel in River.

WIFE WITNESS.

Sad Circumstances Surround To-day's Tragedy South of City.

Robert Munroe was drowned in the Otonabee river shortly before noon this morning. He was not able to swim very well and was floating in the water on an automobile tube, for a while but then waded out and tried to touch bottom, as one witness stated, but got into the steam boat channel in about 16 feet of water. He went down without a sound and did not come up to the surface. His hands appeared above the water waving once. A pulmotor call was sent by Mrs. Cookman to the firemen who arrived on the scene shortly after eleven o'clock and dragging operations were commenced immediately. Herb. Payne entered the water and commenced diving, locating the body about 11.30 in the deep water. A pike pole was called into use but the body could not be brought to the surface. Then W. Naish and Henry J. Parnell entered the water and at the first dive Mr. Parnell brought the body to the surface and Mr. Naish brought it to shore.

Dr. J. Malcolm McCulloch assisted by the firemen administered first aid and tried artificial respiration after which the pulmotor was called into use, but after working until after twelve it was given up as useless as the body had been in the water more than forty-five minutes after the firemen had received the call.

Mr. Munroe was a resident of Toronto, who was married here on Saturday, both he and his wife coming from Scotland. They had spent their honeymoon at Bewdley and were staying with Mrs. Sutherland on Orpington road, intending to return to Toronto to-night.

James Sutherland told The Examiner that there was a party of four in swimming—James Sutherland, Ian Sutherland, and Mr. and Mrs. Munroe entered the water at 10.45 a.m. Mr. Munroe was able to swim only a few strokes and he tried to "bottom it" but sank out of sight. When Mr. Munroe sank James and his brother Ian had to hold Mrs. Munroe from entering the water and trying to rescue her husband as he disappeared.

She was taken home by Mr. Parnell, who was on business in that section for the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, after which Mr. Parnell returned and brought the body to the surface.

The river bottom at this point has the appearance of a sandy beach but the steamer channel is within twelve feet of the shore and the water deepens very suddenly. To make it more dangerous there are no warning signs posted in the vicinity and a stranger who is a poor swimmer is in great danger when he enters this treacherous beach.

MAN FALLS UNDER CAR LOSES LEG

Carl Butcher Seriously Injured in Early Morning Accident.

RATCHET SLIPPED.

Was Helping Move Coal Car in Lumber Company's Yards.

Slipping from the top of a coal car in the yards of the Peterborough Lumber Company this morning, Carl Butcher, 315 Burnham Street, fell in front of the wheels and had his right leg so badly crushed that amputation above the knee was necessary.

The accident occurred about 1.20. The night yard shift was moving the car down an incline, with Butcher on top handling the brake. The ratchet failed to catch as he moved the handle and he lost his footing, falling in front of the wheels. Dr. C. D. Hewitt and Dr. H. M. Yelland were called and had the injured man removed to St. Joseph's Hospital, [illegible] it was found necessary to amputate above the knee.

Rev. William Temple is New Archbishop of York

Favor of Revised Book

Succeeds Most Rev. Gordon Lang to High Position.

RENOWNED SPEAKER.

New Archbishop is Strong Sympathizer of Labor Movement.

LONDON, August 1 (Canadian Press).—The Right Rev. William Temple, Bishop of Manchester, has been named Archbishop of York, to succeed the Most Rev. Cosmo Gordon Lang.

Dr. Lang was recently elevated to the arch-bishopric of Canterbury to succeed the Most Rev. Randall Davidson, whose resignation becomes effective November 12.

The new Archbishop of York is a sympathizer with the Labor movement and has always taken a keen interest in social questions.

He is also renowed as a preacher and has frequently spoken by the hour on the most abstruse theological questions and without notes.

Favors Revised Book

In the recent prayer book controversy he strongly favored the revised book and since its rejection has been one of the leaders in the movement to secure spiritual liberty for the church without, however, disestablishment.

The Right Rev. William Temple, who is 46 years old and a son of a former Archbishop of Canterbury, has been an honorary chaplain to the King since 1915. He took Holy Orders in 1904, and since that time has been noted as both a priest and educator, serving as chaplain to the Archbishop of Canterbury, the head master of Repton School, and Canon of Westminster Abbey. He was named Bishop of Manchester in 1921. Many of his sermons and religious works have been published.

THE WEATHER

Meteorological Office, Toronto, July 31.—Pressure is high near the Atlantic and Pacific coasts and relatively low over the central part of the continent. Showers have occurred in northern districts of Ontario and Quebec, while in other parts of the Dominion the weather has been fair.

Lake Superior—Moderate west to north-west winds; mostly fair; not much change in temperature.

Manitoba—Mostly fair and a little warmer; showers at night or on Thursday.

Saskatchewan and Alberta—Partly fair with showers or thunderstorms in many districts.

TROPHY DONATED FOR SEA FLEA RACE

George Kent, of Bewdley, Puts Up Cup For Competition at Regatta There.

A beautiful silver trophy, fifteen inches high, and beautifully engraved, is now on exhibition at Kent's Tourist House, Bewdley, having been donated by George Kent of that well known hostelry for competition among outboard motor boats, popularly known as "Sea Fleas." The day of combat has been set by the donor—Bewdley Regatta day, Wednesday, August 8, and it is expected by the committee that five thousand people will witness the race as over three thousand people attended the regatta last year. The 1928 water field day will surpass its predecessor in many ways.

The cup donated by Mr. Kent will give added stimulus to a new departure in sport already being accorded much attention throughout the province. To the winner will go the privilege of holding it for a period of three months, after which it will be returned to Bewdley Post Office. The winner will then be given a miniature of the original trophy and in case he is victorious in the race in three consecutive years, he will become the possessor of the trophy permanently.

Learn of Son's Death In United States While In Oshawa On Tour of Canada

OSHAWA, August 1. — Rev. John M. Horne, driving the car with the Indiana license plates number 450-093, for whom a search was made on Monday through radio broadcasting stations and over telephone, was found here in Oshawa late in the afternoon, due to the vigilance of the Oshawa police. Following his being identified he went to the local police station and there one of life's little ragedies developed.

Rev. Mr. Horne was instructed to telephone his sister in Washington, D.C., and after nine minutes he had her on the line, and then learned that his only son, who would probably be between ten and fifteen years of age, had died. Mr. Horne and his wife, along with a friend, Mrs. Craig, had been touring Canada for their holidays, but this sudden death which takes away the dear one in their family circle, will be a sad holiday indeed for them.

The party were stricken with the sad news, and prepared to return to their home in Terra Haute immediately. Before leaving, however, they thanked the local department for their kindness and the trouble they went to in finding them.

GREAT BRITAIN MAY SEND CONTINGENT FOR HARVESTING

Dominion Has Cabled Terms On Which Temporary Migrants May Be Received.

REPLY IS AWAITED.

OTTAWA, Aug. 1.—Canada has cabled to Great Britain the terms upon which she will accept British workers for the harvest field, and now awaits the British reply. The exchanges are confidential, but it is understood the Dominion will not undertake any part of the cost, which must be borne by the British authorities and by possible reductions in fares on the part of the steamship and railway companies. No change is made in the assistance now given by Canada in the way of assisted passages for permanent settlers.

It is understood that the plan may involve a through rate from Great Britain to Winnipeg of £12, the present ordinary rate being £18. The British Government, however, will be called upon to guarantee that none of the harvesters not permanently placed will be left unemployed in Canada for the winter. If the harvesters decline to continue in farm work and start to drift to the cities, it will lie with the British authorities to provide for their return to Great Britain. The Dominion intends to avoid the fiasco of 1924, when the harvesters drifted into the cities and had to be supported by municipal, provincial and federal aid.

COTTAGERS HOLD ANNUAL RECEPTION

Many Take Part in Social Gathering at Stoney Lake.

(Examiner Correspondence)

STONEY LAKE, Aug. 1.—The annual reception of the Stoney Lake Cottagers' Association was held on Saturday afternoon in the pavilion. The weather man did not provide ideal reception weather, but nevertheless at five o'clock more than sixty were present, and then the rain had ceased and almost as many more arrived, so that in all there was an attendance of considerably over a hundred. The committee for the tea were Mrs. Gordon Smith (convenor), Mrs. J. M. R. Fairbairn, Miss Nan Hall and Mrs. J. MacAllister Sym, and their hearty welcome to one and all helped not a little to make the affair jolly and informal. Old-timers felt the glow of a reunion of old friends and newcomers were made to feel that in this big family there was a place for them and that in this year's "good times" program there was a definite place for them. There was an especially good attendance of the younger set—the committee members of future seasons at dear old Stoney.

During the afternoon the events of the "gala week" program were announced, and the co-operation of all present was bespoken in order that the standard of other years may be kept up.

A new piano has been purchased for the pavilion, which will be appreciated during the season for church services, musicales, and dances.

District Churches

SOUTH DUMMER UNITED CHURCH

(Examiner Correspondence)

WARSAW, August 1.—Owing to serious illness in the home of the president of the Women's Missionary Society, the Rev. Mr. Moyer conducted the services in the South Dummer United Church. When he read his text from Act 20:28, he said he found the church very up-to-date in some things, and that it had a pulpit Bible of the American translation and it read, "The Church of Christ," instead of "The Church of God" as in the authorized version which he used. The newer version does not seem so harsh, and is more pleasing to many, therefore the translator used it, but in looking into the earlier manuscripts he thought the authorized version correct as in Christ's suffering, God the Father suffered, he explained this very fully. Some thoughts to be gleamed from the sermon were that God must not be lost sight of. The Church of God is not a man-made organization, is not any particular denomination nor creed, but a fraternity of men and women with the common bond of God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Ghost. God being in all.

Henry Balten sang, "My Task," and missionary hymns were used.

PARISH HALL DEBT REMOVED BY GIFT

Mr. Storey, of Oshawa, Gives $1,250 To St. John's Church, Ida.

(Examiner Correspondence)

IDA, Aug. 1.—The services in St. John's Church, Ida, on Sunday morning were conducted by the rector of the parish, the Rev. Canon W. C. Allen. His text was taken from the Gospel of St. Matthew, 5:14, "A city that is set on a hill cannot be hid." Special reference was made to the generous gift of $1,250 recently received by St. John's from Mr. Storey, of Oshawa, for the purpose of wiping off the debt on the Parish Hall.

Mr. Allen referred to St. John's as being beautifully situated on the hill overlooking a prosperous countryside, and as one of the oldest landmarks in the community, known and admired by all who passed by. Its influence for good has not been hidden. Canon Allen reminded the parishioners of all the blessings of the past and admonished them to press on to yet greater things in the future, saying that while Mr. Storey so graciously donated this gift to wipe off the debt of the hall, his objective was to release them for other important work in the parish. Mrs. Allen presided at the organ.

Personals.

Miss Hazel Atcheson has returned to her home in Lindsay after visiting her aunt in the village.

The Messrs. Mervin Kinsman and Jack Byam and the Misses Eileen Armstrong and Queenie Akehurst, of Millbrook, were visitors in the village on Sunday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Thorn, of Millbrook, were in town on Thursday.

GIFT TO CHURCH IS DEDICATED

Flower Receptacle Placed in Christ Church, Omemee, As Memorial.

CHILDREN BAPTIZED.

(Examiner Correspondence)

OMEMEE, Aug. 1. — On Sunday, July 22, the rector of Christ Church accepted, on behalf of the congregation and dedicated to the glory of God, a beautiful silver flower receptacle, presented by Mrs. Charles Ivory, in loving memory of her parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. Arthur McQuade. Older members of the congregation will remember Mr. McQuade, he being for many years church warden and a faithful attendant of Christ Church. The gift is much appreciated by the congregation.

St. Andrew's Church.

The Rev. Mr. Riddell, of Millbrook, conducted the service in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church on Sunday morning when the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered and a baptismal service held.

The following children received the rights of baptism: Evelyn Bernice Fairfield, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Fairfield; Alma Marie Dick, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Dick; Donald Lewis Windrim, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Windrim; Frederick William Burrett, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. Burrett.

Personals.

Those from Omemee who enjoyed the excursion to Rochester sponsored by the Lindsay Kiwanians were: Mr. and Mrs. Herb Jones, Mr. and Mrs. G. Haggarth, Mr. and Mrs. W. Best, Mr. and Mrs. H. G. McGinniss, Misses Muriel and Jean McGinniss, Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Sandy, Miss Doris Sandy, the Rev. P. Bruce Thornton, Mr. and Mrs. Reuben Bradley, Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Cornell, Mr. and Mrs. L. A. BIG 'LUNGE CAUGHT NEAR BAILIEBORO

Fish Weighing 23½ Pounds Landed—Berry Crop Large.

(Examiner Correspondence)

BAILIEBORO, Aug. 1.—One of the week-end visitors at Hibbard's boat livery was successful in landing a 23½-pound maskinonge on Sunday morning.

Berries Good.

The raspberries and cherries are a bountiful crop in this vicinity this season, probably owing to the frequent rainfall.

Farm Notes.

In some of the damp farming districts in this vicinity the rust has struck the oat crop very heavily. The oats, although not yet filled, are going down badly when the straw breaks with the rust. On the highlands the rust is not yet visible.

The recent rains have held the farmers back a great deal with their haying and harvest. The majority of the alsike is now cut and the fall wheat crop is being cut.

Personals.

Miss Edna Dawson, nurse-in-training at Ross Memorial Hospital, Lindsay, is the guest of her brother, Mr. Frank Dawson.

The Misses L. Kercher and L. Barnard and Messrs. G. and W. Nedler, of Toronto, were visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Barnard on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. D. Armstrong, of Toronto, are the guests of Mrs. D. Armstrong.

Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Moncrief, of Fraserville, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. James Falls last week.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Thompson and son, Billie, of Peterborough, were week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. Barnard.

To-Day's Schedule

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 1. — The schedule for to-day, fourth day of the Olympic track and field championships includes:

200 metre dash, semi-finals and finals.

Pole vault—Trials and final.

100 metre hurdles—Final.

3,000 metre steeplechase—Trials.

1,500 metre run—Trials.

800 metre run (open)—Trials.

RAIN RUINS HAY NEAR WARSAW

Some Farmers Have To Let It Stand To Harvest Wheat.

POTATOES GOOD CROP.

(Examiner Correspondence)

WARSAW, August 1.—A good deal of the hay is ruined by the recent frequent rains, much of what was cut and put up in cols got too much wetting and did not dry. Those who have hay still uncut had to leave it and cut the wheat, as it is quite ripe. John Condon has three fields of wheat and most of it is quite heavy.

Wild raspberries are plentiful just now and of a good quality.

Several who have tried their potatoes report tubers of a good size. The tops are very luxuriant everywhere. All sorts of root and garden stuff have a great showing. Most of the corn is good, although a few fields do not promise much as yet. Some of the barley is turning.

Personals.

Orville Watts is at Trent Bridge with his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. McNeilly.

GIRLS INJURED WHEN HORSE BOLTS

Broken Harness Causes Runaway at Omemee Sunday Evening.

(Examiner Correspondence)

OMEMEE, Aug. 1.—The Misses Blanche and Carrie Stinson had a narrow escape from serious injury on Sunday evening while driving to church. The harness broke and the horse, becoming frightened, began to run. All efforts on the girls' part to stop the animal were fruitless, and after running from Crawford's hill to the foundry corner, the buggy was upset and the occupants thrown out, with the result that they received several cuts and bruises. Medical aid was given after they were removed to the home of their sister, Mrs. F. Parker, but no bones were found to be broken.

VISITS LODGE ROOM.

Quarters of Local Oddfellows Please Visitor From Across Line.

R. D. Latham, P.D.D.G.M., and veteran member of Golden Rule Lodge No. 77, Independent Order of Oddfellows of Phoenix, N.Y., paid a visit to the rooms of the Order here at the request of his friend, Judge Edgar S. Mosher, a recent visitor to our city.

Mr. Latham who brings greetings from New York State to the members of the Order here, expressed his admiration of the splendid quarters of the local I.O.O.F., which he stated are not surpassed by any which he had visited during his long experiences in the Order.

He also expressed his appreciation of the privileges of the club rooms which he enjoyed very much on the occasion of his visit.

Zeppelin's Ocean Hop Off Until October, Difficulties Arise In Making Fuel Gas

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, Germany, August 1. — Difficulties which have arisen incident to the production of fuel gas in large quantities for the new Zeppelin motors will delay the first trial flight of the new Zeppelin until the early part of September, it was learned here yesterday.

The great claims for the newly discovered fuel gas seem not to be fully supported by the present move to place containers capable of holding ten tons of gasoline in the ship to supplant the other type of fuel if necessary. It is already admitted that gasoline will be used to drive the motors on the first trial trip, at least until the ship is in the air.

Filling the lifting gas cells will be begun the middle of August, the Zeppelin works reports. From that time on the public will be excluded. More than 150,000 visitors have inspected the new air cruiser so far.

Since the first flights cannot be made before September, it is now certain that the transoceanic flight cannot be made before October, and after the return no flights of consequence will be made until spring, when the around-the-world trip will be undertaken.

Dr. Hugo Eckener, the designer, states that the transoceanic flight is to be merely a good workout for the new ship and not sensational, as this trip has been made without incident before. He intends to make meteorological observations over the Atlantic for the benefit of further transoceanic air traffic.

Although passengers will accompany the "Count Zeppelin" on its flight to America, Dr. Eckener lays more stress on the freight traffic, for which he believes the present aircraft is more suitable.

Declares Picture Is a Real Raphael

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 1. — A faded canvas, now being carefully guarded in this city, is believed by two Italian critics to be the original "Madonna at the Window," by Raphael.

The probability that the painting is genuine was expressed by the critics to Professor Pasquale Farina of this city, who is in Florence seeking to establish definitely the authenticity of the work.

Professor Farina, who has been working for six years to remove the grime that covered the picture, has with him photographs showing details of the painting at all stages of restoration. The painting is the property of Mrs. Mary A. Putnam, daughter of a Colonel in the Confederate Army, who rescued it when her home in Texas was destroyed by fire.

In a letter to friends here Professor Farina says:

"Senator Venturi, the greatest of all experts in art matters, said of the painting: 'One cannot help recognizing Raphael's hand.'"

Professor Arduino Colossante, general director of the museums of fine arts in Italy, said, according to the letter: "If I would be called upon to state by examining the photographs of the impannata of America and that of Florence, I would not hesitate in declaring the one in America is the original."

Old Landmark Passes In Lakefield Village

(Examiner Correspondence)

LAKEFIELD, Aug. 1.—An old landmark has disappeared from Albert street in the little shop attached to a frame house situated between J. H. Sherin's residence and W. W. Leonard's brick block. This little shop was for many years the tailoring establishment of L. F. Stone who was for years a well known and interesting figure in the village life. Mr. Stone was of Dutch or German extraction and was familiarly known as "Dutchy" a term used in affection rather than derision. He was of short stocky build and was an ardent follower of the Salvation Army and for years held services on the street corners where he was a noticeable figure in a scarlet suit. His following was small but his loyalty to his professed faith and his consistent life earned for him the respect of all denominations and when death came it robbed Lakefield of one of its most interesting characters.

Years have passed and his name is familiar only to the old residents, but the disappearance of his shop brings back old memories of old days and old faces.

SOCIAL SALE AT LAKEFIELD

Young Ladies of Baptist Church Hold Successful Cooking Sale.

DISTRICT NEWS.

(Examiner Correspondence)

LAKEFIELD, Aug. 1.—The young ladies of the Baptist Church had a sale of work, home cooking and afternoon tea on Saturday afternoon and evening in Headren's store on Queen street, and in spite of adverse weather, did a thriving business. The dainty specimens of needlework were displayed in the show window in a most attractive manner and found ready sale. Aprons, pretty enough to tempt any woman to don one and "get busy," were fastened up inside the store and represented the efforts of skilled fingers. The home cooking was also attractive and was quickly bought up, and the tea-room section was popular as usual. Although the majority of the patrons were of the fair sex, the sterner sex was well represented, and at least one party of gentlemen had tea and enjoyed it very much. Mrs. (Rev.) J. B. McCormack was in charge of the general arrangements. The members of the society, Mrs. W. Johnson, Mrs. Charles Waldon, and Misses Gladys Bolton, Edith Nicholls, Ruby Nicholls, Vina Nicholls, Shields, Stabler and Grace Yonge. Mrs. B. Nicholls, Mrs. Munro and Miss Wilson also assisted during the afternoon and evening.

Berry Picking.

The wild berries are ripe now and many pickers are going out from the village to gather in the annual harvest of berries, which are highly prized as being of sweeter flavor than the home-grown variety. While huckleberries may be purchased in rather limited quantities, wild raspberries are now almost an unattainable luxury unless one is willing to sally forth and pick one's own supply. In former years it was possible to buy this luscious fruit in pails and large quantities were offered, but in these more prosperous days few are willing to pick berries except for personal use. Times have indeed changed.

News Briefs.

The annual garden party of St. Paul's Church will be held on the Exhibition Grounds, Lakefield, on Wednesday afternoon and evening, August 8. This is the major event of the summer season and always draws a capacity crowd, Father Garvey and a competent committee are busy and are arranging an excellent program.

Weather permitting, the Citizens' Band will give an open-air concert on the village square on Thursday evening of this week.

The rainy weather has been a great hindrance to the farmers in getting in their hay crop. A few weeks of warm dry weather would help greatly in the work of harvest.

Messrs. J. Hall, W. Murduff and S. A. Grylls spent a few days last week at Koshkabogamog Lake (intimately called "Kosh") on a fishing trip, and report good luck.

"Common Law" is based on custom and tradition. Much of the English common law derives from the medieval period when a custom was held to be a law after it had been observed "from a time when the memory of man runneth not to the contrary."

When the chimney catches fire it can be stopped by closing all doors and windows; in the case of an open fireplace, a wet blanket held in front of the opening will stop the draught.

Every Muffet chirps it . . . Come again!

That's one of the very nicest things about Muffets. They build good will with every mouthful.

Just the right portion for your morning's appetite. Just the right size and shape to fit your cereal dish. Browned exactly as you like your toast. Just the right degree of crunchy crispness to crumble pleasantly in your mouth.

Calories and minerals to give you a good start for the day's work. Just the right amount of bran to help your digestion.

That's a Muffet! Whole wheat, cooked, drawn out to a filmy-thin ribbon. Wound round and round, layer upon layer. Baked. Toasted.

Conveniently broken up, sprinkled with sugar, doused with cream, or with fruit added—just good enough to eat so you'll want Muffets again and again!

NEW FEATURES AT EXHIBITION

Women's Building to Prove Interesting This Year at Toronto.

FASHION SHOW

TORONTO, Ont., Aug. 1 (CP).—The women's building at the Canadian National Exhibition promises to be more interesting than ever this year under the capable direction of Miss Violet Dickens. A new policy has been adopted in that practically all of the outstanding women's organizations of Canada will be represented there, as well as the Women's Institutes.

Something new this year will be the fashion show, and models will parade daily in the women's building displaying Canadian-made costumes in the latest styles and materials. The stage and management will be under the direction of Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Mosher, of the Mosher Studios, and the presentation of smart Canadian-made clothes for women will be interspersed with dancing numbers. In addition to the style show Miss Ellen Mackie will give a daily talk on dress and style.

Another attractive feature will be the little skit to be called "New Canadians in School" which is to be presented by actual newcomers to Canada. They will appear at school on a Friday afternoon with a school concert in full swing. Last year the New Canadians skit represented their arrival in Canada and welcome to the new land.

The Girl Guides will present their pageant which was received with enthusiasm when it was presented at the Girl Guide rally in the Arena some weeks ago.

Quebec handicrafts from start to finish will be a feature. Among others the wool industry will be shown, from the time the wool is shorn from a sheep's back to the weaving processes dying and making of hooked rugs.

Alberta is sending a prize team of girls to demonstrate some form of agricultural activity in the women's building.

Booths under the direction of the National Council will be devoted to fine and applied arts, with Mrs. Dignam as convener and Miss Jane Bertram in charge; League of Nations, Child Welfare, Education, Press and Canadian publications and house and town planning, with interesting models. The work of the International Council of Women and the National Council of Canada will be featured in one booth, while in another the Victorian Order of Nurses will have a special display. The Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire booth will be largely educational, and Mrs. C. E. Burden, Regent of Toronto Municipal Chapter, will speak. Handicraft work of British veterans will occupy another stall, and there will be a splendid public health exhibit.

Jacket to Match.

The print dress adopts a short print jacket to match. Or this jacket may be of plain colored silk. The summer print dress is more apt than not to join a jacket in making an ensemble.

THE WHATNOT

A Place for Little Bits of Everything of Local Interest

I HEARD a man say the other day that women have lost the art of dressing. He declared that the sweater and the sports suit have replaced the lovely creations of another day, and that woman is rapidly becoming as standardized in her dress as man.

• • • •

While he may have been right in his general remarks about the change in dress, I think he was wrong when he said we have lost the art. Does not art change? Centuries ago men were fully as brilliant in their finery as were women, but they gradually developed the sombre outfits they wear to-day. Few will claim beauty for a man's suit. No one will claim individuality.

• • • •

But women show no signs of becoming standardized. True, they have adopted a type, but the individual gowns are widely diversified. Cut, color, trim and air—all are different. And is woman any less charming in her sports frock than she was in her bustle? Surely that is the beauty in dress—to enhance one's personal charm!

• • • •

After all, are clothes the picture; or are they the frame?

• • • •

Graceful lines, achieved by the supple beauty of the fabrics from which they are molded, mark the fall frocks, according to a George street merchant who expects his autumn goods shortly. Velvets will be popular, he says, printed and plain. Small flowers and tiny geometric designs will decorate the chiffon vevet used in many of the smartest afternoon frocks, while plain velvets and large flower designs will be more appropriate for evening wear.

• • • •

According to this forecast, variety will be obtained by combining velvet with sheer crepe. Tulle frocks, very full as to skirts and quite long in the back, will be worn with "cocktail jackets" o hip-line coats.

• • • •

One of the advance fall frocks described by my informant sounds very quaint and youthful. It is of black organdie, with tight bodice and full irregular skirt with a contrasting decoration of white gardenia gracefully placed at one side. The jacket of tulle adds a final touch of sophistication to this type of costume.

• • • •

A correspondent to-day calls attention to the fact that The Examiner did not report a certain event at a near-by resort. It is true that the story was not printed, but I think that readers of this page, at any rate, will approve the reason behind the suppression of the sordid story of a few wild girls who threaten to disgrace their families and destroy themselves. In The Examiner Style Book, which is a book of instruction to reporters and correspondents, appears the following order by the Managing Editor: "Time heals all things but a woman's damaged reputation. Be careful and cautious and fair and decent in dealing with a man's reputation, but be doubly so when a woman's name is at stake. Even if a woman slips, be generous; it may be a crisis in her life. Printing the story may drive her to despair; kindly treatment may leave her with hope. No story is worth ruining a life."

• • • •

Is there any woman reader of The Examiner who does not agree with the sentiment of this? Is there any mother who will declare The Examiner should print the stories of the occasional wild parties that take place?

• • • •

I have admitted before that there are morons in the city—and no one knows it better than those who work for the newspaper—but they are not representative of our youth. I am not making apologies for them, nor for The Examiner's policy. There is alway a chance that these girls may wake up—and I would hate to be associated with a newspaper that would make their recovery impossible.

• • • •

What do you women readers think?

• • • •

The sleeveless jacket which is so popular this summer is easily made by the home dressmaker. I have had the instructions printed, with diagram of the pattern, sketch of the coat, and pretty design for trimming the pocket. TRAVEL-LOG.

REMEMBERING SCHUBERT

Last night will remain in my memory, not only as one of the most notable evenings I ever spent in Vienna, but in Europe. With several others I made my way to a small house at 45 Nussdorferstrasse in the suburb of Liechtenthal, where one hundred and thirty-one years ago the wife of a school teacher named Schubert gave birth to a boy whose "Hark, Hark the Lark," and five hundred other songs made him one of the famous composers of the world. It was the anniversary of his death in poverty at the age of thirty-one. Others left fortunes; Schubert left music. We all listened while a choir of four hundred voices from the Vienna Men's Singing Society and an orchestra from the opera serenaded the old home. All the street cars near by were stopped so that the little celebration might be conducted quietly and I think I can add, that all the conflicting emotions of politics and business in the minds of the crowd were also stopped as the wreaths were placed. Then we all rushed to the old tavern opposite to fight for the seats where Schubert used to sit, that we might end the day in true Viennese style. The old Nussdorferstrasse has changed but little in the hundred years. It is one of the joys of travel to [illegible] with such an expe-

THE MIRROR OF THE MODE

By Mary Marshall.

Brims are longer at the right side as shown in the navy blue straw hat from the Parisian milliner Agnes, and the small felt hat below.

One might imagine that some leader of fashion who had a cauliflower ear on the right side wanted to hide the fact and that thus had been devised the new fashion for hats drooping low on the right side only. This uneven drooping effect is attractive and a welcome change but why—some one asked—why should they all droop on the right side? Probably because it is the usual thing to wear one's shoulder or lapel flower on the left. It gives better balance not to have the hat droop down on the same side.

Even the new berets show this disposition to hang down at the right and Rose Valois, one of the prominent milliners of Paris, has associated her name with this type of headgear.

The long-sided shapes are just part of the general tendency toward a symmetrical effects all along the line of fashion. Everything from frocks and wraps to shoes show this tendency to be different on the right side and the left. We have gone a long way from the mid Victorian days when even bracelets were worn in pairs with the right wrist adorned precisely like the left.

With the larger hats with the brim cut wide at the right and drooping downward, this extension forms a pleasing background for the profile. These hats might be thought of as poke shapes—poke on one side only. And they are more satisfactory to wear than the regulation poke that hems one in on either side.

There is every reason to believe that fashions in millinery are to show a decided change for autumn and winter. In fact the marked change may already be noticed where women who follow closely on the heels of fashion are to be seen. Brims are very much shorter in the front than they have been and crowns are lower and more rounded. We are moving rapidly it would seem toward a hat that will indeed be a sort of bonnet.

The Art of Attraction

No. 12.

You have noticed probably that the girl who appears to you to be most vapid in conversation often possesses a large string of masculine admirers? But have you ever listened in when she was engaged in a conversation with a man? If you have, you will at once remark that she has the delightful capacity of getting him to talk and there is nothing a man likes better. Give him a small, pretty creature with a habit of looking admiringly at him when he tells a good story and what more does he require? He can go ahead and relate sundry adventures with the pleasant feeling thta he has an appreciative and attentive audience of one. When he gets tired of talking, he can look at her clear skin and dainty dress and pretty ankles. Women should try and get out of their heads entirely the idea that men are engaged in a search for some kind of feminine goddess. They are not. What they want is a pretty, amiable girl who is pleasant and cheerful, well dressed and, above all, interested in her male companions.

A Tip or Two

Shellac brushes should be washed in denatured alcohol.

For washing potatoes, beets, turnips, celery, etc., use a small brush. It does the work better and saves time and fingers.

When boiling turnips, add a teaspoon of white sugar to the water to improve the flavor and lessen the odor.

To cook meats and vegetables quicker and more tender, put a pinch of cooking soda in the water when boiling them.

If a washing tub leaks press common laundry soap in the cracks from the outside for a quick repair.

Quick way to peel carrots—a few passes over a coarse grater will rid carrots of skins quicker than any other way.

When you make pie crust make twice the quantity needed. Pie crust rolled in a damp napkin and put in the refrigerator will keep perfectly for several days.

ANGEL SINGING.

By Dorothy Gray.

Nobody could possibly have foreseen Avice would grow up with a bird in her throat—a true bird, one that sang for the joy of it, untaught save by wind whispers, friendly flittering leaves and those other birds up among the leaves.

A lone child, she had grown up to a restricted maturity, singularly pure of heart, thought and impulse. Kenwood farm had no intimates. She was not sent to school—Madame Dane gave her the smatter of instruction she thought necessary.

There was no blood tie—Madame's only child, a son, had died tragically before Avice was born. All the girl knew of herself Madame had spoken: "You have had a father and mother, the same as other children. In good time you will learn all about them. Until then, be quiet—hold your tongue, no matter who asks questions."

Then Ellersly came. Picked up for dead after a motor accident in front of Kenwood gates, he was brought to the house where a chauffeur battered and bleeding spoke names and addresses that sent pale flicker like sheet lightning across Madame's impassive face. She laid her hand over Ellersly's heart for half a minute, then stood up, whispering to herself:

"He is not dead—quite. I wonder—" breaking off there and turning as though from the face of temptation.

Swiftly, deftly if untenderly she did what she could for the sufferer—so well that grizzled Dr. Weyburn, her nearest approach to a friend, gave a significant look as he confirmed her verdict, saying hushedly: "I'm wondering—is this a judgment or a providence?"

Other succor came quickly—by airplane huge and swift. Ellersly's mother, his uncle, a famous surgeon, the family physician, and two nurses.

Besides a gashed forehead, a broken wrist, Ellersly had suffered so near a dislocation of the neck vertebra even a slight jar might be fatal.

Immobile for two months, he had a chance of complete recovery. When the uncle a granite faced banker, went to Mme. Dane, she said: "The wing where your nephew lies is rather roomy. There is the long glassed porch beside the four chambers. I think it should be ample for your party. As to meals, I will have them sent in regularly."

Life settled tensely into a routine of waiting. For a fortnight Ellersly lay breathing, taking nourishment, but never opening his eyes. Upon the fifteenth morning he suddenly stared about him, asking weakly: "Am I—in heaven? I hear angels singing."

His mother could not speak—even the nurse's eyes misted—Major Constant turned his stoniest face to the window, and saw through it Avice picking flowers in a distant border—so distant she had not thought her voice could carry to the sick room.

It is tedious lying flat for weeks, your head absolutely rigid, even though you have all manner of distractions. Major Constant had gone home after the first month, but his sister stayed by her boy, ready to humor his lightest whim. And so it came about that she begged Avice to sing for him morning and afternoon, sitting on the porch so he might not be tempted to stir and look at her.

He was strengthening fast. The surgeon returning said he had made a marvelous recovery. Now by help of a brace he might safely sit up brief whiles—a week more he might even venture to stand, to walk a step or two.

At the second sitting up Ellersly drove everyone away after his chair had been drawn to the open casement. "I'm tired of seeing you, and really I'm more than three months old," he had said with a twinkle. But solitude quickly palled. At last he grasped the casement and drew himself upright, just as a flaw of wind caught the window and forced it from his grasp. He tottered visibly, would have fallen but that strong arms soft and round encompassed him, held him close to a softer breast for a breath's space, while he trembled through and through. Then as he sank down he looked at the face of his rescuer and cried: "You are more than my dream. I shall never let you go," and instantly fainted.

Two hours later Avice and Mrs. Ellersly faced Madame asking. "Tell us everything. We must know."

"About my girl, you mean?" Madame flung back. "Well, her mother, a protegee I hoped to see a famous singer, died the unowned wife of a dead husband when Avice was born—"

"But her father?" Mrs. Ellersly whispered. Madame smiled grimly:

"Was Frank Ellersly, your husband's cousin—your son is his god-son—and heir. He shot himself rather than marry as he was bidden, on pain of losing his fortune."

"Why did you not come forward?" Mrs. Ellersly asked.

"Because I had no proof," Madame said lelly.

"But I have!" Mrs. Ellersly cried. "Just a year back I found the marriage certificate; but I did not dream of a child—"

And of course Ellersly and Avice were married, and so things turned out well for everybody.

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST, 1, 1928

THEY MUST BE DEALT WITH.

Despite the heavy list of accidents over the last week-end, numerous motorists have been heard to say that there is a manifest improvement on Ontario's highways in so far as the quality of the driving is concerned.

Traffic is perhaps at its heaviest for the season at the present time, and it is gratifying to know that the great majority of motorists are recognizing the necessity of being careful and that there is not as much reckless driving noticed as in other years.

There still remain, however, careless or irresponsible motorists.

The greater number of accidents recorded are caused by them, and it is the duty of traffic officials to show no mercy in dealing with those who too clearly show that they have no regard whatever for the safety of others.

There will be general agreement with the statement of the Globe that "the congested state of the main highways of the Province during week-ends leaves no room for the taking of chances by the speeder, the reckless or the drunken driver.

Such motorists constitute a hazard that must be eliminated from our highways.

WELL DONE, CANADA!

Canadians continue to do well at the Olympic Games, and while it is too much to hope that the exploit of Percy Williams, of Vancouver, in winning the premier sprint event can be often duplicated by the Maple Leaf athletes, the little squad of men and women wearing the Maple Leaf upon their jerseys are giving an excellent account of themselves.

The girl athletes from the Dominion did splendidly in qualifying three sprinters for the 100 metres dash, and in making the final event so close that only the official pictures of the finish will really decide the winner.

As the results were announced, however, Canadian girls were second and third in competition against the world.

Phil Edwards, running for Canada in the 800 metres, gave an outstanding performance in reaching the finals and finishing fourth in such competition, and there is some satisfaction that the event was won by Lowe of Great Britain and that victory was confined to the Empire.

Williams, Canadian hero of the 100-metre event, again proved his prowess by qualifying for the finals in the 200 metres, and he has a teammate with him in the personal of Fitzpatrick, of Hamilton.

These performances against the world's best show the Canadian Olympic team of 1928 to be the strongest in ability that has ever represented this country in these competitions.

PETERBOROUGH'S WAR MEMORIAL.

The citizens of Peterborough and of Peterborough County will have an opportunity during the next two weeks to contribute to the balance needed to meet the cost of the city and county war memorial, shortly to be unveiled in Confederation Square.

While the bulk of the $32,500 needed for this community enterprise has been raised, there still remains some $6,000 to be secured, and it is felt that there will be little difficulty in doing this in view of the general desire that the memory of the men from this district who gave their lives for Canada and the Empire in the World War should be fittingly commemorated.

In many places war memorials have been erected long since, but the local committee feel that the delay here will be justified because of the beauty and impressiveness of the tangible tribute to the memory of Peterborough's war dead.

We owe it to the men who volunteered when the Empire was in peril that the citizen-soldiers who did not return shall have their bravery and self-sacrifice recognized in a manner that will show to the world the gratitude of the people of this part of Ontario.

There was no drawing back on their part; there should be none now on the part of those they fought for.

SCORING THE OLYMPIC GAMES.

There seems to be some confusion as to the method of scoring points in the Olympic competitions.

As a matter of fact, there is no team championship, the Olympic Games authorities recognizing only winners and the holders of second and third places.

The so-called points championship by which 10 points are awarded for first, 5 for second, 4 for third, 3 for fourth, 2 for fifth and 1 for sixth is not only unofficial but is purely an American standard of comparison, the European sport writers awarding only six points for first place and nothing for other positions.

The United States method, of course, makes it easy for that nation with its small army of entries to pile up a high score on points.

The American athletes do not need to win events to gain on the representatives of other countries according to their scoring plan.

For instance, on Monday all three events decided were won by the British Empire, yet the United States team credited themselves with 20 points, made up of fourth and sixth in the 100 metres, second and third in the 400-metre hurdles, and third, fifth and sixth in the hammer throw.

Unless the championship is decided on the basis of events actually won there does not seem to be much glory in the team honors, but the system pleases the United States sport writers and the massed total of points from sixth place up to first is impressive.

U. S. ACCIDENTS IN 1927.

During the calendar year 1927 the United States lost nearly twice as many citizens from accidental death as it lost in the 1917-18 battles of the Great War. This is revealed in the report of the National Safety Council on the accidents recorded last year, the total of 95,496 deaths being attributed to that cause. Moreover, the greater share of the blame for this appalling aggregate is placed on the self-propelled vehicle which in certain hands has proved itself even more dangerous than the machine gun or the air bomber. This is strikingly brought out by an analysis and comparison of the figures presented in the report. These show that in 1911 approximately 80,000 died from accidents in the United States, whereas the number in 1927 was approximately 16,000 more. But in the interval between these two given years, fatalities in automobile accidents, excluding collisions with railway trains or street cars, rose from 2,043 to 23,251, an increase nearly one-third greater than the general increase. Put another way, accidental deaths due to other causes than automobile mishaps actually diminished between 1911 and 1927, the decrease, however, being neutralized by the more numerous automobile fatalities and over-run by 16,000 more deaths. Thirty-eight out of forty-eight States reporting showed an increase in deaths during 1927 over the previous year.

How these accidents happened is a question examined in some detail in the report, but it is open to doubt whether the actual facts are so widely and accurately known as to render the conclusions based on them of reliable value. But the compiled tables given in the report, at least, indicate what was wrong in the majority of cases. Among the more important data in this connection concerning the ordinary type of accident is what the driver and pedestrian were engaged in doing just before the accident. One of the tables arranges the actions of drivers, in the order of their frequency, thus: Did not have right of way, exceeding the speed limit, on wrong side of road, failed to signal, cutting in, drove off roadway, through street—failed to stop, passed standing street car, improper turning, passing on wrong side, passing on curve of hill, disregarded officer or signal, drove through safety zone, and double or prohibited parking. The two most frequent actions were reported in as many accidents as were all the other actions combined.

Another table lists the actions of the pedestrians, also in the order of their frequency, thus: Crossing at intersection—no signal, crossing between intersections, playing in street, crossing at intersection—against signal, crossing at intersection—with signal, waiting for, getting on or off street car, not in roadway, at work in roadway, riding or hitching on vehicles, getting on or off vehicles other than street cars, crossing at intersection—diagonally, and other actions. The actions of a pedestrian are obviously more difficult to classify, particularly since a great number of those considered here as pedestrians are children.

The report does not give the proportion of children among the victims of automobile accidents for the whole country, but it does give a table of non-fatal accidents reported by nurses in thirteen of the largest cities. This table lists 166 automobile accidents, of which thirty-four happened to children under 14. The proportion of children among the victims of fatal accidents is certainly as high, probably higher, and this fact makes more difficult the balancing of the actions of driver against pedestrian.

In contrast to the rising death rate from automobile accidents is the decreasing number of fatalities in aviation accidents. In 1920 there were 185 deaths in airplane and balloon accidents; in 1926, when the number of those flying had increased enormously, there were 170 deaths. The ratio of deaths to miles flown was in the first year one to 97,587; in 1926 it was one to 1,387,-964.—St. Thomas Times-Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

The on-to-Ottawa deputation have a good case to present to the Minister of Railways and should press every point.

The American experts who picked Lord Burghley as no better than third in the 400-metre hurdles and couldn't see Williams in the 100-metre event have some explaining to do.

No doubt Dr. Tolmie will be willing to admit that Williams' win at Amsterdam can be explained by the recent change of Government in British Columbia.

The Question Box

J.M. Q. (1)—In what year and on what date was the battle of Alma fought and won by the British, and where? (2)—In what year were the two murders found out in Edinburgh, Scotland, namely the Burke and Hare murderers? (2)—In what years were the Phoenix Park murders committed in Dublin, Ireland?

A (1)—Alma is a river in the Crimea near which was fought a battle on September 20th, 1854 between the Russians and the Allied forces of England, France and Turkey. The Allies were completely victorious. (2)—William Burke and William Hare were Irish labourers. Hare however also ran a boarding house in 1827. Near the end of this year one of the boarders died and Hare sold the body to Dr. R. Knox, a leading anatomist for 7 pounds and 10 shillings. This suggested to Hare an easy way to make money so he and Burke fell in line with the plan. They lured travellers to their boarding house and suffocated them so as to show no signs of violence, then sold their bodies to Dr. Knox. Finally when they were caught they had killed fifteen persons. Hare turned crown evidence and Burke was sentenced and later hanged on the 28th of June 1829. Hare, because of his actions, had to go to England where he lived and died under an assumed name. (3)—Pheonix Park Murders took place on May 6th, 1882. Lord Frederick Cavendish, new chief secretary, and T. H. Burke, permanent under-secretary, were stabbed to death by four men (the Invincibles) about seven p.m. in Phoenix Park, Dublin, Ireland.

D.B. Q.—1. Kindly advise through your department the population of Montreal and Boston. 2. Also, which is the largest city in the world, London or New York? 3. Could you also list the 10 largest cities in the world?

A.—1. Montreal, 935,000; Boston, 757,600. 2. London, 7,476,108; New York, 6,103,384; Berlin, 4,000,000; Paris, 3,000,000; Chicago, 2,701,705; Tokio, 2,270,000; Vienna, 1,842,000; Philadelphia, 1,823,779; Buenos Aires, 1,722,000; Osaka, 1,633,000.

J. W. C. Q.—Please tell me what part Hertel de Rouville played in the history of Canada.

A.—Francois Hertel de Rouville was born at Three Rivers, Que., on July 3, 1642. In 1690 he commanded a raiding party from Canada which attacked the New England village of Salmon Falls, in New Hampshire, and wiped out the whole population. Later he commanded part of the French force which besieged Casco Bay. He died at Boucherville, on the south shore at the St Lawrence, not far from Montreal, on May 29, 1722. In 1664 he had married, in Montreal, Mlle. Marguerite de Thauvenet.

Scotia. Q.—I propose paying a visit to the States this summer.

I would like to know, how long it is necessary for one to be a resident of Canada before one is able to pay a visit without any trouble.

A.—If you are just going across the line on a visit there should be no difficulty, whether you have resided in Canada a long or a short period. As a matter of precaution, take with you a letter from the Mayor, which will be given you on request by the City Clerk.

GROWTH.

GOD'S MINUTE.

Jesus saith, have faith in God.—Mark 11:22.

* * *

Our Father Who art in Heaven, we come into Thy presence with full hearts to thank Thee for Thy many mercies: first of all, that Thou dost permit us to call thee "Father," and that out of Thy tender compassion Thou art ever ready to receive us in love, and to help us to overcome the evil in our natures. We thank Thee for Thy wonderful provision—"Whosoever will may come and take of the water of life freely," and that the "whosoever" includes us, and that we know that when we approach Thee in a spirit of repentance, we are not turned away. O Father, may we catch a clearer vision of what Thou art willing to do for us. Grant that we may ever be ready to respond to Thy call to bear Thy message to others, and may we be able to bring to someone a definite conception of Thee and Thy love. May each of us be a willing instrument in Thy hands for the advancement of Thy Kingdom, and we pray Thee to grant us an open mind toward the daily opportunities for helping our fellowmen. May the love of self be withdrawn from our hearts, to be replaced by a full portion of love to Thee. May the time soon come when all the world shall know Thee in the forgiveness of sin. Amen.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., Aug. 1 (Canadian Press). — The export trade in grain here yesterday was rather more active owing to the improved demand from Continental buyers and Montreal exporters worked a moderate amount of business in Manitoba grades of wheat for both nearby and deferred shipment, and some sales of wheat and oats were also made to the United Kingdom.

Owing to the above there was an improved demand from exporters for grain in the local market and sales of No. 3 Northern wheat were made at 2¼c per bushel over the Winnipeg July option, and tough No. 3 Northern at $1.16¾ per bushel, c.i.f., Montreal, while several loads of No. 1 feed oats changed hands at 4¼c to 4½c per bushel over the July option, c.i.f. A firm feeling prevailed in Argentine corn at the late advance treal, whi evesiare123456 23456 345 fi mestic and country account at $1.12, and American No. 2 Commercial Yellow Corn at $1.09 to $1.10 per bushel, ex-store. The market for oats was again weaker and prices were reduced another 1c per bushel.

Prices for all grades of Spring and Winter wheat flour were firmly maintained under a good demand.

A moderate amount of business was done in all lines of millfeed and values were unchanged. The trade in standard grades of rolled oats was quiet, but the undertone was steady.

The demand for all grades of eggs continued and prices were firm. The receipts were 2,302 cases.

The undertone to the market for butter was again stronger and prices scored a further advance of ½c per pound, which was attributed to the increased demand and the somewhat limited supplies offering on account of the fact that holders in most cases have confidence in the future. A fair volume of business was done. The receipts were 144 packages.

A feature of the cheese trade was the improved demand from foreign buyers, and as cables were stronger at an advance of 1s to 1s 6d per cwt. for Western No. 1 grades, some business was done. There was also some demand from spot buyers. Receipts Fratony, Commanded By Lieut. Andrew D. MacLean, Visits City.

NAVAL RESERVE MEMBERS TOUR TRENT WATERS IN HANDY SHIP

WELL FITTED UP.

Silent Motors, Electric Lights, Radio and Comfortable Living Quarters On Board.

When is a tug not a tug? If you asked Lieutenant Andrew D. MacLean of the Royal Naval Reserve, Toronto, he would probably answer, "when you purchase one; pull out the steam power plant, put in new and satisfactory silent motors; fit up comfortable living quarters lighted by power from a complete portable lighting plant; equip her with radio for entertainment; apply a well-arranged color scheme; top the entire job with proper compasses, lights and rigging; man the craft with three experienced naval men from the Reserve and then start out for a holiday trip from Toronto to Trenton and thence to Georgian Bay by way of the Trent Waterway System." For that is exactly what he and Mrs. MacLean, with their dog Tony, have set out to do and are finding pleasant beyond expectation.

A few days ago, Lieutenant MacLean wired The Examiner for information relative to passage through certain parts of the Trent Waterway system. Yesterday afternoon he in person greeted an Examiner reporter with a cheery "Come aboard," from where he sat chatting with Mrs. MacLean on their cruiser "Fratony." Cheery and interesting conversationists they proved to be as they told of their trip thus far, from Toronto to Trenton and thence up the Trent Waterway to Peterborough; and later, during a brief "tour of inspection." This consisted of a visit to the pilot house, whence the cruiser is directed on her course by reference to no less than three compasses, when necessary; down a convenient ladder into the fore-hold; back through the crew's sleeping quarters, and out by way of the room housing the power plant.

Two motors, each of which develops 60 horse-power, drive the twin screws which propel the boat; fuel being stored in two 300-gallon tanks. In the engine room is also to be seen an air pressure apparatus whose sole purpose at present is to blow the siren.

A Novel Cruiser

"While I am identified with the Royal Naval Reserve in Toronto, this is purely a pleasure trip with a volunteer crew aboard," said Lieutenant MacLean in discussing the circumstances of their coming to Peterborough. "Besides Mrs. MacLean and our Tony (he is a Samoyede, of which there are only two in Canada) there are three others taking the trip, namely Chief Petty Officer Hurst, who was a Senior Naval Officer of the Suez Canal during the war; Chief Motor Mechanic Delvin, and Leading Signalman Airth, all of whom are at present of the Naval Reserve in Toronto. We are taking a sort of 'Busman's holiday," but it is good training for us all, and Mrs. MacLean and I expect to visit with some friends when we reach Georgian Bay."

He then mentioned features of his craft as spoken of above and also humorously related the solution of a problem which had puzzled many of those in the Reserve—what name the boat should be christened. "I offered a prize for a suitable name, but none of the resultant suggestions seemed applicable, so I finally hit upon the name 'Fratony.' Mrs. MacLean consented, despite the fact that the first three letters are the first three of her name, Frances, while the last four spell our dog's name, Tony. Thus you have it F-r-a-t-o-n-y."

Were she the least bit resentful, Mrs. MacLean might very well repay those on board, for she has at her disposal a very small, but well-appointed kitchenette. Yet from all outward indications she makes use of it in no such ignoble manner, for the lieutenant recalled most appetizing meals during the trip. The Fratony had come from Healey Falls yesterday, and after a few hours here, departed for Bobcaygeon.

ITALIAN PRESS PRAISES CREW

Mussolini States That He Will Receive Full Reports of Entire Flight.

FROM OFFICIAL SOURCES.

ROME, Aug. 1.—(Canadian Press). — General Umberto Nobile, Lieut. Alfred Viglieri, and other army and navy officers who were membes of the crew of the dirigible Italia will make detailed reports of their experiences in the Arctic disaster to their immediate superior. These in turn will be submitted to Premier Mussolini. The Premier announced to-day that by this means he would make an investigation of the entire expedition.

The entire Italian press is dedicating whole pages to the return of Nobile. Enthusiastic editorials appear in their columns and these may be summed up in the words of the Popolo Romano, the Fascist organ, which says, "General Nobile, misfortune made your heroism all the greater. All of Italy stands up for you and your superb brothers, for those who are dead and for those who are alive, for all the audacious, fine and great things you have done.

"The greeting given you by the Roman people is an admonition to all cowards and renegades who are cursed because they are compelled to live outside Italy."

BOOSTING FOR HEALTH

The patient who adheres strictly to his doctor's directions usually regains his health quickly. Even though most patients do adhere to their doctor's instructions, it is a noticeable fact that some of them get well more quickly than others. These patients who become well so quickly are enthusiastic, and continue to increase in health and happiness. Every once in a while they bring in a new patient to the doctor who treated them.

This booster type of patient responds more quickly than the average sick person because he not only practices dieting, but he talks about health and getting better. By teaching good habits of living to his friends, he has fixed these in his own mind so that they become a part of him. You can see the point. This veritable teaching of others helps to establish a regular healthful regime deeply rooted in the subconscious memory. The patient may feel justly proud of these accomplishments. By explaining these things to his friends, he has become more and more interested in the necessity of the right food and exercises, and through careful investigation he has become more fully and intelligently conscious of the advantages which come from living a healthful life.

It has been truthfully said that one only begins to learn a thing thoroughly when he attempts to teach it to others. If you are desirous of being still more benefited from the advice contained in this column, you must not only follow the advice literally by practicing the proven good rules which I give you, but you should do your best to help others by bringing these facts to their attention.

We get from this world just about as much as we are willing to give, and it is a good policy to point out the right path to others. If you were in the dark yourself, you would appreciate a guiding hand.

There is a very close connection between spoken words and memory. Did you ever wonder why you cannot remember events of your childhood that occurred before two or three years of age? The reason is because at that early age you could not talk about what you were doing, and therefore your memory of events was not as thoroughly impressed upon your mind as later when you learned to do things and talk about them at the same time. As you grow older, your memory mind becomes stronger because those things that are spoken about are visualized and remembered.

The one who is sick will only make himself worse if he repeats over and over again the stories of his illness and pain, for disease is fostered by those who develop habits of complaining about their troubles. How much better to develop the health habit of talking about wholesome ideas of diet, fresh air and exercise, and in this way build them into the subconsciousness so that they will become a living part of your personality.

Questions and Answers.

Question: Mrs. H. K. writes: "I am troubled with a peeling of the skin on my face, particularly on my nose and on my chin. Could it be that the face powder and cream I use do not agree with it, or is it a condition to be treated internally instead of exter-n ally?"

Answer: Most skin troubles should be treated internally through dieting and not externally by the application of remedies. I will be glad to send you an article on this subject if you will send a large-self-addressed, stamped envelope the next time you write.

Answer: Pumpernickel is the black bread of the German and Russian peasant, being made of the coarse, unbolted rye flour. The genuine pumpernickel is imported into this country sliced in cans, but, personally I do not know of a baker in the United States who makes this bread of the straight rye flour, that is, without the addition of wheat flour. The real article is an excellent starch food.

Question: M.O.R. writes: "I am a regular reader of your articles and also have your book, "THE FAST WAY TO HEALTH," so wish your advice. Six years ago I had my upper teeth removed on account of abscesses, and am still unable to wear a plate because of mucus collecting between it and the roof of my mouth, although I have had several made by the best dentists. Do you think I will ever be able to wear a plate?"

Answer: I have had many patients who complained of the same thing, and I always advised them to go to one good dentist after another until they find one who is able to properly fit them with false teeth. The fitting of the plates is not only a science, but an art, and even those dentists with the best reputations often fail to fit false teeth properly. Don't give up, but try again.

START FLIGHT AROUND WORLD

Spanish Aviators Leave Cadiz To-day On First Hop To Azores.

FOUR-MOTORED SEAPLANE.

CADIZ, Spain, Aug. 1 (Canadian Press).—Four Spanish airmen hopped off this morning in a four-motored seaplane on the first lap of a flight around the world in 45 days.

Two attempts were necessary before the plane, the Numancia, rose from the waters after part of its load had been lightened.

The plane headed for Azores 1,200 miles away. From there the airmen intend to head for Halifax and then New York.

Ramon Franco is pilot and commander, and with him is Captain Ruiz de Alda, who was with Franco on his first flight across the South Atlantic in 1926. The other members of the crew were Emilio Gallarza, co-pilot, and Pablo Rada, machanic.

The plane will go from Halifax to New York and later stopping places are Havan, Mexico City, La Paz, Bolivia, Lower California, San Francisco, Port Essington, B.C.; Unalaska, Alaska; and Petropavolsk, Siberia. From Siberia Major Franco will fly to Japan, the Philippine Islands, India, Italy, and back to Cadiz.

The purpose of the flight is to prove the possibility of using a seaplane as a successful means of transporting passengers and mail across the ocean.

A new metal called beryllium may soon be a close rival to aluminum. Extracted from ores previously dumped away as wsate, beryllium promises special value in making kitchen utensils, frames for airships, and pistons for motor cars. It is about a third lighter than aluminum, yet much harder, with four times its elasticity.

NIAGARA FALLS BUYS AIRPORT

Ratepayers Endorse Plan at Yesterday's Election.

CAN SEE FALLS.

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y., Aug. 1.—(Canadian Press). — Property owners of this city yesterday voted in favor of purchasing land for establishing an airport.

A sight-seeing service, which carries passengers over the Falls, has agreed to utilize the airport, and fees from this company will pay largely the cost of the operation of the field, city officials say. Later a passenger and express service will be established between here and Buffalo and connections made with the air mail route between Niagara Falls, Toronto, and Windsor, Ontario.

CREAM IS USED IN LOCAL PLANT

G. A. Gillespie Says Recent Charges Against Ice Cream Are Against Small Firms.

11 PER CENT BUTTER FAT.

Peterborough Milk Products ice cream melts. This fact has a greater significance than is on the surface of the statement. A newspaper article reads: "The unique idea of putting a little cream in ice cream is engaging the attention of the Ontario Department of Agriculture. Cream producers claim that the demand for cream is not what one would expect in view of the fact that eight or nine million dollars' worth of ice cream is sold annually in the Dominion of Canada."

Hon. John S. Martin is quoted as saying that a test should be made of ice cream. At a sitting of the legislature's standing committee on agriculture a few months ago, there was a discussion on the subject of impoverished ice cream, and Hon. Mr. Martin, who is interested in the practical side of the dairy business, having a Guernsey herd of his own, recalled that certain banquets which he attended, alleged ice cream served for dessert displayed qualities of durability which created suspicion that it was travelling under an assumed name. Genuine ice cream melts.

While The Examiner was talking with G. A. Gillespie on the subject, before the melting qualities of ice cream were mentioned, a telephone call was received by him which evidently was for ice cream to be served at a party. Half a gallon was ordered but as there were no half gallon freezers, Mr. Gillespie seemed rather worried as to how the ice cream would stand if left without the proper containers. This displays the melting qualities of Peterborough ice cream.

The articles continues: "The minister expressed the opinion that much of the stuff sold did not contain a particle of cream. There is no commodity on the market which is such a deception as ice cream, a great deal of powder, water and other ingredients being mixed together and frozen. The fact that it is frozen is one of the few safeguards about it."

"Freezing is no safeguard," commented Mr. Gillespie.

"These facts may be true about the smaller creameries," he continued, "but certainly not about the larger creameries of Toronto or of the Peterborough Creamery, I am satisfied with that."

"The fact is," continues the article," that minimum butter fat content is governed by Federal regulations under the Food and Drug Act, and enforcement of course is in the hands of Dominion inspectors. The head of one of the largest dairies in Toronto said that he has never heard of a prosecution in this connection.

"Neither have I," said Mr. Gillespie. "The government regulations call for 10 per cent butter fat," said Mr. Gillespie, "and I am satisfied that all the larger creameries keep to that standard. For three years the Peterborough Creamery ice cream has run over 11 per cent test for butter fat. Twenty-two per cent cream is used, but when frozen this results in only 11 per cent butter fat."

The ingredients used are the best. Pure cream and condensed milk are used in the ratio of four to one and the rest is made up of sugar and sweetening. At present they are making ice cream at the rate of 800 gallons a day.

PARISH SOCIAL GREAT SUCCESS

Great Number of People Attend Function on Convent Grounds.

MANY WORKERS.

The annual social of St. Peter's Cathedral parish, held last night on the grounds adjoining St. Mary's Convent, was a very successful affair. Exclusive of the advance sale of tickets, the amount taken in on the grounds last evening was in the neighborhood of $800.

Rev. P. Costello, rector of the Cathedral, was in charge of general arrangements and every item was looked after in a very efficient way. A corps of energetic men and women assisted during the afternoon and evening.

The booths were decorated with colored paper; the fish pond had evergreen boughs as an adornment, and the grounds were brightly lighted by strings of overhead electric globes. The booths did a record business last evening, with plenty of patrons also for the well-stocked fish pond, the sale at the Country Store, and the "Bingo" game.

Miss Mary Maloney and Miss Ann Hurley were general convenors and had charge of the country store, where they were assisted by Messrs. Thomas Turcotte and Thomas DeForge, giving excellent service for the sale of articles, also Messrs. F. J. Overend and J. J. Southern as treasurers, and Messrs. W. Clancy, H. O'Heron, G. McFadden and T. Ryan, assisting with the sale of tickets.

The fish pond, which was a busy centre for the juniors all evening, was in charge of Miss Annie Simons, assisted by Mrs. T. Lane and the Misses Nell Simons, Agnes Burns, Clara Grisdale and Agnes Weyer.

The Sodality of the Cathedral had two booths for the sale of candy, ice cream and soft drinks. They were in charge of the president, Miss Agnes Grant, assisted by the Misses Mamie Archambault, Irene O'Brien, Mildred Archambault, Fanny Doris, Norah Killen, Kay Doyle, Marita Collins, Rita Maher, Florence Murray, D. O'Brien, Margaret Conners, Clara Fontaine and Norah Shevlin, also Messrs. James Scollard, J. Murphy, F. Wolff, H. Donovan, A. Archambault and A. S. Pepe.

The "Bingo" game was in charge of Don McKinnon, assisted by Messrs. M. Clancy, L. Lebarr, Jr., J. Sharpe, L. McDonald, W. MacPherson and C. Wolff.

Messrs. W. Kearns, Leo Pearson and Joseph Fontaine had the sale of hot dogs.

Little Margaret Grisdale and Margaret Hickson sold tickets for the doll at the fish pond.

Those responsible for the erection of the booths in the afternoon included Messrs. T. McMurray, James MacPherson, Wm. Armstrong, M. Whaley, J. Sharpe, P. Hynes, D. Donoghue, James Garvey, Jos. Beausoliel, Thos. De Forge, and H. Donovan.

Owing to all of the books of tickets not having been returned yet, it was impossible to have the draw for the prizes last night. Father Costello is anxious to have these returned as soon as possible, and also desires to thank sincerely all who assisted in making the social such a success; the workers, the patrons and the public at large, and the Utilities Commission, who were responsible for the very effective lighting of the grounds.

DULUTH PROSPECTOR DIES IN HOSPITAL

John Helmer Failed To Rally After Being Lost 21 Days.

PORT ARTHUR, Ont., Aug. 1. — (Canadian Press). — John Helmer, prospector of Duluth, was brought to the General Hospital here after his rescue following twenty two days lost in Nungesser Lake section of Red Lake area, died to-day

Upon arrival here from Sioux Lookout he declined to enter the hospital until he had paid a visit to his favorite restaurant, despite pleadings of his friends who recognised his condition as serious. He entered the hospital Monday night and failed to respond to the care of the hospital staff, sinking rapidly, owing to his generally broken down condition.

When the aged prospector was picked up by John Kirkness, a trapper of a little lake after four expeditions had failed to find him, he had laid himself down to die and was able to signal his rescuer only by the raising of an arm. From an entire lack of food, from struggles of many days through the dense woods and more than all from the attacks of black ies which particularly attacked the sores on his body created by the contact with the branches and trees after his clothes had been torn to rags, the man was in a very emaciated and weak condition and only semi-rational when taken in charge, carried out to Sioux Lookout by airplane and given attention. He was brought Monday to Port Arthur. Medical men at once recognised his condition as critical. He died at an early hour this morning. A brother, William Helmer, who organsed the search party, came here with him and being still here will arrange to take the body to the family home in Duluth. A daughter, Mrs. M. S. Sullivan, and her husband, are expected from Duluth this evening and another son, Inkerman, is coming down from Sioux Lookout to join William, the son already here to arrange the funeral, which will likely be held in Duluth.

ALDERVILLE GIRLS TRY TO RUN AWAY

Two Young Women Found at Cobourg Station Waiting For Train.

ROSENEATH, Aug. 1.—Two 'teen age girls of Alderville Indian Reserve caused considerable excitement to their relatives and friends on Sunday when they disappeared from their homes. After a search of the village and country round, Chief Ruse, of Cobourg, was notified. He located the girls at the station awaiting a west-bound train. However, the girls were brought back to their respective homes, giving little information or reasons for their behaviour.

Perspiration Odour so unpardonable so easy to banish

What quality is so attractive as personal charm . . . . and what social fault so obnoxious as perspiration odour.

Every person perspires, of course. It's natural, it's healthful. Physicians say the perspiration of the average person measures between one and two pints daily. Nature takes this way of ridding the body of impurities through the millions of tiny pores of the skin.

But perspiration need not be objectionable. Lifebuoy Soap, used in the bath, banishes the odour. Lifebuoy's creamy, mild lather not only cleanses, but also purifies the pores — antiseptically — and keeps them sweet, open and breathing.

To Keep Well
Drink plenty of water, perspire freely and banish perspiration odour with Lifebuoy Soap.

Make sure of avoiding the needless social error of perspiration odour. Use Lifebuoy Soap, for hands, face and bath.

Low in price — wonderful in results.

SPOILT MUSIC

A Splendid New Serial by Ruby M. Ayres

THESTORY THUS FAR:

JENNIFER FRY is saved from drowning by NICHOLAS GAUNT, wealthy young man-about-town. Later, he takes her to tea and asks to call, but she refuses because she is ashamed of her humble surroundings. They continue their friendship and Jennifer comes to love Nicholas, but he is suddenly called abroad by his mother's illness. During his absence Jennifer's father dies. She reads of his engagement in the paper, and stands in the crowd to see him and his bride come from the church after the wedding. Her mother dies. Five years later she meets Nicholas again. He decides to divorce his wife, Lady Edith But just then Lady Edith becomes ill. The doctors promise her only a year of life and she makes Gaunt promise not to see Jennifer for that year. Jennifer is angry and decides to be as gay as she can on a legacy of eight thousand pounds left her by an uncle. She gives up her job and goes to work to have a good time. She meets DOLORES and Buddy, two women who live in the flat above her new dwelling place. Through them she meets CHESNEY, who quarrels about her with Buddy and proposes to Jennifer. Jennifer asks him to wait for her answer. They meet Gaunt and his wife at a night club. Jennifer, tired and unhappy, promises to marry Chesney. Buddy, when she hears of the engagement, tries to kill herself. Lady Gaunt invites Chesney and Jennifer to dinner. Gaunt tells Jennifer she shall never marry Chesney.

CHAPTER XXX

Imprisoned Souls.

Jennifer tried to speak, but she could find no words, and Gaunt went on more quietly:

"It's no use fighting me, Jennifer. I've suffered more on your account than you will ever know, but I've done with suffering. I'll give you one week in which to make up your mind."

She caught her breath hard.

"You must be mad," she whispered.

He laughed recklessly.

"Perhaps I am, but you shall make me sane." With a swift movement he caught her in his arms. "Kiss me! Kiss me!"

"Let me go! If anyone should see us. . ."

"I don't care."

She struggled desperately to free herself.

"Let me go! You brute! Let me go! I hate you!"

"No," said Gaunt, triumphantly. "You love me, and I love you, Jennifer; with all my heart and soul I love you!"

There were steps outside the door and Jennifer tore herself free just as it opened to admit Edith and Chesney. Chesney looked pleased and eager.

"You must see that room, Jennifer," he began, then stopped, a frown of perplexity between his eyes. "Why, is anything the matter?" he asked, hurriedly.

Jennifer tried to laugh.

"Only my usual headache. I've had it all the evening, but now it's much worse. I was just telling Mr. Gaunt I thought I had better go home. I'm so sorry. It's very silly of me."

"Oh, you poor dear!" Edith Gaunt said. "I'll ring for some of my mixture. I suffer terribly with headaches, too, but this will cure you in a moment. Please ring the bell, Nicky."

But Jennifer would not allow it.

"I would rather go home if you don't mind; bed is much the best place for me. Oh, I do hope you'll forgive me. I'm not often so silly."

She looked at Chesney with eyes of desperate appeal.

"We'll go at once, of course," he said, but he seemed disappointed. He He badly wanted to show Jennifer Edith's wonderful reception-room. Nicholas said nothing; he was pacing slowly up and down, and he did not even raise his eyes when the two women left them. Chesney glanced at him and began an apology.

"I'm awfully sorry, but Jennifer's not very strong and she overdoes it."

"Yes."

Nicholas thought of his first meeting with Jennifer at the sea and of her sudden faintness. A lifetime ago it seemed.

Chesney went on complacently:

"As soon as we're married I'm going to take her away for a long holiday."

Gaunt's restless pacing ceased.

"Oh, are you?" he said, vaguely, then he laughed. "The modern woman seems to have gone mad," he said, bitterly. "She's never at home. Always chasing about pretending she is enjoying life."

Jennifer came downstairs.

"I give you a week in which to make up your mind," Nicholas said in an undertone as Jennifer just touched his hand in good-bye. She made no answer, did not even look up, and in a moment she and Chesney had gone.

There was no sleep for Jennifer that night. She lay awake, every nerve in her body aching, staring at a flickering shadow on the ceiling cast through the curtains by a street lamp outside.

"One week in which to make up your mind!"

He did not mean it, of course, he was just trying to frighten her. Well, she would not be frightened; she would show him that he had played with her too often; she would beat him with his own weapons this time by marrying Malcolm Chesney at once.

There was nothing to wait for. She had only to tell Malcolm that she was quite happy and contented to slip off with him to a registrar's and he would at once make all arrangements for their marriage.

She would show Nicholas Gaunt that the day was past when she could implore him not to leave her; it was her turn now to call the tune to which he should dance.

She turned over and shut her eyes, trying to sleep, but she could not shut out the memory of Gaunt's face, or the sound of his voice.

She wanted him, wanted him, wanted him! She would have given ten years of her life to be held in his arms again, and to feel his lips on hers.

Her mind went back painfully over the very few happy times they had spent together.

That first tea at Rumpelmeyer's—the little stolen rides in his car.

Then the long months of pain and separation, then the second crossing of their pathways, and Gaunt's declaration that it was only her friendship he wanted.

Well, they had tried friendship, and it had failed.

Jennifer's cheeks burned as she thought of the day when he found her at Mrs. Jilly's cottage at Porth.

But for that telegram from Italy he would never have left her again she knew; all the long months since they would have spent together.

But he had left her! Edith, in her weakness, had proved stronger than she. And now the old weary battle had got to be fought once more, only this time she had Chesney for an ally, and Chesney loved her.

"I will tell him that we must be married at once," was Jennifer's last waking thought. "Tomorrow I will tell him." But in the morning her determination wavered. After all, why need she fear Nicholas? He could not force her into anything against her wish. Her courage returned. When Dolores Vasher came down from the upstairs flat she found Jennifer carefully dressing herself in a new frock, and singing as if she had not a care in the world.

Dolores sat down wearily in a big chair; she looked worn out.

"I just ran down to tell you that we're off on Thursday," she said. "Buddy's too weak to say No, or she would. I've fixed everything up. I've got a cottage by the sea!" She made a wry grimace. "Can you see me leading the simple life in a cottage by the sea? No, I'm sure you can't; but I've got to stick it, for that kid's sake."

"She's better, isn't she?" Jennifer asked, with an effort.

Dolores nodded.

"Yes, but it won't last long unless I can get her right away." She hesitated, then asked, "I suppose. . . there's nothing settled between you and Malcolm, is there?"

Jennifer turned round.

"You mean . . . Oh, about our wedding? No, but as a matter of fact we may rush off to a registrar's after all."

Dolores looked relieved.

"And very sensible, too! What on earth do people want to make such a fuss about weddings for? They're nearly always failures, so the less they're advertised the better!"

"Don't be so cynical."

Dolores laughed mirthlessly.

"Life makes one cynical—if one lives long enough. Did you go to the Gaunts' last night?"

"Yes."

"We were asked, but I had to refuse. How do you like them?"

"I like their house immensely."

"What a barefaced evasion! Which one of them do you detest—Edith or Nicholas?"

"I don't detest either of them. They were both very nice to me." Jennifer carefully powdered her nose, keeping her face averted.

"Which of them is your especial friend?" she asked, lightly.

Dolores shrugged her thin shoulders.

"Edith, I suppose. I think Gaunt loathes me, but then on principle he loathes all women of my type. You're the sort he admires."

"You seem to know a good deal about him."

"I don't, but he interests me. I think I'm sorry for him."

"Why on earth?"

Dolores puckered her darkened brows.

"Goodness knows! I can't explain, and probably I'm all wrong. Well, I'm going to pack now."

She wandered away again, but presently Jennifer heard the sound of her violin in some haunting Hungarian air which had a wild, restless ring in it as of an imprisoned soul trying to escape.

"Poor Dolores!" Jennifer thought. "I know she's not a bit happy really, although she always tries to be."

Then she realized that her own case was just the same. Always trying to be happy, and yet always conscious of something wanting, something that was beyond her reach, unattainable. . . .

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

THURSDAY, AUGUST 2, 1928

Adverse signs predominate today, according to astrology which reads for the day many conflicting influences.

Women should be exceedingly careful in all important matters while this rule prevails.

This is not a lucky day for entering into engagement to marry or for making decision in which the heart is involved.

Weddings under this sway are likely to bring more or less disappointment and even strife. Ideals may be shattered early by the stern realities of life.

The planetary government is not promising for theatres and presages changes in management or policy that will be difficult for players.

Motion pictures are subject to numerous influences that will work hardships to actors and actresses. Producers will make severe demands.

There is an aspect read as emphasizing the importance of pure speech and faultless diction. Persons in private life as well as those in the theatres will be forced to improve in the use of the voice.

Under this direction of the stars there may be an unusual sensitiveness and irritability. Self control should be practiced.

The late hours today should be favorable to persons who seek public approval. Politicians should benefit.

Again astrologers foretell for the national election amazing surprises after a bitter campaign.

Subjects of this sign of Leo make successful managers or leaders, for they can strongly influence public opinion.

The evening may be conducive to sharp words and forceful denunciation of enemies or opponents. It is well to watch one's words.

Persons whose birthdate it is probably will have a year of much excitement and pleasure. They may suffer through disputes. The subjects of Leo are inclined to over-value what is their own and to be stubborn about taking advice.

Children born on this day probably will be intelligent, witty and endowed with talents. Many actors are born under this sign which gives strong emotions. Love plays a super important part in many Leo people.

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY WE HOPE

By Meltzer K. Thomson, Ph.D. Author, The Springs of Human Action.

Hope springs eternal in the human breast because it is the way of life. Life is impossible without hope. When hope is gone life is not worth living. Suicide may and often does follow the abandonment of all hope.

Life is a hope and a promise. The unexpected is always happening and we hope the unexpected will be in our favor. We are egotistic enough to believe that the best is for us. Hope carries us over the dark corners of life and the rough places when the going is rather steep and hard.

When a man is sentenced to life imprisonment he hopes against hope that he will get out alive. Otherwise it is doubtful if he could stand the punishment.

Hope gives strength and courage to do and dare. In a rowing contest over the four mile course the strain is so great that despite months of training all crews are on the verge of collapse, but the remarkable thing is that the winning crew never collapses. The defeated crew is realizing that the race is lost crumples. On the other hand no matter how tired and worn the winning crew may be, the hope and immediate prospect of victory carry them over the line and over the breaking point.

We also hope because we don't know what else to do. Frequently there is nothing we can do but to hope. After we have done all in our power we leave the rest with fate and hope for the best. Hope in this sense is an attitude of expectancy, of keeping the idea of victory constantly in mind to buoy up our courage.

We hope because only by hoping can we succeed or make life tolerable.

CATTLE, GRAIN AND PRODUCE

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, Aug. 1 (Canadian Press.)—Plenty of liveliness but no sensational squeeze in prices marked the wind-up yesterday of dealings in July delivery of corn. Owing to sharp differences of opinion between opposing powerful groups of traders, an exciting finish had been looked for, but the victors in the struggle who were leaders on the bull side of the market deemed moderation becoming, and kept values from any wild advance.

Closing quotations on corn were irregular at 1¾c net decline to 4¼c gain; wheat ⅝ to 1⅞c off, oats ¼ to 6⅝c down, and provisions varying from 10c setback to a rise of 50c.

The final price yesterday for July delivery of corn was $1.15½ a bushel, just ¾c under the highest point which had heretofore been reached this season. Throughout the day, previous speculative sellers who wished to settle their account had been freely given opportunity to do so at or below $1.16½, but the defeated element proved stubborn, and in the effort to win were able to force the market temporarily as low as $1.11 for July. However, the bears were under a decided handicap yesterday from the outset, arrivals of corn here yesterday being far short of what was expected and totaling only 643 cars, whereas 1,000 cars or more had been looked for.

Especially during the last hour, trading in corn yesterday was on a huge scale, with enormous selling of September and December deliveries, but with offerings of July scant except from the principal holders and at gradually tightening quotations. The selling of September and December deliveries was done largely on assertions that monthly unofficial estimates to-day would indicate a larger corn crop than was forecast a month ago. As against this, owners of corn here expressed themselves as satisfied that there would be a good demand for all corn at present available and that prices to-day for actual corn would by no means be based on the September price.

Wheat tended downward throughout the day, influenced by favorable crop reports from the American and Canadian Northwest. Harvesting is expected to be under way in Manitoba by August 10 and in Saskatchewan a week later.

Belated liquidating sales on the part of holders led to a break of 6¼c a bushel in the price of old style July contracts and 4¾ in new style July. Otherwise oats futures held within narrow limits.

Provisions were mostly dull and without significant changes in prices.

BUTTER AND EGGS.

TORONTO, August 1. — An advance of ½ cent per pound in butter was announced by dealers on the local wholesale produce market yesterday. While sales at a higher price than that quoted were made on Monday the advance in quotations was not made until yesterday.

At Chicago butter ruled steady to firm, with prices on medium and top scores ½c higher. Receivers in most quarters reported a fairly satisfactory trade, largely in the medium and the lower grades.

Eggs have also been advanced in price locally from one to two cents per dozen.

The trend of the egg markets appears a little firmer with a good demand for fresh extras.

At Montreal the market is unchanged in price. There is a good demand for fresh extras. At Saskatoon egg supplies are about equal to consumptive demand, with receipts averaging 70 cases per day. Dealers are quoting country shippers for ungraded eggs delivered, cases returned, extras 30c, firsts 28c, seconds 22c to 24c. North Battleford egg prices are firm. Producers are receiving for extras 30c, firsts 28c, seconds 22c to 24c. The Halifax egg market is remaining steady with receipts light and shipments from Prince Edward Island heavy. Dealers are quoting country shippers for ungraded eggs delivered, cases returned, extras 35c firsts 30c, seconds 24c.

ARTIST'S WORK MAKES CHURCH VERY BEAUTIFUL

St. Mary's, Campbellford, Has Been Completely Renovated and Redecorated.

CAREFULLY DESIGNED.

Fine Pictures Harmonize Well With Coloring of Walls and Windows.

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 1 (Examiner Staff Correspondence).—The steeple of St. Mary's Roman Catholic Church will have its new coat of silver paint finished to-day and the church will be out of the hands of the decorators and steeple-jacks. The interior wall and ceiling as well as much of the woodwork have been completely renovated and the resultant atmosphere which the work has given to the church is most pleasing. P. C. Brown and Sons of Willowdale have had the interior of the church in their care, while the tall spire has been painted by Julius Westholme and Harry Condick of Oshawa. The spire, which rises to approximately one hundred and thirty feet from the ground, is surmounted by a cross ten feet in height and is a landmark for a wide area of the surrounding country.

From the outer vestibule to the canstuary at the front of the church, the artist has created a distinctly pleasing and restful atmosphere and the modern lighting system recently installed sets off the work to good effect. The canctuary with its altar of white and gold with its crimson cloth, gold and lace trimmed and its crimson carpet runners is a place of beauty. The walls of the sanctuary are finished to represent buff stone in tiers separated by border designs of the same shade. On either side are the side altars, and these too have felt the touch of the artist's brush.

The high, triple-arched ceiling is finished in natural wood color, wtih panelling in fumed oak. The cornice is of the same shade and is supported by bronze columns of the Corinthian type. The five panels which constitute the half dome above the sanctuary are artistically finished to represent the Immaculate Conception, which is the iragest and centre panel; the Birth of Christ on the extreme left; and His Resurrection on the extreme right. Separating the centre and outside panels are two smaller designs representing St. Joseph on the left and the Crucifixion on the right. The whole is worked with a pale shade of blue as the predominating color.

Between the stained glass windows which line the walls of the body of the church are panels finished in the same shade of blue with a watered effect of buff. Each panel contains one station of the Cross and is contained in a suitable border. Along the lower edge of the decoration there is a wide border in which sacred emblems of small, unpretentious design, play a prominent part. The whole of the mural decoration tends to set off the beautiful stained glass windows to excellent effect.

After seeing the interior of the church, there seems to be nothing that could possibly be added that would enhance the beauty of the building. No does there appear to be any tendency to crowd or overdo any detail of the work. Each design is the work of the artist and specially for the church here. When he had finished, Mr. Browne destroyed his sketches.

It is approximately seven years since the Rev. Father Phelan became the priest of St. Mary's Parish here and in that time, he and his congregation have accomplished much by way of improvement to their property till now there does not appear to be anything further that can possibly be done along that line. For many years the "stone church on the hill" has been a mark in the tourist guide books. It has now become something more—one of the beautiful buildings of the town and one of which the community can be justly proud.

OBITUARY

ALBERT BAKER.

(Examiner Correspondence)

ROSENEATH, Aug. 1.—The funeral of the late Albert Baker, who passed away at St. Joseph's Hospital, Peterborough, on Sunday morning, July 29, took place from his residence, near Burnley, on Tuesday morning at 8.30 a.m.

Mr. Baker was well known and very highly respected, the large number of neighbors and friends who gathered for the service testifying to the sincere sympathy extended by the entire community to the bereaved family and other relatives.

Father Ferguson had charge of the service, who expressed sympathy for the family, bereft of a loved one.

Mr. Baker leaves to mourn his loss one daughter, Mary, at home, and three sons, Paul of Windsor, John of Detroit and Hugh living at home. Interment took place in Warkworth Roman Catholic Cemetery.

JAMES NORTHCOTT.

(Examiner Correspondence)

LAKEFIELD, Aug. 1.—The funeral of the late James Northcott took place on Friday afternoon from the family residence, George street, and was attended by a number of friends and neighbors. Rev. S. A. Kemp was in charge of the service and spoke words of hope and comfort to the mourners, speaking of the divine assurance of the perfect life beyond the grave, with the pain and grief, the sin and sorrow of this world left behind forever and not even a memory, for the glory of the life with God is all in all.

Mrs. Northcott and her daughters have the sympathy of the community in their sorrow.

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 1 (Examiner Staff Correspondence).—Installation of officers was the main item of business to be transacted at the regular meeting of the local lodge I.O.O.F. 248 last night. The D.D.G.M., Mr. Vance of Thomasburg, was present and officiated at the installation ceremony. The regular business time was largely taken up with the completion of arrangements for the annual picnic, which will be held in conjunction with the local Rebekah lodge on Civic Holiday, August 6th, at Bradley Bay. It is the intention of the lodges to leave about ten-thirty in the morning.

The officers who were officially installed last night were: J.P.G., Ray Phillips; N.G., J. McGregor; V.G., Roy Loucks; Rec. Sec., Frank Menzies; Fin. Sec., T. J. Crisghead; Treas., R. J. Bullen; R.S.N.G., P. R. Sherwin; L.S.N.G., Charles Holmes; R.S.V.G., Alfred West; L.S.V.G., Edward Frederick; Conductor, Ernest Haig; Warden, Charles Neill; Chaplain, George Lucy; Inside Guardian, Arlington Phillips; Outside Guardian, Algie Thomas.

NEWS IN BRIEF

CASHIER ARRESTED.

TORONTO, Aug. 1.—To high life Victor R. Cramp, aged 27, married, Rosemount Avenue, cashier for the Harris Abattoir, attributes his fall from grace and his subsequent arrest last night by Detective Seaton on a charge of stealing between $12,000 and $15,000 from his employers. Cramp is alleged to have stolen the money systematically during the past five years, and so successful was he in the spending of it that he has nothing tangible to show for it, save memories.

Cramp's alleged thefts were not discovered until about a week ago, when auditors went through his books. In previous years discrepancies had not been noted, owing to Cramp's cleverness in "cooking" his books. But continued success made him more audacious and less careful, so that at the finish he allowed mistakes to creep into his accounts, which caught the expert eye of the auditors and precipitated the investigation which culminated in his apprehension.

CHILD BURNS TO DEATH.

KITCHENER, Aug. 1.—Due to severe burns about the body, sustained when she was playing with matches on the veranda of her home, 59 Dekay Street, yesterday, Bernice Lienhardt, aged 3 years, passed away late yesterday afternoon in St. Mary's Hospital here. The child, who had never before played with matches, apparently crawled up on a chair to get the box. Her mother was painfully burned in extinguishing the blaze, and she is in bed at home, under the doctor's care. A particularly unfortunate feature is that Bernice was the only child of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Lienhardt.

MOTORIST KILLED.

PORT COLBORNE, Aug. 1.—Thos. Hughes, 280 Dearborn Street, Buffalo, was killed and three other Buffalo men were badly injured last night when an automobile in which they were riding turned over on the Garrison Road, two miles east of Port Colborne.

Hughes was killed immediately. He was driving the auto, a big roadster. Three other men were removed to the office of Dr. E. A. MacKenzie here, where they received treatment. The owner of the car is Albert Francis Towney, 555 Pennsylvania Avenue, who was in the front seat of the roadster. In the rumble seat were Jack Farrow, 212 Richman Avenue, and Arthur Schafer, 218 Dewitt Ave.

CHILDREN BURNED.

OWOSSO, Mich., Aug. 1.—While a score of men stood helplessly about, two small children were burned to death yesterday in a fire that destroyed two barns, two silos and a large amount of farm machinery at the home of Lawrence Kilpatrick, a mile west of Ovid.

The victims were Lenore Kilpatrick, 5 years old, and her two-year-old brother, Richard.

BATHER IS DROWNED.

CHICOUTIMI, Aug. 1. — Albert Gravel of Ste. Anne de Chicoutimi was drowned here while bathing in the Saguenay River. He had entered the water after eating a large meal. The body was recovered, and a verdict of accidental death was returned by a Coroner's jury.

ROYALS ARE WINNERS OF JUNIOR HONORS

DEFEAT KIWANIS CREW 10-5 IN SECOND GAME FOR JUNIOR CITY LEAGUE CHAMPIONSHIP

Winners Have Only Lost One Game in Season's Schedule.

PLAY GOOD BALL

Athletic Club Run Wild on Bases to Win Victory.

All Saints' Royals, last year's Juvenile champions, won the Junior City League last night, when they took the second game of the play-offs from the Kiwanis to the tune of 10 runs to 5. The Royals have made a most enviable record this season, for after losing their first game on the 24th of May to the Kiwanis, they made a clean sweep of the rest of the games in the schedule, together with the two play-off fixtures.

Although outhit last night at Exhibition Park, the Royals ran wild on the bases and grouped their hits to come across with the winning runs. The Royals gave their pitchers excellent support, that kind that makes ball games a pleasure to watch, while the Kiwanis on the other hand failed to stand behind their clever young pitcher who had perfect control, and with a little support the score would have been much different.

Holmes started for the Royals and rolled along nicely until the fifth inning, when the Kiwanis got to him for three hits and two runs, coupled with the only error of the game on the part of the winners.

In the sixth the Kiwanis batters appeared as if they were going to hit him hard, when Manager McFadden pulled him from the box, much to the disliking of a number of the fans. Kitchen, who won the first game, was sent in as relief, with two on bases and none out, but the Kiwanis were unable to connect and he retired the side, striking out two with the third lifting one to Hope.

In the seventh the Kiwanis scored again, when Kitchen walked two and Dormer and Graham singled. In the eighth they put two more across but were shutout in the ninth.

The Royals started theirs in the first, when Graham fielded poorly Hope's drive, the first man to bat. Crary walked two in this innings and aided by Hatton's hit, three runs were put across. Three more were registered in the second and then they were shutout until the sixth, when the final four runs were put across.

Crary had a smoking fast ball that had the Royals stretching, but when they did connect it was usually for long drives. On the other hand nine of the eleven Kiwanis who were put in the field connected, but failed to make any long hits.

Two nice double plays were pulled off, one in the second by the Royals when Crary was caught at second and Dennard at first, and in the fifth when the Kiwanis got Gordon at second and Holmes at first.

Crary issued three passes, Holmes one, and Kitchen four, while Crary struck out eight, Holmes seven, and Kitchen five.

Lord Willingdon Congratulates Coach

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 1 (By W. H. Ingram, Staff Correspondent of The Canadian Press).—Lord Willingdon, Governor-General of Canada, has cabled to Captain J. R. Cornelius, coach of the Canadian athletes at the Olympic Games: "Heartiest congratulations on the splendid showing that is being made by the Canadian team. Wish you all the best of luck." The modest Scotsman, extremely proud of his athletes, very deeply appreciated the message.

YANKEES BREAK LOSING STREAK

Beat Indians 12-9 in Last Game of Series—Athletes Win Again.

SIX HOME RUNS.

NEW YORK, August 1. — The Yankees broke their losing streak by taking the final game of the series from the Indians here yesterday, 12-9. It was a see-saw battle all the way, with the champions using three pitchers and the losers five. The victory gave the Yankees two games won in the series of five. Bob Meusel was the hitting star of the day, the lanky outfielder connecting for two doubles and a single in four times at bat and driving in three runs.

The Philadelphia Athletics swept the series when they turned in an 8-4 victory over the Browns at St. Louis. More than that, they extended their consecutive string of triumphs over the Howley men to nine and held their own with the Yankees in the American League pennant race, since the leaders returned to the victory column also.

The final game was sprinkled with six home runs, two of which were lifted out of the park by Haas. Simmons and Bishop also turned in four-base hits for the Athletics, while Blaeholder and Manush hit for the circuit for the Browns.

A four-run rally by Washington in the eighth inning was not enough, and the White Sox won the final game of their five-game series, 7-5, at Chicago.

Ted Blankenship allowed but three hits until the eighth, when he walked three men and Bucky Harris doubled. Grady Adkins relieved him and held the Senators in check after they had tallied four runs. The White Sox nicked Gaston and Marberry for eleven hits, "Goose" Goslin hit a home run in the first inning, with none on base. Yesterday's Sox to four hits and the Detroit victory was the third straight for the White Sox.

Victor Sorrell held the Boston Red Tigers took the final game of the series 7-2. It was the seventh Detroit victory in the last eight games. Charley Ruffing, Boston hurler, who was hit consistently during the game, robbed Sorrell of a shut-out in the seventh inning when he drove the ball over the scoreboard for a home run with Rogell on base.

CLERKS FINISH IN FIRST PLACE

Defeat St. Andrew's, Preventing Three Cornered Tie For League Championship.

PLAY-OFFS NEXT WEEK.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, August 1. — Only one more game remains to be played before the local softball schedule is complete, and the Cerks are now definitey estabished in first place, with the Outlaws, and St. Andrew's the other two teams who will be in the play-offs which are to take place next week. The game last night between the Clerks and St. Andrew's roused considerable interest since all three top teams would have been tied for first place had the Churchmen put it over the Storekeepers. But the result was just the opposite, with the Clerks on the long end of a 16 to 6 score when the seven innings agreed upon had been played.

The first two innings were scoreless, and only one hit was made when Ibey for the Clerks managed to get to second in the second frame. The Churchmen failed to make a count till the fourth when they managed to get a single run. Each innings after, they managed to keep their score climbing, and in the fifth held the Clerks to no score, with only one man getting on a base.

While the game between the Legionaires and the Mill will not affect the teams to enter the play-off nor the standing of the teams, it will be played on Thursday evening at the usual time. This will complete the schedue for the season with the play-offs to commence at once.

The teams:

Clerks — B. Blute, p; H. McArthur, c; H. Denike, 1b; D. Runions, 2b; J. Gay, 3b; M. Cook, ss; T. Ibey, cf; M. Wager, rf; T. Blute, lf.

Teco Outhit Knights In Softball Fixture

WIN HONOR FOR CANADA AT AMSTERDAM

The end of the first day's Olympic field and track events at Amsterdam showed several Canadian stars well on top of the heap. No. 1 picture is B. Little, of Winnipeg, who qualified for the 800-metres semi-finals; No. 2 is Percy Williams, of Vancouver, who gave the outstanding performance of the Canadians when he equalled the world's record for 100 metres, 10 3-5 seconds; No. 3 is Phil Edwards, Hamilton, 800-metres runner, who won his heat in fine style; No. 4, John Fitzpatrick, Hamilton, who qualified for the finals in the 100 metres event; No. 5 is A. W. Wilson, of Montreal, who qualified for the 800-metres semi-finals.

VIEWS ON SPORTS

There will be no game tonight in the softball league. All games will commence sharp at 6.15 starting Thursday night.

C.G.E. are elected to meet the Lock Works on Thursday night in a city softball league fixture, while K. of C. and De Laval will clash on Friday. Saturday night's teams will be announced later.

* * * * * * *

Athough outhitting their opponents 11-10, the Kiwanis failed to come through last night, and lost the second and deciding game for the Junior City League championship by a 10-5 count. The win gives the Royals a record for themselves as having only lost one game since the beginning of the schedule.

* * * * * * *

Bunching their hits and running wild on the bases accounted for the athletic club's victory. Holmes, who started off first on the mound for the Royals, blew up in the fifth inning, and allowed the losers three hits which netted them two runs. The only error of the game on the part of the winners was made in this inning.

* * * * * * *

Crary, as hurler for the Kiwanis, pitched a sterling game, but was given poor support by his teammates. Seven errors being chalked up against them principally in the infield, with three behind the bat. The lack of team combination can account for this club's many losses throughout the playing of the league schedule.

* * * * * * *

Teco and K. of C. played real softball in their fixture last night, the storemen winning out by a ninth inning rally which netted them three runs for an 8-7 victory.

* * * * * * *

Both of the batteries worked well and were given good support by their teammates. The Knights have been playing better ball than at the start of the schedule, and at present bid fair to be in on the play-off positions at the end of the season.

* * * * * * *

The annual regatta at Stoney Lake will be held on Monday, August 6th (Civic Holiday) with the usual snappy program. A decided improvement has been made in the class of events during the last few years, and under the capable committee elected for this year, much can be expected.

* * * * * * *

The special events will take place on Saturday, August 4, with sailing and motor boat races, the paddle around Juniper Island, and the long swim included among the events. Many trophies are offered for prizes, and it is expected that there will be entries from Brockville, Fort Erie, Toronto, Lindsay, and Peterborough.

Mount Pleasant

(Examiner Correspondence)

MOUNT PLEASANT, August 1.—Mr. Ross Cromwell returned to his home in Toronto after spending the past week holidaying with Mr. Herman McLean at the latter's home in the village.

ROYALS AGAIN OVERCOME LEAD

Millers Worst Collins in Pitching Duel to Win 3 to 2.

CUT DOWN LEAD

MAPLE LEAF STADIUM, Aug. 1.—Montreal made it two straight from Toronto in winning yesterday afternoon's game 3 to 2. Miller, in great difficulties early in the game because of lack of control, settled away after the third inning and Leafs could do nothing with him. He passed three with one out in the first session and the locals could make no capital in runs out of it.

The Royals went into the lead in the sixth when after two were out Urbanski peeled off his second hit and stole. Haines walked and Gulley's double to left scored the two.

Make It Two Straight.

BUFFALO, N.Y., Aug. 1.— (Canadian Press.) — The Buffalo Bisons made it two straight over the Rochester Red Wings here yesterday by the score of 5-4 in a dramatic baseball game. Gelbert scored for Rochester with two out in the ninth when he knocked Luke Urban and forced him to drop the ball in scoring from first on Felix's double. Urban was knocked out for several minutes. Thomas tied the score in Buffalo's half by slamming the ball over the left field fence. After playing errorless ball throughout, the Wings lost the game in the eleventh on a disappointing muff. With Moore on third and Barnes on second, Pitcher Stryker lifted a short fly in front of the plate which Morrow dropped instead of registering the third out, allowing Moore to race home and end the game.

Orioles Win 10-8.

READING, Pa., Aug. 1. — (Canadian Press.)—Baltimore won its second successive victory over Reading yesterday, 10-8, in a free hitting game. Moore's home run with the bases loaded in the fifth inning was a big factor in the Oriole victory. Each team used three pitchers, Jing Johnson stopping the Keys after the locals had got off to a big lead.

Williams Up Against Paddock In Finals

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 1 (By W. H. Ingram, Staff Correspondent, the Canadian Press).—Percy Williams, Canada's youthful sprinting marvel, to-day goes up against the "fastest human," Charley Paddock, in the final of the men's 200 metres. Paddock holds the world's record for the 200 metres, 20 4-5, and also for the 100 metres, 10 2-5 seconds. Williams has equalled the Olympic record of 10 3-5 seconds in the 100 metres.

Besides Williams, Canada has John Fitzpatrick of Hamilton in the 200 metres final. The two will compete against ten of the world's finest and most experienced sprinters.

OSHAWA TEAM WILL BE HERE FOR BIG GAME

Saturday's Battle With Motorists One of Most Important of Year.

PETES MUST WIN

Victory Over Oshawa Will Put Them in the Thick of Race.

One of the most important games of the Central Ontario League season will be played here Saturday when Oshawa and the Petes clash.

A win for the home talent, who have grabbed off their last three starts and notably improved their position, will put them right in the thick of the race, and the Petes, heartened by their recent rally, are full of determination.

Oshawa came from behind in both their previous appearances here and won out, but the Petes claim that it will be a different story on Saturday.

With so much at stake the battle should be one of the best of the year and will draw a big crowd of fans.

It is the last scheduled appearance of the Oshawa crew here this season, and only two more home games remain to be played after Saturday.

GIANTS SPLIT DOUBLE BILL

Win Four Games to Two in Series With Cubs.

TAKE FIRST 8-7

NEW YORK, Aug. 1 (Canadian Press).—The Giants won their series against the Cubs, four games to two, by dividing a double header here yesterday. The home team got away with the first clash, 8 to 7, by putting on a five-run uprising in the ninth, but the visitors hit three New York pitchers hard to take the second, 10 to 4.

The last-ditch rally of the Giants featured the opener. Ott, Lindstrom, Terry, Reese, Cohen and Hogan all hit after two were out, the last two drives being off Guy Bush, who relieved Fred Blake. Hogan's hit was a double with the bases full, which ended the game. The Cubs had taken a healthy lead through home runs by Stephenson, Cuyler and Heathcote off Fred Fitzsimmons.

Bill Walker, young Giant left-hander, fanned five in four innings to start the second game, but the Cubs knocked him out in the fifth when English's homer with two on capped a four-run rally.

Late rallies enabled the Robins to defeat the Reds, 3 to 2, at Brooklyn and earn an even break in the four-game series. Dazzy Vance pitched fine ball for the home team, allowing only seven hits and fanning eight.

Herman and Flowers got three hits each, and it was Flowers' third single with the bases filled in the eighth that drove in the two deciding runs.

The St. Louis Cardinals administered a 18 to 5 trouncing to the Phillies that gave them the series three games to one. The Cards got sixteen of their runs in four successive innings, starting with five in the fifth. Taylor Douthit was the batting star with four singles and a double.

Scored on Error

In the fifth inning Sand, the Phillie short-stop, thinking there were three out, threw the ball into the diamond, and Hafey scored all the way from first while some of the other Phillie players walked off the field. This began the Phillie rout.

The Braves hopped on two Pittsburgh pitchers to run up a commanding lead and defeat the Pirates in the final game of the series, 11 to 5 at Boston. The visitors had won the first two games Monday. In the first inning Boston piled up five runs off Meadows before he was relieved. In the third Brame yielded a four-run flurry. Tauscher finished the game. Clark's hitting and fielding featured the contest.

RALLY IN NINTH WINS FOR TECO OVER KNIGHTS

Storemen Score Three Runs in Ninth to Win Out 8 to 7.

GET MORE HITS

Winners Keep Losers Off Paths Entirely for Last Four Innings of Game.

A ninth inning rally for three runs gave Teco the victory over K. of C. in a league softball game last night after the Knights had led nearly all the way. The score was 8-7, and the game was a hard fought one from start to finish.

The Knights trotted out a new battery, Darling and Logan, and they worked well most of the way. Darling, a left hander, yielded fifteen hits but, aided by good support in the field through most of the game turned back the Teco batsmen when hits meant runs. Scates, the Teco's hurler, tossed nice ball and was given nearly airtight support.

The scoring started in the first. The Storemen didn't move a wheel but their opponents scored three runs. Logan, first up, walked. Ranger and T. LeBarr bunted safely, filling the bases, but Lynch's bunt was fielded to the plate to force Logan. Lew LeBarr singled to centre to score two but bad throwing sent in the third runners and put the batter on third. He went out trying to steal home, while Ahern popped to the pitcher.

The storemen got a man on in the second but did not score, while in the third they failed to reach first. The Knights did nothing in the second but filled the bases with two out in the third, only to have Ahern fan.

The fourth saw more scoring. Scates, first up for Teco, whaled a hard one to left centre for three sacks, and Lew LeBarr mussed it enough to let him score. Edgar singled and Macdonald was safe on Ahern's error. Miller was out on a foul tip, but Dugan walked to fill the bases. Sexsmith was safe on Darling's error and Saunders singled, two runners crossing the pan. Meagher filed to L. LeBarr and Dugan was caught at third.

The Knights took the lead again in their half. Ahern singled and went around on errors on taps by Connors and Logan. Bennet and Ranger filed out and T. LeBarr grounded out.

The fifth was scoreless as far as the Storemen were concerned, while the Knights made their last counters. Lynch got a homer when his Texas Leaguer took a bad hop past Meagher. L. LeBarr was safe on an error by Edgar, while Ahern got on when White missed the third strike. Bennett and Darling rolled to Scates, but Connors came through with the hit to send the two runners across. Logan tapped to Miller.

For the last four innings the Knights did not get a man on the sacks, five flies, six grounders and a strike-out retiring them.

The Storemen closed the gap in the sixth. Dugan and Sexsmith led off with singles, an error by Bennett putting them up a base. Saunders' fly let Dugan in, while Sexsmith scored on White's single after Meagher had grounded out. Scates was safe on Lynch's error but with the tying runs on the bases Edgar forced White at third.

Two singles after one was out were wasted in the seventh, and a single and a base on an error which put two men on with none out, also proved fruitless and the Teco team entered the ninth with the score 7-5 for the Knights.

Miller led off with a tripls and Dugan singled to send him home. The Knights tightened up, Sexsmith flying to Ahern and Saunders grounding to Ranger, and the lead, though cut to one run, looked safe. LeBarr dropped Meagher's fly after a run, and Dugan scored. White singled, Scates walked, and Edgar sipgled. Meagher scored on Edgar's hit but a fast throw by L. LeBarr caught White trying to score from second.

HOLD REGATTA NEXT MONDAY

Stoney Lake's Premier Event Slated To Be Held On Civic Holiday.

SPECIALS ON SATURDAY

(Examiner Correspondence.)

STONEY LAKE, Aug. 1.— Stoney Lake's premier event, the annual regatta, will be held on Monday, August 6th, with the special events taking place on Saturday, August 4th. The first of these (Saturday's regatta) includes the sailing races, the motor boat races, the paddle round Juniper and the long swim from Loch's island to Juniper.

There are three very fine trophies given to the winners of the dinghy sailing (the G. K. Fraser cup), the paddle round Juniper (Gordon H. Graham cup), the long swim (Mrs. G. K. Fraser's cup).

The first named was won last year by Reg Dixon with his Sunbeam II; Jack Ridpath won the Graham cup last year, the time being 23 minutes.

Don Fitzgerald won the long swim of 1,217 yards in 21 minutes and 27 seconds.

There were many outside entries in this program of special events, contestants coming from Brockville, Fort Erie, Toronto, Lindsay and Peterborough specially to enter and most of them are expected for this year's events.

The regular regatta on Monday with its snappy program will draw a crowd as usual and the events are arranged in a manner which should mean that they can be run off in regular order without unnecessary loss of time.

The committee is well chosen and every man is on the job all the time and each year shows a decided improvement in the speeding up of events, policing the course and the general conduct of the regatta.

J. R. Dodworth, of Pittsburgh, is the chairman of the committee and his son, J. R. Dodworth, Jr., the secretary. The judges will be Messrs. J. R. Dodworth, W. G. Morrow and S. Henderson.

Referees— Messrs. J. H. Renwick and H. F. Foote. Starter, Mr. F. W. Jones. Clerk, Dr. P. Goldsmith. Announcer, Mr. G. K. Fraser. Numbers, Mr. D. Clink. Floats and numbers, G. Guillet.

Children's Events.

The children's events are not overlooked by the Stoney Lake Cottagers' Association committee and the annual masquerade will be on Wednesday, August 8th, and the regatta on August 11th. These events are of premier importance to the junior members of the summer colony and the latter event attracts an increasing number of outside entries. The masquerade is like a delightful combination of Mother Goose 'come alive" and the fairy stories beloved of all children. The adult committees for these two juvenile features spare no effort to make them successful and each year they are better than previous years.

McCracken's Landing.

The annual regatta at McCracken's Landing will be held on Thursday afternoon, Aug. 1th. This will be the last of the regatta series and has always been a great success both in point of attendance and the events.

MANY PADDLERS WILL TAKE PART IN DOMI NION TITLE MEET

New Champions Will be Crowned in Junior and Intermediate Events.

AT LACHINE

MONTREAL, Que., Aug. 1.—(Canadian Press).—Many champions and champion crews will take the water Saturday at the Dominion paddling title meet at Lachine in defence of their crowns or seeking new honors in a higher division. In every one of the eleven events, there is more than one paddler entered who has already placed in a former Dominion meet or won premier honors last year in a lower class, and this summer is seeking new laurels in a higher division. New champions will be crowned this year in all junior and intermediate events for, according to the Canadian Canoe Association's regulations, a paddler winning the Dominion title is immediately graduated from that class.

Ten experienced junior paddlers are seeking the singles title, won by McCubbin, of Sudbury, last year, and who is trying for the intermediate singles this year. Among last year's contestants is Thompson, of Parkdale, third last year at Gananoque. The last is represented by Gammon, of Lachine and Burns and Felming, of Grand Trunk, all three of them well qualified to give the Western lad a run for the title.

Will Be Feature

One of the feature races of the day, however, should be the senior single in which the same paddlers that fought it out for the championship last year are again entered. Frank Amyot, who beat Sandy Lindsay of Lacine, by a boat length to win the honor, will again have the Lachine ace to contend with, besides Bill Power, winner two years ago, and Roy Nurse, of Balmy Beach, a former titleholder. K. Chamberlain, of Toronto Canoe Club, who placed second in the junior single last year, should not be forgotten also.

Ottawa, New Edinburgh, Balmy Beach, the Otterburn and Lachine appear to have the contending crews in the intermediate tandem. Bonner and Paget, of the Burghs, placed third last year in this event, and Evans and Lowry of Balmy Beach ere second in the junior tandems. Otterburn placed two good crews in this event at the eastern division meet and loomed up as strong contenders.

Wase's Balmy Beach crew, after losing the junior four race last year at Gananoque by a short boat length to the town four, are back in this event this year, trying again for first place honors. But Grand Trunk's crew, on its performance this season, should make a good race of it with them.

There will be a merry battle of it for the honors in the senior tandem the title taken by Clevely and Mason, of Otterburn, last year. J. Parnell and T. Colby, of Grand Trunk, winners of the intermediate tandem at Gananoque, are entered along with Gilmour and Power, of Cartierville, who placed third in the senior event last year, paddling in a valois boat. The Burghs, Rideaus, and Balmy Beach all have strong pairs of representatives in this event too.

Wase's Balmy Beach crew, besides being entered in the junior four, are also seeking the honor in the intermediate four. Parkdale's strong four, captained by Quakenbush, and who finished third last year, along with Lachine and the Burgs, seem to be the favored crews.

Has Two Strong Entries

Grand Trunk has two strong entries in a somewhat unknown field in the junior tandem. Bourgault and Hebert, of the Burghs and the Lauzon brothers, of Sudbury, are the only pairs who have competed in this event before.

The senior four, like the single and tandem races in this division, promises to be a great race. The championship four, Gilmour, Walter Power, Binks and W. Power, who won the title last year as representatives of Valois, are back in the hunt again. The only substitution in this boat has been Mooney for Binks. Cartierville this year should take the title that these four brought to Valois, last year, although they have the stiffest of opposition in crews who also placed at Gananoque last summer. Court's Toronto C. C. four, who finished second, and Colby's Grand Trunk crew, who came third, are again entered, besides strong quartettes from Parkdale, Rideau and Balmy Beach.

Favored in the intermediate singles are McCubbin, junior champion, and Thompson, Parkdale, third in that event last year. Lachine have two paddlers in this race, Olsen and Jarvis, and it should come as no surprise if either of them took the title from the Western and Northern boys.

Rideaus will be defending two titles in the war canoe events, the most coveted honors of whole meet. For they captured both the mile and half-mile races last year at Gananoque. Balmy Beach, second in both events to Rideaus, are back in the hunt again this year with another strong crew, and Grand Trunk's two crack crews that were unplaced last year, are endeavoring to wipe out the ignominity of last year's defeat with a double triumph this year. The war canoe events will be run in heats this year, because of the narrowness of the Lachine course and, although spectators will be deprived of the wonderful sight of nine crews paddling down the stretch abreast. Competition this year promises to make the races for the honors in the war canoes one of the most keenly fought in the history of the C. C. A.

FIRE DESTROYS FRAME BUILDING

Blaze in Downtown Section of Winnipeg Attracts Hundreds of Spectators.

LOSS ABOUT $15,000.

WINNIPEG, Aug. 1.— (Canadian Press.)—A three storey storage building, located on Graham avenue, in the downtown district, was destroyed by fire this morning. The loss is estimated at $15,000. The structure was frame throughout and the spectacular fire it made attracted hundreds of spectators.

MAY STOP DANCE AT CRYSTAL BEACH

Acting Attorney General Will Investigate Laws About Matter.

TORONTO, Aug. 1.—In his capacity of Acting Attorney-General, Hon. Charles McCrea will consider to-day the advisability of Governmental interference to prevent marathon dance contests.

"Speaking 'off-hand,' I should say that the attitude of the Attorney-General's Department would be adverse to these exhibitions," Hon. Mr. McCrea stated last evening, when informed that a championship fixture had been moved to Crystal Beach, Ontario, from Buffalo, New York, because it was banned by the authorities of the latter state.

The element of municipal jurisdiction had to be studied, Hon. Mr. McCrea pointed out, saying that he would go thoroughly into the question in the morning.

This is the second dance derby moved into Canada after a ban had been placed across the line. When the Windsor derby finished, the city council instructed the solicitor to draft a by-law to prevent a spectacle of the kind ever being repeated in the Border City.

COMMISSION REFUNDS TO

ing was the business of the City Council.

The Commission decided to refund the sum of $615.38 that it received in excess from the Ontario body for the rural power lines in Smith, North Monaghan, and Otonabee. It was found on a check up that an employee in the head office had made a mistake in the valuation of this amount. The local body refused to pay interest charges on this amount as the mistake was not theirs.

The motor generating set in the sub station will be sold to the H.E.P.C. for $8,000. This set was purchased by the two bodies when the street railway system was being operated and the local Commission has realized almost the amount it paid four years ago.

The Hydro line that was built to Chemong this summer is one of the few lines in Ontario constructed this year that is right up to specifications, according to officials from the engineer's department of the H.E.P.C. Recently an inspection was made of the new line constructed by the local body for the Ontario Commission, and yesterday a letter was received from Toronto congratulating those who constructed the line on the speed they made in carrying out the undertaking and of the splendid way the line was built.

Manager R. Dobbin submitted estimates on the cost of laying a 12-inch water main on Monaghan Road from Wolfe Street to Chamberlain Street, past the Canadian General property. The C.G.E. recently made a request that the main be extended as they contemplated building in that section. The estimated cost was $8,500, and half the work will be done this year and completed next as the Commission will be unable to show a 10 per cent. revenue required by by-law.

The Curtis Bros. private power line in the Township of Douro has been purchased by the Commission for $125 as the final step in cleaning up and selling the rural lines in Douro to the H.E.P.C.

Work will be commenced in relaying the water connections on Belmont and Homewood Avenues in anticipation of the City Council paving these streets next year.

Canadian Olympic Entries Run Well In Races At Amsterdam Yesterday

AMSTERDAM, August 1 (By W. H. Ingram, Staff Correspondent Canadian Press). — This is how the Canadians at the Olympic Games fared yesterday:

Percy Williams, Vancouver, qualified for 200 metres final today. He won the 100 metres on Monday.

John Fitzpatrick, Hamilton, qualified for the 200 metre final.

Fanny Rosenfeld, Toronto, ran second in women's 100 metre final.

Ethel Smith, Toronto, was third in women's 100 metre final.

Phil Edwards, representing Hamilton Olympic Club, was fourth in men's 800 metre final.

George Heater in 200 metre preliminaries and Myrtle Cook in women's 100 metre final were disqualified for infractions of the rules.

Ralph Adams, Hamilton, was eliminated in semi-finals of 200 metres.

Art Keay, Toronto, V. S. Callard, Toronto, and W. Kibblewhite, Winnipeg, were all decisively eliminated in 5,000 metres preliminaries.

TWELVE RUNNERS ARE ENTERED IN TO-DAY'S 200-METRE EVENT

Percy Williams and John Fitzpatrick Qualify for Finals.

GIRLS DO WELL

Third Day of Games Full of Surprises and Upsets.

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 1 (By W. H. Ingram, Staff Correspondent, the Canadian Press).—Yesterday, the third day of the Olympic games, was a day of surprises and upsets.

The net results of the Canadian efforts were summed up in Fanny Rosenfeld's second place in the women's 100 metre final, Ethel Smith's third place in the same event; Phil Edwards' fourth in the 800 metres final; the qualifying of Percy Williams and John Fitzpatrick for today's 200 metres final, and the elimination from the 5,000 metres of the three Canadian competitors: V. S. Callard of Toronto; Art Keay of Toronto, and W. Kibblewhite of Winnipeg.

The women's 100 metres flat provided a wonderful race when three Canadians, Miss Rosenfeld, Miss Smith and Myrtle Cook, all from Toronto, faced two Germans and Elizabeth Robinson of the United States. The event was run immediately after the demonstration contingent on the 800 metres final for men, and the girls were obviously strung up to the highest pitch. On the marks Myrtle Cook and one of the German girls were disqualified, being too excited to await the gun and making two false starts.

Right to the tape the four runners were bunched, with hardly a foot of difference between each of them. The finish was close and the judges awarded first place to Miss Robinson, the time being 12 1-5 seconds, a new world's record. After Miss Rosenfeld and Miss Smith, who finished second and third respectively, came the German girl, Fraulein E. Steinberg, in fourth place.

Overcomes Lead.

History closely repeated itself in the 800 metres final when Douglas Lowe of Britain won in 1.54 4-5, a new Olympic record. This English gentleman won the event at Paris in 1924, and stands the only half-miler to win the event two Olympiads in succession. Never in the history of track running did athletes display greater endurance and speed. The big crowd rose to its feet as the nine runners passed the starting post to begin the second lap after running the first in 54 4-5 seconds. In the second half Lloyd Hahn, smart United States half-miler, was in front setting a murderous pace, but Lowe, Bylehn of Sweden and Phil Edwards, dusky British Guianan representing Hamilton Olympic Club, hung grimly to his flying heels. This state of affairs held until the round into the home stretch when Lowe shot in front with a magnificent burst of speed. Hahn, apparently having shot his bolt, fell to fifth place, while Bylehn took second place, Engelhard of Germany third place, and Phil Edwards fourth.

Engaged In Preliminaries.

The 200 metre sprinters yesterday were engaged in preliminaries and semi-finals, and judging by the running the final this afternoon will go down in Olympic history as an epic. Twelve wonderful runners are entered, including Percy Williams, youthful Vancouver star, who captured the 100 metres Monday, and John Fitzpatrick of Hamilton.

In the preliminaries Fitzpatrick was the first Canadian winner, apparently not having to make any special effort to dispose of Carlton, the Australian, who ran second. Williams won his heat with the greatest ease by six yards over Hambridge of Britain and Ralph Adams of Hamilton progressed to the semi-finals by running second to the 200-metre title-holder, Scholz of the United States. George Hester of Hamilton was disqualified for not keeping to his proper lane. It was found after much discussion and examination of the track itself that Hester had set a foot half out of his territory, three of his spike marks being on the wrong side of the line.

When it came to the semi-finals, Fitzpatrick again was a winner, in 22 seconds flat; Percy Williams ran second to Kelmut Koernig of Germany, in 21 3-5 seconds. This heat incidentally provided one more of the day's upsets, Borah of the United States, one of the most threatening competitors, being shut in a pocket and consequently eliminated.

Are Seasoned Runners.

Ten of the twelve 200 metre finalists to-day are seasoned, experienced runners, and for this reason the showing of the two youthful Canadians will be watched with more than ordinary interest. Their opponents include such redoubtable stars as Charley Paddock, Koernig of Germany, Scholz of the United States, the present champion, and Butler of Britain.

Watson of Australia, star hurdler, competed with six crack performers in the 100 metre high hurdles yesterday, notwithstanding his injured foot, and finished third, losing a qualifying place only by inches.

BOYS KILLED AT CROSSING

Two Young Lads Lose Lives When Train Hits Motor Truck.

CHILDREN INJURED.

COLLINGWOOD, Aug. 1.—Charlie Rice, 17, of Pine street, Collingwood, and Clarence Taylor, 12, of Nottawa were instantly killed yesterday afternoon in a level crossing smash. Their truck was struck and smashed to atoms by the noon train at McAllister's Side Road, six miles from here.

The crossing is considered a very dangerous one. Travelling west, vision is obscured till within 30 feet of the crossing.

Rice was the driver for W. J. Girvan, butcher, and was sent into the country to bring in two pigs. On his way through Nottawa, he picked up Taylor for the ride. They were returning with the pigs when the fatal smash occurred.

Series of Smashes

The Collingwood tragedy is the third within a week in Ontario in which minors have been involved. Jack Howe, 14, driving his father's car, was killed in a crossing crash at Glencoe on Thursday. Sunday, Fred Barnsley, 9, passenger in a car driven by Ray Bools, 14, of Lindsay, was killed.

Bools was arrested Monday on a charge of manslaughter, and released later on bail of $2,000. He was driving a car borrowed by his elder brother at the time of the fatal smash. His brother had disconnected all the wiring and hidden the key to prevent it being taken. Five boys—all minors—went for a ride and four including Bools were injured in addition to Barnsley who was killed.

Two Guelph Children Injured.

GUELPH, Aug. 1.—Suffering from injuries sustained when he was struck by a motor car while riding a bicycle at the intersection of Norfolk and Woolwich streets, Lloyd Rundle, 12-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Rundle, 46 Mont street, lies in the General Hospital seriously injured. The motor car was driven by Albert Dunk, R.R. No. 5, Guelph. Young Rundle was knocked off his bicycle and the two left wheels of the car passed over his body. He was rushed to the hospital, where it was found that no bones were broken but he was injured internally and was badly crushed about the abdomen.

Katherine Hooshooley, aged 4, 236 Stevenson street, was severely bruised about the body yesterday, when she was struck by a motor car driven by William H. Alton, 133 Audrey avenue, at the intersection of York road and Brockville street. The little girl ran directly in the path of the machine.

PICNIC IN PARK.

Cheerful Workers of St. James' Church Enjoy Annual Outing.

The Cheerful Workers' Bible Class of St. James' Church held their annual monthly meeting in the form of a picnic in Jackson Park Tuesday afternoon, with a good attendance. The afternoon was spent in games, with the service of refreshments, and finished with the class chorus.

The games were as follows:

Small boys' race—Earl Vannest.

Small girls' race—Helen Close.

Boys' race—George Close.

Girls' race—Edith McLaren.

Women's race—1, Mrs. Beatty; 2, Mrs. Powell.

Shoe race—1, Mrs. Powell; 2, Mrs. Beatty.

Fat women's race—1, Mrs. Fowlie; 2, Mrs. Swanger.

Apple race—1, Mrs. Beatty; 2, Mrs. Williams.

Ball race—1, Mrs. Rowe.

Walking race—1, Mrs. Atkinson.

Pounding nails—1, Mrs. Pife; 2, Mrs. Thomas.

Much amusement was caused by the tug-of-war. Sides were taken by each half of the alphabet, the first half winning, taking some completely off their feet.

W. H. DONNELLY KILLED BY IRON

him on the head. I concluded that from seeing the bleeding.

"It was a cast iron cornice lying broken on the sidewalk. I judged it to weigh a couple of hundred pounds or more. It was bolted together. It looks now to have been taken apart some. (Witness was examining it as he spoke).

"At the time of the accident it was held together by a screw bolt about seven inches long that looked as if it had held it in the wall.

"I was about 20 yards from Mr. Donnelly when he was struck. I heard the cornice strike the pavement. There was no wind at all. It was inclined to be a little bit rainy. That bolt looked to be the only one that went into the wall. There might have been other fasteners on the building for all I know."

Miss Dora Burton.

"I was in Coleman's confectionery store across the street at the time of the accident. I was putting cakes in the window. I just looked up in time to see the cornice fall and strike Mr. Donnelly on the back of the head. Both went to the pavement together. I saw the iron falling before it struck him."

Dr. J. A. Morgan,

a practising physician in Peterborough: "I was just about the corner of Brock Street when I saw a man running to a man on the sidewalk. I hurried down and asked someone what had happened, and they had indicated a piece of cornice on the street." (The doctor here gave details of the man's injury).

"Mr. Donnelly was taken to hospital. My opinion of the cause of his death was that it was due to the cornice striking him. It was approximately 5.55 or 6 o'clock and he died at about 7 o'clock. There was no sign of any consciousness during that time.

"Death was due to his being struck by the falling object, which in turn caused a fractured skull."

Constable Puffer.

Constable Gordon Puffer: "I answered the call to the scene of the accident at 6.05. I found a man lying on the sidewalk beside a cast-iron moulding that had fallen from 429 George Street, immediately above the first story. I know Mr. Donnelly to see him.

"I examined the piece. It was cast-iron.

"There was one large spike similar to a railway spike driven into a wooden plate and also a threaded bolt." Witness explained how the pieces exhibited had gone together. He judged that it would weigh approximately 120 pounds.

"I examined some of the wood that came with it. (It was exhibited in court). The wood was decayed or rotted. I did not go up to examine the place where it had been fastened, as I had no way of getting up. There would not likely be a nut at the other end as that is what is called a wood screw.

"The beam looked about 14 inches square. The bolt would not go through it to have a nut placed on the other end."

Discussing the bend in the threaded bolt, witness believed it to be due to the weight coming on it after the top had come loose—that is, he did not believe the bend to have been caused by the fall. The threaded bolt was rusted, and there was no mark of a blow that would bend it."

B. D. Hall asked if the bolt would fit the marks in the wood. The marks of the thread fitted and there was rust on it too.

Robert Jamieson.

"I am a resident of Peterborough. I did not see the accident. I was not there. I am a painter. I had never worked on the front of this building painting. I never told anyone that I had worked there or that that part was in bad condition."

The following citizens comprised the jury as summoned and sworn by Coroner Dr. Young: A. C. Hawley, James Skinner (foreman), Edward Riley, B. C. Quinlan, D. H. Minicolo, James E. Fowler, James Bowen, George Schneider, John Smith, Victor Tully, George Wesley and Harry Kingdon.

VISITING CHILD HAS DIPHTHERIA

Takes Sick In Car On Way From Toronto—Goes To Isolation Hospital.

ONE HOUSE PLACARDED.

With the exception of a single case of diphtheria, which was discovered on arrival of the patient from Toronto on Sunday, there is only one case of disease sufficiently serious to warrant a placard, according to Charles Stapleton, Sanitary Health Inspector of the City. That is a patient who has been suffering from whooping cough and who is almost entirely recovered.

The diphtheria case was handled very efficiently. It appears that a nine-year-old child was motoring to Peterborough from Toronto, with its parents on Sunday and became ill en route. A doctor was immediately summoned on arrival of the party here; the ailments was diagnosed as diphtheria and the child was taken to the local Isolation hospital.

MACHINE GUNS WILL BAR WAY

will be present to witness the scheme on Monday. It includes practical demonstration of all the training.

It is supposed thtat the blue force advance guard has encountered a heavy red force just beyond the stream which meanders under Norwood road east of the butts, and has been forced to retire. The blue force advance guard, upon being driven in, automatically becomes a rear guard to protect the main body which is retiring to the high ground east of the Trent Canal. No. 2 Machine Gun Company forms part of this rear guard and its task is to protect the infantry, cavalry and artillery units of the guard during their retirement across the open ground west of the butts.

Major H. Dodds is officer commanding the rear guard; Captain John A. Dewart, M.C., second in command of the Company, is in command of the four machine guns which are covering the retirement; Lieut. James Turnbull and Lieut. S. Ward have command under him of two guns each; Lieut. H. Dévey is in charge of the horse and limber transport on which the final retirement will be made; and Lieut. J. R. Heron, in charge of signals, will act as scout and observing officer.

At the time the scheme opens, the blue force rear guard is retiring along Norwood road, westward, and two machine guns under Lieut. Ward have been forced by heavy enemy fire to withdraw, covered by two guns under Lieut. Turnbull firing from a strong point on the hill-top. The developments after that are at the discretion of the O. C. rear guard and O. C. guns. There will be indirect fire from six hundred yards on enemy troops massing in valley behind the butts, on an enemy trench just over the ridge, and on a strong point (a ruined cellar), on the hill top. These targets are all out of sight of anyone at the guns, but fire will be directed by Lieut. Heron from an observation post.

During the firing which starts about 2 o'clock, no one will be allowed on the road that cuts the rifle range, and no person should be anywhere on the range except behind the guns.

There will be a uniform parade of the unit to-night to check uniforms, issue equipment, and make other camp dispositions. The report of the men's committee will also be given, and a committee elected to act in the 1928-1929 season.

TRAINED YOUTHS COMING TO FARM

Party of 100 Will Be Distributed in Prairie Provinces This Week.

TORONTO, Ont., Aug. 1.—A party of one hundred British boys and young men between the ages of 17 and 25 years, who have just graduated from the training farms of Brandon and Claydon in the Old Country, operated under the Ministry of Labor, will arrive in Canada this week. The new-comers are coming to the Dominion under the Department of Colonization and Development of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and full and final arrangements have been made by this Department to place them on Canadian farms. In the placing of the graduates the Land Settlement Board of the Dominion Government will co-operate with the C.P.R. They will be divided into groups and distributed from Edmonton, Calgary, Saskatoon, Regina and Prince Albert. Two of the party, Messrs. Blair and Laycock, who obtained the highest marks for efficiency and general conduct and were the recipients of the year's money award offered by President E. W. Beatty, will, in addition, be given a year's employment at the Canadian Pacific supply farm at Strathmore, Alta. From the moment of arrival until they reach their respective farms, they will be carefully looked after by the railway. This is the third year that young Britishers have come to Canada under this scheme and the results have been most satisfactory.

INSURGENTS KILLED.

Clash With Mexican Troops Along Border Between Twp States.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 1 (Canadian Press).—Despatches from Queretaro to-day said that several insurgents had been killed in different clashes with the Federal forces under Col. Marquez along the border, between the States of Queretaro and Guanajuato.

IN POLICE COURT

John Broomhead, alias Robert Marshall Brown, pleaded not guilty to a charge of vagrancy and was remanded until Saturday for trial. Broomhead was arrested by Constable Naples yesterday morning and then gave the name of Marshall.

A plea of guilty was entered in the charge laid against Sir Edward Kemp for speeding on the highway, and the court assessed $10 and costs. When the traffic officer stopped the car the chauffeur had been driving at 50 miles an hour.

The incandescent electric light was patented by Thomas Edison in 1880.

UNCLE WIGGILY

By HOWARD R. GARIS

UNCLE WIGGILY'S RED CANDY

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

"Uncle Wiggily! Oh, Uncle Wiggily!" called Baby Bunty one day as the rabbit gentleman was hopping along on his pink twinkling nose. "Oh, excuse me, if you please! That's wrong Mr. Longears was hopping along the ground, but his pink, twinkling nose was with him, of course.

"What is it, Bunty?" asked Uncle Wiggily, as he saw the little orphan rabbit hopping after him.

"I think you had better take me with you when you go adventuring today," said Bunty, being careful to speak no "baby talk," as Uncle Wiggily called it, for he did not like that.

"Why should I take you, Bunty?" asked Mr. Longears, just to tease her for he intended all the while to let her come with him.

"Oh, if you take me I can tell you a good way to drive away the Fox or the Wolf if they should try to nibble you," said Bunty.

"So you know a good way to scare the bad chaps, do you?" asked Uncle Wiggily. "I suppose you mean that I should give them a puzzle to do. But you would be wrong, for I am not going to make any more puzzles. I have given them up. I made enough of them."

"No, I wasn't thinking of puzzles," Bunty said. "But if you would go to the store, and buy ten cents' worth of candy, then, when the Fox or Wolf came along you would give them something sweet and they wouldn't nibble you! How's that?"

"That's fine!" exclaimed Uncle Wiggily with a laugh. "A very good idea, Bunty. We'll do it. Here is ten cents—you go buy the candy."

Bunty was hoping Uncle Wiggily would say that.

So off she hopped to the candy store, with Uncle Wiggily hopping along behind her and, all of a sudden, Mr Longears called:

"Oh, Bunty!"

"Yes, what is it?" she asked, turning around. "Oh, I hope he isn't going to take back this candy ten cents," thought the little orphan rabbit.

But Uncle Wiggily wouldn't do such a thing as that. He just said:

"Get some candy for yourself as well as to drive away the bad chaps, Bunty!"

"I will!" laughed the little girl bunny and she did, coming back to Mr. Longears her paws were filled with sweets. Among them were gum drops, chocolate drops, cocoanut candy and peppermints. So with the candy, some of which was in Uncle Wiggily's pocket, some of which was in Bunty's paws and some of which was in the little orphan's mouth, the two hopped along again.

Pretty soon, all of a sudden, out of the bushes popped the Bob Cat.

"I want candy!" howled the Bob Cat.

"Have a piece of candy instead!" said Uncle Wiggily and he held out a red stick, at the sight of which the Bob Cat howled:

"Oh not that! Not that! No, indeed! Not that!" and away he ran.

"I wonder why he didn't like my candy?" said Uncle Wiggily, but he had no time to say more for, all of a sudden out from behind another bush popped the Fox.

"I want candy!" howled the Fox.

"Have some candy!" cried the bunny uncle. But when he held out the same red stick the Fox howled:

"Oh, not that! Not that! Anything but that!" away he ran.

"My! Your trick is working very well, Bunty," said Uncle Wiggily. "But why are they ill so afraid of this red candy?"

"Let me see it," said Bunty. And when she looked at it she laughed and cried: "Ha! Ha! Why, that isn't red candy at all! It was a red fire cracker you must have had in your pocket since the Fourth of July. No wonder the bad chaps were afraid to take it! Ha Ha!"

"Ha! Ha!" laughed Uncle Wiggily. "Well, I'm glad they were. Anyhow the bad chaps ran away and now we can eat our candy in peace," which he and Bunty did.

LYRICS OF LIFE

It looks like rain, the sky is gray,
It looks a lot like rain today.
But when the world has ceased its laughter
I think about the days right after.
For I have seen it rain before,
And found next day beside my door
A little yellow blossom growing,
Then I had had, had without knowing.

It looks like rain a lot of times.
And then next day a blossom climbs
About our doors. A little sorrow
May bring a greater joy tomorrow.
A little rain is all we need
To show us many a joy indeed,
Some blossom in life's garden growing
That we have had, had without knowing.

POPULAR DENTIST IS LEAVING CITY

Dr. A. A. Cameron Will Take Up Practice in Ottawa After Vacation.

Dr. A. A. Cameron, of the firm of Craig, Cameron and Crough, is leaving for a month's holiday at his home in Western Ontario before going to Ottawa, to take up the practice of dentistry associated with Drs. MacLachlan and Beckett at 206 Laurier Avenue West.

Dr. Cameron, who has been seven years here, will be missed by a host of friends whom he has made during his sojourn in the city, having taken an active part in many of the different organizations, being a member of the Belmont Club, of which he is vice-president, also the Young Men's Society of St. Andrew's Church, in which he has taken an active part. His many friends bespeak for him every success in his new undertaking.

MINING BRIEFS

A Special Service to The Examiner

A report from the north this morning was to the effect that Aldermac have completed their shaft to 1,150 feet and are now engaged in cutting a station at the 1,100-foot level. The report continues that crosscutting will soon commence toward a point where rich ore was indicated in drilling last year, some 150 feet away. The lateral work is estimated to take up about 30 days.

Mill results at Vipond Consolidated Mines in June and July have been good. The quarterly statement, which will appear within a few days will be a favorable one, the Financial News Bureau is advised. The annual meeting of the company will be held in October.

Mines officials of Topley-Richfield, operating near Smithers, B.C., announce that the development work which has been carried on at the property for some time is now showing excellent results. Underground work on the west ore body is progressing at the rate of more than 12 feet a day, and the north drift on the contact vein is said to be showing good ore. The crosscut to the recently discovered East vein should reach its objective within a few days. It is stated that a high grade float of similar character was discovered more than 5,000 feet north of the operation, and directly in line with the strike. This would indicate a large ore body. Assays from this vein show between $22 and $145 to the ton, consisting of silver, copper and zinc, with gold running up to $14.40 to the ton.

Recent reports have been received from the Reeves-McDonald property, situated at the junction of the Pend Oreille and Salmon Rivers, operated by the Victoria Syndicate of London, England. Very little has been made known of the operations on the property, but it has been learned recently that development work has been proceeding during the last two years. The property is located on the British Columbia side of the International Boundary. The claims, located only ten miles from the Pend Oreille totals 2082 acres. It extends for 16,800 feet along the lime belt and is said to be 1½ miles wide. The ore bodies occur as a replacement of the limestone and are stated to be uniform as regards metal values and continuity.

The chief work has been done on the Reeves section, the ore body having been developed by a main tunnel, from which crosscuts have been run at intervals of 75 feet. Continuation in depth is said to have been tested in diamond drilling to a depth of 1,100 feet from the apex of the vein. Other development has been carried on on the McDonald portion of the property and on the prospect.

Dr. J. J. O'Neil, professor of geology at McGill University, is at present making a thorough geological survey for the purpose of preparing a structural map of the areas, so that two other known ore bodies on the property may be tested. In addition to the 2,000,000 tons of ore already said to be indicated. Water power for the property is said to be assured from one of the power sites on the Pend Oreille River.

At the annual meeting of Keeley Silver Mines, which will be held early in September, directors may have some interesting news for shareholders. A careful examination has been made of the property, particularly in relation to the lower contact. It is understood that results of this examination have been favorable and that the workings will be carried down to explore the lower contact.

While Huronian Belt is doing a good deal of prospecting, working various fields in Canada, having properties in Gaspe, northwestern Quebec, Manitoba, Alaska and several points in Ontario, the company is concentrating its efforts in Michipicoten this season, to bring its Minto and Jubilee properties to a production stage.

Having sunk its shaft to 540 feet on the Jubilee Break, four stations have been built and cross-cutting is underway at 2 levels. On the fourth level, the cross cut is in 40 feet and on the 3rd level it is in 30 feet. The management hope that the ore body indicated by drills will be encountered at about 100 feet from the shaft.

The Jubilee Break is a schisted zone about 100 feet wide, with high grade veins indicated in the schist and with gold values in the schist formation as well. Ore widths of as much as 30 feet have been indicated.

The Minto mine has been developed and some $800,000 ore has been proven and is ready to draw for the mill. The size of the mill to be erected will depend on the measure of success attained in opening up the Jubilee Break.

Ticker Talk

By H.O.

(Unofficial Opinions on the Markets

MONTREAL, Aug. 1.—More than passing interest is being taken in the friendly race for leadership being staged in the Kirkland Lake camp by Lake Shore and Teck Hughes mines. Both these producers, working to capacity on a grade of ore averaging better than any other gold mining camp in Canada, have tremendously heavy campaigns ahead for the next year, in which it is hoped to prove substantial new ore bodies at depth. The shares of both have lagged sadly the last few weeks, but market forecasters declare that when the next big forward move comes in Canadian mining stocks, the Kirkland Lake issues in a body—if not practically all the gold stocks—must look to Lake Shore and Teck Hughes to lead the procession.

Lake Shore and Teck Hughes are both in Teck township, lying side by side, and the latter has the larger property. While Lake Shore has not averaged ore as rich as Teck Hughs, it is said to have greater length with equally phenomenal width. Teck mined ore valued at $18.82 in 1927 while its next-door rival, lying on its eastern boundary, mined ore valued at $14.50 per ton. Lake Shore has stepped up its daily tonnage to 1,000 tons, while Teck Hughes is running approximately 800 to 850 tons daily, and has plans underway for adding on another 300 tons, though this will not be reflected in earnings for the 1928 period.

Teck Hughes sold at 63 cents a share in 1923 as compared with its high last November of $12. Lake Shore sold at $2.85 a share in 1923 as compared with its high of $28.50 last fall. In nearly every way they have kept shoulder-to-shoulder. At its present market price of $9.50, Teck Hughes has a valuation of $45,097,868, while Lake Shore valuation at its present market price of $21.60 is $43,200,000.

Canadian Pacific Railway common is now approximately 20 points or so from the year's top and can be bought to yield a shade less than 5 per cent. While this return is not attractive for margin account at present interest rates in New York, it should be satisfactory for outright investment, considering the safety of the dividend and the possibilities of enhancement of capital over a period of time. Although due to the increase in the number of shares outstanding, 1928 share earnings may not exceed the dividend requirements by more than $3, the Canadian agricultural out look is splendid and earnings will continue at high levels for some time at least. Segregation of valuable non-transportation assets is an ever talked of possibility. Mere rumours that such action might be near at hand have, in the past, caused the stock to jump forward very quickly.

New York—Leading commission houses report that the large majority of their customers who sold stocks early in the June reaction or during the recovery early this month, are out of the market and waiting for opportunities to repurchase good stocks on reactions. Many of them have given buying orders to their brokers at prices moderately below those now outstanding, and any selling wave will probably encounter support from thes outsiders During the past few days, many who had been waiting for buying levels have come into stocks at the market, and their purchasing has been a factor in bringing advances in some of the high grade stocks.

Nickel Expected To Double Earnings

Improvement in International Nickel Co.'s earnings, so conspicuous in the first quarter of 1928, continues, and earnings for the second quarter will be considerably greater than those of the first quarter. In fact it would not be surprising to see earnings for the second quarter around $2,650,000 after depreciation, depletion and tax reserves, or roughly $1.50 a share on the common stock after preferred dividends, compared with $2,107,920, or $1.18 a share on the 1,673,381 shares of common stock outstanding in the first quarter of 1928.

Earnings for the fourth quarter of 1927 came to $1,881,225 or $1.04 a share on the common stock after preferred dividends, $1,380,688, or 74 cents a share in the third quarter, $1,394,923, or 75 cents a share in the second quarter, and in first quarter of 1927 to $1,407,707 or 76 cents a share on the common after preferred dividends

This improvement in International Nickel earnings seems to be due largely to the disappearance of nickel-steel scrap that was in the market in large tonnage for several years as a result of breaking up of warships under the naval disarmament agreement. As Robert C. Stanley, president of International Nickel Co. pointed out in the annual report for 1926, this war-scrap had begun early in 1927 to be less pressing on the market.

With the disappearance of war scrap, makers of alloy steel had to resort more and more to virgin nickel for their meltings until now only a normal return of nickel scrap is coming on the market and shipments of nickel are showing a truer relation to actual world consumption of nickel. There has also been an encouraging improvement in nickel consumption as a result of better appreciation of the value of nickel alloy steels and of nickel-bearing cast-irons, as Mr. Stanley has pointed out.

This use of nickel cast-irons is increasing rapidly and promises to become an important outlet for nickel. In fact, the world is only now beginning to awaken to the importance of nickel alloy steels, heat-resisting nickel-chromium alloys, and non-magnetic nickel alloys in their general industrial applications. Use of monel metal is also increasing in general business.

First, this improvement was in domestic use but now Europe is beginning to respond to International Nickel's advertising campaign, and European consumption of nickel is increasing encouragingly. On this account Nickel's earnings should continue to show improvement during the next few years. Outlook is for earnings during the second half-year to be fully as good as for the first half, so it would not be surprising to see Nickel's earnings on the common stock for 1928 to be between $5.50 and $6 a share after depreciation, depletion, federal taxes and preferred dividends, compared with $3.30 a share in 1927.

Crop Estimates Are Bearish Wheat Deliveries Drop

CHICAGO, Aug. 1. — (Canadian Press.)—All deliveries of wheat dropped to-day to lowest prices yet this season. Expectations that the August private crop estimates would prove bearish were more than fulfilled both as to wheat and corn. Opening 7-8c. to 1 5-8c. off, wheat market underwent a further sag. On the other hand, corn developed strength, starting unchanged to ½c. lower, but quickly scoring general gains. Oats were easy.

Nickel Becomes Strong Feature On Exchange

TORONTO, Aug. 1 (Canadian Press).—International Nickel highly featured the morning session of the Toronto Stock Exchange to-day, when under heavy and spirited trading it reached the high of 98, but gradually decreased to 96 and finally closed at 98¾, with a net gain of 2¾. Other issues were quite dull, with no spectacular gains or losses being registered. Abitibi advanced ½ at 49¾, Cockshutt Plough Preferred 5-8 at 25 and Shredded Wheat ¾ at 63. Massey Harris and Canadian Canners First Preferred each dropped ¾ at 48 and 85¾ respectively.

British American Oil was mostly steady under rather heavy trading, and closed with a fractional gain of ¼ at 38. Hiram Walker also experienced active trading, making an increase of 1¾, to sell at 55¼.

Many Issues Reach New High Level For Year

NEW YORK, August 1 (Canadian Press). — Disregarding the high call money rates, the stock market to-day gave an impressive demonstration of strength in which at least a dozen issues were marked up to new high levels for the year. Trading showed a marked expansion in volume in reflection of increasing of public participation.

Call money renewed at 7½ per cent., the highest initial charge since July 13, but a plentiful supply of funds made its appearance at that figure and a lower rate is looked for shortly.

Time money and commercial paper rates were firm. Outside the stock market, the chief speculative interest centred in another break of $2 50 bale in cotton prices on reports of continued favorable crop weather.

United States Steel Common was rather sluggish, probably because Wall Street had expected larger earnings per share in the first half of the year. Radio and General Motors shook off their early heaviness, the former selling 4½ points above yesterday's final quotation by early afternoon.

DEPARTMENT OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS, CANADA.

CABINET HAS NO INTENTION OF RESIGNING

Reports From Ottawa To Certain Newspapers Are Denied.

NO ELECTION IN '29.

Present Government Has Until 1931, But Will Probably Choose 1930.

OTTAWA, Aug. 1 (Special to The Examiner).—Like reports of the death of King Menilik of Abyssinia, which used to crop up when news was scarce, reports went out from Ottawa to certain newspapers yesterday that that there would be a general election next year, coupled with the retirement of half a dozen members of the present cabinet.

These reports are ridiculed in Ottawa, the Prime Minister and Hon. E. Lapointe have repeatedly denied any such intention. And there are no indications in the Capital of such a proposition. The ministers who are reported as dropping out next year are all absent from the Capital just now so that no verbal denial can be made. Officials closest to them, however, scout the report as preposterous.

The government went into office in 1926. It has five years to run, which means the Fall of 1931. Usually a government not forced to the country goes on the fourth year in order to select its fighting ground. That would mean the fall of 1930. The present report is spread by Conservative correspondents, none of those writers nearest the government having used it. At intervals within the last year almost every minister in the Cabinet has been reported as intending to resign, but not one of them has any such intention.

FAULTY CHIMNEYS MUST BE REMEDIED

Fire Chief and City Engineer Make Numerous Inspections.

In the city by-law governing all things pertaining to the Peterborough fire department, there is a part which stipulates that all faulty or dirty chimneys in the city must be remedied. Recently, Fire Chief Gimblett and City Engineer Parsons have been inspecting many premises and have run across some either too dirty or faultily constructed, to pass inspection. They have ordered that these conditions be remedied, and this morning, while discussing the matter, Chief Gimblett sounded a warning to all citizens, that their chimneys must be looked after. In the event of a fire occurring where the owners or tenants have not taken proper precautions along this line, prosecutions may follow. A little co-operation and the fire and prosecution hazard is removed. Why not?

SEVENTY-FIVE ARE INJURED IN EXPLOSION

Employees Are Drenched With Hot Oil During Fire.

SIX MAY DIE.

Attempt Was Being Made By Volunteers To Put Out Fire.

LAWREICEVILLE, Ills., Aug. 1. — (Canadian Press.) — Seventy-five men, employees of the Indian Refining Company here, were injured, several of them perhaps fatally, when a steel pressure still exploded and drenched them with hot oil during a fire early to-day.

Twenty-seven of the more seriously hurt were rushed to hospitals at Vincennes, Indana, about 14 miles from here. It was reported that at least six of these were burned so badly that there was little hope for them to live. The explosion of the oil pressure still occurred after a small fire had started at the still. Volunteer fire fighters and employees of the Indian refinery were called and while they were attempting to extinglish the flames the still exploded.

10,800 MEN ARE COMING

Harvesters Are Coming From Great Britain This Year.

ANNOUNCES AMERY.

LONDON, Aug. 1 (Canadian Press Cable).—Arrangements have been finally concluded for 10,000 men to go from Britain to Canada to assist in this year's harvest, stated Rt. Hon. L. C. M. S. Amery, Secretary for the Dominions, in the House of Commons this afternoon.

The Dominion Government especially wishes that the men be recruited from mining areas and the British Government would carry out these wishes, the minister said. He concluded, amid cheers, "The British Government is greatly indebted to the Canadian government for the readiness with which they co-operated in this arrangement."

NUN DENIES STATEMENTS

Claims She Never Influenced Assassin To Shoot Obregon.

HEARING TO-DAY.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 1 (Canadian Press).—Conception Acebedo de la Plata, the Nun who was named by Jose de Leon Toral as having influenced him indirectly to assassinate General Alvaro Obregon, testified at the preliminary hearing of Toral today, that she had never told him or anybody that the deaths of President Calles, General Obregon, and Patriarch Perez were necessary for the settlement of religious conflict.

"I never thought that he would kill even a flea," she said.

In speaking of the prisoner she used the intimate nickname of "Pepe." Toral's wife testified that the Nun and a priest named Jiminez exercised such influence over Toral that they had distracted his attentions from her. She denied having any knowledge of her husband's intention to commit the crime.

ORITUARY

DR. WILLIAM H. CLARKE.

LINDSAY, Ont., August 1 (Canadian Press). — Dr. William H. Clarke, one of Lindsay's leading physicians for the past forty years, died at his home here to-day, aged sixty-six.

Dr. Clarke was born in North Augusta, Ontario, and was a son of the late Rev. Richard Clarke.

JAMES M. FRASER.

After a long illness there occurred, at his residence, 159 Hart Avenue, the death of James M. Fraser, a former resident of Campbellford.

Mr. Fraser was born in Mayersburg, Ont., 57 years ago, and spent the greater part of his life in Campbellford, and was for a long number of years an employee of the Trent Valley Woollen Mills there, coming to Peterborough about a year ago.

Left to mourn him are his wife, two daughters, Magnolia and Genevieve at home, and one son, Dolan, of Rochester, N.Y.; two sisters, Mrs. Thomas Richards of Elmwood, Ont., and Mrs. Wm. J. Sarginson of Campbellford, and one brother, John, of Peterborough.

The funeral was held from his late residence on July 30th, to St. Peter's Cathedral, where requiem high mass was sung by Rev. Father Corkery. The body was taken by motor to Campbellford, and interment was made in St. Mary's Cemetery.

The pall-bearers at Peterborough were J. Loucks, E. Murphy, J. O. Sarginson, D. O'Brien, Charles Clute, and Thomas Clancy.

The body was met at Campbellford by a number of the deceased's friends, who escorted it to St. Mary's Cemetery.

The pall-bearers at Campbellford were Stewart Crosson, Thomas Pope, Richard Cook, John O'Sullivan, Vincent Farrell and David Mason.

Rev. Father Phelan of Campbellford officiated at the grave.

Among those who attended from out of town were: Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Guilbert of Rochester, N.Y., Mrs. Charles Benor, Mrs. Wm. J. Sarginson and Mr. J. O. Sarginson, of Campbellford.

Progress Being Made In Treating Cancer

Physician Tell Of Study

Dr. G. E. Richards of Toronto Returns From Convention in London.

RADIUM SEEMS BEST.

Doctors From 23 Countries Meet To Probe Information On Matter.

TORONTO, Aug. 2.—Dr. G. E. Richards of the department of radiology at the Toronto General Hospital, gave The Examiner an interview this morning concerning the cancer convention recently held in London, England. Dr. Richards returned home on Monday.

"The general feeling left by the conference was that while there is no spectacular cure in sight," remarked Dr. Richards, "we have made progress and the cancer outlook is not so hopeless as it was. The best lead we have is the radium treatment."

This was the first international conference on cancer. It was attended by delegates from twenty-three different countries, representing practically all the leading universities in the world, and a large number of delegates from the British Isles. The total attendance was about 300.

"The sessions were divided into sections," said Dr. Richards, "including pathology, medicine, surgery, radiology, statistics and public health. The idea was to pool all the information we had and to see where we stand to analize the whole situation.

"The first question discussed embraced the causes of cancer and nothing very new or startling was announced in this connection. Experiments were reported by representatives of the Rockefeller Foundation which, if they are correct, would indicate the cause of the disease is an ultra-micropic ferment. This is in disagreement with the work described by Gye and Bernard a few years ago. They thought they had demonstrated a specific germ or virus as being the cause of cancer. Their work has not been confirmed by other scientists along this line. The chief difference between a ferment and a virus is that the virus would be transmittable from one person to another, whereas a ferment is a product of certain changes in the patient's own body and is not transferable.

"Neither of these theories," continued Dr. Richards, "can be said to have been sufficiently well proved to be accepted at the present time."

CAR UPSETS; ONE MAN HURT

Sedan Badly Damaged In Accident On Keene Road Yesterday.

RAN INTO DITCH.

A sedan with top crashed in, windows broken, and in fact, completely wrecked, was brought to Peterborough this morning, the aftermath of an accident which occurred at about 8.30 on Wednesday afternoon, and in which William McCarthy sustained a broken shoulder. Others in the car escaped serious injury, though a glance at the wrecked car challenges explanation.

It appears that several men were in the car at the time, returning from the Hiawatha Regatta. The driver, R. Hogan, of city, was following another car which had pulled out and successfully passed around a third vehicle proceeding at a slower rate of speed. When Mr. Hogan attemped to pass, the other car pulled back into the main line of traffic, the driver apparently not expecting two cars to pass at once. Mr. Hogan's car went into the ditch and turned over twice with the above described results. Mr. Carthy was hurried to the city, where he was given medical attention.

DAMAGE SLIGHT.

Spanish Plane May Resume Round World Flight To-morrow.

MADRID, Aug. 2 (Canadian Press).—Damage to the Spanish trans Atlantic plane Numancia, which came down off the Portugal coast yesterday with gasoline pump trouble, is said to be slight and the plane may possibly start again to-morrow for the Azores.

U. S. TEAM OVERFED, LONDON PAPER SUGGESTS.

LONDON, August 2 (Canadian Press). — Under a full page streamer headline, "Secret of United States Olympic Failures," The Evening Standard to-day prints the following:

"Lavish feeding, it is suggested, has led to the undoing of the United States team in the Olympic Games at Amsterdam, where at the start of to-day's sport they were still without a single victory in the track events."

CAR IS BURNED ON KEENE ROAD

Sedan Rolls Over Into Ditch at Curve and Catches Fire.

SPECTACULAR BLAZE.

A medium-sized sedan car overturned on the Keene Road at the curve about a mile east of Downer's Corners, last night about 9.45. There were three in the car at the time, but all escaped injury. The driver of the car told The Examiner that he was proceeding towards Peterborough at a moderate rate of speed. When he arrived at the corner a car coming from the direction of Peterborough appeared, and as he slowed down and pulled over to his side of the road to allow it to pass, his car rolled over and in a few minutes caught fire.

Other witnesses say that the car was travelling at a fairly fast rate of speed, and was attempting to round the curve on the wrong side of the road, and when he noticed the eastbound car approaching he attempted to get over on his side of the road, and as the brakes took hold on the wheels it turned it over on its side.

One of the occupants of the car said they were in the car several minutes before they attempted to get out, but when someone yelled that the car was on fire they made their exit in a hurry.

Other witnesses say that he did not turn off his engine as the car rolled over. This, in their opinion, might have saved the car, as it was smoking after it overturned. The driver said that he shut the engine off and turned off the gas.

Seated under a tree watching his sedan burn, he was in no mood for talking, and when asked his name he said: "Have a heart, can't you see I have enough trouble?" Another occupant of the car was bemoaning the fact that there was a twelve-pound lunge in the back, which was getting well cooked.

The blaze was very spectacular, attracting many cars which were held up on each side of the car, afraid to pass it because of a possible explosion. They were thrilled three or four times when the tires blew out from the heat, throwing a flame high in the air with a hissing sound.

The fire did its work well, leaving nothing but twisted metal and charred frame work along the roadside.

IMMIGRATION UP OVER JUNE, 1927

June Shows 12 Per Cent Increase—One-third From British Territory.

3,526 CANADIANS BACK.

Immigration to Canada is on the increase. The figures for June show that the immigration for that month this year amounted to 20,303 as compared with 18,052 for June a year ago. This is an increase of twelve percent, according to a statement issued by the Department of Immigration and Colonization from Ottawa recently.

For the quarter, April, May and June, immigration has amounted to 70,927. The main sources of the influx were British Territory, 23,695 and from the United States, 9,343. The other figures are: Belgium 658, Denmark 1,817, Holland 849, Finland 1,201, France 272, Germany, 5,812, Norway 1,092, Sweden 1,554, Switzerland 229, and from other countries 24,405.

Michigan, of the United States, contributed the largest number with 1,505, New York was second, followed by Washington, Massachusetts and California in order. For the month of June 3,526 Canadians who had gone to the United States and who had signified their intention of staying there permanently returned to Canada with the intention of remaining here.

BARN AT EXHIBITION GROUND MOVED TO NEW SITE TO-DAY

Cattle Stable of Light Construction Very Shaky When Lifted.

HAND WINDLASS USED.

Work On New Barns Will Be Finished In About a Week's Time.

An achievement in engineering and moving buildings is being accomplished at the Exhibition Park. The old cattle barn built six years ago is being moved into line with the two new barns that are being erected this year. The building of light material, was very shaky when jacked up off the 72 poles on which it was set. The sills of the building were nothing but 2 inches by 4 inches scantlings and great care had to be taken in the raising so that nothing would be broken. Rails from the old street railway were used to place under the building so that it would be held steadier. The building is 36 feet by 100 feet and is being moved by a hand windlass. It will be placed where the old horse barns were forming an L with one of the new barns; the other new barn is several hundred feet down the line.

Work was commenced on the new barns July 23.

Fred Finnie has almost completed the horse barn which is 39 feet by 120 feet, and Mr. Dunumitt will have the large cattle barn completed in about a week's time.

The new horse barn will provide accommodation for 48 head and the cattle barn for 100. The directors are expecting a large entry in the sheep classes this year and are already making provisions to accommodate an overflow of at least 100.

Wolf Ravages Proton Flocks

DURHAM, Aug. 2.—Two residents in the western part of Protor Township report having seen a wolf in the neighborhood bordering the large waste land area, which covers approximately 1,000 acres and is known as the big swamp. Farmers in that district have lost many sheep and the wolf is blamed. David Dow and Frank Todd have each seen the animal on different occasions.

TWO WORKMEN MAY NOT LIVE

Others Injured at Welland Canal Are Expected To Recover.

PROPERTY LOSS $60,000.

ST. CATHARINES, Ont., Aug. 2.—(Canadian Press.)—The death list in yesterday's disaster at Lock Six, Welland ship canal, remains at eight this morning although the condition of two of the injured men is very serious and little hope is held out for their recovery. All of the other eleven still confined with more or less serious injuries will ultimately recover and no amputation will be necessary, according to statements by the attending physicians to-day.

Leo Bion, Sherbrooke, Que., and Alex Wilson, St. Catharines, are those most seriously injured.

Engineer O. W. Sherwood of the Department of Railways and Canals, arrived from Ottawa this morning with a commission to investigate the accident.

E. S. Mattice, chief engineer and manager of the Steel Gates Company, places the property damage at $60,000.

EX-SPEAKER IS MARRIED

Rt. Hon. J. H. Whitley Surprises Friends By Marriage This Morning.

BRIDE OLD FRIEND.

LONDON, Aug. 2 (Canadian Press).—The former Speaker of the House, J. H. Whitley, surprised Londoners by announcing early this morning that he would be married at Old Chelsea Church to Miss Helen Clarke, daughter of J. A. Selkick, of Hunstanton. The marriage took place at 11 o'clock in the presence of a few intimate friends and both families. The bride has been a friend of the Whitley family for many years.

FUNERAL SERVICE ASSOCIATION WILL MEET HERE NEXT TUESDAY

Three Day Session Will Be First Ever Held In Eastern Ontario.

FULL PROGRAM.

John Comstock of Peterborough Is First Vice-President of Ontario Body.

The city of Peterborough has been accorded a signal honor by the Ontario Funeral Service Association, which has chosen to hold its annual convention and exhibition in the armouries during three days of next week—August 7, 8, 9—the first occasion in many years if ever, that the convention has been held east of Toronto. Hamilton and London have been the other convention cities. Sharing in the honor, along with the city of Peterborough, will be John Comstock, of the well-known local firm who is the First Vice-President of the Association.

Through the courtesy of Mr. Comstock, has come to The Examiner, an official directory and program of the convention, and a very complete one it proves to be. Morning and afternoon sessions with special events in the evening, are scheduled, while in the afternoon of the closing day, Thursday, August 9, the visiting undertakers will be taken by motor to South Beach, whence they will enjoy a boat trip around the lakes.

Bite of Mosquito Fatal to Child

OWEN SOUND, Aug. 2.—The funeral was held here yesterday of Pearl, 13-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. McAllister, who died as the result of a mosquito bite. The girl had been visiting her sister at St. Catharines, and while there she received a mosquito bite on her foot. She scratched it, and infection set in later which brought on blood poisoning.

CRUISER SIZE MAY HALT NEW NAVAL TREATY ACCORD

United States Favors Larger Ships Than European Countries.

EXCHANGE VIEWS.

Matter of Disagreement Between America and Britain Involved in Pact.

PARIS, Aug. 2 (A.P.).—Questions upon which the United States and Great Britain did not agree at the three-power naval conference at Geneva appear to be involved in the compromise agreement reached by France and England.

The British conception of the size of cruisers is understood to be an important part of the agreement. The size of guns is left out, although this appears to be conditioned by the size of the cruisers.

The negotiations, the Associated Press learns, were brought about by frequent mention of American Naval convictions, but both sides are described as endeavoring to avoid anything which might annoy the United States.

Some objection, however, is expected from Washington, on this clause relating to the size of cruisers, both the British and French conceptions being for small cruisers rather than large ones. The agreement in no way touches the size or length of life of capital ships.

Text of the agreement already has been dispatched to America. The negotiations were carried on partly in Paris and partly in London between the naval authorities, and their conversations at Geneva were carried on between the British and French delegates.

France and England have had occasional exchanges of views on naval policy during the last three years. The French Government twelve months ago submitted a scheme of mutual understanding which the British rejected, but it is understood the British on their part asked to have the question reopened a few weeks ago.

The Foreign Office made public a note explaining that the French and British governments began asearch for an acceptable compromise in order to continue the work that broke down when the Powers found themselves in disaccord in discussions provoked by the League of Nations' preparatory commission for disarmament.

The statement added:

"It is these negotiations which have ended under conditions fully safeguarding our naval interests, France and England have the firm hope that other naval Powers will be able to concur in this compromise which is to be communicated to them."

BRITISH CHAMPIONS.

The events won by the British Empire so far:

100 metres—Percy Williams, Canada.

200 metres—Percy Williams, Canada.

400 metre hurdles — Lord Burghley, Great Britain.

Hammer throw—Patrick Callaghan, Ireland.

800 metres—Douglas Lowe, Great Britain.

110 metre hurdles — Sidney Atkinson, South Africa.

WILLIAMS FREE TILL SATURDAY

Will Run in Relay Race Then, Refusing To Be Dropped.

RESTS IN MEANTIME.

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 2 (Canadian Press).—Percy Williams, the sprinting champion, whose name was never heard outside Canada before the Olympic games, celebrated his double victory, the first since 1912, by getting a sound night's sleep in preparation for further efforts on the cinder path in the Olympic stadium.

"He is sleeping like a baby," P. J. Mulqueen, chief of the Canadian team, told reporters who besieged the 19-year-old Vancouver schoolboy, hero of the ninth Olympiad, last night. "Don't disturb him. He must run in the relays on Saturday."

That is all Canada asks of her Olympic star. Besides winning the 100 and 200 metre dashes from the pick of the world's sprinters, he must run on Canada's relay team.

It was proposed to drop Williams from the relay team in order to give him a rest, but he modestly stuck to his determination to see his task through to the finish.

IN POLICE COURT

Frank Simpson pleaded guilty to a charge of vagrancy and was remanded until Wednesday for sentence. He was picked up in the south end this morning in a very ragged condition.

"WILD BULL" HOPES TO WIN TUNNEY'S TITLE

BUENOS AIRES, Aug. 2.—(Canadian Press.) — Luis Angel Firpo, "bull of the Pampas," now a prosperous automobile dealer of Buenos Aires, expects to return to the square circle in a few months to seek the heavyweight boxing crown for Argentina. He said to-day that he had been indulging in light training.

NO RABIES HERE FOR SOME TIME

Last Case Recorded Was Several Years Ago, Says Inspector Reid.

FEW STRAY ANIMALS.

Peterborough dogs and cats are free from rabies. When The Examiner asked Police Inspector Reid if there were any cases of rabies reported in the city he stated that there has not been a case of rabies in the city for many years back when a little boy on Elm street was bitten. That was when Daniel Thompson was chief of the local force.

As far as cats are concerned there is no law in the city to prohibit them from roaming at will and it is not necessary to get a license to keep a cat, so consequently it is harder to check up on the felines than on the dogs. There are few cats roaming about the streets except that one sees a stray one late in the evening scurrying across the street. In some places cats are required to carry a bell as a warning to birds on which they prey, but here they are as free as the wind.

As far as dogs are concerned, they must be kept in an enclosure high enough and strong enough to keep them inside. They are only allowed, according to the law, to be on the street when on leash. Even then they are not under proper control, as they should be muzzled, according to the inspector, as a dog may snap at some passerby.

There are some 631 dogs licensed in Peterborough at present beside the number without licenses which are being rapidly checked up and whose owners are subject to a court fine. Also there are the dogs that roam about the streets with no owners and which are being checked up by the dog catcher who is rapidly eliminating this nuisance from the streets of the city.

There are stray cats as well, but these keep out of sight. In other cities the start of disease is among these stray animals and it spreads to those which are better cared for. The same danger lies in Peterborough, but a close check is being kept and there has been no outbreak, according to the officials.

ABBESS LEADER SAYS ATTORNEY

Mexican Government Spokesman Says Assassin Belonged to Terrorist Group.

MISLEADING JUSTICE.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 2 (Canadian Press).—Attorney-General Cobres, in a statement to-day, asserted that Jose de Leon Toral, assassin of General Alvaro Obregon, belonged to a terrorist organization headed by the Abbess Maria Concepcion Acevedo de la Llata. The Attorney-General, who is supervising the preliminary judicial examination into the slaying, issued this statement:

"I am convinced this group of individuals who directly or indirectly participated in Obregon's murder belong to the terrorist organization headed by no one other than the Abbess Mario Concepcion Acevedo de la Llata, who is an intelligent woman and had been trying to mislead justice.

"This organization resembles the Russian Nihilists or Italian associations formed to attempt the life of Mussolini."

J. STEVENSON JOINS FORCE

Native of Belfast is Sworn In as Police Constable of City.

NO DETECTIVE NAMED.

John Stevenson was sworn in as a constable of the City of Peterborough before Magistrate O. A. Langley this morning. Stevenson has been a resident of this city for some years, coming here from Belfast, Ireland, where he was born. He will step into the vacancy caused on the force by the resignation of Detective William Carey. Before coming to this country Stevenson had been accepted as a member of the Belfast Constabularly, but he decided to seek a future in Canada.

As yet, no man has been appointed to the office of detective, Chief Newhall told The Examiner this morning. The position, it is understood, will be left open for some little time to allow the men to try out for the vacancy.

TENDERS ASKED FOR NEW DAM

Department of Railways and Canals Rebuilding Dam 25 (Formerly 2.)

The Department of Railways and Canals is calling for tenders for the construction of Dam 25 on the Trent Valley Canal. To many the dam at this lock is known as Number 2, being the first below Lakefield. The rebuilding of this dam, removing the wooden structure, and replacing it with concrete, is part of the policy of the Department to erect concrete dams on ahe Trent Valley Canal.

At present Dam Number 24 is almost completed, and with the letting of tenders for 25, only one dam will be left to be rebuilt, which is Number 22 (formerly 5), where the Otonabee Power Company used to develop its power.

The tenders will close at 12 o'clock noon on August 28. Plans and specifications may be obtained from the Department in Ottawa or the Office of the Superintending Engineer, Peterborough, on the payment of $25.00, which sum will be returned to all bona-fide tenderers upon the return of the plans.

COSTLY WORSHIP.

"My daughter has fallen in love with the radio announcer of KKKZ."

"Is it serious?"

"It is. Her bill for applause telegrams this month was $49.90." — Country Gentleman.

Returning In Six Weeks

Men Would Have Tackled Ottawa Train If Able To Escape.

ONLY ONE AT LARGE.

Toronto Chief Hopeful of Having Billy Boven Arrested in Short Time.

TORONTO, Ont., Aug. 2 (Special to The Examiner).—Had the men who robbed the mail car at the Union station about midnight, June 19th, and stole $300,000 in cash and securities been successful in evading arrest and had made their get-away, they had planned to return to Toronto six weeks later and carry out another robbery, it was learned to-day.

The men had under discussion and had agreed to hold up the Ottawa mail train at the Danforth yards in East Toronto, it is stated.

An informant who knew the schedule followed in connection with registered mails and who planned the scheme to rob the train at the Union Station had told the gunmen about the Ottawa train and what valuables it carried. They agreed if they had slipped through the police net to come back and tackle the job in the Danforth yards. It also is known that the men, when studying out the mail trains at the Union Station a week before the robbery, were rather skeptical of being able to handle it without interference, owing to there being so much traffic around the station.

As an alternative they had decided to go to Hamilton and carry out the hold-up there when the trains backs in after midnight for Hamilton imits and passengers. Then they changed their plans and decided Toronto would be the best place.

The only man sought by the police for the big hold-up is Billy Boven, Detroit-Windsor gunman, and he will be caught, according to Chief Constable Draper, who says it may take time. While the United States is a big place, he is hopeful of landing Boven.

COURTNEY DOWN IN MID-ATLANTIC

British Aviator Sends Out Calls For Help This Morning.

STEAMER ON WAY.

NEW YORK, Aug. 2.—(Canadian Press.—Radio messages received at London, Halifax, and New York, this morning established that captain Frank Courtney, British aviator, flying from the Azores to Newfoundland, is down 580 miles southeast of Cape Race and is sending out distress signals.

The liners Cedric and President Hayes are in the vicinity and the President Hayes is going to Courtney's assistance. The Liner is expected to reach him at 11 a.m. The messages said Courtney and his crew wanted immediate help, but were in no immediate danger.

Two Steamers Near

S.S. CEDRIC, Aug 2 (Via Radio to Associated Press).—A radio message broadcast to all ships by the S.S. Minnetonka stated that the Minnewaska as well as the President Hayes was in the vicinity of latitude 43 north, longitude 41 west, where Capt. Courtney's seaplane came down. Both ships are understood to be searching for the plane.

Steamer at Scene

NEW YORK, Aug. 2 (Canadian Press).—The Radio Marine Corporation reported this afternoon that its Chatham, Mass., station has information that the steamer President Hayes was at the position where Capt. Frank Courtney's seaplane landed in mid-ocean and was searching for the plane.

CUT HIS HAND.

H. B. Rye Has Two Fingers Injured By Saw in His Boat Plant.

When his left hand slipped as he was working about a circular saw in the panel room of his boat works, on Tuesday, H. B. Rye narrowly escaped the loss of three fingers, and was rushed to the office of Dr. Morgan with the tips of two of the three almost off, while the third was also badly bruised.

Mr. Rye is able to be about again, but the injured member will require several weeks to heal.

A safety lamp for mines has been invented, which gives notice of even a small proportion of firedamp.

Many Enjoy Annual Garden Party At Downeyville

GOOD SPORTS PROGRAM GIVEN AT GATHERING

Many From Peterborough and Victoria Counties Attend Annual Social.

BABY SHOW HELD.

Softball and Horseshoe Tournament Did Much To Enliven Program.

"Bigger and better than ever" is a much hackneyed phrase yet it was never more fittingly applied than to the annual garden party held on Wednesday afternoon and evening in Downeyville. Well over seven hundred people from urban and rural communities in Victoria and Peterborough counties gathered during the afternoon to witness a splendid program of sports and other events, while that number was augmented by fully five hundred more persons who arrived for the supper, dance and other entertainment of the evening. Motor cars were parked for fully a quarter of a mile along the four roads leading from the village, while all available stable room was taken, proving that Dobbin is far from obsolete as a medium of travel. Besides the sports, which consisted of softball and horseshoe tournaments, there was a most successful baby show during the afternoon. The garden party was graced with the presence of many visiting members of the clergy, among them being the Rev. Monsignor McColl, Fathers Black and Welsh of Lindsay; Fathers Guiry, of Port Hope; McCauley, of Ennismore; O'Sullivan, of Wooler; and Gillogly, of Kinmount.

On the Grounds.

The spacious grounds between the Parish Hall and the Rev. Father Galvin's residence, the scene of the garden party, presented a bright and animated scene during the afternoon and more especially during the evening when hundreds of people gathered, not only from the immediate district about Downeyville, but from Peterborough, Lindsay, Omemee, Dunsford and other communities. Refreshment booths, three or four in number enjoyed most encouraging patronage, while a "Fish Pond" seemed to hold out no little attraction for young and old alike.

The one main booth round which the greatest interest centred, however, was located in the centre of the grounds, and was banked high with a profusion of needle work, table sets, comforters and blankets, wickerwork and a host of other articles. On its platform, during the afternoon, the baby show was held and in the evening, Albert O'Neill, of Lindsay, as auctioneer, carried on a "land office" business with his wheel of fortune. Assisting him was an army of winsome maidens who during the afternoon and evening, sold tickets on the many pretty and useful articles as well as upon a $10 gold piece and set of chairs, the draw for which was postponed until the social, being held next Wednesday.

Baby Show.

Much has been said, and much remains yet to be said for and against the idea of baby shows. There are people who will tell you that they merely tend to disappoint many mothers to the elation of a few; that since the babies shown may have had widely varied methods of upbringing, standards of judging must necessarily be varied, and the ultimate winners are therefore not to be compared because of those varied standards—and therefore the baby show has not accomplished what it set out to do, mainly, to choose the healthiest and best developed baby in the field of entries, often large.

Be that as it may, there was a great interest taken in the baby show held on the grounds yesterday. A garden party sounds rather a strange place to hold such a competition and yet, the one herein mentioned proved a most successful one. At 5.00 o'clock in the afternoon, the judges, doctors Gleason, of Lindsay, and Earle, of Omemee took their first look over a field of some fourteen entries and for the next half hour their task of selecting the healthiest and best physically developed baby two years of age and under, was a difficult one. The boy babies, outnumbered by their opposite sex, 9 to 5 had the opportunity (if they were old enough to appreciate it) and satisfaction of seeing one of their number carry off first prize, a $5 gold piece, the best developed baby being Gordon Burns, 15-months-old son of Vincent Burns, who resides south of Lindsay. The second prize winner, little Miss Jean O'Neill, 12-months-

Good Prospects For Canadian Grain Crops

RIPENING WEATHER PREVAILING THROUGHOUT THE ENTIRE WEST

All Rust Danger Now Thought Past—Areas Affected By Hail Are Small and Damage is Relatively Light.

AWAIT FAVORABLE CUTTING WEATHER.

WINNIPEG, Man., August 2 (Canadian Press). — With good ripening weather prevailing virtually throughout the entire Canadian West, prospects for a good crop are excellent, according to the twelfth report of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, issued yesterday. Following is the summary:

Manitoba — All grains are making good progress, with sufficient moisture to carry wheat to maturity. Warm, dry weather is now required. All rust danger is now thought to be past. Areas affected by hail are small and damage relatively light. Wheat heads are well filled, and with favorabe weather cutting of wheat will be general in central and southern portions in ten days. Nearly every point reports that yields will be well above the ten-year average in all grains.

Saskatchewan — With good ripening weather prevailing, it is expected cutting will commence at many points about August 15, or two weeks earlier than last year. A number of points comment on the abundance of weeds which will lower yields and grades in those sections. More rain would be welcome in the northern part of the province. Rust has appeared at some points, but conditions have not favored its rapid development. It is felt that the crop is too far advanced to be much damaged by rust now. Several bad hail storms during the week caused severe losses, but the damage is a very small percentage of the crop as a whole.

Alberta — Conditions continue satisfactory, with no disease of any kind. The weather during the past week has been hot and dry. Hail in the south over the week-end damaged crops between High River and McLeod.

To-Day's Schedule

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 2.—(By W. H. Ingram, staff correspondent of The Canadian press).—To-day's events for the Olympic track and field championships and the Canadians competing are as follows:

400 metre run—First and second trials, Phil Edwards of Hamilton, James Ball of Winnipeg, W. A. Wilson of Montreal and F. W. MacBeth of Hamilton.

Javelin throw, final—Dorval Pilling of Cardston, Alberta.

Hop, Step and Jump, final—A. W. Munro, Toronto.

800 metre run (women) final—Fanny Rosenfeld of Toronto and Jean Thompson of Penetang.

Rowing singles—Joe Wright of Toronto.

MANY INQUIRIES BEING RECEIVED

Great Interest Is Being Taken in Kiwanis Musical Festival.

The Kiwanis Musical Festival to be held in connections with the Produced in Canada Exhibition in October is creating wide interest throughout Ontario. Dr. Craig has received inquiries from Ottawa, Hamilton, Toronto and nearly every town and city in Central Ontario. On Saturday five applications for the prize list came from Whitby, and up to date eight hundred lists of the test pieces have been distributed.

There are internationally known adjudicators coming for the event and the head of Canadian Society for the Advancement of Music is taking a personal interest in the affair.

Those interested in any branch of music are invited to get in touch with Dr. J. J. Craig, who will supply information and forms.

GRANTS RESTORED TO CLASS 'B' FAIRS

Will Receive Same Payments This Year as Last From Federal Government.

OTTAWA, Aug. 2. — (Canadian Press.)—It has been decided by the Government that class "B" Fairs will receive the same grant in 1928 as they did in 1927. This was stated by Dr. J. H. Grisdale, Deputy Minister of Agriculture, last night, when asked respecting a report that the Government was contemplating according to these fairs some measures of assistance.

During the last session of Parliament, no appropriation was made for the class "B" fairs as had hitherto been done, the entire Government grant in this connection going to the class "A" exposition. Considerable opposition to this developed among the farmer element of the House of Commons and the agricultural estimates were subjected to severe criticism on this account both by friends and opponents of the Government. The Deputy Minister's announcement restores the former status of the class "B" fairs for the current year.

THE WEATHER

Meteorological Office, Toronto, August 2. — Pressure is high on the Pacific Coast and over the South-eastern States and low from Manitoba to the South-west States. The weather has been moderately warm, with local thunder showers from Ontario eastward and rather cool in the Western Provinces, with light showers in some sections.

Lake Superior — Fresh winds; unsettled, with showers and thunderstorms.

Manitoba — Partly cloudy and rather cool, with local showers.

Saskatchewan and Alberta—Mostly fair and rather cool.

The word 'set' has so many different meanings and extensions of meanings that it requires 30,000 words in the new Oxford English Dictionary to deal with it.

W. I. MEETING HELD AT MADOC

Reports Read By Members at Regular Monthly Gathering.

TRAVEL TALKS GIVEN.

(Examiner Correspondence)

MADOC, August 2.—Owing to the illness of Mrs. James Kincaid, the Madoc Women's Institute was invited to meet on July 27 at the home of Mrs. J. C. Smith. The attendance was rather smaller than usual owing to the busy season, twenty-two were present. Mrs. Tumelty presided and after the usual opening exercises an account was received of the girl's judging competition and a motion was passed that the secretary forward five dollars as a share of the C.N.E. expenses of the winner.

Mrs. Tumelty gave a report of the Memorial canvassers and further arrangements were made for completing the canvas. It was also decided to donate fifteen dollars for prizes as usual for the special fair. The Fair committee will meet and assign the prizes as they see fit on Friday evening, August 3, at 8 o'clock in the Community Hall. Mrs. R. Wellman and Mrs. C. Moon were nominated as canvassers for the special prizes.

Mrs. F. Harrison gave a most interesting and instructive travel talk on her trip to Florida, featuring especially St. Petersburg, Miami, Palm Beach and Daytona, after which Miss A. Sinclair was prevailed upon to continue the talk and spoke glowingly of St. Augustine, Richmond, Charleston and Washington.

The August meeting will be held on Friday, 24th. A social half hour followed the meeting.

ELOPING DAUGHTER SEIZED BUT MOTHER ISN'T WORRIED

NEW YORK, August 2. — Mrs. Henry Yeager, of Caldwell, N.J., is one mother who has full trust in a flapper daughter

When she received word from Chicago last night that her daughter Alice, seventeen, had been arrested there while eloping with George Ryman, eighteen, son of a wealthy Detroit family, she said:

"I am not worried about Alice. She has a mighty level head. She left home with my permission. She said she was going to Toronto to spend a vacation with young Ryman's sister.

"Our family and the Rymans were neighbors in Florida for six years while I was in the real estate business down there. The Ryman boy was friendly with both Alice and my other daughter Juanita, who is older. I think there was a little jealousy beween the girls. Both claimed him as their boy friend, and as he was young and had a lot of money, it was difficult for them to agree on the matter."

Alice will be eighteen on September 29. When she left for Toronto, where she is said to have met Ryman, she told several girl chums:

"When I come back I will be eighteen and married."

And she might have been the latter only the boy's parents telegraphed a request to the Chicago police that they be held when they applied for a marriage license.

HUNT BANDITS IN MINNESOTA

Police Continue Ceaseless Search For Winnipeg Bank Robbers.

GUARD ROADS.

WINNIPEG, Man., August 2 (Canadian Press). — Search for the five bandits who relieved the two Winnipeg bank messengers of a pouch containing $25,000 last Monday, had shifted to Minnesota yesterday.

Following a ceaseless hunt throughout the southern portions of Manitoba and North Dakota across the international border, word was received by the authorities here that a car carrying a number of men, had been seen racing through Litchfield, Minn., yesterday at a terrific rate of speed. Armed men have been stationed at vantage points along the highway south of the town and every effort will be made to intercept the car before it can reach the more densely settled areas around Minneapolis and S. Paul.

Despite this report there was no let-up in the search in Manitoba and North Dakota. While police admitted that the car spotted at Litchfield might be manned by the bandits, they have not abandoned the clue that the fugitives deserted the automobile in which they escaped and made their get-away by train. The authorities are certain, however, that the hold-up men are now in the United States.

NORTH BAY THIEF STEALS POLICE CAR

NORTH BAY, August 2. — Whether it was the act of some practical joker or of a bold thief who later repented his action, it is not known, but the local police car suddenly disappeared from in front of the City Hall yesterday afternoon. Chief Clark, noticing that it was missing, immediately started a search and it was discovered in front of Lefebvre's cigar store, about a block from the police office.

In Spain not long ago a man was found guilty of over 300 forgeries, and sentenced in connection with each one, the total sentences amounting to over 3,000 years in prison.

Mystery Cleared Up Body Found In Well

KINGSTON, Ont., Aug. 2.—(Canadian Press.)—The mystery surrounding the death of John Good, aged 80, who, after being missed for three days, was cleared up when his body was found in the well on his own farm, three miles west of Parham, 35 miles north of here. Mr. Good was last seen on Thursday by his neighbors, and was not seen again untilt his body was found in the well by his son, who lives near the scene of the tragedy. Search parties scouerd the district finding no trace of the missing farmer. However, the body has been found in the well, an old fashioned structure. Deceased lived alone and it is believed he slipped while getting a pail of water on Thursday evening. His sons do not live near enough to hear any calls for help that Mr. Good might have made. It was decided that death was accidental and no inquest necessary.

Cavan

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAVAN, August 2.—The cutting of wheat and alsike is general throughout Cavan. Alsike is being drawn in on many farms.

Mr. S. Boyle, ninth line, has his fall wheat drawn in and his barley cut.

The harvest is coming in very quickly and the work is being rushed while the weather is clear.

Weeds are becoming a very serious menace to good crops. The short seasons and scarcity of help on the farms makes it almost impossible to control them. Just at this season of the year, sow thistle is a brilliant yellow through the crops on many good farms.

Quack grass or twitch grass and bladder campion are weeds that are making great headway.

The use of new potatoes is general on the farms. Potatoes appear to be a good crop.

Mr. David White has purchased a new threshing machine, and has it in readiness for the beginning of the threshing season.

Mrs. T. Kellett, Manvers Station, visited the Misses Maude and Blanche Moore on Tuesday and accompanied the latter on the excursion by train to Orillia on Wednesday.

Miss Bertha McNeil has accepted a position as dietician in a hospital in Brockville, leaving on Tuesday.

Miss Hopkins, Domestic Science Instructress at the Girls' Coaching Class in Cavan Community Hall, was entertained by Mrs. D. J. Hunter while here.

Miss Gladys Withers and Miss Zelma Huffman, Napanee, were guests of Miss Muriel Matchett last week. While here they with Miss Matchett paid a short visit to Miss Gwen Hutchison.

Mr. W. Gray took a truck load of cattle to Toronto on Tuesday. These cattle had been brought in Cavan.

Mrs. L. H. Winslow is teaching her music class in Cavan on Friday instead of Wednesday this week.

Miss Kelly, Mrs. Milligan, Mrs. Syer, Miss L. Syer, Miss Helen Syer, Miss Hunter, Miss Moore, Mrs. J. Armstrong and Mrs. Pee were among those who attended the excursion by train to Orillia on Wednesday.

The shower of Wednesday has further delayed the harvesting of alsike and wheat, and dry weather for a time is very much desired.

FRENCH ANGRY AT SACRILEGE

Germans Also Indignant at Tourists, Who Carry Bones From Verdun.

CARLOADS TAKEN AWAY.

VERDUN, Aug. 2—Indignation over the sacrilegious behaviour of battlefield tourists and souvenir hunters, long since a matter of profund annoyance and irritation to French war veteran societies, has spread to Germany. A committee of German investigators that went quietly over the shell-scarred environs of Verdun reports that automobile loads of skulls and bones are carried away each season by visitors.

The committee was headed by Herr Wolfgang Von Weber, himself a former soldier who fought at Verdun. Herr Von Weber personally came on a pilgrimage to visit the graves of relatives who died in the Crown Prince's attacks on Fort Douamont. His report on the conduct of the souvenir-crazed tripper has startled public opinion on both sides of the Rhine and may result in a strict supervision of the battlefields after this by the French Ministry of War.

An estimate of the number visiting war scenes can be made when it is known that no less than thirty big sight-seeing cars pull out of Paris daily during the tourist season loaded with visitors, and that the Paris-Metz highway, on which the Verdun sector is situated, offers each day a spectacle of interminable caravans of private automobiles. Visitors at the Douaumont Ossuay, the gigantic concrete crypt where the bones of tens of thousands of unidentified French and enemy soldiers lie buried, number seven or eight thousand each Sunday.

Souvenirs For Sale.

All along the road are refreshment booths and post card stands. On Dead Man's Hill, on the left bank of the Meuse, where the fighting was heaviest, piles of rusty helmets, bayonets, machine gun parts, cartridge pouches, binoculars, bits of field-gray cloth, water-soaked note books and diaries are on exhibition and sale to the highest bidder. The whole atmosphere of the battlefields, to many pious pilgrims and disconsolate parents a stretch of territory forever sacred, is in the grip of a cold-hearted commercialism.

The worst offenders are groups of men and women who go laughingly poking in the ground for death-bones and skulls. French and German mothers and fathers, who roam here on Sunday mornings amid the thousands of uncharted graves, are rudely awakened from their reverent search by gangs of "skull picnickers," as the peasants call the callous disturbers of the soil.

Death-heads are triumphantly unearthed and carried on the ends of walking sticks to waiting automobiles, which roar off on the way to Paris with the trophies lying on the floor of the tonneau.

A French veteran society recently supplied evidence that an Argentinian tourist agent furnished his clients with small spades and shovels to aid them in their search for souvenirs in the blood-drenched soil. The fact came to light when three visitors were blown to bits as they inadvertently struck an unexploded shell while digging for more interesting mementoes. Investigation by police showed that several other travel agencies were in the habit of supplying their customers with implements to dig and uproot the ground.

Laugh Amid Sobbing Peasants.

Sunday morning crowds eat their lunches in half-filled trenches, filling the air with song and laughter, while sobbing peasants often come from the far ends of France to visit the grave of a loved one, are prostrate in prayer and mournful meditation nearby.

The left bank of the Meuse, in contrast with the City of Verdun proper, where everything has been repaired and revered, looks as though the battles raged only yesterday. The forts Vaux, Douaumont and Thiaumont have been left the crumbled and battered pieces of masonry that they were on the day when a million men struggled here in the most sanguinary battle of the world's history.

Tourists pick and scrape away at the remnants of battlements and bulwarks. Automobilists quarrel and bicker over parking places for their machines in these tragic regions.

From these forts runs the paved road to the Ossuary. On Sundays this stretch is impassible for a pedestrian. In the crypt of this monument you find the only suggestion of reverence. Tourists at least take their hats off here and conversation is in whispers.

Beyond the Ossuary lies the immense cemetery with its innumerable white crosses. This graveyard is avoided by the tourists and generally no visitor ventures between the serried ranks of humble wooden monuments.

Trench of Bayonets.

The object of every visitor is the famous Trench of Bayonets, about a kilametre from the Ossuary. A detachmnt of French soldiers met death in this trench through the concussion of an explosive nearby. The men remained standing in death, and later the trench was filled in around them, without removing or disturbing the bodies.

To-day the bayonets stick out above the ground as grim reminders of the skeleton ized sentinels below the soil of France. Each tourist feels called upon to photograph and snap the sinister scene.

The question the German committee asks, in view of the droves of English, American, Spanish, Dutch, German and South American tourists that pass over the battlefields each day, is this: "Does the visit to battlefields work as a powerful incentive against war, or does it excite passions and chauvinist sentiments?"

OBITUARY

MARGARET MARY BOLAND.

A very sad death occurred at the home of Mr. John E. Boland, Asphodel, on Thursday evening when his eldest daughter, Margaret Mary, gave up her earthly pilgrimage by answering the summons of her Creator.

The deceased has been in failing health for a few months but only lately had became worse, and it soon became evident that despite medical aid and loving care, the tide of that beautiful young life was slowly ebbing away.

The community at large has indeed sustained a severe shock by this unlooked for and untimely death.

Lacking one day of reaching her 21st birthday Margaret had in that one score years made friendships manifold, truly signified by the large number present to pay their last respects to her who had won the hearts of all who had the pleasure of her acquaintance and who will be so sorrowfully missed throughout the community.

The funeral was held on July 28 at 10 a.m. from the family residence Lot 8, Concession 2, Asphodel Township to Our Lady of Mount Carmel Church, Hastings. Mass was sung by Rev. J. McGuire, assisted in the sanctuary by Rev. Father Lynch of St. Peter's Cathedral, Peterborough.

Left to mourn the loss of a devoted daughter and sister are her father, one sister, Kathryn, and brother, James. Besides a devoted uncle, Mr. Thomas Boland and her affectionate grandmother, Mrs. David Garvey of Norwood is an aunt of the deceased. There are numerous cousins and friends, twenty of whom formed a mourning guard and followed the casket to Mount Carmel Cemetery, where the remains were tenderly laid to rest by six friends of the deceased, namely: D. O'Sullivan, N. McNulty, M. Humphries, T. McMillan, W. Garvey and A. Heffernan.

The sympathy of the entire district is extended to the family in there very sad bereavement.

WILLIAM L. RAY.

(Examiner Correspondence)

MADOC, August 2.—On Tuesday, July 17, there passed away one of Tudor's oldest and most respected residents in the person of William L. Ray. He has been in failing health for some time but it was only within the last few days before his death that he was confined to his room and bed.

The deceased was born at Hawkebury, in Prescott County, of English parentage, on January 3, 1847, and hence was at the time of his death 81 years and six months of age. He with his parents, moved to Tudor in 1857 and settled on the farm where his death occurred, 71 years ago. He was the last member of a family of eight, all of whom predeceased him.

On aJnuary 9, 1874 he married Katherine Armstrong, the union being blessed by a family of six, three girls and three boys, Annie, Everett and Gertrude (Mrs. F. Vincent), all deceased and Henry, Edmund and Olive at home.

In religion he was an Anglican and in politics a Liberal. He was very active and perserving, hewing out a fine home for himself and family out of the dense forest. His home was known far and wide as one of unbounded hospitality and the stranger was never turned away from his door. He was a pleasing conversationalist and would converse fluently on almost any subject and had the knack of entertaining his guests in an interesting manner. He was a great hunter and had many exciting adventures with bears, deer, wolves and other denizens of the forest.

During his palmy days, he held many public offices, being for many years trustee and secretary-treasurer of the school section; warden of his church; a councillor for a period of ten years and Reeve of the municipality in 1893. He was never known to speak evil of a neighbor nor to criticize an opponent adversely—hence his great popularity.

The funeral services were conducted by his rector, the Rev. J. G. Sparling, taking his text "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills from whence cometh my help." The text symbolizing to the Jew the hope that in the City of the Hills, Jerusalem, there was safety and salvation and to us that there is safety for the godly who put their trust in God's protection. In his remarks, he eulogized the deceased for his activity, perserverance, broadmindedness, hospitality, religious zeal and of his hope of rest and peace in the Great Celestial City, and stated that his life and walk should be an example and an inspiration to the coming generation.

The interment was made in the Glanmire Cemetery, and was witnessed by a large concourse of people who met to pay their last respects to one whom they had admired in life and mourned in death. The sympathy of the entire community goes out to the aged widow, the family, and relatives in this their time of sorrow and loneliness.

MRS. ALICE GILLESPIE.

The death occurred on Wednesday evening at the home of her brother in South Monaghan, of Mrs. Alice Gillespie, of Keene, in her 82nd year. She is survived by one sister, Mrs. Nevins, of Westwood, and one brother, George Wood, of South Monaghan.

The funeral takes place on Friday at one p.m. to the Presbyterian church, Keene, to Keene cemetery, for burial.

DR. R. C. OGILVIE.

TORONTO, Aug. 2.—A veteran of the Fenian Raids and the first Northwest Rebellion, Dr. R. C. Ogilvie, formerly of Campbellford, Ont., died after a long illness in Superior, Wis., on Tuesday, July 31.

Born in 1848, the "Annus Mirabolius" of the historians, he was one of the early graduates of the faculty of medicine at the University of Toronto. After practicing for some time in Fort Hope, Mich., he retired from his profession and entered the lumber business in the west. At the time of his death he was one of the directors of the First National Bank in Superior, Wis.

He is survived by three daughters: Mrs. Ogilvie Dowsley, of Toronto; Mrs. Stanbury, of Superior, and Mrs. Vrooman, of Detroit. Col. G. Hunter Ogilvie, sergeant-at-arms in the Provincial Parliament Buildings of Ontario, is a brother of the deceased.

Wedding Bells

STEVENSON—ALLEN.

Carman United Church, Pauline Avenue, Toronto, was the scene of a very pretty wedding on Wednesday, June 6, a 7 p.m. when Gertrude Amelia, elder daughter of Mrs. Susan Smith of Peterborough became the bride of Harry Stevenson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Stevenson of Bangor, Ireland. The bride who was given in marriage by her brother wore a smart tailored suit of French blue, with large picture hat, blonde shoes and stockings and beige fox scarf. Miss Minnie Stevenson, sister of the groom, acted as bridesmaid, while Mr. Bert Allen, brother of the bride was best man. After the ceremony a buffet luncheon was served at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bert Allen, Lansdowne Avenue, Toronto. Later in the evening the happy couple left for a short honeymoon to be spent at Georgian Bay. On their return they will reside in Toronto.

MARMORA, Aug. 2.—At St. Paul's Church on Wednesday morning, the Rector being the officiating clergyman, the wedding was solemnized of Carrie, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Jones, of Marmora Township, to George Winifred, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Russel Fox, of Malone.

The bride was becomingly gowned in pale green georgette and wore hat to match. She was attended by Miss Noreen Jones, who wore pale yellow georgette with hat to match. Mr. Hugh Jones, brother of the bride acted as best man. After the ceremony the bridal couple left for Niagara Falls, N. Y., where they will spend their honeymoon. Upon their return they will reside at Malone.

SWEETNAM—WHITTINGTON

SOUTH MONAGHAN, August 2.—On Saturday afternoon, July 28, at 2 o'clock, a pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Whittington when their only daughter, Mary Constance, was united in matrimony to Herbert C. Sweetnam of Matheson, Ontario, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. Sweetnam, of Trenton. The ceremony which took place under an arch on the lawn, was conducted by the Rev. E. Swayne, pastor of the Benafort United Church.

The bride, who was given away by her father, looked charming in a frock of white crepe-de-chine and carried a beautiful bouquet of butterfly roses and lily of the valley. After the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served to the guests who included only the immediate relatives and friends of the bride and groom. The happy couple left later on a motor trip to Cleveland, Ohio, the bride travelling in a pine-needle green ensemble with matching hat and shoes. On their return they will reside in Matheson.

THE CANAL DEPUTATION.

The Examiner is glad to learn that a deputation representative of the municipalities along the route of the Trent Waterway is to wait upon the Minister of Railways and Canals in the near future to impress upon Hon. Mr. Dunning the necessity for an early completion of the canal.

It is unfortunate that the Minister could not find the time to make a tour of the waterway and see its beauties for himself.

The charming vistas that unfold on every mile of the journey from Lake Ontario to Georgian Bay would have made a deeper impression than motion pictures or the eloquence of spokesmen.

The Minister's visit is, however, impossible, and it will be the task of the deputation to make him realize the importance and value of the waterway, its possibilities from a tourist viewpoint, its power development, and the hope that it affords of proving of some considerable importance commercially.

The Trent municipalities must make themselves heard; they have a worthy cause and should state their case with enthusiasm and confidence.

A CHANCE FOR IMPROVEMENT.

A former resident of Peterborough at present visiting here contributes a valuable service in calling attention to the lack of sanitary conveniences at Inverlea Park.

This beautiful spot, frequented by hundreds of citizens all summer and a favorite with visitors to the city, is certainly deserving of better treatment in this respect.

The sanitary conditions there are such as would bring a private citizen under fire from the Board of Health were he to allow such a nuisance to develop on his own property, and it is an indictment of the city's attitude to such questions that in a popular public park such indifference should be displayed to a condition that cannot fail to give visitors a poor opinion of the cleanliness of this community.

Only a few days ago The Examiner quoted many expressions of approval from tourists in regard to the general cleanliness of the camp at the Exhibition Grounds.

So long as visitors confine their inspection to that point we have nothing to lose, but it is to be feared that a visit to other parks would create an entirely different impression.

A CHALLENGE TO THE COMMUNITY.

The call to citizens of Peterborough and of Peterborough County to raise the balance required to erect the local war memorial is a challenge that cannot be allowed to go unanswered.

The need of a visible mark of the community's grateful remembrance of the men from this city and county who went bravely forth in answer to the Empire's call and gave their lives for their homeland is surely recognized on every hand, and citizens generally will doubtless welcome the present opportunity of having some share in the erection of a fitting memorial.

Only a small portion of the money required has yet to be collected, and the campaign now to be launched should quickly secure the funds required to meet the cost involved.

Many communities in Canada have already erected memorials to their war dead, and it is a source of satisfaction to local citizens to feel that in a short time Peterborough's tribute to the memory of the unreturning brave will be on view.

It should provide equal gratification to know that every body can participate in meeting the cost of the beautiful memorial that will testify to all who pass that Peterborough City and County has not forgotten.

AUTOMOBILE STATISTICS FOR CANADA.

May production of automobiles in Canada established a record when 33,942 cars were produced. This output exceeded April production by 40 per cent. and 32 per cent. greater than the previous high total of 25,708 cars recorded in May of last year. The monthly output of cars for each of the past four years has reached a peak in the month of May; in 1926 the May total numbered 24,934 and in 1925 the corresponding total was 20,139 cars.

Output of all types of cars advanced over last month's output. Closed passenger car models amounted to 23,211, open passenger cars 5,020, trucks 559, taxicabs and buses 37.

8,126 cars were imported into Canada during the month of May; this was an increase of 58 per cent. over the imports of 5,150 cars in April. Exports of cars from Canadian ports during the same period advanced 69 per cent. to 6,196 from 3,656.

The number of cars available for distribution in Canada during May totalled 35,434 cars, made up 27,308 cars made for sale in Canada, plus the imports of 8,126 cars. The figure for five months of the year thus computed totalled 96,327 cars.

The cumulative production of automobiles in Canada for five months ending May 31, 1928, was 96,589 cars. This output was 10 per cent. less in number and 3 per cent. lower in value than the figures for the corresponding period of a year ago.

HIGHER STANDARDS.

When one reads of the unemployment conditions in Britain and of the distress prevailing in other European countries, on account of post-war economic problems, one is apt to imagine that the status of the working classes is worse now than it ever has been. But such is not the case. According to a survey conducted by the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, the standard of living among the wage-earners of Europe is higher than before the war, and it is stated that the improvement is due not to the war, but that it came about in spite of it. Among the causes for this betterment are better business methods, increased technical skill, mass production and scientific management. "This is tantamount to saying that labor has been profiting by an increase in the social product—a claim which responsible labor and socialist leaders do not deny, though they stress other factors," comments the New York Times. As for the unemployed, they have their social insurance schemes to fall back upon, and in this respect are certainly better off than formerly. There are, too, the old-age pensions provisions, the sickness and accident bene fits, etc. Apart from these financial advantages, there are improved working conditions, shorter hours, better homes, higher education, and greatly increased facilities for acquiring what used to be classed as luxuries, but are now placed in the category of necessities.

This undoubted improvement makes it hard for the Reds to get converts among level-headed workers. According to Karl Marx, as the more extreme of his followers interpret him, capitalism meant the enslavement of the masses and a progressive deterioration of the status of the workers. But in the sixty years which have elapsed since these theories were first propounded, a reverse process has been in evidence; the workers have immensely improved their position, and it has been found that it is not by the antagonism of labor and capital, but through their co-operation, that mutual interests are served. That is why a spirit of moderation has come into the British Labor party and men like Cook are discredited. It is impossible to create enthusiasm for a system which has been tried and failed. Let Emma Goldman, the Communist, who lived for two years under Communism and found it far worse than any other form of government she had experienced, speak as to the completeness of the failure in Russia. On the other hand, there is the so-called capitalist system, which has led to this acknowledged and very obvious improvement in the condition of all classes of society. That there is room for still further improvement no one denies; the workers are taking the wise course of assisting rather than hindering this work of betterment.—Hamilton Spectator.

IN WHICH "TEX" TOOK THE COUNT.

The technical knockout which old Tom Heeney took at the Yankee Stadium on Thursday night was nothing compared with the quarter-of-a-million thump on the chin sustained by Mr. Tex Rickard. Comparatively speaking, the two gentlemen who mauled each other with padded gloves for 33 minutes weren't seriously hurt. A few seconds after it was all over, and much ado was made over Heeney's blooded nose, the austere litterateur and gentleman of fashion who blushingly wears the crown of the heavyweight championship of the United States stepped up to the radio and spoke in a pleasant voice, as though he had stepped out of a dance hall. And even Heeney, who, if we believed the descriptive writers and the radio men, was as if he had jumped off the tallest peak of the Rockies, was able to come over to the microphone and talk in a pleasant Irish-Anzac voice that betrayed not even hard breathing. Yesterday, we imagine, they were down at their banks, like good business men, checking their increased balances, and feeling that things are for the best in the best of all worlds.

And no wonder. Mr. Heeney, upon whom a lot of sympathy is being wasted, got as much for his blooded nose as Mr. Mackenzie King will get if he remains Prime Minister of Canada for eight years more, and Mr. Tunney received as much as all the Prime Ministers of England have received by way of salary from Lord Salisbury to Mr. Baldwin.

Not so Mr. Tex Rickard. Long before the two distinguished gladiators of Big Business had faced each other in the arena to swap golden punches, Mr. Rickard had taken a count of 250 thousand dollars right in front of his cash register. To-day, Mr. Tom Heeney's hurts must be nothing in comparison with those of Mr. Rickard. There will be balm, perhaps, in a radio settlement—but will it mean a quarter of a million?

It ought to be a popular knockout. And it ought to have a good effect. In the old days, when promoters began staging a fight they went to the back of a saloon. In recent years they have been going to some big bank. Mr. Tom Heeney did not come to America to uphold the honor of New Zealand, any more than Mr. Georges Carpentier came over a few years ago to uphold the glory of France. He came over to add more jam to the bread and butter of Mr. Tex Rickard. Mr. Rickard is a showman, a modern Barnum, one who knows that "a sucker is born every minute," and who has made pugilism a source of Big Business.

But, as Lincoln once said, you can't fool all the people all the time. Even New York, which is more easily taken in than any little Main Street town on the prairies, got wise to the folly of paying out large sums of money to sit half a mile from a ring and watch two blurred figures through a field glass lunge at each other, just so that each of them might get as much for a few minutes' lunging as a bank president gets in a score of years, and that Mr. Tex Rickard might add to his millions. Hence and therefore, that 250 thousand wallop on the chin of Tex.

It is a good thing for sport. Boxing, despite all that is said about it, is not a bad art—even when professionalized. But when it reached the point of commercialized millions, losing all sense of values, and became nothing but a big Ballyhoo to fatten the pockets of a few principals and promoters, it was time for a halt. —Ottawa Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

By way of passing, it might be mentioned that no one wants to see August try to equal July's rain record.

Peterborough's big Exhibition is only some six weeks away. And the small boy points out gloomily that the opening of school is closer than that.

"Kelly's Cruise" will tell Hon. Mr. Dunning something of the beauties of the Trent Waterway, while the deputation that will see him will be able to tell a lot more.

It is obvious that the free distribution of liver promised in Ontario has nothing to do with the restaurants.

The United States in its attitude toward sport adopts its favorite business policy—mass production.

At least the Olympic Games are serving to show that the rumored decadence of the British Empire has been greatly exaggerated.

The Question Box

V. E. H.—Q. Can you give me the height above sea level of the following places: Vancouver and Vernon, B.C.; Saskatoon, Sask., and Peterborough, Ont.

A.—Vancouver is at sea level, but the highest point in the city is 600 feet east of S. Granville street—348 feet above sea level. Vernon, B.C., is 1,255 feet. The altitudes in Peterborough are as follows: C.N.R. station, 649 feet; C.P.R. station, 633 feet, and Little Lake at Navigation Level is 620 feet. Saskatoon, Sask., is 1,574 feet above sea level.

Ulsterite. Q.—What is the relation of Ulster to the Irish Free State?

A.—An Act was passed by the Imperial Parliament in 1920, under which separate Parliaments were set up for "Southern Ireland" (26 counties), and "Northern Ireland" (six counties). The Ulster Unionists accepted, this scheme, and the Northern Parliament was duly elected on May 24, 1921, and opened by the King in person in the following June. The rest of Ireland, however, having proclaimed a Republic in January, 1919, refused to work the Act. In December, 1921, a tracty was signed with the British Government which was embodied in the Irish Free State (Agreement) Act, 1922.

The Treaty contains the following provision: Ireland to have the same constitutional status "in the community of nations known as the British Empire" as the self-governing Dominions, and to be called the Irish Free State. By the treaty "Northern Ireland" was given the option of continuing its separate existence under the Act of 1920, subject to the award of a "Boundary Commission." On December 3, 1925, the British Government and the two Irish Governments signed an agreement by the terms of which the partition of 1920 continues in force as determined in that Act, the Boundary Commissions being discharged from the duty of delivering an award.

A.J.B. Q.—Who is the present King of Rumania? When did he come to the throne?

A.—King Mihai (Michael) is the present King of Rumania. He is the grandson of the late King Ferdinand I. and Queen Marie of Rumania. He became heir-apparent on December 31, 1925, on his father, Prince Carol, renouncing his rightsto the succession. He succeeded his grandfather to the throne on July 20, 1927.

GOD'S MINUTE.

Save with Thy right hand and hear me.—Ps. 60:5.

The All-Wise and Ever-Living Father: We have been called to the consciousness of another day. The sunshine and the flowers and the singing of the birds summon us to worship at Thy footstool. Thou hast placed us in a beautiful world where we are refreshed by the songs of the winged mesengerss and the fragrance of the flowers. "The heavens declare the glory of God, and the firmament showeth forth Thy handiwork." We come, with all our shortcomings and unworthiness. We have sinned against much light, and deserve to be cast from Thy presence, but thank Thee for Thy love and long-suffering toward us. Help us to realize that religion is not a mere cloak that may be worn and laid aside at will. Grant that we may be spared the idle wasting of God's time, but that we may engage in worthy enterprise, with an eye single to Thy glory. Have mercy O Lord, upon those who are rejecting Thy Word, and may the Christ find a place in their hearts and lives, may they come to know Him as their personal Saviour. Let Thy truth, like a sharp two-edged sword, cut its way home to the inner nature, and arouse the slumbering conscience and stir the will to action. Grant Thy forgiveness for our transgressions. Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, Who hath blessed us with all spiritual blessings in heavenly places in Christ, Who rules and reigns forevermore. Amen.

Rev. John J. Ross,
Cincinnati, Ohio.

A Thought

PROGRESS DEPENDS UPON CONSERVATION.

There are many different angles to the ever-pressing problem of the conservation of life insurance policies. But two facts are outstanding. Both facts force us to give great emphasis and effort to conserve our business.

The first fact is of a selfish nature—the money loss sustained by the company and by the agent when a policy lapses.

The second fact is unselfish—and from one point of view calls for more urgent action. The loss which the policyholder, and more particularly the beneficiary, suffers is little short of apalling.

What are we going to do about it?

On the soliciting agent, who has the personal contact so necessary in selling life insurance, lies much of the responsibility of providing a remedy. Starting his client with a clear understanding and appreciation of his contract, and maintaining his first enthusiasm by constant contact are essential.

We must realize that modern, conditions are such that competitors for the dollars of our policyholders are legion. It is not any competition amongst ourselves that we need fear—but competition from other industries.

"He profits most who serves best" must become our watchword.

During the last decade many outstanding advances have been made in the life insurance business.

Our progress for the next ten years depends largely upon our succes sin the conservation of business.

Montreal Grain and Produce

MONTREAL, Aug 2.— (Canadian Press).—The export trade in Canadian grain here yesterday was moderate and sales of wheat and oats were made to the United Kingdom and continent. The domestic trade was also good. An easier feeling again prevailed in the market for Canadian western oats and prices were reduced another cent per bushel.

The foreign and local demand for spring wheat grades of flour showed a slight improvement and a moderate amount of business was done at steady prices. The winter wheat flour market was quiet and values were unchanged.

A feature of the mill-feed trade was the weakness that developed and prices for bran were reduced $2 per ton and shorts declined $4 per ton. Middlings were steady. This was attributed to the break in the United States market and the falling off in the demand. Standard grades of rolled oats were steady with a small trade passing.

A moderate amount of business was done in butter and the undertone to the market was firm. The receipts were 41 packages.

The trade in cheese was inactive owing to the fact that buyers showed little by position to operate the present level of prices. The receipts were 4,397 boxes.

A stronger feeling developed in the egg market and prices for extras were marked up one cent per dozen. The demand continued good. good. The receipts were 1,006 cases.

The bean market was active and firm. New crop were quoted at $2.40 to $2.50 per bushel for car lots to arrive, ex-track, while old grades in car lots sold at $3.90 per bushel.

Chicago Grain

CHICAGO, Aug. 2. — (Canadian Press).—Unexpectedly, corn took the lead in the grain markets yesterday and jumped up 5c a bushel, on top of sensational gains the day before. Relative scantiness of immediate supplies, together with nigh premiums being paid for corn ready to be delivered at once, were incentives to urgent purchasing yesterday on the part of previous speculative sellers, especially traders who have been active in selling corn to be delivered during September. On the other hand, all deliveries of wheat dropped yesterday to a new low price record for the season.

Closing quotations on corn were unsettled, ¾ to 3¾c net higher with wheat 1½c to 1¾c ¾ down, oats varying from a shade decline to ¼c advance, and provisions at 15c setback to a rise of 5.

Eager buying, chiefly for speculators who had changed their minds as to likelihood of corn being plentiful in September, gave impetus to the upward swing of the corn market yesterday and hoisted that delivery at one time as high as $1.00 a bushel. It early became apparent that holders of the corn taken over Tuesday in settlement of July contracts here were in no haste to let go of ownership, and were showing a disposition to profit by the fact that temporarily the bulk of the actual supply of mercantable corn had been thrust into their hands. Meanwhile, contract grades of corn, spot cash delivery bring 8c to 13c a bushel yesterday over the September price.

With Chicago arrivals of corn yesterday totalling only 136 cars and with only 10000 bushels booked yesterday to arrive here, whereas vessel room was being chartered to move corn out of here to Buffalo, offerings of future deliveries dwindled rapidly and the September price kept mounting fast. Current crop estimates which suggested a 1928 corn yield of 3,004,000,000 bushels, an increase of 14,000,000 bushls over what was predicted a month ago, were almost ignored, the greater part of the new crop not promising to be available for commercial use before December, esides, many traders had looked for a larger increase of the estimated production, and were made uneasy by assertions that the present indicated yield per acre, 29 bushels, had been exceeded only 9 times in 62 years, a circumstance held to imply that ideas of 3,000,000,000 bushels yield or upward, are unjustified in mid-season. However, selling to realise profits eased the market somewhat as the day drew to an end.

Wheat owed its weakness largely to the fact that the average of August crop estimates yesterday was for a harvest of 565,000,000 bushels of domestic winter wheat and 285,000,000 bushels of shipping wheat. These figures were much larger than generally expected. Besides Liverpool quotations were lower than due, and the Canadian Prairie provinces were reported as likely to harvest this season 310,000,000 bushels oats followed corn rather than wheat.

Provisions ranged lower, sympathizing with downturns in the value of cotton.

Chicago Cattle

CHICAGO, Aug. 2. — (Canadian Press).—Hogs 12,000. Top $11.60 paid for 180 to 210 pounds.

Butchers, medium to choice, 250 to 350 pounds, $10.80 to $11.50. Packing sows $9.50 to $10.40.

Pigs, medium to choice, 90 to 130 pounds, $9.25 to $10.75.

Cattle, 8,000. Calves, 2,000. Steer trade about steady early; closed weak. Top $16.75. Slaughter classes, good and choice, 1,300 to 1,500 pounds, $14.00 to $16.35. Fed yearlings, good and choice 750 to 950 pounds, $14.00 to $16.60. Heifers, good and choice 850 pounds down, $13.25 to $16.25.

Cows, good and choice, $9.00 to $12.50.

Bulls, good and choice, beef, $9.40 to $10.75. Cutter to medium $7.25 to $9.40. Vealers milk fed, good and choice, $14.50 to $16.75. Stocker and feeder steers, good and choice, all weights, $11.75 to $13.75.

Sheep 12,000. Lambs, good and choice, 92 pounds down, $13.75 to $15.35.

Ewes, medium to choice 150 pounds down, $4.25 to $7.40. Feeder lambs good and choice, $13.25 to $1375.

BUTTER AND EGGS

TORONTO, Aug. 2.—Publication of the storage statement was the outstanding feature of the local wholesale produce market session yesterday. While the figures given were not unexpected they were the subject of much comment among Toronto produce men. The concensus of opinion is that they will tend to strengthen the market and that further increases in prices are not unlikely.

Cheese and butter were both steady at the close.

At Chicago butter ruled steady on top scores, and steady to firm on the medium and lower grades. The centralized car market ruled steady, but trade was quiet.

Canadian egg markets are generally unchanged and firm. The local egg market is firm with extras in demand. Buying prices are unchanged. Wholesalers are selling to retailers at extras 42c, firsts 39c, seconds 31c.

REV. J. O. TOTTEN HAS CHARGE OF SERVICES

Acts as Chairman at Open Air Meeting at Chemong.

SPECIAL SPEAKER.

Regular Monthly Social Held By B.Y.P.U. of Gilmour Church.

(Examiner Correspondence)

CHEMONG, August 2.—The most successful meeting of the series of open air gatherings being held at Chemong Park Pavilion was that of last Sunday evening. A very large number were in attendance, and the Rev. J. O. Totten, of Bridgenorth United Church acted as chairman.

The Rev. W. E. Fuller of New Brunswick, preached from 11 Cor. 12:9: "My grace is sufficient for thee, for my strength is made perfect in weakness." He emphasized the fact that Paul's thorn in the flesh might have been a physical infirmity or an infirmity of temper or the result of sin in his own life. No man can sin without bringing suffering to himself. The answer Paul got is the same as we get when we are suffering from sin; the grace of God is the real antidote to sin.

Mrs. L. Ingram, of Murray Street Baptist Church sang "I Heard the Voice of Jesus Say," which was greatly appreciated, and the Rev. J. H. Sutcliffe and Dr. S. J. Graham sang a duet "Drifting" which created a great impression, a second duet sung by them was also well received.

The congregational singing was hearty, with Miss Mabel Paul at the piano. Next Sunday evening, the Rev. J. H. Dugeon, of St. James United Church will be the speaker and a male quartette is also expected from the same church.

B.Y.P.U. Social.

The B.Y.P.U. of Gilmour Memorial Church held its regular meeting and monthly social on Monday evening when a very hearty game of tennis was indulged in on the church lawn previous to the meeting.

The scriptural lesson was read by Marian Blewett and Leila Sanderson. Readings were given by Miss Phyllis Moore, Helen Milburn and Betty Edgar. Every Day stories were read by Cora Grant, Harry Blewett, Clarence Mann, Kenneth Mahood and Reg. McMullen.

The topic, "Appreciating our Immigrant Neighbors," was taken by Jean Scott, and she stated that we Canadians are sometimes guilty of looking down on people who come from other lands and speak a different language from ourselves. We have to remember in many ways they are our superiors, the greatest artists and musicians are generally of foreign birth, we as Christians should treat them as brothers in Christ. The Rev. W. S. Edgar gave a short talk on the topic, after which games and refreshments followed.

Trent River

(Examiner Correspondence)

TRENT RIVER, August 2.—Mr. and Mrs. John Ruttan are the recipients of a handsome wedding gift from Dr. and Mrs. McCoy and Mr. and Mrs. Knippenburg and daughter, Ruth, of Cleveland, Ohio—an English ivory tea set decorated with little trails of roses of gold and blue. These tourists from Cleveland have purchased a resort north of Marmora, Mr. Ruttan having put the deal through.

The yacht "Fratony" passed through on Tuesday morning en route up the canal.

Mr. and Mrs. John L. Nichol, of Galt, are at "Bonnie Bank" for August.

The Misses Elva and Inez McLaughlin of Toronto are holidaying with their mother.

Everything is well under way for the annual Regatta to be held on Wednesday, August 8.

Mr. and Mrs. Percy Patterson, Mr. Bruce Clark, of Detroit, and Mr. Harry Longmuir, of Windsor, spent last week-end with Mr. and Mrs. James Longmuir and family, Trent River road.

Miss Ethel Longmuir left on Tuesday to spend a short time with relatives in Detroit and Windsor.

Mrs. F. Goldsmith and daughter, Edith Joy, of New York, are guests of Mr. and Mrs. James Longmuir.

CRASH ENDS FLIGHT

The above illustration shows Bert Hassell, pilot, of Rockford, Ill., right, and Parker D. Cramer, his navigator, left, with their monoplane, Greater Rockford, rear, who met disaster just after dawn and soon after the take-off on the first leg of their flight to Stockholm, Sweden. It was intended to fly to Mount Evans, Greenland, and after refuelling to continue the trip to Sweden. Just twenty minutes after the machine made a beautiful start, soggy air was encountered the pilot was unable to make the plane rise high enough to clear the hills beyond Rock river. Both aviators escaped uninjured. Hassell later announced he would abandon any further attempts to make a one-stop flight to Sweden.

WOMAN WALKS FROM SERVICE

Crippled For Two Years, Woodstock Invalid is Healed at Revival.

ASCRIBES IT TO FAITH.

WOODSTOCK, Aug. 2.—Confined to bed or compelled to use a wheel chair for two years as the result of a stroke, a Woodstock woman on Tuesday night astounded the audience at an evangelistic meeting by getting up out of her wheel chair, and, with a little assistance, walking several steps. This occurred at a meeting conducted by Rev. W. Raymond Watson and his wife, who are on a revival mission here as leaders of the Pentecostal Church. The Rev. Mr. Watson points to this recovery as proof that healing through faith is as possible to-day as it was at the time of Christ.

Interviewed yesterday, the woman, who is a well-known citizen of Woodstock, said: "I ascribe it simply to faith." She affirmed that she had been deprived of the use of her legs two years ago by a stroke, and had lost faith in medicines after two years of treatment without success. She had been attending the meetings in the revival tent, and, after Tuesday's sermon by Mrs. Watson, she was annointed with oil, and with the help of the evangelist, she was able to walk for the first time since her illness.

"Although I cannot walk properly alone," she said, "I expect that I will be able to do so eventually, through the Lord's help. I certainly feel much better to-day than I have done since my illness, and can now look forward to my ultimate recovery."

Rev. Mr. Watson, who claims to be a converted bank bandit, has been conducting evangelistic meetings in a tent here for the past six or seven weeks. No other cases of healing have been reported, and it was only yesterday morning, through the evangelist himself, that the particular cure of the Woodstock woman at Tuesday night's meeting was made known. The mission is not advertised as a healing mission.

OPEN WARFARE ALONG BORDER

Coastguard Commander at Buffalo Ready To Fight Rum Fleet.

RUNNERS WELL ARMED.

BUFFALO, Aug. 2 (Canadian Press).—The possibility o fopen warfare against the rum runners in the Niagara River was promised to-day in the announcement by Lieut. Martin W. Rasmussen, District Coastguard Commander, that twenty-seven liquor laden boats were hovering along the Canadian shore near Bridgeburg, Ontario, waiting to dash across the river.

"I have ordered all the ships that I can spare from other duties to cover the rum carriers," Rasmussen said, "and I propose to fight it out with them. Five ships of the coastguard covering boats have anchored on the American side, where they will remain day and night. I don't believe the rum fleet can break through." His reports, the Lieutenant said, showed that the rum craft were armed with cannons, machine guns, rifles, and

Old U.S. Coins Circulate Here

A few old American three cent pieces are being circulated in this city this year. These coins are made of nickel and resemble the American ten cent piece. They are of old coinage and have the Roman Number III. on one side, while on the other is the head of the Statue of Liberty of the United States, with the date it was minted. In several cases it has been found that these have been passed for ten cent pieces.

ROADSTER WRECKED ON LAKEFIELD ROAD

Car Crashes Into Stump While Travelling at High Speed.

A very badly damaged roadster was brought into Duffus' garage yesterday afternoon from the Lakefield road. The windshield was shattered, the left door was broken off, the bumper was broken off, the hood was thrown out of shape, the body torn away from the frame in parts, and the frame and springs were badly twisted. Mechanics state that there is not much use in trying to repair it.

From all appearances the car seems to have been travelling at a very fast rate of speed, and those who went out after it said that it moved a big stump several feet.

The car was owned by Frank McClure. The story that was told to The Examiner was: "An American car had passed the roadster, which attempted to overtake it and in turning out took to the ditch and then swerved to the other side of the road, striking the stump before halting."

There were four occupants in the car. One was hurled through the windshield but escaped injury. The ladies who were also in the car were thrown out and were badly shaken up. There is an unconfirmed report that they were knocked unconscious for a short time. The license number of the car 362-898.

MRS. W. S. FIELDING DIES AT OTTAWA

Wife of Former Minister of Finance Dies in 80th Year.

OTTAWA, Aug. 2. — (Canadian Press.)—Mrs. Hester Fielding, wife of Right Hon. W. S. Fielding, former Minister of Finance, one of the Capitol's most distinguished women in social and philanthropic circles, died at the family residence last night. She had been failing in health for nearly four years, and had been almost entirely confined to her home throughout that period. The noted lady was soon to have celebrated her eightieth birthday.

Since Mr. Fielding first came to Ottawa as Finance Minister in the Laurier Government of 1896 Mrs. Fielding had been closely identified with the social life of this city. Throughout the long and outstanding career of her husband Mrs. Fielding proved a real helpmate in the arduous duties which they were both called upon to meet in public life. She accompanied Mr. Fielding on several trips to Great Britain for Governmental purposes, and on one of these visits she was received at the court of King Edward VII.

Mrs. Fielding was born at St. John, N.B., the daughter of Thomas A. Rankine. She was married to Mr. Fielding on Sept. 7, 1876. Following her marriage she lived in Halifax, where her husband was the managing editor of The Halifax Chronicle, until 1884, and later Premier and Provincial Secretary of Nova Scotia from 1884 until coming to Ottawa in 1896.

Upon coming to Ottawa in the first year in the Laurier Administration, Mr. and Mrs. Fielding soon obtained a prominent place in the social life of the city. Mr. Fielding brought to her position, as wife of one of Canada's greatest statesmen, a dignity and poise which enabled her to fill graciously her place in Parliamentary circles. Deeply interested in charitable endeavors, also, she at all times sought to alleviate the distress of others.

Mr. and Mrs. Fielding had lived in Ottawa for all of the 32 years of Mr. Fielding's public life, except for a short period when he was in Montreal as editor of The Journal of Commerce.

In addition to Mr. Fielding, she is survived by one son, Harry, and three daughters, Misses Florence and Sillah Fielding and Mrs. Hodgins, wife of Major C. W. F. Hodgins, of Ottawa. Another daughter, Mrs. J. A. Cameron, of Ottawa, died two years ago.

The funeral will be held in Ottawa to-morrow afternoon, it was announced at noon to-day. Interment will take place in Beechwood Cemetery here.

Sword Swallowers 'Faded' By Man Who Eats Needles and Razor Blades

FORT WILLIAM, Aug. 2. — (Special)—Joseph Ralph McKinstry, 28, of Hull, Que., is no ordinary mortal. A former circus side show performer, he claims to possess about the toughest digestive organs in the [illegible]. Sword swallowers, fire eaters, and billy goats fade from the picture as pickers before this man with the super stomach. Gramaphone needles, tacks, pins, and razor blades he munches at will and gulps down with fine relish.

His digestive proclivities probably would have been unknown in Fort William and gone unadmired has Joseph not tried to make a clothing firm here swallow a forged cheque. He beat it from town but was arrested at Hull and brought back here for trial.

While waiting to appear before Magistrate Palling to-day, Joseph made know his claims to fame, and with several witnesses looking on, coolly tossed a couple of paper clips down his gullet. A small pin followed. Joseph wanted some one to produce a razor blade, his star act, but no old blade could be found. Joe compromised with a gramaphone needle, it is reported. Police halted the performance, fearing the prisoner would suffer stomach pains before he went up for a hearing. Others near by kept their hands on their fountain pens and watches.

"I'll never go hungry," Joe laughed as he went to the prisoner's stand to ask for trial before a higher court.

Small Shot Lodges in Face—Rushed To Tweed For Treatment.

ONE EYE BLINDED.

KINGSTON, Aug. 2.—Evon Yanch, 10-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Yanch, of Flinton, was accidentally shot between the eyes by a student at her father's store on Tuesday. The student did not know the gun was loaded and a small shot went through a screen hitting the young girl, who was rushed to Tweed for medical attention. It is feared the sight on an eye is gone.

THREE ARRESTED AS BANK BANDITS

Suspects Held In North Dakota For Winnipeg Police.

GRAND FORKS, North Dakota, Aug. 2.—(Canadian Press.)— Three men suspected of being implicated in the $25,000 robbery of bank messengers in Winnipeg last Monday, were arrested to-day and lodged in jail here pending the arrival of Canadian or immigration authorities who will attempt to identify them. Nelson county officials seized the men on William McMahon's farm, about four miles south-west of Oro.

GERMAN GIRL SETS RECORD

Fraulein Radke Wins 800 Metre Final, Breaking Own World's Record.

FINN WINS 1500.

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 2.—(Canadian Press).—Harry Larva of Finland won the 1,500 metre championship, the first final on to-day's program at the Olympic games, by three yards from Julis Ladoumegue, of France. Larva's victory reassured the supremacy of the Fins at this distance, as this championship was one of the four won by Paavo Nurmi in 1924.

The second championship of the day went to Germany, Fraulein Radke winning the women's 800 metre final. She shattered her own reminine world's record by more than seven seconds, being timed at two minutes, 16.4-5 seconds.

The Canadian 400-metre runners made a fine showing in the first and second trials of the event at the Olympic Games to-day, and as a result three Canadians will be among the twelve runners in the semi-finals to-morrow. They are: Phil Edwards, Hamilton, James Ball, Winnipeg, and W. A. Wilson, Montreal.

Edwards easily won both his first and second trials, Ball won a first and a second, and Wilson two seconds. F. W. McBeth was eliminated in the second trials.

Canada's hopes in the 800 metres final for women, Jean Thompson, of Penetang, and Fanny Rosenfeld, Toronto, finished fourth and fifth respectively in the race in which the first six finishers all broke the existing records at the Olympic Stadium to-day.

MARLINGTON VS. STONE — By FANNIE HURST

The World's Highest Paid Short Story Writer

Author of "Humoresque", "A President Is Born"

© McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

There was life and warmth and companionship at the Stones'—something in the spectacle of this struggling poverty-drenched group, living there in warmth and congeniality and affection, to touch the heart.

AROUND the lives of Mrs. Stone and Mrs. Marlington there had always hung a similarity. They had been girlhood chums, they had attended the same high school, they had married local youths within eight months of one another, they had set up housekeeping on the same street of two-family bungalows; their sons had been born within three weeks of each other and they had been widowed the same year.

This rather extraordinary coincidence of circumstances which made their lives run parallel, tended of course, to draw them more closely together.

Within two years after their respective husbands' deaths and while their sons were still in rompers, they not only were living on the same street, but were occupying each a half of the two-family bungalow. Mrs. Stone, aided and abetted by the tiny maintenance of the income from her husband's few thousand dollars life insurance, resumed her trade as milliner, setting up a little shop in the front parlor of her home and mounting a few hats on stands in the window.

Mrs. Marlington, whose husabnd had left her a small, thriving stationery and art-calendar shop on the main street, continued the business, so that practically, it might be said that her son grew up under the supervision of Mrs. Stone, who was at home all day and therefore able to care for little Ferdinand Marlington, as well as for her own son Bob.

They were a nice pair of youngsters, totally different in temperament, appearance and character. It early began to dawn upon Mrs. Stone, thrown as she was in close contact with the two youngsters, that the first marked difference in hers and Mrs. Marlington's life was asserting itself in the natures of their offspring.

The sons of the two women were destined for anything but parallel lives.

IT was many a year before Mrs. Stone could bring herself to admit, even to herself, that where her boy Bob was loveable and healthily-normal, Anne Marlington's boy, Ferdinand, was brilliant, stormy and almost surely marked for distinction of some sort—whether for better or for worse, remained to be seen.

Of the two women, Anne Marlington had a far greater problem. Here was a nervous, precocious temperament to deal with. From the very start, Ferdinand proved out of tune with his environment. Rebellious under the cut-and-dried tutelage of the small town school system.

At nine years of age, he was taken from room to room of the school house as a child prodigy who could do lightning arithmetic of the highest intricacy in his head without even resorting to the blackboard. An extraordinary event in the form of this precocious boy had come into the life of Anne Marlington. A load seemed to lie at the heart of Mrs. Stone. While she loved little Bob, her own life, in comparison with Mrs. Marlington's, seemed a lustreless affair as she looked into the future.

Bob was even a little backward in his studies, and as Ferdinand grew into a tall and fierce young manhood, her own boy took on a short, round stature that was eventually to make a chubby, rotund man of him.

It was in vain that Mrs. Stone pictured some sudden quirk of circumstances that would throw the same promise of glamor over her own and her boy's life that seemed to hover so inevitably over Mrs. Marlington's.

Nothing like that happened. The two boys marched through their own types of manhood. At twenty-one, Bob was clerking in a drug-store. At twenty-one, Ferdinand was the author of a first novel that had already set the critics agog and taken the country by storm. Ferdinand's was one of those stars that seemed to shine brilliantly and securely from the first. His first three books established him firmly in American letters.

He married the daughter of the governor of the State, and while his eldest children, twins, were still babies, built himself a home on the coral reefs of Bermuda, where he lived and wrote eight months of the year.

His was a life marked for brilliance, accomplishment and success.

Bob Stone married a girl named Minna Mertz, whose father owned the drug-store where he had first clerked. Bob had a drug-store of his own now, on the corner of the little residential street where he shared the other half of the two-family bungalow that had formerly been occupied by the Marlingtons, so that his mother was his next-door neighbor, so to speak.

Minna, a big, good-looking girl of no particular pretense or accomplishment, had her four babies in healthy sequence. They were normal enough youngsters, taking after one or the other of their parents.

It kept Mrs. Stone's hands full enough, what with her own millinery business, her prolific next-door neighbor of a daughter-in-law, and relieving Bob at the drug-store when clerks failed to materialize or a holiday rush was on.

YES, indeed, the lives of Mrs. Stone and Mrs. Marlington had finally flown asunder. Mrs. Marlington now occupied a suite in the town's newest family-hotel. Cut flowers and her son's books were on her table. There were rose, silk-shaded lights, brocaded walls and Mrs. Marlington's own handsome furniture in the rooms. Once a year, she spent two weeks with the Ferdinand Marlingtons in Bermuda. Once she had joined the Marlingtons in New York for the premiers of one of Ferdinand's plays which opened brilliantly and ran through two seasons.

Of course, it inevitably mattered a little in the relationships of the two women. Their worlds had veered sharply at different angles. Mrs. Marlington, as the mother of an important novelist, had entree to new circles about which as girls, she and Mrs. Stone had known practically nothing. The annual visits of Mrs. Marlington to Bermuda gave her somewhat of a cosmopolitan flavor in her community.

More and more, Mrs. Stone drew within herself where her friend was concerned and as the demands of her busy life imposed more and more upon her leisure. Minna was a sturdy, willing woman. But the four babies on the slender income of the drug store made life a pretty serious business.

It helped that Mrs. Stone and her daughter-in-law were so congenial. All day, between their respective back-doors one or the other of them was fluttering with a hot apple pie under a snowy bit of napkin, a cutting from a rubber-plant, a bowl of barley soup that Mrs. Stone still delighted in making for Bob, or the stocky figure of Minna running over to sew up a pair of rompers for one of the youngsters on her mother-in-law's sewing machine.

Evenings, the group of them usually met in Bob's living-room, where they listened to his home-made radio and the children scrambled over their parents and grandmother until long after the hour that well-regulated children such as Ferdinand Marlington's, for instance, were in bed.

IT was a work-a-day little household. At thirty-five, Bob was already bald and Minna a little gray at the temples. There were the worries of doctors' bills, life insurance, drug-store clerks, babies' shoes, croup, wash-day, new linoleum, expensive school books, teething, millinery business, Bob's pleurisy, tonsil operations to be met. At fifty, Mrs. Stone looked ten years Mrs. Marlington's senior.

It was about this time, it must be admitted, after years of secret and hurting yearning on the part of Mrs. Stone, that these two women began to drift together again. The Ferdinand Marlingtons had moved bag and baggage, children and governesses, golf clubs, bull dogs and motor cars to the Riviera. The twins were at school in Switzerland. It was well known about town that Mrs. Marlington and her daughter-in-law did not quite "get on."

Mrs. Marlington was lonely. The hotel suite, even with the rose-shaded lights, could be rather stark throughout the long evenings if you shared it only with memories.

There was life and warmth and companionship at the Stones'. The merry, disordered living-room, the good-natured, affectionate way Bob had of teasing his mother, the fine congeniality of Mrs. Stone and her daughter-in-law . . . something in the spectacle of this struggling, poverty-drenched little group, living there together in warmth and congeniality and affection was a stab at the heart of Mrs. Marlington.

AFTER a while, it dawned upon the Stones that it would be a kindness to admit her to their busy little circle. It was Minna who first instructed her children to call her "Auntie".

That was the night Mrs. Marlington frankly let her head fall on her arms in the Stone living-room and wept out her confession of loneliness.

"Auntie" is part of the Stone menage now. She shares the millinery half of the two-family bungalow with Mrs. Stone.

All day long, she flashes in and out of the back doors of the households, sometimes with a hot apple pie under a snowy bit of napkin or a cut from a rubber-plant, or a pair of rompers for one of the youngsters which she stitches on the sewing machine.

SPOILT MUSIC

THE STORY THUS FAR: JENNIFER FRY is saved from drowning by NICHOLAS GAUNT, wealthy young man-about-town. Later he takes her to tea and asks to call, but she refuses because she is ashamed of her humble surroundings. They continue their friendship and Jennifer comes to love Nicholas, but he is suddenly called abroad by his mother's illness. During his absence Jennifer's father dies. She reads of his engagement in the paper, and stands in the crowd to see him and his bride come from the church after the wedding. Her mother dies. Five years later she meets Nicholas again. He decides to divorce his wife, Lady Edith. But just then Lady Edith becomes ill. The doctors promise her only a year of life and she makes Gaunt promise not to see Jennifer for that Year. Jennifer is angry and decides to be as gay as she can on a legacy of eight thousand pounds left her by an uncle. She gives up her job and goes to work to have a good time. She meets DOLORES and BUDDY, two women who live in the flat above her new dwelling place. Through them she meets CHESNEY, who quarrels about her with Buddy and proposes to Jennifer. Jennifer asks him to wait for her answer. They meet Gaunt and his wife at a night club. Jennifer, tired and unhappy, promises to marry Chesney. Buddy, when she hears of the engagement, tries to kill herself. Lady Gaunt invites Chesney and Jennifer to dinner. Gaunt tells Jennifer she shall never marry Chesney.

CHAPTER XXXI

A Verse from Swinburne.

Dolores and Buddy left London on the Thursday morning.

Dolores ran in to Jennifer for a moment to say goodbye.

"You'd better not come up, or see us off," she said apologetically. "It will only upset Buddy. Don't think me unkind."

Jennifer blushed.

"Of course not! I understand perfectly."

From her window she watched them drive away with an absurd quantity of luggage on top of the car, and she caught a glimpse of Buddy's golden head as the taxicab turned the corner.

It seemed lonely when they had gone. Although lately she had not seen quite so much of them, the knowledge that the flat upstairs was empty accentuated their loss.

Nicodemus miaowed pietously for half a day, then resigned himself to his fate and went to sleep in Jennifer's favorite chair.

She watched him with envious eyes. It would be nice if people could reconcile themselves to the inevitable and forget so easily, she thought, and her heart was sad. She dined that night with Chesney and his sister.

"I like you. We're going to be friends," Dolly Harrup said by way of greeting. "I've asked two people to meet you. William Winter and Joey Rudyard. They're nothing to do with one another, though she, at least, wishes they were Do you know them?"

"No."

"You'll like them," Dolly assured her. "William's a confirmed bachelor." She lowered her voice discreetly. "He had an affair; I don't quite know what, but anyway she died, or was killed in an accident, I forget which. Anyway, he's perfectly charming to all women, but if you expect to be taken seriously he's a forlorn hope. Joey's keen at the moment, but I know she's wasting her time."

"Is Joey a woman?" Jennifer asked.

Dolly Harrup laughed.

"I believe she is officially, though to judge by her hair and her figure she might be a boy. Of course she's frightfully smart, and of course she's divorced."

"And incidentally she's Edith Gaunt's greatest friend," Chesney added.

"Oh!" Jennifer caught her breath on a little shivering sigh. She knew now where she had heard the name of Joey Rudyard before, and her thoughts went back to Mrs. Jilly's little cottage at Porth, and to the morning when Gaunt had brought her the wire from Italy:

"For God's sake come. Edith dying. —Joey."

And after all this time they were to meet. She glanced apprehensively across the big restaurant (Dolly always entertained in restaurants) to the table where the other guests awaited them.

A broad-shouldered man with iron-grey hair was listening abstractedly to the running conversation of the woman beside him.

Yes, she was very much like a boy, Jennifer admitted, as she looked at Joey's slender figure and smartly cropped head. Rather the same type as poor little Buddy, only older and more worldly-wise.

Mrs. Harrup introduced them.

"Joey, this is Jennifer, the heroine who is to marry my brother. Jennifer, may I introduce Mr. Winter?"

At dinner Jennifer found herself next to Winter.

He was a man whose age it was difficult to determine in spite of his grey hair and rather hard face. But he had a deep, pleasant voice, and brown eyes which softened and melted when he spoke, giving him a most uncommon charm.

He talked well and interestingly, and Jennifer had but little time to spare for Joey, though her shrill insistent voice was never still. She was discussing the modern husband.

"What is your opinion of 'husbands,' Miss Fry?" Winter asked Jennifer. Jennifer started and shook her head.

"I notice that you take no part in this very edifying conversation," he added dryly.

"I'm not married, you see," she answered hurriedly. "I've no experience to go by." She momentarily forgot what Dolly Harrup had told her of this man and asked thoughtlessly: "Are you married?"

He did not answer at once; then he said quietly:

"I am one of those who, through my own fault, missed the road to happiness years ago, Miss Fry."

She looked at him with renewed interest, struck by the infinite sadness of his eyes.

Joey had overheard what he said and caught his word up sharply.

"Rubbish! There's no such road!" she declared. "It's all just humbug. We all imagine that the road we didn't take is the one we ought to have taken, and yet if we could go back and try again we should find that it was only another wrong turning after all." She looked at Winter with an angry, challenging expression in her china-blue eyes, as if his words had hurt her.

"Do you agree with that, Mr. Winter?" Jennifer asked.

He shook his head, smiling gravely.

"I'm afraid I disagree with most of the noble sentiments expressed by our hostess and her friends," he said. There was a covert sneer in his voice, but he lowered it so that only Jennifer could hear. "If you are a wise woman, you will not allow yourself to agree with them, either."

Jennifer sighed.

"It is so hard to understand all the different people one meets with in life," she said.

"And so difficult to understand life itself," he corrected her gently.

His brown eyes met her own, quietly considering her, then he asked: "Do you read Swinburne, Miss Fry?"

"No. Why?"

"Because there is a verse in one of his poems which seems to explain, and yet to leave unexplained, why so many of us miss that road I spoke about to you just now. Would you like to hear it?"

"Please."

They were talking in undertones, and a shrill argument between Joey and Dolly Harrup successfully drowned Winter's voice as he quoted the verse to Jennifer:

"It may be all my love went wrong:
A scribe's work, writ awry and blurred,
Scrawled after the blind evensong,
Spoilt music and no perfect word."

There was a little silence, then Jennifer said wistfully: "Poor scribe! How could he help it?"

There was a faint mistiness as of tears before her eyes.

Spoilt music! How exactly that seemed to describe her love for Gaunt and his for her.

They had begun so well, and in such perfect harmony, and now it had become nothing but a jangled out-of-tune discord.

Winter shrugged his shoulders.

"Poor scribe indeed!" he echoed. "How could he help it? That's where the tragedy comes in."

When dinner was over they went downstairs to dance.

Dolly Harrup caught Jennifer's arm.

"Malcolm was looking as black as a thunder-cloud all the time we were feeding," she said with a chuckle.

LYRICS OF LIFE

THE PROMISED ROSE

In the pale beauty of a rose
Are gathered all a winter's snows,
And many a rose of joy has blown
From wintry griefs that I have known.
The blossom of the purest worth
Arises from the darkest earth,
And so will many a blessing flow'r
Out of what seemed our darkest hour.

In every grief there must be gain,
As God brings roses from the rain,
And even winter with its sting
Holds in its heart the seeds of spring;
And, if I cannot find again
Life's solace in the books of men,
I see the promise of a rose
Even amid the winter's snows.

UNCLE WIGGILY

By HOWARD R. GARIS

Bed-time Story

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

UNCLE WIGGILY AND THE EGG BEATER

Once upon a time, as Uncle Wiggily was hopping away from his hollow stump bungalow to go look for adventures, the old rabbit gentleman heard some voices talking down in the deep grass near a fence post.

"Pooh! You don't know what fun is!" said one voice.

"Well, anyhow, we're having a good time here, jumping around in the weeds," said another voice.

"That isn't any fun!" went on the one who had spoken first. "You should see me ride on the merry go 'round! That's what I call fun!"

There was a buzz of wings and something flew through the air so fast that it nearly bumped Uncle Wiggily on his pink, twinkling nose.

"My goodness!" exclaimed the surprised Mr. Longears. "What was that?"

"That was Guzzie," answered one of the voices which had been talking down in the deep grass.

"And he's always saying we don't know how to have fun," went on another voice that had not yet spoken.

"Hello! Who are you?" asked Uncle Wiggily. Looking down he saw two little July Bugs, who are cousins to the June Bugs.

"I am Wuzzie and this is mys ister Fuzzie," spoke the boy July Bug. "That was our big brother Guzzie who flew away and nearly banged you in the nose."

"Why does Guzzie say you two don't know how to have fun?" asked Uncle Wiggily, sitting down on a stone in the grass. "What the matter with Guzzie?"

"Oh, he's stuck up and proud, ever since he went to the seashore and rode on a merry go 'round," answered Fuzzie.

"He won't even tell us what a merry go 'round is," went on Wuzzie. "He says it's wonderful, and we'd like to ride on one, but how can we?"

"I don't know," answered Uncle Wiggily. "If I had a merry go 'round, my dear Wuzzie and Fuzzie, I'd let you ride on it. But I haven't any."

"Then I guess we'll have to keep on crawling around in the grass," sadly spoke Wuzzie.

Uncle Wiggily hopped along a little distance and then, all of a sudden, his pink nose began to twinkle very fast, like a star on a frosty night and he cried:

"I have it!"

"What! Have you a merry go 'round?" asked Wuzzie and Fuzzie. "I know where to get you one!" said the rabbit gentleman, and away he hopped, back to his hollow stump bungalow.

There Nurse Jane Fussy Wuzzy had just finished making a chocolate cake, and the egg beater was on the table.

"May I take this?" asked the rabbit gentleman, "I mean may I borrow your egg beater for a little while, Nurse Jane?"

"What are you going to do with it?" asked the muskrat lady housekeeper. "Are you going to beat a carpet?"

"No, I am going to give Wuzzie and Fuzzie a ride on a merry go 'round," answered Mr. Longears.

"Who ever heard of an egg beater being such a thing!" squeaked Nurse Jane. But a little later, when she went out in the tall grass, she saw Uncle Wiggily turning the handle of the egg beater, while Wuzzie and Fuzzie, the two July Bugs, sat on the whirling, shining part and around they were whizzed as fast as anything.

"Oh, this is a lovely merry go 'round!" cried the bugs. And Uncle Wiggily gave them egg beater rides until they were quite dizzy and had to crawl down and rest on the fence post.

That night, after many rides for which the July Bugs thanked the bunny gentleman—that night when Guzzie boastfully said:

"You don't know what fun is until you ride on a merry go 'round!"

Why Wuzzie and Fuzzie just up and answered him:

"We have ridden on an egg beater merry go 'round! So there!"

How Mr. Longears laughed when he heard that! So everything came out all right.

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY MOST OF US ARE BETTER FOLLOWERS THAN LEADERS.

(By Mehran K. Thomson, Ph. D.)

Leadership is a rare gift. There are only a few real leaders in any community. Hence the great majority must necessari y be followers. Furthermore, the demand for followers is greater than for leaders. Obviously the cannot be as many leaders as followers.

Most of us enjoy being followers rather than leaders bec use it is much easier There is less responsibility and fewer headaches attached t following than to leading. The leaders get the big rewards to be sure,—when they succeed. On the other hand, if things do not go well the leaders pay the biggest penalty. Win or lose, the stakes are always greater for a leader.

The two fundamental human instincts involved in leadership and being a follower are self-assertion and self-abasement or submission. These two instincts taken together constitute a self-regarding impulse which is strong in all of us. One or the other predominates. Where the self-assertive impulse is strong you find a follower.

Self-abasement or submission need not be a distasteful thing. Being a phase of the self-regarding instinct the individual gets a lot of satisfaction from being a follower. It all depends on the make-up of the individual and his relation to the leader. To be the pupil of a noted musician is an honor. We submit with grace and no loss of self-respect to those who are recognized authorities in any given field or hold a higher position in life.

We are good followers also because of our social nature and the law of suggestion and imitation. We enjoy the sense of solidarity that comes through bein one of a group and doing what others are doing

FRIDAY, AUGUST 3, 1928.

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

Friendly stars rule today, according to astrology, which appears to indicate much good luck for benefic aspects predominate.

This should be a favorable day for women who desire to look after the affairs of their households.

All the domestic arts are supposed to benefit while this sway prevails and for this reason entertaining is supposed to be easy while this configuration continues.

This should be a lucky day for lovemaking. Wooers are supposed to be encouraged by the positing of the stars which affects both sexes.

Men should be on their guard under this planetary direction which may inspire girls to take the initiative in seeking life partners.

There is a promising sway for agriculture and they who till the earth may expect adequate return for their labors.

It is read as an auspicious date for investing in real estate or for making any new business venture that appears to be sound in foundation.

The sway which encourages organization in business and politics also will affect the criminal classes and increase their power to harm, the seers prophesy.

Great disasters in the Orient again are foretold and trade will suffer seriously, if the stars are rightly read.

A London astrologer predicts that before the new year more thrones in Europe will topple and new excitement will sweep over the whole world.

Persons whose birthdate it is may expect an interesting year. These Leo subjects are usually good executives and are fond of planning work for other persons.

Children born on this day may prefer the pursuit of an art rather than search for wealth. They are idealists and may attain fame in an intellectual or artistic field. They are governed by the Sun. Their astral colors are red and green.

JERSEY COWS AND LEGHORN HENS FORM SUCCESSFUL COMBINATION

Fifty-Acre Farm Near Peterborough Specializes in Quality Produce.

SMALL HERD KEPT

Pullets Bought at Six Weeks Old and Kept Only Two Years.

Within a half mile of the City of Peterborough is a 54-acre farm, owned and occupied by the same paternal family since 1871, that combines dairying and poultry keeping to excellent advantage. Yorkshire hogs and a few early vegetables are raised as side-lines, but Jersey cows and Leghorn hens constitute the main money-making force—and they "fill the bill," and pails, to perfection. Spring Garden Farm, owned and operated by Hugh Bertram & Son, is a beauty spot, as well. With a fine homestead located in the midst of some grand old trees, appropriately placed along drives and adjoining gardens, and with its half a hundred acres of well-tilled land rolling rearwards to well-grassed pastures and a cool ever-running creek, the farm is a picture of comfort and contentment as well as of business efficiency. The family believes that a farm is a place not only for the mere making of a living but also for living one's life well. That belief is the guiding spirit of Spring Garden Farm.

Jerseys for Production, not Show.

The Jerseys were on pasture when an editor of Farm and Dairy recently paid the farm a visit. When visited in the field they crowded around him as though to extend a welcome personally. One fine young cow was so anxious for close acquaintance that she playfully pressed her greetings upon him by catching the tail of his coat with one of her horns. Among the 17 head, only eight of which were milking at this time, there were Princess Figgis, a fine typey cow of nine years who produced last year 8,900 lbs. of milk testing 5.2%; Lass of Ingleburn, seven years, with a record of over 9,000 lbs. of milk testing 4.9%, along with two nice heifer calves that she produced the past two years; Rose of Ingleburn, seven years, 7,300 lbs. of milk last year with the high test of 6.1%; and Myrtle 3rd, bought last fall, milking since September and now giving 225 lbs. milk a week, showing 3.4% fat on latest test. All these cows are registered. The last three were purchased from M. S. Burnham, Peterborough.

Among unregistered Jerseys was Sally, who gave on the average only about 5,000 lbs. of milk a year, but testing 6.6%. Although low in milk yield, she has been retained on account of the extremely high test. Another nice cow was Gypsy, with 8,000 lbs. of 4.7% milk. Flirt, a three-year-old daughter of Gypsy's, had her first calf about four months ago and was milking 15 to 20 lbs. a day. A four-year-old cow, called "Jersey," gave 4,800 lbs milk last year testing 5.8%. All in all these milking cows and heifers were real Jerseys, in both character and performance.

The present herd sire is Torpedo of Beilthrop, 39364, one year old last March, sired by Fern's Hero, 26055 (a son of Brampton Noble Oxford), bred by T. J. Hetherington, Peterborough, and later owned by Ernest L. Bell, Peterborough. Torpedo's dam's number was 17813, but her name was not available at the moment. Torpedo is a youngster of good type, conformation and promise.

Summer and Winter Feeding.

Alfalfa is the main feeding stand-by the entire year. "We do not use a silo, for corn or anything, nor do we believe in one," said Jack Bertram, who piloted us around. "No kind of feed could be better than alfalfa for dairy cows. In winter we use 40 to 50 tons of alfalfa and put it all through an ensilage cutter, run by a 7 h.p. engine, before feeding. The cows get one bushel of this cut alfalfa twice a day. A little whole alfalfa is fed at noon. Forg rain, we mix and grind our own ration, preparing about a ton at a time in advance. This ton comprises 1,600 lbs. oats, 300 lbs. corn and 100 lbs. cottonseed meal. Each cow receives one gallon twice a day."

Turnips and mangels also are used—pulped and fed with the cut alfalfa and chop, a scoop shovelful to each cow. Turnips are fed for awhile, then mangels, and the process is repeated. When turnips are the roots being fed, they are given to the cows after milking; mangels, before. "There is more cream in mangels than in turnips," said Mr. Bertram.

In spring, the cows go to pasture usually the third week in May. While, the grass is good, no chop is given then one-half a gallon a day. When the pasture becomes poor, green alfalfa is cut and fed. An acre of corn is grown for feeding green just before the cows go into the stable in fall. The alfalfa is seeded with spring wheat on root ground, left three years, then plowed down and the ground sown to fall wheat.

About 20 hogs, of Yorkshire breeding, are raised each year. They are bought as young pigs, no brood sows being kept and raised to use the waste from the house, the swill from the washing of the separator and milking machine, and odds and ends about the farm that otherwise might be a loss. Schumacher feed, soaked in water and skim-milk also is fed. The hogs are sold to butchers when about five months old, or about 170 lbs. live weight.

The other side-line "crop" of the farm, early vegetables, comprises early potatoes, bunching carrots and bunching beets sold wholesale to the stores of Peterborough.

Dairy and Barn Conveniences

The cows are milked by machine. "They do not like to be milked by hand," remarked Mr. Bertram. "They are so accustomed to the machine that they act like young heifers when touched by hand, which, of course has to be done for stripping. Machine milking is thoroughly satisfactory, even for a small herd like ours. It costs us only about two cents a day per cow. We have had a milker for six years, and it has not cost more than $10 for repairs. It is run by a gasoline engine."

In a well-equipped milk-house, some distance from the stables, the machine is kept clean and sanitary by flushing first with cold water, then fairly hot water and finally sterilizing with boiling hot water and acid. A coal oil stove furnishes the hot water, available for use either inside or (piped) outside. Long brushes, Wyandotte cleaner and other accessories also play a part in the cleansing of milking machine, separator and general dairy utensils. The separator is run by electricity.

In the stables, electricity is used for lighting and for pumping water from an outside six-inch drilled 72-foot well. The water is pumped to a tank from which it is run off as required to a continuous water trough in front of the cows. Root cellars, feed shoots, mangers and all othe necessities of the barn and stable are convenient and kept sanitary.

A combined garage and work-shop, kept heated in winter (for which two tons of coal are used) houses a couple of nice motor cars and porvides tools and location for much work at repairing, etc., that otherwise might be an additional expense. Oil for the farm engines and machinery is bought by the barrel and kept in this building in a tank.

Poultry for Eggs Only

From 200 to 300 White Leghorn pullets and hens are kept for egg production only. No chicks are hatched or baby chicks raised. The pullets are bought when six weeks old, and cared for scientifically through their egg-producting period, and sold when two years old, live weight. No males are kept, and thus the eggs are infertile and always sound.

The poultry-house is 72 by 20 feet, biult on the plan of those at the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph. Along one side there is a runway about four feet wide, for collecting eggs and similar purposes. The house is divided into three pens, two larger than the third, and eacn 16 feet wide. Straw for warmth in winter is kept above, and this changed every fall. The pens are cleaned out every morning. Lime is put on the dropping boards, also crank case oil on the roosts and in corners, to keep down vermin.

"We find it more profitable to buy six-weeks-old pullets than to hatch our own or to buy baby chicks," stated Mr. Bertram. "By buying from a breeder of the best strains, who constantly has his birds tuberculin-tested, we know what we are getting. And besides, pullets at six weeks old are all pullets, so to speak, not half roosters, as is the case when one buys baby chicks."

These young pullets start to lay usually in November, and lay heavily through the winter until April. "That is the time we want them to lay," said Mr. Bertram. "Just now, July, we are getting 40 dozen eggs a week from 200 hens, but they doubled that in winter months."

Feeding on Range and Housed

When received from the breeder, the pullets are put on range in colony coops, in the midst of alfalfa. They are fed Quaker oats growing mash until ten weeks old. Then gradually some laying mash is mixed with growing mash constitutes the entire feed of this kind. From August on, they are given also a little whole wheat. Oyster shell, grit, plenty of pure water and other necessities are always at hand.

The layers are "stall fed," not on range, although they have plenty of yard room outside the house. The whole wheat is fed twice a day in cut straw little, eight or nine inches deep. Mangels are cut in half and shoved on spikes in the wall placed about eight inches from the floor.

As already mentioned, the eggs are infertile, no male birds being kept. But that fact alone is not accepted as evidence of keeping qualities. Every egg offered for sale is candled. So high is the reputation of these eggs that one of the Peterborough hospitals uses them practically to the exclusion of all others. Spring Garden Farm is noted in the City of Peterborough for cream and eggs of the highest quality.—Farm and Dairy.

NO WAITING AT STATIONS

Charlotte Street Gasoline Pumps Can Handle 52,000 Gaioins a Day.

BUSY IN EVENINGS

Charlotte street, which to the disgust of some of the service station operators on that street, has been named "Gasoline Alley," has a large capacity for supplying cars with gasoline. The possible amount of gasoline that could be supplied seems almost phenomenal, but there are many pumps at the stations, pumps with ten gallon capacity. Some of the stations have one pump; others, three and four.

According to the service station operators the amount of gas estimated to be sold in one day is around 2,550 gallons and they say this is not a good year. One of the owners states that this year was not as good as last. The tourist traffic does not seem to be as heavy as last year, and the detours have killed a lot of the traffic, while the building of other stations also has cut into the business. Another service station man states that at present the evenings are too cool. He figures on a large amount of gas to be sold in the evening. When a man finishes work he wants to get out and take a little ride while many of the younger folks go to dances and others go for joy rides but in any event there is a lot of gas sold at night. Another station operator says that their peak sales are over the week-end.

The amount of gas sold varies greatly, from the smaller stations which sell 100 gallons a day to the larger and more attractive ones that sell 600 gallons in a day. One of the stations has had so much success that the owners are at present installing a large new supply tank. There seems to be no sign of a gasoline famine on Charlotte street in Peterborough or anywhere else in the city at present.

The sensu of tanks shows that when filled they will stand at 185 gallon capacity. Most tanks are of the twin visible type which is capable of delivering 20 gallons at once and supplying two cars from the two ten-gallon bowls.

When asked how long it takes to supply a car with ten gallons of gas an owner of one of the newer service stations told The Examiner that it took about five minutes, that is to service a car properly by looking at the radiator and supplying it with water as well as wiping off the windshield and rear glass and making change. This at a high pressure speed could be accomplished in this time. To figure out the amount of gas that could be supplied under these conditions if the stations operated twenty-four hours a day and there were cars to be supplied for one ten-gallon tank, 120 gallons could be delivered in an hour and 2,880 gallons in twenty-four hours, which when multiplied by the eighteen ten-gallon pumps would supply 51,840 gallons. Then add the five-gallon pump, which is of an older type, supply 720 gallons a day. This would bring the street's capacity up to 52,560 gallons. Figuring this at an average of 28 cents a gallon for all gas, which is a mean between the high price gas and the low price gas, would mean an outlay of $14,716.80 per day for the motorists.

The amount spent at this figure on the gas actually sold figures at $714.00, not considering the amount spent on oil, or accessories.

There is no need to fear that the service stations are spoiling Charlotte street. In fact, they have done much to beautify the approach to the city. Passers-by often remark on the well-kept appearance of the stations, the attractive buildings, the well-kept grounds and the courteous attendants that have all this to look after as well as the cars. "Gasoline Alley" is not detriment to the city; in fact, it has changed many an eye-sore into an attractive spot.

GUNGIRL ROBS MAN IN TAXI

But Hasn't the Heart to Make Him Walk Back.

GETS $100

BALTIMORE, Aug. 2—A pretty girl bandit, described to police as having "a smile of gold and a heart like, a refrigerator," robbed a taxi passenger of $100 at the point of a loaded revolver, gave her victim thirty cents carfare, and then sped off in the cab with its driver.

The man robbed is Burbill Richardson, of Richmond, engineer on the steamship Ruth.

He told police he haled a cab to keep an engagement with Miss Mamie Ringrose, twenty-nine, at a shore near the eastern limits of the city.

As he entered the cab Richardson noted the figure of a girl seated inside. He hesitated, but the driver said she was the passenger going in another direction later. So Richardson hopped in.

When the machine reached the darkened section of a river road, Richardson said he suddenly felt a pistol pressed against his head and the machine came to a halt.

"Don't dare move," was the girl's whispered warning, "or it will be worse for you," he told police.

With what Richardson said was practical skill, the girl went through his pockets, taking his roll of money.

"Hop out and make it snappy," the girl bandit told him. Richardson was quick to heed the order.

"I haven't the heart to make you walk back," she told him and offered thirty cents.

Then the taxi was lost in the darkness.

Richardson made his way back to the city and reported the robbery at Eastern police station.

GIRL IS SORRY FOR MAN WHO WALKED HOME

But Sentiment Failed to Stop Her From Stealing the Car.

A COLD NIGHT

"Sphinx Bandit" Reverses Time Honored Order of Things at Gun-Point.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 2.—Miss Montu Marmont, twenty, and pretty, who made a man walk home, was given a preliminary hearing on a charge of stealing the man's automobile.

She was arrested on complaint of W. E. Helms, Alameda, the man who took the midnight stroll after Montu had taken his auto at the point of a revolver. She was found in Bridgeport, Cal., and has been in the Alameda County Jail since June 25, where she earned the title of "Sphinx girl" because she would tell nothing about herself.

Raised As "Love Child"

There was little of the sphinx about her yesterday, however. She took the stand; said she did not know who her parents were, but that she was raised in Michigan as a "love child." Helms "picked her up at Fourteenth and Franklin streets, Oakland, on May 23, she said, and took her riding a couple of evenings later.

The scene was the outskirts of East Oakland.

"I pulled a gun and told Helms to get out," the girl said. "He asked for his hat and I gave it to him. I felt sorry for him, as it was a cold night and I was afraid if he did not get a ride home he would catch cold. (Here the girl almost broke into laughter, smothering it in her coat sleeve and handkerchief).

"Knew He'd Report."

"Really I never felt so sorry for anything in my life.

"When I took the car I told him that if he did not report the matter to the police I would leave his car at Fourteenth and Castro streets, but on the way I figured he would report it, so I stopped by a yard at Sixteenth and Grove streets and took the plates off a car there and put them on Helms's car. Then I went home where I was living as Mrs. Leland Partridge, packed my clothes and drove away."

RICH WIDOW WEDS PRINCE

English Millions Connected With "Black Aristocracy" of Rome.

ANNULMENT GIVEN

LONDON, August 2 Culmination of a romance connecting English millions with the famous "Black Aristocracy" of Rome was reached with the marriage of Mrs. Hector Sassoon, five million dollar widow of the famous industrialist, to Prince Cesare Ottoboni.

Mrs. Sassoon is famous in the society of London, Rome and New York for the pearls she wears. She also wears a wrist watch, the face of which is covered by a diamond instead of a glass as crystal.

The prince is the handsome, dashing favorite of the famous Roman society of the Vatican. He met and immediately fell in love with the beautiful widow at a large reception in Rome several years ago.

The two were unable to wed; however, by reason of the fact that Mrs Sassoon was a divorced woman, while the prince, as a member of the "Black Aristocracy," was unable to ignore the church's ruling against the marrying divorced persons.

To enable her to marry the prince, therefore, she obtained an annulment of this marriage before the Holy Rota at Rome. During the course of this trial sensational evidence was introduced tending to show that she had been forced by her mother into marrying the baron.

Friday Is Bargain Day

How did Bargain Day originate? The idea was conceived years ago by the famous merchant who founded the organization which now operates the C.D.S. In entering his store after returning from a journey, he encountered an unusual crowd of shoppers. Inquiry proved that the offering of a number of clearance items and incomplete lines at reduced prices had attracted them. The possibilities of the Bargain Day idea appealed to his business judgment, and one day each week was thereafter set aside for this event, which has now come to be a fixed institution and is recognized as a day of important savings for the thrifty. Visit the store to-morrow and see!

GIRLS ATTEND SCIENCE CLASS

Many Attend Instructions Given in Cavan Community Hall.

WILL ENTER TEAM.

(Examiner Correspondence).

CAVAN, Aug. 2.—On Monday and Tuesday afternoon, the girls of Cavan, Millbrook, Ida, Mount Pleasant and vicinity have attended a class in household science in Cavan Community Hall, with Miss Hopkins, of Lindsay, as instructress. The object of the class was to teach the girls how to judge in the following classes:

Class A—Nutrition. (1) School lunches. (2) Family menus.

Class B—House furnishing. (1) Farm living-rooms. (2) Kitchen plans.

Class C—Clothing. (1) Dress parade. (2) County girl's wardrobe.

The first afternoon, Miss Hopkins explained to the girls what to expect in each class and how to judge them. The next day she had them judge in these classes themselves, and showed them how to state their reasons.

Four of the girls brought school lunches, and these were judged by the girls, and reasons given for the placing of them.

Four girls were chosen to parade before the class, supposed to be dressed for church. The girls judged which of the costumes was the most suitable, etc.

On the ninth of August the girls will judge in Millbrook in competition with judges present.

In each division of each class are four articles to be judged.

Fifteen minutes are allowed for the contestants to decide which article comes first, which second, etc.

They are then given two minutes to give their reasons to the judge for so placing them.

Fifty marks are given for placing and fifty marks for reasons.

The four girls who make the highest number of points will be given five dollars each, to help pay their expenses to Toronto to judge there as a team, one being a spare. Any girls not in the team may enter the open competition at Toronto, by paying fifty cents, but may only judge in one class, whereas the team enters all classes.

BOWLING CLUB HOLDS BRIDGE

Sixteen Tables Played at Campbellford Club's Quarters.

OTHERS PLANNED.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, August 2. — There were sixteen tables of players at the bridge party given by the local Lawn Bowling Club in their club house on Tuesday night. The affair was the first of its kind this season, and was such a marked success that the officials of the club intend to repeat the pleasant evening in the near future. After the play was finished, lunch was served at the tables. Mrs. J. P. Archer and Mrs. A. J. Jenkins poured coffee. Members who were more interested in the game on the greens rather than that at the tables managed to stop their play long enough to put in an appearance for lunch.

The prize for the ladies' highest score was won by Mrs. George O'Sullivan, while the honors for the men went to A. J. Jenkins. Mrs. Forrest Dennis was the lady who occupied the lucky chair, and thus won a prize, and when all the score cards were mixed together in a box. Wesey Stephen's card was first to be withdrawn. Thus he, too, carried home a souvenir of the evening.

Members of the club refer to the affair as the most successful of any they have yet held.

Softball Tournament

Nowadays it seems that no such event as the Downeyville garden party, is complete without a softball or baseball tournament and it was the tournament in the former line of sport that attracted several hundred people from the main scene during yesterday afternoon. In a field about a quarter of a mile east of the village, two games were played, West Ops going down to a rather inglorious 7-2 defeat at the hands of the Ennismore team which then proceded to win the tournament by putting the Downeville representatives out of the picture by a 17-7 count. Both games were fast with all the elements that go to make up an interesting ball game from the fans' point of view—plenty of hitting, and some clever fielding.

The teams lined up as follows:—Ennismore—Fossey 1b., Murphy 2b., Cavanagh 3b., White c., Gimmel p., McKindry ss., Harrington, rf., Garney cf., Gifford lf.

West Ops—Rich p., Mark 3b., Graham, c., Davis 1b., McEachern ss., Kirkley 2b., Coughlin lf., O'Reilly rf., Forbes cf., and p.

Downeyville—Shine lf, Morrissey lf, O'Neill ss., Carroll 1b., Harrington 3b., Scully p., E. O'Neill c., Hurlihey 2b., Sullivan rf.

Umpire—Jack Perdue.

Horseshoe Tournament

A horseshoe pitching contest drew a large field of entries whose final games did not conclude until darkness had set in. Many of the old timers of the district tried their hand and were not found lacking while a number of younger fellows took an equally as keen interest in it.

Holiday crowds must eat and realization of this fact enabled the ladies of the parish to provide in time for the suppers of over four hundred people who filed into the basement or into the main concert room of the Parish Hall. Fowl, salads, home-made pie, cake, bread and everything that goes to make up an appetizing meal was provided in generous quantities and one of the best things that may be said of yesterday's garden party is that "no one went away hungry."

Following supper and the "doings" on the grounds as already described there was dancing in the parish hall to music provided by Dinner's orchestra, of Lindsay and on the floor, a most suitable one for the purpose, crowded young folk and old folk in tripping the light fantastic. One young fellow, with a lack of conceit said he could understand the "tripping" part but he culdn't see anything fantastic about it. At any rate it was one of the most enjoyable dances held in the parish for some time, concluding, as it did, the event for which Downeyville has become noted — the annual garden party.

Those responsible for the success of the day as the committee in charge, were Messrs. John C. O'Leary, Martin Carroll Michael D. Harrington, John Lucas and the Rev. Father Galvin.

BEULAH CHURCH IS DEDICATED

Rev. T. Albert Moore, D.D., Has Charge of Services at Ivanhoe.

IMPRESSIVE SERVICE.

(Examiner Correspondence)

MADOC, August 2.—The new Beulah Church at Ivanhoe was dedicated on Sunday morning by Rev. T. Albert Moore, D.D., in the presence of a large congregation which overflowed to the Hall. Rev. Dr. Moore preached the dedicatory sermon and the president of the Conference, Rev. J. J. Robbins, of Bowmanville, preached to the overflow.

Rev. L. S. Wright, chairman of Presbtery and the pastor, Rev. J. N. Lovelace took part in the service. Rev. Mr. Cooper also attended.

In the evening the Rev. Dr. Moore preached.

The former church was burned September 8, 1927. R. Bristol, of Madoc, has had charge of building the church.

Personals.

Miss Lilian Rivers is spending the holidays with friends in Sarnia. She also visited in Ottawa and points east.

Mrs. O. Dingman has returned from visiting friends in Lindsay.

Barnet Bros. circus visited Madoc Saturday, July 28. The noon-day parade called out a large crowd. Afternoon and evening performances were given to crowded audiences, the large tent being filled to capacity. All the side shows were also well patronized.

Mr. and Mrs. Bedford have been spending a week in Kingston. Mr. W. Mackintosh, of Belleville, has been in charge of Madoc branch store during Mr. Bedford's absence.

Mrs. F. C. Dusten, sister of Rev. G. W. Rivers, Miss Eva Dusten and Mr. and Mrs. B Batty of Sarnia, have returned home after spending a short time with Rev and Mrs. G. W. Rivers at Trinity United parsonage.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Hoover, of Peterborough, Mr. and Mrs. P. Hoover, of Toronto, were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Connor.

Madoc girls' softball team met the Deloro team in Deloro last night, winning the game 22-10. This gives Madoc girls 2 games won, 1 lost and 2 game tied, three more to play.

WRESTLERS WIN CANADA POINTS

Score One Second Place and Two Thirds in Olympic Matches.

RUNNERS QUALIFY.

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 2 (By W. H. Ingram, Canadian Press Staff Correspondent). — Canada has gained greater wrestling success in the present Olympic Games than ever before, being awarded four points to the United States five.

Final placings give D. P. Stockton, Montreal, second place in the 147-pound class; Stockton having defeated the United States and South African champions.

James Trifunov, Regina, carried third place in the 123-pound class, defeating an English competitor. Moriss Latchford, Montreal, took third place in the 158-pound class, defeating the English and French champions.

Runners Qualify

All four Canadians entered in the Olympic 400 metres run qualified in the trials this afternoon. Phil Edwards, Hamilton, won his heat, while W. Allison, Montreal; F. W. Macbeth, Hamilton, and James Ball, Winnipeg, took second places.

How Well You Look!

"I have only Kruschen Salts to thank."

This is the sixth enthusiastic testimonial from the same man. Kruschen Salts continue to keep him fit, happy and cheerful.

"I am writing you again to express my sincere gratitude for the continued success I have maintained through my daily dose of Kruschen. Only last week a representative of a leading Insurance Co. met me who saw me a few months ago when I was crippled with rheumatism.

"His first remark was how well I looked and how I could now move about. I replied, 'Yes, I have only Kruschen Salts to thank.' He remarked, 'Really'? I replied 'Certainly,' and he said he was feeling 'off colour' and would start the Kruschen habit next day.

"My business brings me in contact with scores of similar cases and I always recommend Kruschen Salts. I am writing this testimonial quite unsolicited and you may make what use you like of same. Wishing you every success."

BOAT TRAFFIC REMAINS HEAVY

Fifty-five Vessels Have Passed Through Campbellford Locks This Year.

SAME AS LAST YEAR.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 2.—Strange as it may seem, the number of boats which have passed through this town this year since the opening of navigation this spring up to the last day of July, is exactly the same as last season. Each year, the government tug, J. B. MacColl, makes a trip through the canal with the numerous supplies required for the opening of the season. Later the tourist traffic begins in earnest and continues on the increase till after the month of August. Last year and this year there were fifty-five boats passed through this section of the canal up to and including the last day of the month of July.

Many of the boats make Campbellford a regular stopping place, where they refuel and have any repairs necessary attended to. This summer there have been as many as four cabin cruisers moored to the west sode wharf at one time.

On glancing quickly over the lists for the two seasons, the names of many boats are seen on both. This would indicate that the Trent water system is rapidly becoming a favorite with the visitors from across the line. Of the fleet of summer visitors, the greater number come from such cities as Cleveland, Ohio, Rochester, Bufalo and New York. One visitor when asked if this were his first trip up the river, replied that this was his fourth consecutive season here and that he intended to return just as regularly in future as circumstances would permit.

Last year the last boat to pass through Campbellford was the "Lightnin," a gas powered cabin cruiser with a draft of three and one half feet. It is owned by Mr. McKewan of Buffalo, and was bound down from Orillia to Trenton, thence across the lake to its home port. The boat passed through the town at half past eight on the morning of October 27th last year.

An increase in the number of boats for this month is expected since August has proved to be the favorite month for water travellers. Last season there were thirty-seven boats passed through here during August as compared with fifty-five for the three preceding months. Last year's total, both up and down, amounted to one hundred and ten.

PLAY-OFF GAMES TO BE ARRANGED

League Executive Will Meet To-night to Fix Dates.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence).

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 2.—In order to arrange for the play-offs of the local softball league, there will be a meeting held on Thursday night after the game. Until after this meeting of the executive, no information regarding the schedule for these games can be given out. It is understood that play will be begun next week if possible, and that an effort will be made to arrange exhibition games when the play-offs are finished.

WRIGHT WINS OPENING HEAT

Beats Gunterly, of Holland, in Olympic Single Sculls.

LITTLE DIFFICULTY.

AMSTERDAM, August 2 (By T. H. Louden, Canadian Press Staff Representative). — Joe Wright, Jr., of Toronto Argonauts, Canada's representative in the Olympic single sculls, had little difficulty in winning his first heat in that event against D. H. F. Gunterby, Holland's entrant, to-day. Wright's time for the 2,000 metre course was seven minutes fifty-five seconds. John Schmitt and Paul McDowell, United States, beat the Belgians, Van Wolchou and Canden Drische, by two lengths in the trial heats of rowing for pair-oared shells without a coxswain.

RAPID PROGRESS MADE IN PAVING

Surface Applied Along Grand Road For Over 750 Yards.

KEEPING ROAD CLOSED.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence)

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 2.—Last night when the surface crew stopped work it had completed work on Grand Road as far north as the railway crossing and a few feet more. It is understood that this stretch of road, or at least part of it, will be kept closed till after Civic Holiday when it is expected to have it completed as far as Tice Street. The foreman of the plant gave as the capacity of his unit, fifteen hundred square yards daily, but this had been exceeded twice in the three days that the work has been in progress. Tuesday the output was 1831 square yards and yesterday's material will probably exceed even this amount.

The strip completed to date measures 2253.6 feet in length and is more than nineteen feet in width. The balance of the twenty feet required by the department is taken up by a concrete string along each edge which is level with the surface.

In order that the work may be properly done, the men are on the job from twelve to thirteen and one half hours daily, depending on the particular part of the work on which they are employed. About the last to leave and among the first to put in an appearance in the morning, is the steam roller operator. After he has run his machine over the hot surface for several minutes and both length wise and cross wise, he has to wait for the sand dust to be applied and then gave the finished surface one final rolling.

PLANING . BUILDING . FINANCING

CHARACTERISTIC OF THE DUTCH COLONIAL

J. H. G. Russell, Architect.

For those who desire a home of marked character; modern; in good taste, and at reasonable cost; there is the answer to their problem. A more refined design would be almost impossible to conceive; and while picturesque effects often entail additional expenditure; refinement generally tends toward the reverse effect.

Such a home as this would also prove economical for other reasons. Observe the very compact, fuel economizing form of the main plan; and the characteristic Dutch Colonial elimination of waste attic space.

A feature which contributes in no small measure to the exterior charm, and one which on no account should be overlooked by those desiring a similar effect; is the unusual width of the wall siding employed.

The plan has one major deviation from the typical centre hall type; that is the provision of space for a den by projecting the living room beyond the main end wall of the house. By dispensing with the den, however, the projection could also be eliminated, thereby permitting erection with side drive on a 45 foot lot.

Although complete in every essential feature, the plan is entirely free from fads, thus leaving an abundance of space for large livable rooms.

An ideal lot for this house would be one of 60 feet facing south or west. Landscaping could be satisfactorily confined to a few hardy shrubs, the important factor with a house of this type being a setting of good green turf.

The cubic content of this house is approximately 33,800 cubic feet; and with concrete footings; heavy butt asphalt slate shingle roof, and hot water heating; the cost would be approximately $14,000; exclusive of lot.

Readers desiring further information regarding a house of this design should communicate with Home Building Information Service; 345 Adelaide St. West, Toronto, Ont.; who will see that it is supplied. When writing please mention design number 134. Copyright, 1928.

SPECIFICATIONS PROTECT EVERY HOME BUILDER

A costly mistake some home builders make is to attempt to erect a home without a complete set of specifications. No matter whether your home is small or large; you cannot afford to take chances unless you are willing to pay more for your home than you should. Specifications will assist in saving your money. They take the guesswork out of building.

The reason specifications are used in home building is because they supplement your plans and take up your building operations where your plans leave off. Plans give dimensions; sizes, etc.; but they do not describe the quality and grades of materials; methods of installation; types and kinds of equipment, all of which should be incorporated in a specification or written agreement with your contractor.

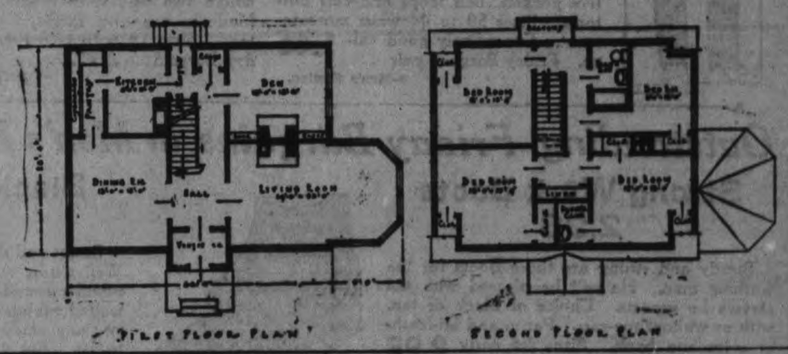
When an architect is employed to design a plan he prepares the specifications in consultation with the owner. Specifications are not only necessary in home building because of the detailed information they give, but they are essential as a medium of understanding between the contractor and the home builder, thus preventing discussions and controversies as the job proceeds. Without specifications you are very apt to run into "extras" and changes. These things cost money. Therefore, if you are interested in saving your home building dollars, be sure that you provide yourself with this valuable document.

When signed, a specification amounts to a contract between your builder and yourself. It sets forth the general conditions of the contract and includes such items as form of bids; rejection of bids; supervision; materials; labor, appliances; separate contracts; protection of work; payments; liens, use of premises, cleaning up, deliveries, arbitration.

A specification properly prepared is a legal document. Because it is legal it gives you protection if for any reason it should become necessary to take your home building operations into courts for decision.

A loosely written specification is as bad or worse than none, since by it you are led to put trust in an agreement that may fail you. Get a good one, written by an expert.

In the last analysis; if you hope to eliminate waste; if you are interested in saving money; if you want to avoid discussions and trouble, don't fail to provide yourself with specifications for every contract on your job.—Copyright; 1925. The Architects' Small House Service Bureau.



brother, M. W. Connor of town and other relatives.

A beautiful duet was sung by Miss M. Rousehorn and Collin Ross and a very pretty chorus by three tiny girls, Jean Whytock, Harley Smith and Jean Nickle. The congregation always appreciates the efforts of the organist in having these younger ones assist with the musical service.

In the evening, the Rev. J. Connor preached to an interested congregation and taking as his thought, "The humanness of Christ's ministry." He spoke very earnestly of the years between 12 and 30 in which little is recorded of the preparation for that ministry and the tragedy that He "could do no mighty works among them, because of their unbelief."

The congregation looks forward to the re-opening of the Church on Sunday next, when it shall have been re-beautified and cleaned for another term of service. The church was re-built 28 years ago after a disastrous fire in which the church was almost totally destroyed.

Standard Church.

In the Standard Church in Madoc on Sunday W. J. Shean of Peterborough, spoke at the evening service in behalf of the Ontario Prohibition Union. The pastor, Rev. W. R. Schanehorn was in charge of the service and a good congregation was present to hear the excellent temperance lecture.

SAYS RADIO AND FIGHTS DON'T MIX

Tex Rickard Will Broadcast No More Championship Fights.

SUFFERED HEAVY LOSS.

Acted Against His Wishes in Staging Bout in July.

NEW YORK, Aug. 2. (AP).—Radio and "million dollar" fights don't mix, George L. ("Tex.") Rickard, promoter of Thursday night's battle, said, and in the future his championship bouts will not be broadcast.

Gene Tunney retained his title against Tom Heeney by a technical knockout.

Rickard whose Madison Square Garden corporation lost in the neighborhood of $155,000 on the Heeney-Tunney bout, blamed the radio and the 25 per cent federal tax on all tickets over $5.

Thousands, who ordinarily would have paid to see the fight, either went to the theaters or stayed at home to hear the returns over the radio, Rickard said.

No More Fights on Air.

"No sir," Rickard said, "you can't beat both the tax and the radio. I can tell you right now, definitely, that this is the last big fight I shall promote which will be broadcast through the air."

Rickard announced that the Madison Square Garden corporation lost $155,719.77 on Thursday's Tunney-Heeney fight in the Yankee stadium. Rickard's figures showed a gross of $691,014.50 and a net of $521,422.23.

The itemized report, completed only after forty-two men worked many hours to tabulate the returns, revealed many interesting facts, the most important of which showed that Uncle Sam, through his new tax law, took $139,483.72 and the New York state treasury received $30,108.55.

Has Big Pass List.

The government received $126,084.50 from the tickets sold by the Garden corporation and $13,399.22 from those who saw the bout on complimentary tickets, which Rickard distributed with a lavish hand.

The promoter's figures showed that a total of 43,191 paid admission and 3,496 saw the fight on "Annie Oakleys."

The expenses of the fight were listed as $725,000 to Gene Tunney, $100,000 to Heeney, $51,142 for the rent of the Yankee stadium and general expenses of $35,000, making a total of $912,142.

The receipts included the net gate of $521,422.23, $20,000 for the moving picture rights and $15,000 for the broadcasting privilege, making a total income of $556,422.23.

Rickard has already sent the checks of Tunney and Heeney to the boxing commission office, where the fighters will be paid off.

Regarding the fight, Rickard declared that had he used his own judgment instead of going against it, the contest would have been a success.

Rushed Into Match.

"The trouble with the fights," he said, "was the fact that I was rushed into doing something I did not want to do. I never cared to stage a bout of this proportion in July and urged against it, but Gene Tunney was insistent that he fight twice this year and in order to meet him half way I compromised by letting him fight on Thursday."

"It must be remembered," he continued, "that I had five good heavyweights to select from and, were conditions not so pressing, I would have been able to complete my eliminations and probably a man more colorful than Heeney would have been Gene's opponent.

"However, Tom Heeney proved his right to the bout by doing just a little better than the rest of the field, including such good fellows as Jack Sharkey, Paulino, Johnny Risko and Knute Hanson, but apparently the public did not come out in force for Heeney. They seemed to fear he was not up to the mark. Yet Tom vindicated himself by giving Tunney a fine battle. He was a credit to his country and fought a battle that did him proudly."

Tunney Gains Favor.

Rickard believes that Tunney has at last come into his own. "When he enters the ring again," Rickard said, "Gene will be as popular as any of his predecessors. He has developed a sock and that is what makes for hero-worship. The way the crowd cheered him made me happy for it proved that the champion has at last gained the popularity which I always felt was due him."

Asked whether Heeney would be given another chance, Tex replied: "That depends on Tom. He made a game, courageous fight and he certainly is entitled to a place among those who will compete in my next series of eliminations. But from now on I'll use my own judgment and I'll let no one persuade me in the promotion of a heavyweight championship fight."

MADOC UNITED CHURCH.

MADOC, August 2.—The second Sunday the congregation of Trinity United Church have met in the basement Sunday School room for morning and evening service, with good congregations, during the time the Belleville firm of decorators have the main auditorium under process of re-decoration.

The morning services were begun by an excellent Sunday School attendance of 114, with hearty singing and almost all of the teachers and officers present. The Rev. Mr. Rivers took charge of the service, assisted by three other ministers who are holidaying in the vicinity: The Revs. George and William Christie, who are visiting their mother and sister in Madoc, and the Rev. J. Connor, of Illinois, who is visiting his

A delightful Tea was given by Mrs. E. Vernon Morphet at her home, 139 Hunter street, yesterday afternoon from 4 to 6 o'clock in honor of Miss Miriam Rutherford, a bride of next week.

The rooms were lovely with orchid sweet peas and bowls of shaded gladolius. The guests were received by Mrs. Morphet, assisted by Mrs. Homer Borland. The gifts for the bride-elect were brought in a large treasure ship with sails of orchid and silver. From the top of the mast fell narrow ropes of orchid ribbon knotted with bunches of sweet peas. The tea table was very attractive, decorations being carried out in orchid and yellow. The cloth was of Irish baby lace with a silver basket of snap dragon in pastel shades and orchid tapers in silver candle holders. Mrs. C. Cuffe poured tea and Mrs. B. M. Frederick cut the ices.

FINEST DAY EVER SPENT IN CANADA

Viscountess Willingdon Spends Day at Stampede Dressed in Native Costume.

CALGARY, Alta., August 2.—(Canadian Press).—"I have had the finest day of thrills and fun that I have had since coming to Canada." That was the manner in which Vicountess Willingdon summed up her experiences at the Stampede, having become a real Western cowgirl and having thoroughly entered into the spirit of what she described at "This great, frolicsome, lovable west."

First dressed in a ten-gallon hat and buckskin coat she endeared herself to the Stony Indians as the wife of their great new chief, "Morning Light", by chatting with the braves and their squaws.

Her excellency so fell in love with the stampede that she returned immediately after dinner and witnessed the chuck wagons and California cart races. She wound up a memorable day by visiting the Johnny J. Jones show and then completed "the finest day of her stay in Canada" by insisting on having a "hot dog."

During the afternoon Lady Willingdon inspected every section of the exhibition and spent a considerable time in rapt attention watching the stampede events, expressing her alarm at the devil-may-care risks runs by the cowboys in their splendid efforts for her entertainment.

FAITH LOST IN MAIL

Brandon Man Mails Four Letters, But Gets No Answer.

BRANDON, Man., August 2.—(Canadian Press)—When the "Trans-Canada" was on its western run one day recently the engineer noticed a man standing beside the track with some sort of signal. It looked like an arrangement to put mail aboard the moving train, so the train slowed down, and a trainman took from an ingenious arrangement of willow and binder-twine a brown paper parcel. It proved to be an odd piece of faith in the C.P.R. Inside the parcel was a letter and the following note.

"To the Catcher:

"I would like you to mail this letter; it is for my Mother. I have mailed 4 letters through the post office and got no answer, so would you be so kind and mail it." The railwayman accepted the service.

The Art of Attraction

No. 13

You may say that this idea of placing woman in a somewhat inferior position to man and wanting her to be merely a pleasant adjunct to him is a somewhat depreciatory one. But it really is not. Women, it must be remembered, were created to be companions to men. When the Lord saw that Adam was lonely he set about comforting him and brought Eve on the scene. Of course, you will get the argumentative type of woman who will tell you that Adam was merely a try-out in human nature and that when the Lord, who commenced with the lowest form of life and progressed to the higher, had made Eve. He realized that she could not be improved upon and rested, content with His masterpiece. If you want to go along on this assumption, you get a different viewpoint with regard to life, and one that will not agree with the majority of your fellow creatures. It is much better to be content with the older idea that women were made to be companions to men and then set about trying to please the dominant sex in every possible way.

THE WHATNOT

A Place for Little Bits of Everything of Local Interest

YOU won't need to worry any more now if the weather gets extremely hot, for all you will need to do will be to obtain a muff—the latest hot weather fad introduced into society. A great thing, you might say, to mention getting during these days, but just imagine the next time the temperature goes to the extreme that you have one of these muffs, and the heat won't be half as hard to bear.

London in a blazing heat was recently startled when a girl entered a restaurant carrying a muff. It was made of green ruched silk on the outside and had a light aluminum container inside which was filled with cracked ice. This was handed over to the waiter to be re-filled with ice while the owner dined.

I haven't as yet noticed one of these in Peterborough, but once they make their appearance into society anywhere, it won't be long before they are here—so get out your muff which hasn't been used for the last five or six years.

The women of Europe have a new fashion called "rubber tattooing." It consists of sticking rubber designs in silhouette on the knees, arms or shoulders. Airplanes, racing greyhounds, birds in flight, and race horses are among the designs, while one young woman wears a rubber silhouette of her fiance on each arm.

Cigarette cases to match the various new sport costumes and also the handbags are shown in new color combinations and with novel covers. They follow the designs used in some of the new jewelry, with step arrangements on the sides. Each step is of a different color.

To shed the raindrops in this our rainy city, the raincoat is becoming more and more indispensable to the well-filled wardrobe. While just at present the slickers seem to be favored most in Peterborough, the various other coats in lighter weights are worn as well. There is, for example, the rubberized silk, and in spite of their frail appearance they stand the storms admirably. One variation of the silk raincoat has a cape which buttons on to the shoulder, and is, of course, removable. In very stormy weather, it can be adjusted as a hood to protect the neck, shoulders and head.

What unusual beauty one sees just now in the rock gardens to be found in various parts of our city. The simple field flowers, find a place there as well as on our frocks this season. And numerous shades make more beautiful the exterior of our homes, each blooming in its own way, its own shade and at its particular time.

While investigating a new house recently, I was greatly impressed by the attention being given the building of the bathroom. The ideal bathroom is the one with a space for a dressing table, and only a small alcove is required for this, or even below the window if the space is large enough. It was finished in green tile, the glass curtains of lavender organdie and the small shirred valance at the top of the window of green ground flowered chintz. Lavender organdie for the skirt of the dressing table with a plain piece of lavender sateen beneath it, and the shades of the candlesticks were very effective in lavender dotted swiss.

Ohio licensed cars attract a great deal of attention in Peterborough and at the same time give interesting details as to dress, etc. A beige shade hat noticed yesterday on a lady in the rumble seat, had all of the rim cut in fine shreds to the crown of hat, and yet it did not fall as one might think, but it appeared to be quite stiff. The material seemed to be of felt.

Interesting little articles which may be carried in the purse are shown in the shops. A little case was noticed recently where the top when screwed off may be used as a thimble, and inside is a little case in which to carry niidles of all sizes. These would be very useful on week-end trips as well as for carrying in your bag all the time—you never know when you might need them.

Dresden China place-cards are now shown for dinner parties made of oblong pieces of China with a border of flowers, and a writing surface on the centre panel for the names of the guests. They can be washed and put away, like other pieces of China after the party is over, providing, of course, that the guests do not take them home with them.

Now that Paris predicts Dolman sleeves in the frocks this fall, it will take just a little more than usual to make our gowns for next season. You won't be able to secure a dress out of two and a half or three yards of material, for it will take about two yards at least for the sleeves alone.

There isn't any excuse now for not having sufficient quantity of cooking material on hand, after seeing the new posters, on exhibition in one of our stores. Almost every item necessary for cooking is written on a poster with a little separate piece attached close to it, which is painted red on the other side, and when you suddenly find out that you require some item for the kitchen, all you will have to do is to turn over the slip opposite the item required, and you can tell in a glance when writing a shopping list just what you need.

THE MIRROR OF THE MODE

By Mary Marshall.

A knitted beach sock of black and white stripes is shown above. The tennis socks are of white cotton with a colored design in cuffs and the golf socks are of white wool with colored cuffs.

Every one admires shapely ankles—and yet most of us feel that there is something decidedly smart about the little short socks with cuffs that make the shapliest of ankles look as bulky as possible. The fashion I believe began as part of the conventional ice sports and skating ensemble. Men wore them before women did. Short woolen socks of this sort kept snow from getting into the shoes and gave the extra warmth needed to feet and ankles.

Then certain tennis players decided that instead of woolen stockings they would wear merely short woolen socks over their silk stockings. Followed their wear for golf, country walks and other outdoor activities. The idea was a good one because as every one may discover for himself the feet of the sportswoman are much more comfortable if protected by a layer of soft wool to prevent rubbing of the shoes against the skin. Soft cotton socks give almost as much protection and are decidedly cooler; many of these are now worn for tennis.

Similar bathing socks in wool have been found useful though they are worn more as a matter of style than comfort. They are worn with bare legs—with or without bathing shoes. For tennis light weight white woolen short socks with fancy cuffs are usually worn—with lisle or silk stockings of sunburnt hue.

For golf these cuffed short socks have a decided advantage over the regular woolen sports stockings that have been worn. Some sort of woolen foot covering is highly desirable to prevent rubbing of the shoes but, as many women have found, even a short skirt has a tendency to cling to woolen stockings and this may interfere with one's drive. For this reason lisle or silk is desirable for the upper part of the stocking. There are stockings made with ankle cuffs attached that give the effect of separate cuffed socks—and clumsy ankles—without the inconvenience of the double foot covering.

MAGIC FLUTE

"Turned you down, did she?" chuckled Uncle Oliver, as he faced Dorry Lander's crest-fallen countenance. "You are no match for the girls, Dorry, my lad!"

"She's not only one girl, Mr. Wylie, Marion is a dozen girls."

"One girl with the essence of a dozen, eh?" went on Marion's adoring uncle. "But I surely thought she liked you a little bit, my boy." He put his hand on Dorry's big shoulder.

The young fellow turned a dark, tense face, and humorous gray eyes toward the older man, but there was a tinge of bitterness in his voice. "I'm afraid it's a little bit—a very little bit, sir."

"Pshaw, Dorry, when I was a young chap like you, we knew how to make the girls like us, whether they would or not," blurted Mr. Wylie impatiently.

"Dorry smiled. "Yet you never married one, sir!"

"True, my boy—but, she didn't like me even a little bit. Now Marion—" he paused and rumpled his thick gray hair. "Come into the study, I want to show you something," and Dorry followed Marion's uncle into a small book-lined room with the walls above the bookcases hung closely with rare engravings and hunting trophies from all over the globe. for M. Oliver had been a great traveler, and, even now threatened another expedition into southern Asia.

He crossed to the fireplace and took a long narrow box of hammered brass from the mantelpiece. "I'm going to give you a love philter," he announced.

Dorry Lander stared and then his deep hearty laugh echoed through the house.

"You can laugh, young man, but this love philter is not exactly that—it has a wooing charm that wins the hardest heart." He opened the box and pulled out an ebony flute inlaid with mother of pearl and filagree silver. "It is a love charm."

"A charm?" repeated Dorry politely.

"Yes. It is the flute of old Ab'Yussufa, now a venerable sheik, and patriarch of his tribe in the Arabian desert. He told me wonder stories of its power to win the love of a maiden—just play it before her—that's what he said—and believe me he must have been a handsome rascal in his youth. I took the flute—I thought I might use it some day—but deuce take it all, the only girl I had fancied married while I was on that trip and so the flute has never been used. I have kept it as a curiosity."

Dorry took the case and thanked the donor. "I feel like a fool, Mr. Wylie. I never played a flute."

"So much the better," just blow it gently in her ear, or under her window, or—somewhere—away from the house by all means," he added emphatically.

"Oh! I'll try the rose garden by moonlight tonight," muttered Dorry, looking very red. He hid the flute in his coat pocket for he heard Marion's light step on the stairs. "Tell her I will come over tonight—but don't tell her about the flute," he whispered, and slipping over the windowsill he disappeared among the trees that led to the side street.

It was not until after 10 o'clock that he re-entered the Wylie grounds and made his way to the lovely rose garden which was overlooked by the south side of the old house. Marion's window was on that side and a faint light shone there behind rosy curtains. "I wonder if she looked for me tonight," he thought as he took out the flute and replaced the box in his pocket. Never in his life had he played any musical instrument, and it was with some trepidation that he put the flute to his lips, and following Mr. Wylie's directions he blew softly upon it.

The result was so wonderful that he charmed his own senses and sat down on a marble seat among the roses. The most entrancing music came wandering from the flute of the old Arab sheik. It was like all the love songs of the world—it played itself as Dorry blew gently into the mouthpiece. The wooing strains seemed to kiss the bending roses, seemed to meet the falling dew, seemed to lift up to Marion's windows. He forgot her for the moment—he was entranced with love itself! All at once he saw a misty white form coming across the lawn, it drew nearer, nearer, and the moonlight shimmered on her golden hair—it was the girl he loved. Now she hurried a little as if drawn by the melody, until she ran breathlessly into the rose garden, and poised before him, a smile on her lovely face. As he dropped the flute and jumped up she turned and buried her face in a glorious clump of roses, pressing the cool fragrant petals to her hot cheeks.

"Dearest," whispered Dorry beside her.

"Dorry," she answered in a muffled tone, "were you playing that for me?"

"Of course."

"I thought when I heard it that someone had stolen Uncle Oliver's prized possession and I came out to rescue it, and it was only you playing to the moon!"

"Confound it all," said Dorry impatiently. "I knew it wouldn't work for a cent! You're only laughing at me after all!" He picked up the flute and turned away, but from among the roses her voice came sweet and low.

"Don't go, Dorry. Uncle Oliver meant well, but you don't need the flute to win my love, because——"

And Uncle Oliver gave them the flute for a wedding present, because he said he was actually afraid of its influence in the possession of a confirmed bachelor like himself.

DEMONSTRATION VIVID

Woman Becomes Excited in Description of Battle Between Neighbors.

MONTREAL, Que., August 2.—(Canadian Press).—Testifying in a case in which evidence showed blows were exchanged and hair pulled away by two women, neighbors one of the witnesses struck the Holy Bible at the witness stand so violently as she took her oath that Judge Cusson called her angrily to order and reproached her sternly for her rude handling of the sacred volume.

When her name was called, the woman, mother of the accused, hurried almost running to the box and on her arrival brought her fist down wildly on the Bible. "I am going to tell the truth, the truth, the truth," she shouted, once more striking the Book to emphasize her truthful intentions. It was almost five minutes before Judge Cusson had finished admonishing her and allowed her to proceed with her testimony.

FACE TERRIBLY DISFIGURED

Pimples Itched and Burned. Cuticura Heals.

"I had a breaking out of pimples on my face, neck, shoulders and arms. They itched and burned so badly that I had to scratch, causing severe irritation. My clothing aggravated the eruptions terribly, and I could not sleep on account of the irritation. My face was terribly disfigured. The trouble lasted about four months.

"I read an advertisement for Cuticura Soap and Ointment and sent for a free sample. After about the fifth application there was a marked improvement so I purchased more, and in four weeks I was healed." (Signed) Miss Millie Dickout, Brown's Brae, Ont., Sept. 16, 1927.

GRAND OLD LADY IS 100 YEARS OLD

Mrs. Thomas Hayly, of Port Dover, Celebrated Her 100th Birthday Recently.

PORT DOVER, Ont., Aug. 2 (CP).—Norfolk County's "Grand Old Lady," Mrs. Thomas Hayly of Port Dover, has just celebrated her 100th birthday. She is in remarkable health for her years, in spite of the fact that she was deprived of her eyesight more than 27 years ago. Her maiden name was Mary Thompson, and she was the daughter of a young Scotsman who came to this country in his eighteenth year to hew for himself a clearing in the forest and to rear a family of 16 children, whose descendants are now legion in the district of Georgetown.

The old home where Mrs. Bayly was born a century ago still stands and about it it centre many of the cherished memories which she retains of those early pioneer days.

The work of the household of the Thompsons was divided up as evenly as possible. Mrs. Bayly was assigned to the spinning, a sister had the knitting to do, while to another sister fell the dressmaking. In winter the manifold tasks of the pioneer farm life were added to by the necessity of going to the woods and cutting tender twigs for the cattle to browse, there not being enough hay to tide them over the season of scarcity. Mrs. Bayly has a vivid recollection of the troublous times of the Mackenzie Rebellion, which was brought home forcibly to her family when the wife of a blacksmith who lived on a portion of their farm informed the Thompsons secretly that pikes were being manufactured by her husband, and that she feared that those who had been kind to her in many ways would become victims of those same pikes.

Cognawagas Lose 5-4 Decision At Home

BETHANY RALLY IN SIXTH TO WIN VICTORY

Have Chance To Bring About Tie For Second Place.

COGS GET EARLY LEAD.

Wild Heaving Accounts For Defeat Suffered By Homesters.

Out of a hectic battle, the outcome of which was always in doubt, Bethany last evening defeated Cognawagas by 5 to 4, after six innings of lively baseball. A defeat for Bethany meant elimination from the race. They now have a chance to bring about a three-cornered tie for second place, but they must win their two remaining games with Cogs and Crescents, both at home.

Right now, Cogs and Crescents are tied with five wins and six losses. If Cogs win in Bethany, Crescents must also win to stay in the hunt, but if Cogs lost and Crescents win, the latter team will move into the play-off with Raybestos.

Wild throwing broke up last night's game, the Cogs getting three runs for a good lead in the second, while Bethany got their tieing and winning runs following wild heaves in the sixth.

Billingsley went through alone for the Cogs and his wildness was costly in the fifth and sixth. Ray Staples, barring the third, held Cogs in control until the fifth, when after Wilson singled and Corbett doubled, he gave way to Russell.

Both pitchers worked well in the first frame, each getting two strike-outs and easily retiring the side.

In the second, with one gone, Johnston hit into middle. He slid over the bag and the throw from Cripps to Wilson caught him at second. Philp's fly was dropped by Vannest, and he stole, scoring on Dawe's single into right.

Dawe was lucky to block Rooke's drive and hold him at first base. Crary drove a hot one between first and second. The runners advanced and scored on the pitcher's wild throw to the plate following Billingsley's grounder. Baker singled and after the return of the ball another wild throw to second allowed Billingsley to score. The side was then retired in order.

Both teams put two runners on in the third without getting a run, and no damage was done in the fourth.

Bethany tied it up in the fifth, with one out. McBride's grounder was fumbled by Wilson and Reynolds and Lancashire walked, loading the sacks. Staples was struck out, but Ryley shot one into right to score McBride and Reynolds.

Cogs regained the lead in their half. Wilson singled into middle and Corbett doubled to right. With Russel pitching, Vannest popped to Ryley. Rooke grounded to Ryley, who threw to the plate in an effort to stop Wilson. The throw was a shade wide, and Reynolds dropped the ball, as Wilson counted. Crary skied to Ryley, Billingsley walked and Delahaye flied out to McBride.

Billingsley passed Philp to start the sixth, and Dawe hit out to Cripps. The throw-in to third was wild, and Billingsley, who had moved over to back up the third baseman retrieved the ball and threw wild to the plate, both Philp and Dawe scoring. Russell was thrown out by Corbett, McBride popped to Billingsley and Reynolds, after hitting across second, and getting a life at that bag when Wilson dropped a throw from the pitcher, was caught at third on a peg from Delahaye.

Russell put everything he had behind the ball and fanned Cuffe. Cripps rifled one through third, and he stole second. Wilson was thrown out by the pitcher, and Corbett fanned.

The box score:

RACES KEENLY CONTESTED AT HIAWATHA REGATTA

VIEWS ON SPORTS

Lock Works and De Laval meet to-night in a softball fixture at Confederation Park. Game will be called at 6.15 sharp.

* * * * * *

The sea-fleas were on hand and provided plenty of thrills for the spectators, when Bob Goodfellow's boat did a tail spin and threw him out into the lake. Help was rushed to his assistance, and he recoverd his boat intact.

* * * * * *

Two picked teams of Deloro and Marmora men, mostly married tried conclusions at softball on Marmora Fair Grounds on Tuesday evening. The result was a win for the Deloro nine by 8-6.

* * * * * *

By their 5-4 win over the Cogs last night the Bethany crew saved themselves from being eliminated from the league race, and are now in a position to bring about a three-cornered tie for second place if they win their remaining two games with the Cogs and Crescents.

* * * * * *

The homesters got an early lead of three runs in the second but wild throwing on the part of Billingsley in the sixth inning enabled the Bethany crew to get by with their tieing and winning runs.

The De Laval head the standings in the City Softball League, while Harrison, C.G.E., and Teco are in a tie for second place. Lock Works take up third position, while the K. of C. occupy the cellar.

* * * * * *

Playing a close game, Hastings lost the third fixture of the East Peterborough League play-offs by a 5-3 count last night. The losers failed to give their pitcher fair support, and the Lock Works played their best game of the season.

* * * * * *

The factory crew have won two and lost one, and Hastings have an even chance to even the series with two each by winning Saturday's fixture when these two teams clash in the fourth game.

The revival of water sports was the feature of the Hiawatha Regatta held yesterday. All kinds of aquatic events made up the program, which, under the direction of capable judges, did much to make the gathering a huge success.

PETES FULL OF DETERMINATION FOR BIG BATTLE

Confident of Beating Oshawa Here and Remaining in Race.

DAINTY TO PITCH.

Oshawa's Veteran Left Hander Sure To Get Call On Saturday.

Although some of the sporting writers round the circuit have already counted the Petes out of the Central Ontario League race the home gang are full of confidence that they can battle their way into the play-offs and that they will prove it here on Saturday by taking a fall out of Oshawa.

The Motorists were lucky to win out in both their previous battles at James Stevenson Park, and the Petes are determined that nothing like that will happen on Saturday when the Schultz-Bergoine crew make their last scheduled trip of the season to Peterborough.

Duke Dainty will likely get the call to subdue the Petes. The last time he tried it here he got a terrible hammering and disappeared early, but he has shown great form since then, and is the best Oshawa pitching bet.

Saturday's game should be one of the hardest fought battles of the season. There is much at stake, and both teams will give their best.

YANKEES RETAIN LEAD UNCHANGED

Beat St. Louis As Second Placers Win From Cleveland.

NEW YORK, Aug. 2.—The Yankees matched strides with the Athletics by defeating the Browns, 12 to 1, in the first game of the series at St. Louis yesterday as the Mackmen won their opener in Cleveland, 6 to 4. The champions thus maintained their lead of five and one-half games.

Young Henry Johnson scored a great personal triumph by holding the Browns with seven scattered hits, while getting almost that many himself—five in five times at bat.

Babe Ruth started the scoring with his forty-second home run in the first inning. Alvin Crowder was pitching and no one was on base. Ruth's drive placed him 23 games, 27 days and eight home runs ahead of his 1927 record.

The Philadelphia Athletics kept hot on the trail of the pace-making Yankees by downing Cleveland for their ninth consecutive victory. The Mackmen got all their runs in the second inning when they drove Willis Hudlin from the box with a volley of six hits. Three of them went for extra bases. Howard Ehmke allowed the Tribesmen one run in the second, but held them in check until the seventh, when the Indians chased him with a three-run attack.

A first-inning batting rally that netted seven runs off Tom Zachary and Marberry, gave Detroit a 10 to 5 victory over the Washington Senators in the opening of the series at Detroit. Four Washington pitchers were sent to the mound. Hargrave, Detroit catcher, hit a home run in the seventh with two on.

The Chicago White Sox stretched their winning streak to five games, when they won both games of yesterday's double-header from the Boston Red Sox at Chicago, the first, 4 to 2; and the night-cap, 7 to 3.

Young Ed. Walsh went the route for the White Sox in the second affair, beating the Red Sox for the second time this season. He was hit hard, but four double plays pulled him out of several bad situations.

"Red" Faber was master of the situation in the opener, and held Carrigan's team helpless in the pinches. In both games the Boston line-up was shaken up, but with no better results.

AQUATIC SPORTS TAKE BIG PART ON PROGRAMME

Many Take Part In Revival of Regattas at Hiawatha.

CAPABLE JUDGES.

All Kinds of Water Sports Make Up Interesting Program.

A beautiful warm afternoon with a balmy breeze greeted the day of the Hiawatha regatta, which with a number of thrilling races that were keenly contested and an interested crowd that lined the shore made the revival of the Hiawatha regatta a success. After five years of waiting the aquatic sports were finally revived at this popular resort. L. W. Rockwell, who was the secretary, was responsible in a large measure for the success by the leadership he took in the plans as well as the assistance and co-operation that he received from all those interested.

Next year on the last Wednesday in July there will be held the second annual regatta which, after this first one, will be even a greater success, as enthusiasm was certainly stirred up in all the events yesterday. The persons in charge of the meet are very thankful to the various merchants of the city who donated many prizes for the competition.

There were all kinds of aquatic sports. In the men's crab race Jack Simpson brought home the bacon by coming in first, not the proverbial bacon but the real thing, as a side of bacon was the winner's reward. Both the men's and ladies' crab race afforded the spectators a world of amusement. Seated in the bow of their canoes the contestants tried to paddle over the marked course on the lake but which resulted in many a tail spin, whirly gig and mix-up in the attempt.

The man o'war race, with four in a canoe, also gave the odd thrill to the spectators, as the boats came near together, when a collision would be disastrous as the frail crafts sat so low in the water.

In the boys' swimming race, under 18, Dan Beattie and Ed Hyland came in a dead heat for first place and the two tossed up for first prize, which was won by Dan Beattie. Another tie of greater note also took place as the result of the afternoon competitions when a $5.00 fountain pen was donated to the winner of the most events, which resulted in Jack Smith and William Smoke having the same number of points. This also was decided by the toss, which Smoke won.

Sea Flea Race

No regatta is complete to-day without the sea-fleas, and there were three on hand to give a demonstration of speed. Bob Goodfellow had an entry; Bob Wood and Albert Rockwell were the other two. Here was another thrill for the spectators, when Bob Goodfellow and Bob Wood were having a hot race at the eastern buoy far out in the lake, one of the boats showing the usual temperamental qualities of an outboard racer threw its occupant into the lake, the boat sinking stern first. Help was rushed and the owner recovered boat and engine intact, with no damage to himself.

There was a booth in charge of George Paudash, which did a thriving business in ice cream cones and soft drinks, as well as chocolate bars and cigarettes. Many a kiddy wanted another nickle.

Capable Officers

H. Howard was announced-in-chief, who in a jovial manner called off the races, started the contestant and kept things moving along quite serenely. N. Funk, a Buffalo man, was his chief assistant, who was ever on the job and entered into the afternoon's sport with the true spirit of a good time. R. H. Manross had an easy time, sitting in a comfortable motor-boat shooting off a gun every once in a while, but that was his job; he was starter. G. S. Taylor and J. Kylie seated themselves on the bank and watched the winners cross the line, as they were the official judges. L. Rockwell was here and there and everywhere handing out the prizes and keeping things going, as he was secretary.

Prize-Winners

The men's canoe races were divided up into classes. The professional men who earned their living by guiding or by their reputation as canoeists, while the amateurs were merely the novies. The prize winners were:

Men's Double Canoe Race; Professionals.—Bill Smoke and Jack Smoke, a cherry paddle each; Dow Taylor and Merrit Taylor, a spruce paddle each.

Men's Double Canoe Race; Amateurs.—Madden Howard and Gordon Dobbin, a cherry paddle each; Dan Muskrat and Roger Amys, a spruce paddle each.

Men's Professional Canoe Race.—Bill Smoke, a cherry paddle; Jack Simpson, a spruce paddle.

Men's Single Canoe Race, Amateur's.—James Bigwind, a cherry paddle; Gordon Dobbin, a spruce paddle.

Partners' Canoe Race, over 18.—William Smoke, Myrtle Beaver, cherry paddle each; John Simpson, Nellie Cowie, a spruce paddle each.

Partner's Canoe Race, under 18.—Mildred Cowie and Ralph Lukes, a canoe cushion each; Jack Dobbin and Lillian McClelland, a flashlight each.

Ladies' Single Canoe Race.—Flossie Howard, a cherry paddle; Luch Paudaush, a picture.

Men's Skiff Race.—Madden Howard, Jr., a pair of canoe cushions; Rev. Garrett, 100 cigarettes.

Ladies' Double Canoe Race.—Thelma Crow and Myrtle Beaver, a compact each; Annie Amys and Gladys Martan, a pound of candy each.

Boys, under 18, Double Canoe Race—1, Albert Rockwell and Ralph Lukes, a canoe cushion each; Jack Dobbin and Lyle Wallace, a Thermos bottle each.

Gunwale Race.—William Smoke, a cherry paddle; Jack Simpson, a pipe.

Man o' War Race—Bill Smoke, Jack Simpson, Jim Bigwind and Zack Smoke, in the first boat, each receiving a spruce paddle. Madden Howard, Gordon Dobbin, Roger Amys and Dan Muskrat, in the second boat to cross the line, each receiving a pipe.

Men's Crab Race—Jack Simpson, a side of bacon; Dan Muskrat, Thermos bottle.

Ladies' Crab Race—Velma Crow, a compact; Flossie Howard, a Thermos bottle.

Ladies' Swimming Race—Marguerite Mason, perfume; and Grace Comstock, a pound of candy.

Boys' Swimming Race, under 18.—Dan Beattie and Ed. Hyland tied for first; Beattie winning the toss and getting a shirt, while Hyland received a jack knife.

Motor Boat Racing.—Bat and Son driven by Bob Carter, gallon can filled with gasoline. Albert Rockwell, one gallon can of oil.

Old Men's Canoe Race.—Jim Bigwind, box of cigars; Madden Howard, five pounds of tea. All entries over 60.

Girls' Swimming Race, under 12.—Mina Cowie and Lillian Lukes.

The old men's race was one of the most interesting of the day; one old fellow taking a chew of tobacco to act as a stimulant to help him over the course. These old timers started off with a slow and easy motion but came down the home stretch with a sprint.

The day was rounded out by a real dance in the town hall to the music of the Fraserville Orchestra. Round and square dancing was participated in and a good time was had by all. This was the climax to a perfect day, and the revival of regattas at Hiawatha is a success.

CANADIAN ADDS TO LAURELS

The laurels of the world's champion sprinter now rest on the curly locks of Percy Williams, Canadian youngster from Vancouver. Flashing the same speed, the same remarkable stamina, and the same spectacular sort of finish that won him the classic hundred metres of the Olympic Games on Monday last, the schoolboy from the Canadian West staged a whirlwind spurt on a rain-soaked track to win the 200 metres yesterday from the best that Great Britain, Germany, and the United States could produce. Williams, duplicating a double feat which has not been performed since 1912, came from behind a closely bunched field to beat Walter Rangely, Great Britain, by a yard, with Helmut Koernig and Jackson Scholz, former champion, tied for third.

LEAFS WIN TWO FROM MONTREAL

Stave Off Second-Place Team's Advance On League Leadership.

TORONTO, Aug. 2—That Montreal invasion of Leaf Stadium, which earlier in the week threatened to tumble the O'Hara help off the lofty ramparts of first place in the league standing, was ambushed neatly yesterday by Toronto's crippled forces and when the casualties were counted the Royals had suffered a double defeat, the Leafs taking the first game 10 to 4 and the shorter contest by 2 to 1.

It was, in deed, an occasion for rejoicing on the part of the local cash customers. With a scant two-game lead, and the Royals pounding close on the heels of the O'Hara hirelings, the outlook for a double victory was anything but bright. But the Leafs threw off the batting slump that has dogged them consistently of late, and beat a merry tattoo of hits off the offerings of Roy Bucklew in the opening contest, and hoisted a couple of "Doc" Dunagan's slants for extra bases in one inning of the second game to score enough runs to win. The result evened the series at two games each, and enabled the Leafs to gain some lost ground in the race for the bunting.

Bisons Win Two

BUFFALO, Aug. 2.—Fighting uphill battles in both games, the Buffalo Bisons twice nosed out the Rochester Red Wings here yesterday by scores of 6 to 5 and 5 to 4. The double victory made it four straight for the locals over the visitors.

A remarkable hitting streak by Al Moore featured, the Bison outfielder registering two homers and two singles in the first game and two singles in the second in six times at bat. On his seventh try, Moore kept a perfect afternoon immaculate by lifting a long sacrifice fly. Counting a hit on his last time at bat Tuesday, Moore boasts an unbroken string of seven straight blows.

Seibold Beaten at Last

READING, Pa. Aug. 2—Baltimore continued its assault on Reading yesterday, pounding three pitchers for 17 hits to win the third straight decision, 12 to 3. The Orioles have pounded out 49 hits in their three days here.

Bill Conroy blasted a home run with none on base to tie the score for Reading in the sixth, but the Orioles rallied for seven counters in the seventh to win. "Socks" Seibold was knocked off the hill in the seventh, dropping his third decision of the year.

BELLEVILLE TRIMS KINGSTON 17 TO 3

Hoot Gibson Hurls League Leaders to Tenth Straight Victory.

BELLEVILLE, Aug. 2.—Belleville continued their winning streak by defeating Kingston at the Fair Grounds yesterday by a score of 17 to 3. This is the tenth straight victory and assures them of first place in the league. "Hoot" Gibson turned in his tenth win of the season. He restricted the visitors to 8 hits, but eased up when his team-mates ran up a big score. Some heavy hitting was done by the locals, they having a homer, three triples and two doubles. The feature play of the game was a one-handed catch of a foul by Stone, the Kingston first-sacker.

LOCKWORKS BEAT HASTINGS IN THIRD GAME OF SERIES

Visiting Team Gives Their Pitchers Terrible Support at Riverside.

TWENTY STRIKEOUTS.

Two Teams Will Meet In Fourth Game of Series on Saturday.

Although outplayed, but not outhit, the Hastings crew dropped the third game of the county play-offs to the Lockworks last night by the score of five runs to three. The game was close throughout, with the winners scoring three of their runs in the second when C. Zufelt walked three men and had one passed ball and a wild pitch, coupled with Ralph's timely hit.

Ibey, who relieved Zufelt in the second, went great guns, striking out eleven Lorkworks batters in four and one-third innings. Hastings failed to give even fair support to their pitchers, while the Lockworks played their best game of the season. They ran wild on the bases and caught Ibey with the old gag in the second when he took the mound. Westbrook was on first and Smith on third. Westbrooke attempted to take second slowly, and Smith took a long lead after Ibey wound up. Ibey turned to get Westbrook, and made the baulk, allowing Smith to score.

Black's pick up in the first inning and Barrie's three-bagger with Black on in the fifth proved the features of the game.

Hastings made a vain effort to tie the score in the fifth when they scored two runs, and with the bases full A. Zufelt struck out for the third man down.

C. Zufelt was hit by the ball in the fourth which struck his nose, resulting in his retirement from the game.

The Play.

Stevenson, the first man up for Hastings, singled to second. Scriver singled to Westbrook and Herrington rolled one to McGee, but Black managed to pick up McGee's bad throw. Smith, the first up for the Lockworks, rolled to third. Westbrook made first when Forbert muffed the ball, and stole second. Black struck out. McGee singled, Westbrook scoring. Barrie struck out.

Cowell, the first man up in the second, was walked, and stole second. Ibey rolled to Ralph, and A. Zufelt to short. C. Zufelt singled and Cowell scored. Forbert drove one to the first sack. Jobbitt, the first up, struck out for the Lockworks. Ralph singled and made second when Burke sacrificed, got third on a passed ball and home on a wild pitch. Hunt was walked and took second on wild pitch. Smith walked and Zufelt was pulled. Ibey walked. Westbrook stole second. Smith scored on the baulk. Black struck out to end the inning. 3 runs, 1 hit, and 2 errors.

Third Inning.

Lemoire struck out. Stevenson singled. Scriver struck out, and Herrington rolled ont to third base. McGee and Barrie struck out. Jobbitt walked and Ralph struck out.

In the fourth Cowell was walked for the second time. Ibey lifted one to Hunt. A. Zufelt struck out. C. Zufelt was out of the game when hit, and Hill, relieving, struck out. Burke, Hunt and Smith all struck out on the Lockworks line-up.

In the fifth Forbert singled and stole second. Lemoire struck out. Stevenson singled. Scriver lifted one to middle field and Forbert scored on the throw. Harrington singled. Cowell was hit. Ibey walked, to force in Stevenson. A. Zufelt struck out to end the inning. 2 runs, 3 hits, no errors.

Westbrook struck out. Black singled. McGee rolled out to Ibey. Barrie tripled, to score Black, and Jobbitt rolled one down the first base line.

Final Inning.

Hill and Lemoire were both caught when they rolled down the first base line. Forbert made first when McGee muffed the ball, but Stevenson hit one to Barrie to retire the side.

Ralph and Murray struck out. Connors got a lifer when Hunt failed to get the drive. Smith was hit by Ibey and Westbrook struck out.

Canadians Invited To Visit Berlin

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 2 (By W. H. Ingram, Staff Correspondent of the Canadian Press).—Officials of the German Amateur Athletic Association have personally invited Percy Williams, the now famous Vancouver sprinter; Johnny Fitzpatrick of Hamilton, and Edward Pickard, the Hamilton pole vaulter, with one official and the six Canadian girl athletes with their two officials, to visit Berlin on August 19 for the annual sporting festival held in that city.

BANNER YEAR FOR ATHLETES IS INDICATED

Sale of Sporting Goods Has Been Brisk—All Games Prosper.

MANY INTERESTED.

Golf, Horseshoes and Tennis Rival Baseball and Softball and Other Sports.

That 1928 has been a banner season for all lines of sport in Peterborough has been made manifest by the large turn-over of sports goods by dealers in Peterboroough and district during the past few months, as well as by lively scenes on the principal tennis courts, golf courses, baseball and football diamonds and cricket pitches in and about the city of which there are many. Judging from all of thtese, the attitude that keen sport makes for more alert students, keener business men and women, and a healthier and happier community, has been adopted almost unanimously.

Conversations of The Examiner with principal dealers in the city, such as White Cycles and Sports, LeBarr's Sports Goods Store, and many of the hardware firms handling similar lines, shed an even stronger light upon this increased interest in sports, locally.

Lew LeBarr, proprietor of that Charlotte street establishment so well known to the sporting fraternity of thte city, was one who stood in a position to speak authoritatively on tthe matter. "We have had one of the city, was one one who stood in a sale of sport goods is concerned" he declared enthusiastically when questioned on the matter. "Tennis? Yes, we have sold a large number of racquets, balls, nets etc. and there has been a tendency on the part of our customers to buy the better class of goods. In many of the more popular lines of racquets, whe have found it necessary to repeat on our original orders for the season's supplies while many of the new nets sold for use in and around the city were to help equip newly laid-out courts."

Hardball Going Strong.

"Has the apparent increase in popularity of softball had any noticeable effect upon your sales of baseball equipment," Mr. Lebarr was asked. "No, I don't think it has had such a bad effect as many people claim. When you consider the number of hardball teams operating in the several leagues of the city and county, the comparison is all in favor of the original game rather than the softball."

Fishing tackle has been selling particularly well this year, according to many of the local dealers. The increased tourist traffic has done much in this regard but also, with the growing interest in bait and fly casting, many of the old fishermen, who formerly considered the trolling line "the best of them all" have turned to the casting rod. "just to see."

Plenty of Golfers.

The average fellow, brought up sportingly on a diet of baseball, rugby and hockey, used to consider golf an old man's game. "Pasture pool" he dubbed it, but more and more the fascination of ball and club and the "semi-balloon pants" has won their respect for golf as a game of skill and both the Peterborough Golf Club and the Beaver Meadow Club membership rolls have grown most satisfactorily. When a man takes up golf, he must have the equipment and, having the above mentioned in mind, one may well make bold to state that clothing establishments as well as sports good stores have benefited appreciably.

Those Sea Fleas.

Much has been said and written, and much remains yet unsaid and unwritten of that new departure in the aquatic sport field—the combined qualities of a powerful outboard motor and featherweight hull, coming more and more to be known as "Sea Fleas." You may see them anytime on Little Lake, or out Chemong way, and seeing them, you will agree that they provide a thrill a minute with plenty to spare. The spectacle at a recent regatta held in this district, of one of the speedy bugs holding its own with its more dignified brother, a heavy speed boat of more "conventional" lines, gave a large audience the best entertainment of the afternoon and certainly those in the rival craft had their share of the fun.

Local interest is added by the fact that both hulls and motors for the "new departure" may be obtained, direct from the manufacturers in Peterborough, what with the Peterborough Canoe Company, the Carter brothers and other boat building concerns producing many very fine models, suited to be powered by the Johnson motors, fresh from the factory recently established in Peterborough.

The Game of Horseshoe.

"Pasture Pool" has received its boost, and now, let us pass on to the time-honored, but recently revived game of horseshoes, under its new dubbing, "Barnyard Golf." Under the promoting efforts of a committee of the local Kiwanis club, of which Art. Moffatt has been chairman, the old game has come back in the fullest sense of the term, with pitches or courts established in King Edward Park, sufficient to accommodate twenty players, or would-be players at one time. Last night the new courts were formally opened in the presence of many Kiwanians, as well as other citizens interested in the game. There is promise of a league being organized with schedules, equally as interesting as those of curling and bowling clubs.

Speaking of bowling (with apologies to bowlers who would have like to have seen their favorite game mentioned earlier in the story) did you ever take a walk around by the bowling green at the corner of Brock and Aylmer streets during a nice evening? There you will find the game played as it should be played, with the best of sportsmanship and keenest of competition prevailing. Out-of-town rinks have provided plenty of opposition for members for the Peterborough club, particularly during tournaments, while return matches are certain to be equally as interesting.

City Softball.

A block or so north east of the bowling green is located the scene of many hard-fought softball games during the past few weeks, namely, Confederation Square diamond, where Harrison's and Teco teams battled through twenty innings to break a tie by one run. When games get that close, they are well worthy of any fan's attendance. Many hardball players like the game too, and it is not unusual for a couple of players from hardball ranks to sign on the dotted line as members of softball teams.

The cricketers have been having their fun also, this year. Many players employed at the C.G.E. and other factories spend a leisure hour in regular practice for games. Football stock in Peterborough received a real boost this season through the high calibre of the game played by the C.G.E. teams and other teams in the city, while a half hour spent around the Y.M.C.A. some evening will convince the skeptic that track and field "specialists" are keeping in trim for future events. Who says Peterborough isn't a sporting town?

TENNIS TEAM TO VISIT U. S.

Britain Will Send Four Players For Team Games and Championships.

DURING AUGUST.

NEW YORK, Aug. 2 (Canadian Press).—Great Britain will send a tennis team of four to the United States this month to compete in team matches against the United States and in the American national championships, the United States Lawn Tennis Association announced to-day.

NO MORE PILES

Thousands Bless Dr. Leonhardt, the Specialist Who Discovered This Common Sense Remedy

If you think that the surgeon's knife is the only method of escape from the misery of piles, it's because you haven't heard of the internal treatment known as Dr. Leonhardt's HEM-ROID.

J. S. Leonhardt, M. D., a specialist, set at work some years ago to find a real internal remedy for piles. He succeeded. He named this prescription HEM-ROID, and tried it in 1,000 cases before he was satisfied. Now HEM-ROID is sold by druggists everywhere with money back guarantee. It is easy to take, and McDermid and Jury and Bond's Drug Store will gladly refund the purchase price to any dissatisfied customer.

After many years of experiment a Danish engineer has devised a machine which, experts think, would be a most effective defence against aerial raids. It takes the form of a gun which shoots into the air large masses of gas that render the occupants of any attacking airplane or airship unconscious.

Heavyweight Champion Regrets That He Is Leaving Padded Glove Game

(By Gene Tunney.)

"I have fought my last fight as a professional boxer. It naturally is with a certain regret that I announce my permanent retirement from the ring.

"No man realizes more than I do my debt to the game. It has treated me well. To it I owe such fame and fortune as I possess, and it has given me something less ephemeral than fame, many real and warm friendships which I hope and expect to keep through all the years to come.

"I always shall take a live and active interest in boxing. There is no finer physical exercise or more engrossing science.

"It is a game which, properly conducted, teaches and develops such qualities as stamina, confidence, patience, self-denial, bodily fitness, mental alertness, and courage.

"I have a great affection for boxing, and one of my chief desires has been to leave the game better than I found it. I have tried to be not only a champion, but a sportsman.

"But the time has come when professional boxing can offer me nothing further that I desire. I am putting it behind me, grateful for benefits conferred, but with the feeling that I am still young enough to retire and take up a business career.

No Contender in Sight.

"There is no contender at the present time who appears capable of attracting real public interest. If there were I might delay my retirement long enough to face him in the ring, but it looks as if it might be two or three years before a dangerous opponent is developed. That is too long to stand and wait.

"If I had fought again it would have been for Tex Rickard. I regard him as the foremost boxing promoter of all times. Realizing that another champion will follow me, I can think of no more capable hand than Rickard's in which to leave the selection of such a man, especially as he will necessarily be guided by the advice and assistance of another man to whom I owe more than I can express.

Tunney Praises Muldoon.

"There could be no more fitting time than this for me to pay tribute to the untarnished honor, the wise counsel, the generous friendship and the lion heart of that grand old man of sport—William Muldoon.

"Under these circumstances it is my desire to place in the hands of Tex Rickard a belt or other suitable emblem of supremacy to be awarded by him to that boxer who, through a series of elimination bouts or victories over the formidable opponents that can be obtained, shall prove himself deserving of it.

"I have thought of trying to nominate my successor. To the victor belongs the spoils. I merely step aside and say 'May the best man win.'"

GOOD COURSE FOR GOLFERS

Summerlea, Where Canadian Amateur Title Will Be Decided Provides Tricky Test.

MONTREAL, Que., Aug. 1.—(Canadian Press).—Summerlea Golf club, where the Canadian Amateur Golf Association's annual championship tournament will be played August 13 to August 18, is one of the younger courses in the Montreal district. It is situate 10 miles from the city and has a station which was specially built by the Canadian Pacific Railway to serve its members.

There are no natural hazards of particular note; the land is undulating and widening creeks cross the championship fairways some eight or ten times; many stately elm trees separate the fairways and mark the boundaries of the property.

To a casual observer the Summerlea course looks to be an easy one to play. In its construction however, Willie Park, Scottish golf architect, used all his skill (and he was a master of his craft). It has been the scene of the Canadian Professional tournament and was chosen as one of the two courses in Eastern Canada over which the English Walker Cup team played when they visited Canada some three years ago. It is an indication of its difficult nature to note that at the time of the Canadian Professional tournament, par of the course was only equalled once in the 162 games played. In fact, its par has only been broken three times in its history, once by the Hon. Michael Scott at the time of the Walker Cup team visit, once by its own professional Jack Brown, and once by an amateur member, Claude Villiers.

Details of the course follow:

No. 1, 500 yards, Par 5—A wide fairway stretches straight ahead but crossed by a shallow creek some eighty yards from the tee. A long driver for his second shot can use a wooden club boldly for the breen. If however, he fails to get distance, he will in all probability find his ball in the second creek immediately in front of the green which is large and rolling.

No. 2, 445 yards, a difficult par 4—The fairway is wide and straight, rising gradually to the green. A creek borders on the right for about 200 yards from the tee. The green is large.

No. 3, 380 yards, A par 4—A long straight over the trap which guards the right of the fairway 175 yards away richly rewards the player. The green is inclined to the back and its rolling surface necessitates a well studied putt.

No. 4, 136 yards, A par 4.—The shot must be accurately played or the ball will find a resting place in deep traps to right and left and fronting the green.

No. 5, 370 yards, A par 4 — A straight broad fairway with boundary to left and a creek crossing it 280 yards from the tee. The second shot is a pitch to the green which is flanked by traps.

No. 6, 200 yards, a par 3.—With a head wind a full wooden shot is required. It must be played straight to the pin.

No. 7, 380 yards, par 4.—Slightly dog's legged to the left. A good drive clearing the left trap will give good position for a nice second shot to the green, guarded by traps and two apple trees.

No. 8, 445 yards, par 4.—The hardest hole on the course. A creek crossing and parallelling the fairway 260 yards from the tee to half its width. The first stroke must be carefully played to open up this gateway to the green. The second must be straight and long. If short, the sharply sloping fairway assists the ball to a watery grave on the right. The green is well banked to hold a well played stroke.

No. 9, 390 yards, par 4.—A par depends chiefly on the second stroke which must carry the creek immediately in front of the green. This is flanked on both sides by large traps.

No. 10, 345 yards, par 4.—Here the creek which has up to now awaited a slice, lies in wait for a pull. A little to the left of the middle of the fairway a large elm slightly obstructs the second stoke. Beyond this to right and left are large traps, and trouble is found ond shots must be strongly played. is very liable to overrun the green.

No. 11, 415 yards, par 4.—A most difficult hole. With a lane of elms to drive through and creeks waiting a topped or sliced ball, with out of bounds close on the right and traps further on, both first and second shots ust be strongly played.

No. 12, 370 yards, par 4.—A boundary runs close to the fairway on the right almost the full length of the hole. A trap lies close ahead on the right and another at the end of a long ball on the left. The first stroke will find a wide fairway. The second is a good pitch to a trap-encircled green.

No. 13, 150 yards, par 3.—A nice one-shotter, with a large and well-trapped green beyond and trees which form a beautiful setting and lend a deceptive distance to the stroke. Heavily trapped green.

No. 14, 400 yards, par 4.—A long straight drive and a good iron will make the green, which is inclined sufficiently to hole the second stroke.

No. 15, 325 yards, par 4.—Here it is possible to regain a lost stroke. A good drive and a pitch will reach a beautiful velvety green where a firmly hit putt will turn the trick.

No. 16, 500 yards, par 5.—The fairway trends slightly to the left with a deep trap on the right. A long brassie and a careful pitch to a trapped green, two putts, and the tale is told.

No. 17, 215 yards, par 3.—The drive must be carefully placed to avoid the trap on the right, 165 yards away, and the deep one on the left which borders the green.

No. 18, 370 yards, par 4.— The drive must avoid a winding water course which crosses the fairway 80 yards from the tee, circles to left, then to the right to form the left bank of the elevated green. A trap to the right will catch a 200 yard drive but beyond this lies a wide fairway.

Reginald Denny's New Picture, at the Capitol Ought to Please Everybody—Last Showing To-night.

The poor motion picture critic has been severely criticized by people who had seen his shows and have not agreed. This is especially the case when the critic didn't like a show and the offended person did.

We hope there'll be no such objections to this review. In the first place Reginald Denny is supremely popular here. In the second place the house absolutely howled at "That's My Daddy," which opened at the Capitol Theatre last night. And in the third place this reviewer howled just as loud if not louder than everybody else at the funny incidents, clever pantomime and joyous situations which characterized the production.

Denny is better than ever, if possible. His new leading woman, Barbara Kent, is delightfully refreshing and Lillian Rich is sedately beautiful.

Little Jane La Verne is the child marvel of the picture and captivated the hearts of the audience. The others in the cast are perfectly chosen: Tom O'Brien, Armand Kaliz, Mathilda Brundage, Wilson Benge, Charles Coleman and Art Currier.

Denny wrote this story and it is as perfectly suited to his peculiar talents as it would be expected to be. Fred Newmeyer directed and Newmeyer is the man who guided Harold Lloyd to his present popularity.

HARMONICA ARTISTS TO PLAY FOR PRIZES

Step Dancing Also On Program For Produced-in-Canada Fair.

That the harmonica contest, to be held at the Produced-in-Canada Exhibition in October is to be a popular event is indicated by the large number of entries already received by the chairman, H. J. McCannan.

It is proposed to have as well as the contest a mouth organ band, and entries are also invited for this. Dr. Craig, manager of the exhibition, on Saturday night obtained three entries for the harmonica contest and another for the step dancing contest, which is also to be a feature of the exhibition.

The following are the classes in contest:

Harmonica Contest

Under 14 years, choose their own selection.—1, Own selection; 2, Test piece, own selection.

Under 18 years.—1, Own selection; 2, Test piece, "Home, Sweet Home."

CAR ROLLS OVER; NO PERSON HURT

Big Automobile Turns Somersault When Brakes Lock On Highway.

A large sedan type car belonging to Loblaw's Groceteria Limited, turned over a few miles down the highway the night before last. While it was travellinfi at a fairly good rate of speed the pin dropped out of the brake on the frotn wheel, causing the other brakes to lock, throwing it over in a complete somersault. There were four in the car who escaped any severe injury, although all were well shaken up as the car rolled into a pole.

Last night about eleven o'clock the car was brought in Charlotte street on a tow line behind one of Loblaw's trucks. The radiator was stove in and all the glass was out of the four windows, the running boards were damaged and the top ripped in places.

The intention was to tow it to Toronto last night and then to tow it to Niagara Falls, New York, where it would be repaired, as it is an American car and they wanted to have it fixed where the car was purchased.

The only thing that can be said for people who keep on predicting the end of the world is that they get a little closer each time.

TWO ACCIDENTS OCCURRED ON AUG. 1

Eight Men Lost Lives at Welland Canal Three Years Ago Yesterday.

HAMILTON, Aug. 2.—At Lock 6, Welland Canal, three years ago yesterday, August 1, 1925, eight workmen of the firm of Peter Lyall, lost their lives when a shackle broke as a huge platform was being moved to a new location. This coincidence was commented upon yesterday by officials who recalled the tragedy of three years ago.

A large wooden platform was erected to accommodate a cement mixer and chutes were placed on four sides to drain the material into the construction below.

The work at Lock 6 had been completed and workmen were called to move the platform. It was decided to slide the construction into its new position and to prevent it gaining too great momentum, a tackle was securely fastened.

Just after the great net-work had started to move off, a snap shackle gave way and the platform toppled over.

Workmen were carried down or pinned beneath the debris and eight lives were lost. Injuries were suffered by several others.

HERE'S TO YOUR HEALTH

BY DR. FRANK McCOY

EXCESSIVE BOWEL ELIMINATION

The most frequent cause of acute diarrhea, or looseness of the bowels, is an intestinal poisoning from improper food, which is so offensive or irritating that the intestines endeavour to empty themselves as rapidly as possible. These frequent bowel movements are simply nature's method of trying to rid the body of some particularly offensive substance, and the treatment should assist the body in this respect.

Diarrhea is usually accompanied by painful cramps and severe straining. The bowel movements are loose, liquid, and sometimes tinged with blood. Some cases have bile present. There is some fever present which is sometimes so slight as to escape notice. The patient is constantly under the apprehension that there is something in the bowel which should be discharged.

The discharge of so much liquid produces a feeling of weakness and enervation. This is because the body uses the serum of the blood to supply the liquid to the bowels. If the body loses too much vitality in this process the disease may terminate fatally.

Diarrhea is always caused by, or associated with, an inflammation of some portion of the intestines. The treatment should not simply mean stopping the discharge, which might lead to serious after effects. The patient should be encouraged to drink as much water as possible to wash out the poisonous material. A small amount of fruit juice may be added. Hot abdominal packs will sometimes give relief, and warm enemas should be used which may be followed by an injection of a small amount of cold water.

Diarrhea may almost always be stopped within a few moments by the proper pressure upon the spinal nerves affecting the intestines. But I do not advise this except as an emergency in cases of extreme weakness.

Dysentery is a severe form of diarrhea in which certain types of amoeba are present. The treatment is similar to the treatment of simple diarrhea, except that a longer time may be required for a cure. Some drugs such as arsenic and mercury will produce severe diarrhea in susceptible people. A sudden fall in temperature will sometimes produce diarrhea in adults, who have a toxic blood stream. This is because the perspiration caused by the warm weather is stopped by the cold wave, and the lack of elimination of toxins throws an additional work on the intestines.

Children are more susceptible to diarrhea in warm weather, possibly because they do not require as much food as they do in cold weather, and because they are more apt to use food that has become spoiled by the heat.

Sometimes serious diseases are accompanied by diarrhea curing their progress. Someof them are cholera, pyemia, blood poisoning, anemia, cancer, typhoid fever, Addison's disease, sclerosis of the liver and tuberculosis. Of course, when these diseases are present, diarrhea is only a symptom and cannot be treated as the principal disease. The only sensible course in ordinary types of disease is to stop all food for a week or two and allow the liver and intestines to completely empty themselves of toxic material. Two or three enemas should be used each day during this fasting treatment, and the skin elimination should be increased by sponge and shower baths.

Although I have had the opportunity to handle some of the more serious types of diarrhea and dysentery, I have never yet seen a case that could not be stopped by this method of treatment.

In this disorder as with many others we should work with, and not against, nature!

Questions and Answers.

Question: R. H. writes: "My wife, fifty-six years of age, has been under the care of a heart specialist for nearly two years. She has high blood pres sure, pains in the back of the neck, continuous ringing in the ears, with severe headache at intervals; a gnawing feeling in the small of the back, eyes ache and seem too large for the sockets. Has a general feeling of weakness and insecurity, and is very nervous. Has had eyes tested, but glasses do not seem to help. Had a bad illness last winter, and the doctor said it was Bright's Disease. She eats very little. Please advise what to do in this case."

Answer: It is unwise for me to attempt to advise you through the column in such a serious case, but I will be glad to send you some articles that I have written on high blood pressure and Bright's Disease. I regret that you have had to wait so long to see this unsatisfactory answer, but you did not give me your name and address or I would have written you at once.

Question: G. U. asks: "Please tell me how many calories a day should one get in his food. I am underweight, and am trying to improve by eating. Is it injurious to take salts every night? What causes fever blisters when one does not seem to have fever or cause for it?"

Answer: Dietitians who try to balance patients' diets through the calorie theory might say that you require something between 2,500 and 3,500 calories a day, but the truth is you may be able to get more nourishment and live better on 1,000 calories daily, providing it is of the right quality. It is a bad habit to take salts every night. The so-called fever blisters are really caused by hyper-acidity of the stomach which is usually present when one has a fever; but, of course, these blisters may occur at any time from the over-acidity when fevers are not present.

Mining Briefs

A Special Service to The Examiner

TORONTO, Aug. 2 (Special to The Examiner). — Lorrain Trout Lake Mines, Limited, in which Mining Corporation of Canada holds a third interest (500,000 shares) has issued its report for the second quarter of 1928, ended June 30th. No work was done in No. 1 shaft, but regarding the work in No. 2 shaft, the report says:

"Work at this shaft has been confined to drifting and cross-cutting operations on the 750 and 850-foot levels. This horizon is in proximity to the upper-diabase Keewatin contact.

"On the 750-foot level, the drift on No. 2 vein has been carried 350 feet to the south. The north drift on this level has been advanced a total of 405 feet. Leaf silver was in evidence in short shoots in the work done during the period, but on this level, no commercial grade ore was developed.

"On the 850-foot level, which is at the diabase-Keewatin contact, the south drift on No. 2 vein has been advanced 346 feet, and the north drift 173 feet.

"In the south drift, a shoot of Cobalt ore 40 feet long, and carrying silver values up to 180 ounces was exposed. Further south, a shoot of high grade ore with width up to 30 inches and of two to three thousand ounce grade was developed. From drifting operations 13.5 tons of ore was picked. This shoot proved very erratic in size and grade, and drifting south is being continued.

"On the 850-foot level, a crosscut has been carried more than 500 feet to the west. Two veins were cut in this work but no commercial ore developed as yet.

"The occurrence of high grade ore at the contact horizon gives hope for further important developments as drifting operations continue on No. 2 vein.

"During the coming period the south drifts, on both the 750 and 850 foot levels, should reach No. 5 vein which is a strong east-west fault vein not yet expored at the contact horizon.

"Thirteen tons of high grade ore was shipped during the period, and shipments of mull-grade ore will begin during the coming period.

Trail Ore Receipts

Ore receipts at Trail Smelter from 15th July to 21st July, 1928, inclusive, and from 1st of January, 1928 to date, in tons, were:

	Week.	Year to date.
Company's mines	10,374	292,268
Other mines	3,640	65,006

Noranda's "B" Ore

A report from Rouyn to-day is to the effect that the "B" ore body at Noranda has been cut for a length of 70 feet on the 400 foot level, showing 14 to 15 per cent copper, with gold values. This is a considerable improvement over gold ore found in this ore body at the 300-foot level.

Special Meeting

For the purpose of discussing the advisability of requesting the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange to temporarily remove the shares of Realty and Mines of Rouyn City, Ltd., from listing, a special general meeting of the shareholders of the company is called for August 10, in Toronto.

"You are undoubtedly aware that nearly all mining stocks listed on the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange have taken a decided slump during the past few months. We are unable to sell treasury shares of Realty and Mines at a price which will return an appreciable amount to the treasury at the present low depressed price on the exchange," states President J. J. Carrick in a letter to shareholders.
